The first two days of school was spent in organizing for the work ahead and in getting settled at our various living quarters. The students were lodged at fourteen different farm houses in the vicinity of the school. The farthest being two and a half miles away and the nearest a quarter of a mile. The two ladies and six boys stayed at the hall.

The student body organization was in two sections. One was the student branch of the league and the other was the student council with the working committees. The student branch was a model league branch with officers and committees. Much of its work was practice for branch training, that is, we went thru the formalities of branch functions and to gain experience. However, where there was a chance to do real work it was done. The officers and committees of the branch were as follows:

Organizer.

Recording secretary.

Membership secretary.

Treasurer.

Literature agent with a committee of two.

Educational director with a committee of four.

Social director.

Sport directors: One girl and one boy.

Yowlec committee of seven. (This was the staff of the Wall newspaper.)

The executive committee, composed of all officers of the branch.

New officers and committees were elected each week so as to give students experience in branch work. There was some exceptions to this however. The social committee was permanent thruout the course for it had the task of providing constant recreation and entertainment for the student body. Also the first educational committee was made permanent due to the nature of its work. A uniform record of our meetings was desired so the office of recording secretary was made permanent.

The other officers and committees performed their routine branch functions and whenever actual work was to be done they took it up. For example, the athletic directors organized two track meets and a track team that took part in the events at Superior. They raised money and bought balls and bats for the play grounds and conducted the drill during exercise periods. They lined up a student base ball team and played a local team. They also conducted swimming parties.

On July Fourth and fifth, the students held two street meetings at Superior, Wis., distributed five thousand anti-imperialist leaflets, sold twenty-five dollars worth of defense stamps, took part in a Finnish district track meet, disposed of a hundred DAILY WORKERS by selling them on the streets. In this work all the branch committee took active part. The literature committee handled the literature. A defense committee was created to supervise the sale of defense stamps. The educational committee furnished the speakers and so on. Beside establishing the Yowlec, a wall newspaper, the educational committee organized group study circles, made an outline of the courses, and helped provide designs for posters.

With the exception of the student committee and those marked permanent, everyone took his or her turn at work. On the bulletin board was a chart with all the names of the students. Each morning one saw by that the chart if he was on a working committee for the day. Chairmen were appointed whose duty it was to see that all necessary work for the day was done by the committees. This was done to silence the confusion that resulted from the committees not knowing their particular tasks each day.

The work of these committees was routine. The kitchen committee washed the dishes and cleaned the kitchen after each meal. The clean-up committee swept out the large hall and dining room each day and kept things in order. The yard committee picked up the paper and refuse about the yard, repaired fences, fixed drive-ways, dug ditches to bury refuse, in other words took care of repair work and sanitation in general. The two boys on the fire wood committee filled the wood bin each day. The water committee hauled eighty gallons of water daily from a school house a quarter of a mile away with the help of a farmer's Ford.

Every Monday there was a general clean-up in which every one took part. The floors would be scrubbed, the rubbish pile burned, or some improvement installed. In regard to this last, the boys built themselves an out-house for sanitation that was a real contribution of their proletarian dexterity. Voluntary work was also common. Many of the small irregular jobs were done by volunteer help, such as putting screen netting on the windows of the hall, repairing the board walks, or building racks for papers and books. This form of work was encouraged and the principle of it was one of the secrets of the success of the school. While on this matter of work it can be said that at the school work was never degraded. It was never used as a form of punishment, it was never condemned as a necessary evil.

The housing committee was one of those committees that took over much of that detail work that would otherwise have worried the school director. It had the task of providing comfort. All the complaints and needs of the students were handled by this committee. It procured water pails and dippers for drinking water, basins and pails for washing, lanterns and oil for lights, mattresses and hay for cots. It distributed the blankets so that no one had too much or too little covering. Students who entered late and over night visitors were provided lodging by the committee.

The health supervisors were Comrade Hayes and Comrade Helander. The most serious ailment at the school was a case of mumps. Beside all the necessary sanitary precautions, short talks on health and care of the body were given several times a week in class by the director.

At the school there were no major breeches of conduct such as stealing, fist fighting, etc. The labor discipline was remarkable in so far as no one intentionally evaded duty when his turn came. Large special work committees would be filled by volunteers at the first call. This achievement was not accomplished by a strict hand of authority being held over the students. It was just the opposite.

The conduct and administration of student affairs was in the hands of a student committee, composed of ten members. The rules were few. No unnecessary restrictions were imposed on the students. No smoking in the hall, no trespassing thru the kitchen, everyone in his living quarters at ten o'clock except on special occasions when the student body would set the time to be in, these were three of the most important. When the committee brought these rules in for approval there was a long discussion before they were accepted. The nature of the discussion showed that the student body really felt that the committee was their representative body rather than an authority put over them. The concensus of opinion was in order to study we must have plenty of sleep; therefore, the ten o'clock rule was good; it insured us sleep against our natural inclination to stay out late at times.

What would happen if the rules were broken? Occasionally they were broken. Some young fellow would come rushing home five or ten minutes after ten. His clock had failed him, or else the road had deceived him. Now, such mis-demeanors did not require action by the student committee. These belated and unfortunate homecomers would receive the necessary correction at the hands of his roommates. A cold duck in the creek would cool his heated brow. At each living quarter of the boys there was a code of house rules which the occupants themselves had drawn up, and for breaking of each rule there was the designated punishment. These rules also included the ten o'clock law of the school. Ducking was the universal form of punishment for it was both effective and enjoyable (for the duckers).

Thus our life at Waino was organized. This description is quite general and mechanical, but from it one can get an idea of how we spent our pastime, accomplished our routine work, and at the same time kept ourselves healthy and ready for study. There are other phases of our life that were not touched on; such as washing clothes, taking steam baths, receiving mail, etc. Each one of these items was done in a unique and interesting way—peculiar to Waino Hall. But these phases of our activities were not organized and therefore were not dealt with. Our social life conducted thru the above described organization was a big part of our education, outside of our activity and study in the class room. Thru it we learned self-discipline, responsibility to our organization, group living, and lastly, practical organization functions that we will use every day in our work in the league. I can say for the students without exception that we considered "Waino Days" the happiest days of our lives.

YELLOW TAXIS USED TO BREAK EXPRESS STRIKE

New York Railroads Aided by Hylan

By ESTHER LOWELL,
(Federated Press.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Yellow taxicabs without passengers are being used under the railroads' request and police protection to transport baggage held up by the strike of expressmen in Local 645, Teamsters, Chauffeurs and Helpers' Union.

Union pickets under the direction of James Travers and Martin Lacey, union president, patrol the districts affected by the strike. Grand Central Terminal, Pennsylvania Station and ferry landings of other railroads as well as the docks of the Fall River Line and Hudson Bay Line. Extra city police as well as railroad police are on duty at all baggage transfer points.

Hylan's Protege Heads Yellows.

Red cap porters are being forced to handle trunks and heavy baggage in the railroad depots and several hundred are diverted from their usual carrying of hand baggage to this heavier work of the striking expressmen. In response to the railroad officials' request over 3,000 Yellow Taxis over the ordinary number assigned for railroad duty are being kept near stations and at docks.

Special attention is given them to enable them to carry baggage at their 20-cents-a-mile rate. Express companies charge $1. Taxis are violating the city ordinance which forbids their carrying more than one trunk. Carroll Sinnott, mayor Hylan's protege by family relationship and traffic manager of Yellow Taxis, is personally supervising strike breaking activities of Yellow Cabs.

Demand 8-Hour Day.

The strikers demand an 8-hour day with no reduction in pay, time and a half for Sundays. Westcott Express and New York Transfer Co. want to give the workers $1 wage cuts and keep the prevailing 10-hour day. About 800 union men are striking.

The companies so far have not attempted to hire strike breakers but have indicated that a rate raise would not be unacceptable from the Public Service Commission. The commission cannot act until the public protests about the strike.

The railroads handle about 8,000 pieces of baggage daily with double that amount over holidays. Special re-routing is being done during the strike. The railroads have given the express companies' stands to the Yellow Taxi Co. which fights all attempts to organize its workers. Taxi drivers employed by independents report that police are co-operating in keeping Yellow Cabs near baggage stations instead of cruising the streets for "fares."

They also report that Mayor Hylan's former bodyguard, police captain Edward Quinn, is chief of the special detachment assigned to Grand Central during the strike. Mayor Hylan has been frequently attacked for his favors to the Yellow Taxi Co. of his son-in-law's brother.

DELEGATION OF FRENCH, BELGIAN AND GERMAN TEACHERS RECEIVE BIG OVATION ON ARRIVAL IN MOSCOW

MOSCOW, August 27.—The delegation of French, Belgian and German teachers has arrived in Leningrad to study the system of people's education in the Soviet Union.

Some thousands of Russian teachers assembled at the station with red flags and emblems to welcome the delegation which consists of 33 members. Leningrad welcomed the representatives of the organized French, Belgian and German teachers with cheers and the singing of the International.

After greetings on the part of the representatives of the Russian Teachers' Union, the Leningrad Soviet and Trade Union Council and the Pioneer organization, the Belgian teacher, Vangheim declared in the name of the delegation the efforts of the bourgeoisie to prevent the delegation had been in vain that the warnings not to venture into the land of the "barbarians" had fallen upon stony ground. The delegation is in search of truth and feels itself fortunate in being able to greet the Leningrad workers, the pioneers of the revolution.

The delegation received the assurance that it would receive perfect freedom to examine and study according to its own choice. The delegation has left for Moscow.

The Threatened Coal Strike

There is a possibility that 158,000 anthracite miners will strike on September 1st. As this article is being written, John L. Lewis is reported to be sending out the necessary stoppage orders to the miners.

The hard coal diggers are facing a struggle as hard as the coal they dig. Against them is aligned all the power of the wealthy anthratice owners, their other industrial and financial auxiliaries and last but not least the government of the United States, the executive arm of the collective capitalists of this country.

In face of this array of force what should be the policy of the miners? They should immediately set to work to build up an opposing array of force, composed of the workers in the other great key industries of the United States. In brief they should take a lesson from the British miners who won a victory by threatening the capitalists with a general strike unless they withdrew their decision to reduce wages and increase working hours. What the British miners threatened they were able to make good, because they had prepared for it.

No such preparation has been made by the leaders of the United Mine Workers of America. Instead of preparing to wage war on the coal operators, effectively, by forming an alliance with the railroad workers, Lewis and his satellites are still continuing the orgy of expulsions which is partly responsible for wrecking the union in the bituminous fields. Only a few days ago Frank Farrington, the Illinois edition of Lewis, removed from office the progressive leaders of the Zeigler local after using the gangsters of the ku klux klan to shoot and blackjack the membership.

This kind of policy bodes ill for a successful struggle against the disciplined and class conscious coal operators. If the miners are to depend on Lewis, to organize the strike, they risk defeat. Lewis is only interested in maintaining his position and is barganing for the aid of Calvin Coolidge, the strikebreaker president to save his face for him before the miners. Lewis has helped to weaken the union. The miners must stand on their own feet. They should get the effective grievance committees on the job and run the strike themselves.

Patriotic Hokum

The Seattle Union-Record, once known as a labor paper, in a recent issue carried editorial comment on the war conducted by the French government against the Riffians in North Africa. It says in part:

"It is time for America to take a position in these matters to let the Old World chancellories know that the American people look with distaste upon their lopsided, selfish intrigues and would-be conquest."

This is as much as to say that, America is free from both diplomatic intrigue and a desire to conquer. The fact is that America is the strongest and most ambitious imperialist power in the world today, not even excluding Britain. France is riding rough shod over the rights of the people of Morocco, just what the United States is doing in the Philippines and England in India, Egypt and China.

The DAILY WORKER attaches so much importance to the struggles of the Riffians against France and of the Chinese against the British, Japanese and American imperialists, that it analyzes the situation from day to day in its editorial columns. But you will also find in the DAILY WORKER news articles and editorials on the march of American imperialism thru South America and in fact all over the world.

The Seattle Union Record, which was founded with the dollars of the workers has become a house organ of American imperialism.

The DAILY WORKER is the uncompromising foe of American imperialism, and while it constantly throws light on the movements of other imperialist powers it pays particular attention to the home-made capitalist villian. The overthrow of American imperialism is the task of the American working class in alliance with the oppressed peoples, and with the aid of the revolutionary movement of the world under the leadership of the Communist International.

The Zeigler Miners

The struggle against the reactionary leadership of the United Mine Workers of America has assumed at last a concrete and militant form. The open rebellion of the membership of Local 992 of Zeigler, Ill., may not apear to be of very great significance considering that there are thousands of local unions in the U. M. W. of A. But the issues upon which that one local has taken up the fight are of a nature that forecast open nation-wide revolt.

The chief issue is class collaboration. Second in importance is the miners' unwillingness to be burdened by an officialdom that perpetuates itself by election steals and machine rule. There are other issues in Zeigler, altho supplementary, serve to accentuate these important ones.

When a sub-district machine, an arm of the Farrington Brotherhood, goes so far as to prefer trumped-up, criminal charges against a group of progressives who challenge its right of leadership, it is an indication that the solvency of such a leadership has long since ceased to exist. And apace with this utlra-bankruptcy goes the building and solidification of a nucleus of wilful, class conscious workers whose present limitation in smallness of numbers in no way precludes its development into a powerful voice of challenge to the present corrupt leadership. It is a beginning the end of which is a housecleaning of the U. M. W. of A.

Color Prejudice

A colored police officer went into a Cleveland restaurant for a cup of coffee. The manager informed him he could not be served because of his color. The colored policeman arrested the white restaurant owner, and took him to the station. Whereupon a white police lieutenant by the name of Walsh turned the restaurant man loose and soundly berated the colored officer for the arrest. The colored policeman took the case to a higher authority, with the result that the restaurant man is now held on a charge of violating the Ohio civil rights law. Such is life in "free America."

How Is a Factory Nucleus Formed?

(Material from the Organization Department of the Executive Committee of the Communist International.)

THERE is still a tendency in party organizations to build up factory nuclei by rule of thumb, namely, only after the registration of party members according to the enterprises where they are employed the formation of various nuclei is taken in hand one after the other on the instructions of the party executive. These party executives forget that it is essential to encourage initiative in every individual party member, and to make use of it in the formation and development of nuclei.

It should be made incumbent on every party comrade to find out Communist Party members and sympathizers in the enterprise, and to form the nucleus together with the party members in the enterprise. Should the comrade in question be the only Communist in the enterprise, he must endeavor to recruit party members among the workers, in order that a nucleus may be formed. All party members should of course be registered to their places of employment. The enterprises, too, should be registered to enable us to proceed systematically with the formation of nuclei and to exercise proper control. But we must be certain in systematizing this work that we do not discourage self-activity among our party comrades, for a systematic development of nuclei is only possible if full scope is given to the initiative of party members and every one of them is drawn into the work.

In order to show comrades how nuclei are to be formed it would be advisable to publish in the daily press as frequently as possible good examples of nuclei organizations. We give below a few such examples, hoping that as many comrades as possible will write to the party executives about these questions, in order to obtain an exchange of experiences by means of the press.

I.

The Nucleus Chairman of a Mining Enterprise Has Sent Us the Following Account.

IN our mine various localities are represented. I got into touch with the managing committees of the Communist local groups, and got from them a list of comrades employed in our mine. I picked out among them the most reliable, and we all met on a Sunday. We discussed nucleus work in the enterprise. The only question was whether we should work illegally or legally. After we had decided to work illegally, and after we had agreed on the best manner of getting hold of all the comrades, we held a meeting, and the subject of the report was: nucleus work in the enterprise. After a thoro discussion we proceeded to constitute the nucleus. There are three shifts in our mines, and we elected in every shift a shift-nucleus leader, as well as a literature and trade union secretary. These comrades constituted the executive of the nucleus as a whole. The elected comrades received from the foreman of this leading organ instructions to draw all party members in the enterprise into regular work. I made the nucleus leaders responsible for the carrying out of the work decided upon. The nucleus leaders of every section were given a list of all the comrades working in his section, and he must always keep in touch with them. I as chairman try to find out if the nucleus members of every shift receive the instructions which I give their leader. Thus it is possible to draw every comrade into practical collaboration.

Our nucleus meets once a fortnight. The nucleus leaders of every shift are responsible for their nucleus members' attendance at the meetings. Every department leader must present a report on the work of the last two weeks, and this makes the meetings interesting.

Collection of membership subscriptions in the mine is certainly the most difficult question, because the party executive has not made any concrete decisions on it. There are local groups who still stick to the old traditions and have their doubts about nucleus work. But I am doing my best to solve this problem of collecting subscriptions in our enterprise in the following way. A sub-cashier is elected in every shift and a head cashier of the nucleus for the whole enterprise. The sub-cashiers of the various shifts settle accounts with the nucleus cashier, and the latter with the cashier of the local group. In this manner it will be possible to collect membership subscriptions in our mine.

P. M.,
Nucleus Chairman of the Mine.

ANOTHER nucleus chairman has sent us the following communication on the formation of the factory nucleus: I got a list of comrades employed in the enterprise where I work from the party executive. Some of them I knew already personally, and the others I had seen at factory meetings at which I have always been a keen observer. I thereupon called together the comrades from the various sections whom I knew personally, and gave them the names of party members together with an invitation to a meeting to be held the next evening. I did not place on the agenda the dry subject, "Establishment of a Factory Nucleus," but a matter in which the workers of the enterprise were keenly interested just then. The results were brilliant. Only two of those invited did not come, and one of them sent an excuse. We did our business and established a factory nucleus.

I notified the local party executive of the formation of a factory nucleus in the ——— works. The second meeting was held immediately after working hours in a hall nearby. The party executive sent to this meeting a reporter who gave a political address. We then connected the report with our enterprise and drew from it the lessons necessary for us. The next day we were able to do much better oral propaganda work than before, as we were now able to connect the small needs and demands of the workers with the political events. I must record that since the establishment of the factory nucleus the comrades are doing much better party work than before. Only now have we a sound basis for our propaganda work in the factory, and we are sure that our leaflets are really distributed there. After establishing this apparatus and extending the factory nucleus by gradually getting hold of all the Communists, we proceeded with the publication of a factory newspaper. At first of course we went about it in a rather clumsy manner, but after receiving a few hints from an editor, we soon got into the work. Our factory newspapers have of course received particular attention from the management of the works, but we Comunists have now the satisfaction that non-party workers approach us with the request for more factory newspapers and themselves bring contributions for the newspaper. We utilized this politisation of the workers and connected the sale of our factory newspapers with a collection for the Red Aid, and at election time, for the election fund. The result has been very satisfactory.

My experience in connection with the factory nucleus is as follows: There were comrades who were not at all keen on it, they were too much bound up with the old residential form of organization. But soon they recognized that factory nuclei are much more advantageous to the party than the old form of organization. The party has considerably increased its influence in the enterprise, and comrades are much more closely united than before. In conclusion I should like to say to all comrades:

"Establish factory nuclei everywhere, publish a factory newspaper in every factory, publish your experiences in the party press in order that other comrades may profit by them. If you do this, the influence of the Communist Party will spread and the party will be able to do justice to the tasks before it."

(Signed) Factory Nucleus Chairman in ———.

II.

The Nucleus Chairman of a Medium Enterprise Has Sent Us the Following Account.

THE factory nucleus question is today the main topic of party discussion. It is no doubt one of the most important questions, and all comrades should not only take an interest in this question, but should work energetically on this field. There will probably be many comrades who will ask themselves the question: How should I set about the establishment of a factory nucleus? It is true the matter seems simple enuf when one looks thru the good advice and the hints supplied by the Central Committee. I admit that the difficulties connected with establishing a well-functioning nucleus in a larger factory or works where workers are under very strict control are not so great that they cannot be overcome. It is a different matter altogether where a smaller enterprise is concerned, where the foreman or employer can control every one of his workers at any time of the day. Many comrades will have experienced this of themselves, and a good few had probably to put up with the consequences of this.

I am employed in a small enterprise which has the reputation that workers are under control almost every minute of the working day. Nevertheless I was determined from my first day in this factory to awaken my seemingly indolent colleagues from their sleep and to try eventually to find out if there were any comrades among them. I must confess this was an arduous task. I was told by my fellow workers that the "old man" took good care that any one even the least suspected of spreading revolutionary tendencies among the workers of the factory was soon shown the road. Hence caution was of the utmost importance.

As I could not think of any better way, I turned to be at the end of the working day always the last to pay a visit to a certain small, quiet place, the walls of which I covered with small handbills. Those who did not tear down these handbills were sure to be sympathizers, and maybe even comrades. On the following day I kept my eye on the door of this certain place and endeavored under the pretext of feeling ill to enter the said place every time a fellow worker had just left it. The first time I did this I noticed that none of the handbills had been removed. I took note who had been inside. When I did this the second time, there was the same result—none of the handbills had been removed. But the third time everything had been torn down. Then I knew that there was no hope of making friends with this lot.

I carried on this game a few days running, and in the course of these days I knew my fellow workers almost by heart.

I joined in the conversation of fellow workers whom I in my secret heart considered to be comrades, in order to make quite sure, and lo and behold! one of them showed me his membership card. Henceforth we worked hand in hand. We approached our fellow workers singly and worked them up as one should do in such cases—and the result was amazing. We discovered that not less than eight comrades worked in this enterprise, and they all told me that they had mistrusted one another. No one of them dared to attempt to establish a nucleus. But now "the nucleus is there." We are of course very pleased with our success, and altho we must not make ourselves too conspicuous in the factory, for fear of being given the push, we have been able to enlighten a good few of our fellow workers on the treacherous policy of the social-democratic party, on the shameless attitude of employers and the disgraceful treatment meted out by foremen to the workers. Any future wage struggles do not give us any uneasiness, for we are convinced that our work has not been in vain, especially as eight strong supporters at factory meetings out of a staff of fifty are by no means a negligible quantity.

A COMRADE from the building trade has sent us the following account of the establishment of a factory nucleus: When the party issued the slogan of reorganization on a factory nucleus basis, I immediately proceeded to elaborate in our trade (building workers) a plan for the establishment of nuclei. I submitted this plan to several of my fellow workers, but did not meet at first with much encouragement from them. I saw, however, that this was only due to the fact that altho these comrades possessed membership cards they had never seriously considered why they had joined our party nor what are our aims. This being so, I told myself that I must be patient, and I proceeded to organize a meeting of comrades from various places where builders were employed. This meeting was quite well attended for a first meeting. I explained my plans to them. Several comrades put down their names for participation in the discussion. They said that the plan was all right, but that it could not be carried out in the building trade, as party comrades were scattered because of the nature of their work, necessitating transference from one building site to another. Others again were of the opinion that one should not complicate matters, as we had already a trade union fraction. They said that this was sufficient and that there was no need for a special factory nucleus organization. I then tried to explain my standpoint to the comrades, telling them that we could very well unite the Communist builders of our entire locality into one factory nucleus, as the formation of several nuclei was fraught with great difficulties in our trade in which workers are continually shifting from place to place. I told them that if we stuck to the trade union fraction work which we had done hitherto, this would be by no means a factory nucleus organization. I also said that comrades must, above all, realize that our aim is to build up the party on a factory nucleus basis, and that therefore, factory nuclei are of fundamental importance. Unlike fractions, which only discuss and organize work in the trade unions, factory nuclei are the medium thru which all party work should be done (carrying our party activity, propaganda for the party and the press, collection of membership contributions).

We thereupon proceeded to form a managing committee, making certain that the largest building centers should be taken into consideration. We also appointed a nucleus representative for every building site. The first work of the nucleus was to collect signatures in favor of the initiation of a plebiscite in Switzerland against excessive taxation. Every nucleus member was given three to four sheets and a list of the places where he should collect signatures. Collection of membership contributions from all workers engaged in the building trade is also done now thru the nucleus.

Next time I will tell you about our further work and experiences.

Red Builder.

(Organization Department's Note:—The above example of the formation of nuclei in the building trade refers to a small locality. In larger localities, party comrades employed on various building sites of one and the same employer should be organized into one factory nucleus. Especially in the building trade, it is essential to publish factory nucleus newspapers, as it is difficult to exercise thoro and continuous influence over workers employed in this industry which necessitates frequent shifting from place to place.)

THE nucleus chairman of a medium sized industrial enterprise has sent us the following account: "We started our important work with the party slogan: 'To the Factories!' There were in our factory comrades from various local groups, and they were organized into a nucleus. We started with 20 Communist members and we proceeded to elect the executive whose composition is: Nucleus organizer, organization organizer, agitprop organizer, steward for processions, demonstrations, etc., trade union organizer, cashier and Red Aid organizer. Then we divided all members into groups of five, allotting a leader to each, and into a group of Communist women. The whole factory was divided into sections and every group of five was allotted one of the sections as its field of activity. Membership subscriptions are collected weekly thru the leaders of these groups of five, and this ensures regularity. Nucleus meetings are held whenever important political and economic questions arise. Those questions are discussed and this ensures united action by the whole nucleus within the factory. Regular nucleus meetings are held once a month after working hours. The membership of our nucleus has already gone up from 20 to 39. From a staff of 350 people, 103 are readers of the Comunist press. There is no special need for factory nucleus newspapers, as Communist newspapers can be obtained in the factory. It is only when one is compelled to work illegally and Communist newspapers are prohibited, that there is work to do for the editor of a factory nucleus newspaper. Leaflets, etc., are distributed in the factory. Well, no sooner did the nucleus begin to be busy than the firm began to hunt for the nucleus organizer. Communist election addresses had been posted in the factory—hence the alarm of the management. But as our nucleus organizer is invisible, the hunt was in vain. We had successful collections for Red Aid in our factory.

The successes achieved by a capable nucleus show us that we are on the right way and give us hope of a victorious revolution. Well, comrades, who work in factories: Learn to form factory nuclei, make factories strongholds of the working class. Carry out the Bolshevization of the party and ensure thereby the ultimate victory of the working class.

No factory without a nucleus!
On with the work!
Long live Factory Nucleus!
The Strongholds of the Revolution!

(Organization Department's Note:—To prevent wrong deductions being made from this report, we would like to say that it is most expedient to organize factory nuclei according to the division of the factory into sections, blocks, or workshops. In general, mechanical divisions into groups of five is not to be recommended. But sectional nuclei should be formed where such a thing has become an absolute necessity.)

IT should not be necessary to form special groups of Communist women, for our women comrades should carry on the same kind of work and in the same manner as the men comrades. Propaganda and agitation among women factory workers is not only the business of women comrades, but also that of our men comrades. But this does not mean that no special groups of women sympathizers with us should be formed among whom our women comrades could do the necessary work.

Wherever possible, nucleus meetings should be held once a week. If these meetings are well prepared and not too drawn out, attendance will be better than if a nucleus meeting is held once a month and has an agenda that takes up too much time.

Factory nucleus newspapers should be published also in factories where Communist newspapers are widely read. The daily press cannot allow enuf space for the discussion of questions arising in all the factories. A factory nucleus newspaper appeals directly to the workers of the respective facory. It deals with factory questions and connects with them the general questions of the labor movement and other political questions. The main task of the factory nucleus newspaper is to tell the workers continuously what they must do to improve their position.

GREAT CROWDS GATHER AT MOST SUCCESSFUL OUTING HELD BY N. Y. INTERNATIONAL LABOR DEFENSE

NEW YORK, August 27.—The annual outing of the International Labor Defense was a huge success with over three thousand present.

Scopes Trial Burlesque.

The two features of the day were the Scopes trial burlesque and the taking of moving pictures. The burlesque won continual applause from the crowds who responded to the excellent humor of the piece. There were represented the twelve jurymen and "true from Tennessee, ignorant farmers who spent their time chewing their cud and spitting in the spittoons which the state of Tennessee had provided." Bryan, Darrow, Scopes and the Judge were all there true to the last detail, and last but not least the monkey himself was there with a monkey face and switching his tail. He was all but human and answered the questions of Bryan with much intelligence.

The play was filmed by the movie man. The crowd was also filmed at various times. In the not distant future this film will be shown in New York and all those who attended yesterday's outing will have the pleasure of seeing themselves on the screen at that time. Watch for the advertisements for the showing of this original film.

There was excellent food to be bought at the food and drink booths and before night everything was sold down to the last portion of ice cream and the last hot dog.

Must Defend Our Soldiers.

In every way the affair was entirely successful and the International Labor Defense has been strengthened to carry on the great work for which it was organized. And this work of defending and caring for class war prisoners and their families is one of the most important duties of the working class.

Whatever happens, the defense of workers must go on. The next step is to prepare for the coming conference which will be held on Sunday, Sept. 13th, at the Labor Temple, 243 East 84th street, and to which we invite all working class organizations. This conference will pave the way to an ever stronger and greater defense.

FASCISTS USE POLICE AGAINST N. Y. COMMUNISTS

Blackshirt Starts a Fight But Needs Help

(By Worker Correspondent.)

NEW YORK, August 27.—Not only in Italy, but in America also, the fascisti use paid defectives and police. Some Italian comrades passed by the fascisti headquarters on 14th street between Third and Second Avenues. A blackshirt was at the entrance, with an insolent air. One of our comrades gave a terrible punch to the fellow who threatened him. Comrade S. left our group to prevent further incidents. He separated the two fighters and told the dirty-shirt to go away, unless he wanted a new and better does of punches.

We thought the incident was over when suddenly the fascist called to his comrades for help. We remained to receive them properly, but instead of fascisti, a detective came down who promptly arrested comrade S., the one who tried to avoid further trouble to the fascisti.

This detective belonged to the Fiaschetti detective association, which is being generously paid by the fascisti to protect their headquarters and themselves. He wore on his coat a fascisti emblem. At the 5th Street police station he tried to build up an important trial against Comrade S. charging him with "insults" and "menace."

He also attempted to arrest another comrade who followed S. in order to witness the incident in behalf of Comrade S. The police sergeant, in spite of the fact of having noticed the fascisti emblem on the coat of the "brave" detective, who will undoubtedly be rewarded by the fascisti for his courage and cleverness, placed Comrade S.'s bail at $500. The bail was immediately raised and after about ten minutes our comrade was free.

The next day we went to the trial which, however, did not take place because the fascisti with the famous detective didn't show up, we do not understand for what reason. The whole thing was dismissed.

We sincerely appreciate the prompt assistance given by the New York section of the International Labor Defense, which greatly helped in liquidating the matter satisfactorily.

Manufacturers renewed the contract, affecting about 70 per cent of the cloak and suit workers. Strikes are on in the 25 shops of contractors for the 8 jobbers who did not renew.

1[illegible]8,000 MINERS QUIT WORK TUESDAY

BOLSHE[illegible]ATION OF THE WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY BIG SUBJECT BEFORE THE FOURTH CONVENTION

The Fourth Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party of America, after some delay in getting started on Thursday, opened that session with the report of Comrade Cannon on the reorganization and Bolshevization of the party.

The above process depended upon developing the theoretical basis of party members, in changing the party to a Bolshevik from the present social-democratic structure and uniting theory with practice. The party in its early years had been opposed, its ideas were static. Now we have made a start, the New York Workers' School, study classes, circuit classes and so on.

Difference With Poyntz.

In the controversy over the New York school the C. E. C. had first collided with Comrade Poyntz. The Central Committee wanted the school an instrument of the party. Poyntz had resisted, wanted the C. E. C. to keep its hands off and resigned when refused freedom of action. Her resignation was accepted.

The present territorial branch form of organization was useful for the socialist party because it wanted organization only for elections. The federation form of party structure isolated these federations both from the party and from the class struggle.

There are backward elements in all federations, and their influence is aided within the party by all those who resist reorganization. Federationism resists what is called the "interference of the party." Shop nuclei reorganization is the needful correction. But the shop nuclei were only a part. They must have a policy of political struggle, must react instantly to the party center and respond to every need of the workers around them.

Excuses.

Language differences were used as an excuse for resistance. It was not valid. Instances were mentioned. Comrade Ballam of Boston had said it would take years to overcome the language difficulties and in the meantime only the English speaking members should be reorganized.

Comrade Askeli had said much the same. He also wanted a federation of Finnish workers outside the party and objected to the "mechanical control" of party fractions in such organizations. If we cannot control federations inside the party, how can we control them outside the party. The question is: who is going to be controlled, the party or the federation? What we want is a national organization of party fractions and a decentralization of non-party groups.

Against Right Wing.

Those who resist Bolshevization and reorganization do so under the banner of objection to "mechanical control." After Superior there had been the Minneapolis branch resolution, written by a comrade who said that the party fraction in non-party workers' clubs would use "machine tactics." The structural phase and the ideological phase were two parts

WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY CONVENTION IN VOTE OF SYMPATHY

By a rising vote of the whole gathering, the Fourth Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party, at the opening of its Thursday night session, expressed its sympathy for Comrades William F. Dunne and Marguerite Dunne in their bereavement thru the sudden death of their little son, William F. Dunne, Jr., a member of the Young Workers (Communist) League Juniors, who met his death in an automobile accident.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

POLAND has an unfavorable trade balance. The government decided to place an embargo on all imports. The zloty, the unit of Polish currency, is depreciating. The white guard rulers are in panic. The recent orgy of executions of Communists has not helped the stabilization of the country. While Poland's trade balance leans the wrong way, Soviet Russia has a different story to tell. You do not read so much nowadays about the failure of Communist leadership. The industrial and agricultural statistics coming out of Russia defy the art of capitalist lying.

AN irate reader "rises to inquire" in a superior sort of way, whether those "who are in the forefront" of the revolutionary movement write what they feel or as they feel, about the capitalist system and about those who support that system and benefit by it. This inquiry originated from an æsthetic revolt on the part of this reader against our comment on the demise of the czar of Russia, and the use of the word "fertilizer", in describing the chemical transformation which took place after the last of the Romanoffs breathed his last.

AN open sewer could not have caused our critic more physical discomfort than this graphic and scientific description of the metamorphosis of the czar from a "Little Father of all the Russias" to a crumbling mound of clay, which is supplying sustenance to living matter that grows out of the earth. That is the function of fertilizer, of which there are many varieties. Most of our proletarian readers are very well pleased with the role now being played by the czar's body, and would rejoice exceedingly if all the other royal parasites served the same useful purpose.

OUR critic disclaims any pro-czarist sympathies, but judging by his protest he is either a reactionary or a befuddled sentimentalist. As to writing how one feels, it can be said that only those writers who put what is usually called "soul" into their work are worth reading. Class conscious proletarian writers are not squeamish about applying epithets to the robber class. They know, being proletarians themselves, that the masses will not suffer any mental agony in seeing the rod of castigation applied to the political hides of their foes.

'LITTLE BILL' DUNNE DIES UNDER AUTO

Funeral at Waldheim Cemetery Today

"Little Bill" Dunne, only son of Comrade William F. Dunne, editor of the DAILY WORKER, and Comrade Marguerite Dunne, was killed Thursday. He was going home to supper when he was bowled over by one car and thrown under the speeding wheels of another. Death was instantaneous. The body was taken to Hodkinson's undertaking parlor, 3153 W. Harrison.

His mother and father were at the convention of the Workers Party at the time.

Tho he was but seven years of age, he was always able to take care of himself and when not at school, played near his home all day long. William and Marguerite Dunne were on the point of collapse after the news was broken to them, and were rushed to the undertaking parlors by automobile.

"Little Bill" will be laid to rest in Waldheim Cemetery. The convention of the Workers Party will adjourn and attend the ceremony. The procession will form at the undertaking parlor for the drive to Waldheim, at 2 p. m. Saturday.

ZEIGLER TRIAL PUT OFF; FEAR RAILROADING

Lawyers Retained to Defend Miners

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ZEIGLER, Ill., Aug. 28.—The preliminary hearing of the eighteen union miners arrested in Zeigler on a charge alleging conspiracy to murder D. B. Cobb., sub-district vice-president of the United Mine Workers, was postponed until next Wednesday. The charges grew out of a fight that followed a meeting of Mine Workers' Local 992, when D. B. Cobb and Sub-District President Lon Fox removed the officials of Local 992 against the wishes of the 1,300 members of the union. It was at this meeting that Mike Sarovich, a trusted Zeigler miner, was murdered by a supporter of Cobb and the sub-district machine.

The miners of Franklin county have organized a county defense committee with branches, in practically every local union in the sub-district to fight against what is known to be an attempt to railroad the Zeigler men to jail because they are progressives and have challanged the leadership of the corrupt sub-district officials. This defense committee is working in co-operation with International Labor Defense which has undertaken to con-

Caillaux's Tricks.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—Despite the fact that the government has promptly turned a cold shoulder to the Anglo-French debt agreement as a basis for settlement of France's $4,000,000,000 debt to the United States, it was privately admitted in official circles today that all the skill which the American debt funding commission can muster will be necessary to cut thru the maze created in London by Caillaux and Chamberlain.

The settlement of France's debt to England was made contingent upon the granting by the United States of the most liberal of terms to France.

COAL STRIKE WILL TIE UP U. S. HARD COAL INDUSTRY; 828 MINES WILL BE SHUT DOWN

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Aug. 28.—At midnight August 31st, 158,000 hard-coal miners of Pennsylvania will lay down their tools. The decision was arrived at by the sub-scale committee of the miners last night at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel and the strike order was sent to the 325 miners locals in the hard coal districts.

The strike order followed the breaking off of negotiations with the operators at Atlantic City on August 4th since which time frantic efforts had been made by government spokesmen and committees of citizens to avert the walk-out. Yesterday, President Lewis of the mine workers delivered an ultimatum to the operators that was followed shortly by the order to strike.

Demand Increase.

The miners' demands are a dollar a day increase in wages and the institution of the "check-off" system. The operators had refused to discuss the wage increase and called the check-off "impossible."

The strike order is effective in Districts 1, 7 and 9 of the United Mine Workers.

158,000 Miners Affected.

These three districts have jurisdiction over the sole anthracite region in this country centering around Luzerne, Lackawanna and Schuylkill counties in Pennsylvania. About 158,000 miners working in 828 mines controlled by 135 companies are affected.

The operators had held out hope to the last minute that the miners would give in. The strike order came as a distinct surprise to them and Major Inglis, their spokesman said, "The suspension order is unnecessary. It means that the employes will lose more than $1,000,000.00 a day in wages."

Owners Try to Dodge Demands.

The operators had tried to get the miners to continue at work under the old agreement, signed two years ago, until a new contract could be drawn up. But the scale committee empowered by the mine workers to call a strike saw that the operators had no intention of listening to their demands.

The operators charge that the strike call was in a large part due to the miners "pre-occupation with conditions in the soft coal field." This refers to the fact that many bituminous operators have refused to abide by their agreements. The miners do not deny this.

Controversy Over Maintenance.

A controversy over mine maintenance during the strike has been settled on the basis of the operators' agreement to keep as many men at work as are necessary to properly man the more than three thousand pumps in the mines during the strike. Those who work will benefit from the final adjustment in wages by the consent of the operators to make any increases that may be granted retro-active to September first.

The miners are financially well-fixed and are prepared to withstand a long seige. The operators say there is a three months' supply of anthracite in store. The soft coal magnates are claimed to be already moving into the hard coal markets and the substitute companies consider the present strike a boon for them.

But the miners are in no way frightened by these statements. They happen to know that there has been a great demand for steam sized anthracite and they charge that the profits of the anthracite operators are large.

The government at Washington is trying to present a calm face to the country and act unconcerned over the stoppage. But the activity of the Interstate Commerce Commission in giving right of way to all grades of coal on the rails and checking up on surpluses seems to indicate that official Washington is in no way pleased with the prospect of a fuel famine.

Calles Satisfies Britain.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 28.—Great Britain and the Calles government have reached a satisfactory arrangement and official relations will be opened this coming week it is reported today.

PARTY BEHIND STRIKE 100 PCT., SAYS FOSTER

Asks United Support for Mine Workers

At the fourth national convention of the Workers (Communist) Party sitting in Chicago news of the anthracite strike was received with enthusiasm. William Z. Foster, chairman of the Workers Party, and also chairman of the present convention, said regarding the walkout: "The strike of the 158,000 organized anthracite miners of Pennsylvania has the unqualified support of the Workers Party.

"This is but one of many battles—thirteen, I believe—that the hard-coal diggers have fought and won. The anthracite miners of Pennsylvania constitute one of the chief sectors of the American proletarian front. The winning of this historic conflict will advance the cause of the American working class and serve to encourage the more backward and less organized sections of the toilers."

Warns Against Intervention.

Asked regarding possible government interference, Foster replied: "The striking miners can well expect to have the whole power of American capital aligned against them, not excepting intervention—forcibly or otherwise—of the state and federal governments thru their courts, police, troops, etc. This is a lesson the labor struggles in America has taught the workers.

"The Workers Party will do its full duty in organizing the power of a united proletariat outside the coal industry to assist financially, morally and materially in making the anthracite strike a victorious landmark in the onward march of the American workers."

Task of Communists.

What will be the work of the Communists among the striking miners? Foster answered: "It will be the task of the Communists and progressives in the United Mine Workers of America to take a leading part in the strike and to battle relentlessly against the coal operators." At the same time they shall be constantly on their guard against possible treachery on the part

REPORT CADETS IN POSSESSION OF CANTON; ARREST OFFICIALS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SHANGHAI, August 28.—Advices from Canton say that Whampoa cadets captured that city on August 25. 100 Cantonese officials have been placed under arrest and all strategic points in the city are held by the cadets who are well equipped with artillery. The cadets are strongly anti-imperialistic and are sympathetic to Communism.

SIGMAN AGENTS CAUSE ARREST OF TWENTY-THREE GARMENT PICKETS; POLICE AID FIGHT ON MILITANTS

NEW YORK, August 28.—The wholesale arrest of workers picketing the cloak and dress shops on strike as a result of last week's stoppage in the garment industry was the latest development in the fight between the Joint Committee of Action of Locals 2, 9 and 22 and the officials of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

There were 23 arrests in all, among them 2 girls who were passing the shops on strike and had no connection with the picketing or the strike. In front of the Siesser Dress Co. at 13-15 East 22nd Street, Rose Chester of 64 East 103rd Street was on her way to work when detectives arrested Frances Alazer, Helen Horn and Jennie Locker, striking members of the shop who had just arrived at the building prepared to picket.

Arrest Women Pickets.

Rose Chester was arrested with the others, charged with disorderly conduct and brought to the fourth district court on East 57th street where she was paroled until next Wednesday and the other three girls were released on bail.

At 590 7th avenue, where the Zweig Dress Co. is on strike, Max Moscowitz, a business agent from the joint board, was present and according to C. S. Zimmerman and other witnesses he was pointing out to detectives the workers to be arrested. Jennie Libster, a union member who noticed the crowd and crossed the street to see what was happening, was immediately noted by Moscowitz and pointed out for arrest. Miss Libster had no connection with the striking shop, but a few days ago she had refused to work as a scab at the Roth Costume Co., another one of the shops on strike and evidently the joint board agents consider her a friend of the expelled locals.

Four Are Held.

There were 8 arrestse in front of Artman & Saltzman, 111 Weest 27th street; 3 at the Roth Costumes, Inc., 550 7th avenue; 8 at Zweig Dress Co., 500 7th avenue; 4 at Siesser Dress Co., 15 East 22nd street. In Jefferson market court, eight of these were fined $10 a piece including Jennie Libster who had not been a picket or a striker; four were released on bail and 11 cases were dismissed.

Little Bill Dunne

Little Bill Dunne
Was a fighter like his dad,—
Tho he never had a chance
To meet the bosses
At the barricades!
Those who knew him used to say,
"He's a chip off the old block."

Little Bill
Always had an answer.
When a liar of a colonel
Spoke one night of "dirty" Bolsheviks,
Little Bill asked Big Bill,
"Shall I knock him over
With my chair?"

He had the right idea,—
Only he was in too much of a hurry:
It was the hurry of youth,
Untamed
By the mashine-age,
And it caught
Little Bill Dunne.

Thursday night he was hurrying
To get home,—
He had not learned
That it is only when one is old enough
To go to work,
That he should hurry,
According to the law.

Machines were made for hurry,
Regardless
Of little boys.
A ruthless auto tossed him
Thru the air;
Another caught and crushed him:
A third picked him up.

Only the machines
Hurried now,—
To the undertaker's:
Little Bill Dunne
Was still;
For the first time,
He didn't have a "come-back."

HYLAN'S FRIENDS BLOCK MOVE TO CENSURE MAYOR

Pays City Employes Non-Union Scale

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Aug. 28.—Turmoil broke loose at the convention of the New York State Federation of Labor today when a resultion signed by two hundred trade unionists asked that the convention go on record against the re-election of Mayor John F. Hylan, of New York City.

The resolution charged Hylan with refusing to pay the prevailing rate of wages to union members employed by the city and he was also charged with having insulted trade union leaders who interviewed him in regard to the matter, branding them as gunmen.

Former Progressive.

One of the sponsors of the resolution was Edward I. Hannah, formerly president of the now defunct Central Federated Union, which was abolished by Gompers for the same reason that the Minneapolis Central Labor Council was reorganized. Under Hannah's regime the New York central body was mildly progressive.

The Hylanites in the convention came to the defense of their payroll saint. The ruddy occupant of the mayoral chair is averse to paying the union scale to the great majority of his employes he pays a few labor fakers liberal salaries. Hence their affection for him.

One speaker declared that the convention was composed of socialists, republicans and democrats and only the democrats had a right to discuss Hylan's fitness or unfitness for office.

VIENNA, Austria, Aug. 27.—A delegation of thirty members of the German reichstag headed by President Loebe is expected to arrive in Vienna Saturday to take part in a meeting to promote the union of Austria and Germany. Mr. Loebe is the sponsor and advocate of the "anschluss" (union) idea.

Indiana Federation Meets.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Aug. 28.—With more than 400 delegates in attendance, the forty-first annual convention of the Indiana Federation of Labor, got under way here today to continue for three days.

BOLSHEVIZATION OF THE WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY BIG SUBJECT BEFORE THE FOURTH CONVENTION

of the one problem. Whosoever wants to follow the policy of the C. I. must bring forth deeds.

The right wing which runs to one group and then to the other, will use a tactic of demanding a suppression policy against one group or another, according to its temporary allies. The C. E. C. which had differed with Comrade Poyntz on many things had most sharply fought the demand she once made in the New York district for the crushing of the minority comrades. Comrade Cannon warned that the policy in either group of extermination is a right wing policy. With reorganization and Bolshevization must come basic unity of the two groups in a fight on the right wing.

Bedacht Speaks.

Comrade Bedacht, following, dwelt at length on the need for Bolshevik theoretical understanding and Bolshevik leadership. We should have theory enuf if not to prevent mistakes at least to criticize ourselves and find why we made mistakes. The majority did not yet have such theory. They did not yet know why they had made the mistake of dropping the slogan for a labor party.

We should have periodical analyses of political conditions. It was ignorance to contend that Comrade Pepper's articles on the LaFollette revolution were ridiculous. Mere formal changes in the party structure were not enuf. Bolshevization meant political understanding and action. The majority lacked Bolshevik theory. When the minority controlled the party it had given correct political analysis to oustanding events. At present the leadership had not done so. The Workers Monthly was devoid of any such articles. The party must have leadership which did not fail in this respect.

Resolutions on Askeli.

Comrades Swabeck, Wolfe, Fisher, Miller, Krumbein, Novak, Abern and many others spoke from the floor. Two resolutions were then introduced on right wing tendencies in the Finnish federation. One by one the majority endorsed the statements of the C. E. C. and the Finnish bureau on the Superior resolution, opposed the article by Askeli as opportunist, endorsed reorganization and Bolshevization as a means of combatting opportunist tendencies and instructed the new C. E. C. to unite all Communist elements in the Finnish section for struggle against right wing and for reorganization.

The minority resolutions advocated a close watch and control over party papers and advised editorial changes when necessary. It asserted Askeli an exponent of Loreist tendencies on the Tyomies' editorial staff, even after the efforts of the C. E. C. to correct such tendencies in the statements of the Superior branch Askeli had continued to defend that position. The resolution said the convention "considers the further employment of Comrade Askeli as an editor of Tyomies incompatible with the interests of the party and its Bolshevization, instructed the Finnish comrades of Superior to remove at once Comrade Askeli from the staff of Tyomies and replace him with a comrade who understands, accepts and fights for the Communist line of our party and the Communist International."

Askeli Speaks.

Comrade Askeli was granted the floor to explain his position. Cannon, he said had stated Askeli was against the C. I. He demanded proof of anything said or done anything against the C. I. Ever since the C. I. was organized he had supported it, had never written or spoken a word against it. Now here are comrades who want to expel me because they say I am against the C. I.

In his article he said he was in favor of shop nuclei, but he had never seen nuclei in operation and he had merely said so—that's all. It is a theoretic question—like all things.

He had written articles and spoken in branches every Sunday for reorganization. He believed it would unite his people more firmly to the American workers. As to federation patriotism, he denied it. He thot only that the Finnish federation had accomplished something to be proud—for the party to can be proud of. He was willing to liquidate federations when the time was ripe. Language difference was a difficulty. He, himself, was an instance. If he could speak in Finnish the convention would discard these foolish resolutions.

That "One Thing."

He had written an article—and that one thing had made him a Loreite. He had been in the movement for 19 years and had been always called a leftist. It may have been a mistake. But if you have made mistakes yourself, vote down these resolutions. He had not underscored it. It was foolish to say he was wanting to organize another faction. He was sick and tired of factions and wanted only a united Communist Party, that was all.

No Repudiation.

Comrade Boich queried: "Are you willing to repudiate everything in that article?"

Askeli said he was not. If some one pointed out points of error, then he would admit it, but not when someone simply said "It is a Lore article," and attempts to terrorize him to admit wholesale mistakes. Let him who had not made mistakes cast the first stone, he ended.

Cannon Speaks on Askeli.

Comrade Cannon spoke, saying that Askeli's speech was enuf to prove the charges against him. Right when the party was changing its form and quality, Comrade Askeli had come out in an article against it. Toward shop nuclei his attitude was negative. We could perhaps permit this in a rank and filer, but not in a leader with influence and position.

Comrade Askeli, Cannon declared, had been sufficiently shown as opposing party control of the federation in Cannon's presentation. It was a fine maneuver of Askeli to try to make it appear that criticism of Askeli was an attack on all the Finnish workers, to attempt to identify himself with the whole Finnish federation.

Askeli appeals to the democratic sentiment of the backward mass and to turn it against the Central Committee. All this can be understood in a rank and filer, but not in a leader.

A New Faction.

Askeli says he does not wish to organise a new faction. Yet at a time of crisis in the party, when unity was most necessary, exactly then Askeli comes out with an attack on the parity commission resolutions and attempts to discredit this convention in advance. What else is this but laying ground for a faction. And if we do not get unity against it, the faction of Askeli will be too big and we must fight against Askeli with the weapon of unity.

Askeli had said he wanted a C. E. C. that could settle matters without appealing to "higher bodies." When Cannon said this was opposition to guidance of the C. I., Askeli had replied that he meant the membership when he spoke of "higher bodies." Either way Askeli was wrong.

Askeli represents Loreism, there is no difference between Askeli's ideas and Lore's. The underscoring of Askeli's article was a mere chance editorial accident which changed nothing but the emphasis, but this is the kind of thing Comrade Askeli likes to raise as an argument to defend his basically non-Communist position.

Lovestone Speaks on Askeli.

Comrade Lovestone took the floor, saying that Askeli's speech was the best argument for the minority's resolution. One could trace every principle of opportunism, the characteristics of opportunism. Just as scientists can pick up a small bone and tell from that what the whole animal was, so Askeli had dropt a bone from which could be reconstructed the whole opportunist animal.

Askeli had said that Communism was only a theory. Shop nuclei is a problem, our party must fight for shop nuclei. But Askeli says they are a theory. Askeli had said he was in the movement 19 years. Smeral of Czecho-Slovakia had been in the movement twice as long—and perhaps was twice as dangerous as Askeli.

The convention would not do its duty if it did not remove Askeli from his place of influence. Because Askeli had dropt a bone from which the whole skeleton of his social-democratic opposition to Bolshevization had been clearly revealed.

Both Resolutions Carry.

Following the above discussion on the resolutions, both the majority and the minority resolutions were carried unanimously. The parity commission resolutions on reorganization and Bolshevization of the party was then passed, also unanimously.

The whole evening session was devoted to the industrial report. The speeches of Comrade Foster and Comrade Gitlow will be given entire in the DAILY WORKER as this important subject will interest all readers and is to be given in detail.

British and American Imperialists May Well Worry About Mongolia

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, some of the truth simmers thru about American "scientific" investigations in Mongolia, as revealed by the brief cabled report of the statement issued by the Mongolian Mission in Moscow. This statement directly charges that the Third Asiatic Expedition of the American Museum of Natural History, under the leadership of Roy Chapman Andrews, has been ordered expelled from Mongolian territory by the Urga government on the ground that the expedition violated agreements made by its leader with the Mongolian authorities.

It is charged that this "scientific" expedition entered Mongolia in May "fully armed in military fashion," and that it included lieutenants in the British army, an English consular secretary, "and other persons whose names Mr. Andrews did not register with the Mongolian authorities."

The Mongolians, who have established their People's Republic, in thoro sympathy with the Union of Soviet Republics, had every right to be keenly suspicious of this aggregation of fake professors, claiming to study pre-historic remains in a land seeking to establish its proletarian dictatorship. The wonder is that they took any chances at all in admitting this "expedition" after the experiences of the workers of Russia, Hungary and other countries with the counter-revolutionary activities of one American, Herbert Hoover. The dead past, shrouded by centuries gone, can wait a little longer keeping its secrets in darkness, while the living settle their differences thru the victory of the workers and peasants over this far-flung Asiatic territory.

American and British imperialists are very much worried about Mongolia. It is the only country so far that has been able to establish an independent republic among the Asiatic nations. The Chinese republic, shaken by a continuous revolution, is still under the yoke of foreign imperialism, whereas, in the words of Sen Katayama, the Japanese Communist, who recently visited the country, "Mongolia is a real revolutionary independent republic governed by the Mongolian Revolutionary People's Party."

It was Sun Yat Sen, the Chinese revolutionary leader, who first planned a railway from Peking to Urga, the Mongolian capital, while Soviet Siberia hopes to establish connections with its railway branching off from Irkutsk, thus developing valuable links between these tremendously important revolutionary centers in the orient.

• • • •

When the Soviet Red Army triumphed over the Kolchakists in Siberia, the Russian white guards tried to establish a base of operations in Mongolia, but they were in turn crushed by the Mongolian Red Army. The triumph of the Mongolian People's Republic is therefore part of the victory of Soviet Rule. Katayama points out that the Mongolians are "slowly but surely building up a Soviet Republic of Mongolia."

There is, therefore, incentive enough for world imperialism to try its bitter best to undermine the Mongolian Republic as part of its effort to keep the struggling Chinese Republic in chains, and maintain its strangle hold on the Far East.

• • • •

American workers and poor farmers should be made thoroly acquainted with these developments, in order that they may be better able to reply to the capitalist propaganda that has already tried to minimize this dastardly crime by charging that Russian Soviet Rule is suspicious of "non-partisan" scientific investigations. The experience of labor prove that it has great need to be thoroly suspicious of everything capitalistic. The Russians have had their experiences. The Mongolians have profitted by them. Let the workers of America do likewise.

of the none too loyal leadership of the miners' union.

"The Communists and progressives in the anthracite fields will agitate for a combination of forces with other workers' movements, especially the bituminous miners in their own union and the transport workers' unions to overcome the attacks of the organized masters and the state machinery at their beck and call. The bituminous miners must not mine coal and the railroad and marine workers must not haul it while the anthracite strike is in progress. Miners in other lands must be asked not to engage in the digging of coal and foreign transport workers must be appealed to not to move coal bound for the United States during this strike.

For a Labor Party.

"The progressives and Communists must show the mine workers the necessity for unity on the industrial field of battle at the same time they agitate among them for the independent political action of the workers against capitalism thru the medium of a powerful labor party based on their industrial organizations."

A special sub-committee of the Workers Party met yesterday to formulate the policies of the party in the anthracite strike. The results of its deliberations will be published soon.

'EVOLUTION WAS SCOPES TRIAL ISSUE', DARROW

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 28. — Questioning the "ethics of a judge in another state giving his opinion, especially when he knows nothing about the case." Clarence Darrow, censured by Justice Marshall of the Ohio supreme court for his actions in the Scopes case, replied today to the Ohio jurist. Mr. Darrow stopped in Kansas City on his way home from Girard, Kans.

Replying to Judge Marshall's charge, evolution was not an issue in the Scopes case and purely a publicity move by Darrow, the Chicagoan said:

"Judge Marshall should have read the Tennessee statute, the caption was entitled, "An Act to Prevent the Teaching of Evolution in Public Schools." The caption is part of the statute.

"The admission of evidence as to the theory of evolution we believe was competent and the lawyers for the defense agreed. It should be assumed that the lawyers who spent much time on the subject were justified in raising the questions. I should presume Judge Marshall knows this.

"There was no browbeating of the court."

ZEIGLER TRIAL PUT OFF; FEAR RAILROADING

duct a national campaign to fight the case.

Judge White Retained.

E. H. Morgan of Christopher and Judge White of Marion, the latter one of the attorneys in the famous "Herrin trial," have been retained jointly by the miners' defense committee and International Labor Defense to represent the miners.

The members of Local Union 992 who are under arrest are: Henry, Corbishly, Charles Corbishly, Bert Farthing, Oscar Farthing, Steve Meshovich, John Lisk, Joe Milkovich, Eddie Malinski, Louis Bukich, John Jasoff, Steve Feston, Tony Biffulo, Frank Sabinski, John Lake, William Bartash, R. B. Shivinski, Ignats Simmisk.

Fear Railroading.

The president of District 12 of the ick, Frank Goreak and Martin Sim- U. M. W. of A., Frank Farrington, has announced that he will back up Cobb and Fox, the officials of Sub-District 9, in their prosecution of the leaders of Local 992. The miners in Zeigler point out that their local is the center of the struggle against the reactionary district machine led by Farrington and is at the present time engaged in contesting the last general elections during which they say the most flagrant frauds and steals were perpetrated by the Farrington machine.

The miners say that viewed from the point of view of the evidence against the men charged with conspiracy the case is not serious because there is no actual ground for it. But they make no secret of their belief that with many elements in Zeigler willing to swear to anything on the witness stand, with the sub-district officials at the point of desperation, and with the large amount of funds and the legal apparatus at the disposal of their own district organization lined up against them, there is reason to fear the railroading of those arrested.

International Labor Defense is preparing to send outside attorneys of national prominence to fight for the men in case the frame-up assumes the serious proportions it is not at all unlikely they will consider the anxiety of the Farrington machine to rid itself of the progressive leaders of Franklin county.

Cohen, comptroller of customs and a leader in the republican party in Louisiana, together with Dr. L. A. Meraux, sheriff of St. Bernard parish, was only the first of a series to entangle in court action a gigantic organized traffic in contraband liquor.

Jap Gives Up Channel Swim.

DOVER, England, Aug. 28.—The turbid waters of the English channel again thwarted a swimmer today. Setan Nishimura, Japanese swimmer, gave up his attempt to swim the channel at 3:10 this afternoon, after having been in the water for ninety minutes and having covered only two miles.

1. The united front in the light of the changed world development.
2. Trade union work and international trade union unity.
3. Preparations for the sixth congress of the Comintern.
4. The program of the E. C. of the C. I. for the coming six months.

Martyrdom of Botwin Wins Respect of Masses for Polish Communists

MOSCOW, Aug. 28.—The Central Committee of the Communist Party of Poland has issued an appeal on the occasion of the execution of Botwin in which it declares that the Communists have won the sympathy and the respect of the masses on account of the killing of the Polish spy and the heroic death of Botwin. The bourgeoisie declares that the Communists exercise the terror. The Communist Party rejects the methods of the individual helpers of the bouregoisie but only the mass struggle of the workers and peasants can bring the freedom of the proletariat. The removal of provocateurs however, is not individual terror but self-defense of the working class against the traitors who deliver hundreds and thousands of revolutionaries to the bourgeoisie. Down with the provocateurs! Long live the the active fighters against the provocation! Long live Botwin, Knievsky, Rutkovsky and Gibner!

FRENCH-ENGLISH DEBT PACT USED TO SWAY CAL

Washington Charges Plot to Reduce Sum

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—The Anglo-French debt funding agreement was looked upon here among government officials as another stumbling block placed in the path to adjustment of France's $4,000,000,000 debt to the United States.

It was agreed that the tentative London settlement probably will complicate the Franco-American negotiations scheduled to take place in Washington next month. It was emphasized anew that the United States has no official connection with the Anglo-French agreement and is not bound in any way to recognize it in arriving at a settlement with France.

Officials privately expressed the view that the Anglo-French agreement could be regarded more or less as an effort on the part of France to scale down her debt to the United States rather than to pay the $3,750,000,000 which she owes England.

The fact that the agreement provided for little more than the payment of interest by France to England over a period of 62 years was enuf, it was stated, to eliminate it from consideration as a basis for a Franco-American debt settlement.

FAKE STORY OF ARREST OF CHINESE IN MOSCOW IS EXPOSED BY ROSTA

(By Rosta News Agency).

PEKING, Aug. 28.—A report has appeared in today's issue of the organ of the Japanese legation here, the North China Standard, about the alleged arrest in Moscow of four members of the Chinese mission in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

The representative of the Rosta News Agency has been authoritatively advised that the said report is a falsehood from beginning to end which is more extraordinary that it is publishrd in the semi-official organ of the Japanese legation and with especial emphasis, the purose thereby pursued hardly being a worthy one.

Such attempts at breeding unfriendly feelings against the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics by spreading avowedly false information—the Rosta correspondent was told—will scarcely attain their object or make any the easier whosesoever position.

CITY FATHERS IN L. A. JAIL FOR CROOKERY

"Friends" of Labor Are Caught with the Goods

(Worker Correspondent.)

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 28.—According to statements made some time ago by "labor leaders" of this city, the present administration "is the best Los Angeles ever had." It was elected by the method of punishing enemies and rewarding "friends." Now two of those "friends" are held in the county jail without bail, accused of bribery in connection with a pedestrian subway under the Second street tunnel. Councilmen Downs and Fitzpatrick will face the music before the grand jury tomorrow.

A trap was sprung on them at their offices in the city hall. One thousand dollars in marked money was found on each of the two councilmen. Each had asked for $5,000 for their vote from William Hodges, vice-president and general manager of the Tunnel Transportation company, Dist. Attorney Keyes supplied the money, or a part of it, and Mr. Hodges himself carried the two packages of bills to the pa(y)triotic city fathers.

Downs and Fitzpatrick have led the opposition to the subway tunned project in the council recently because they were interested in the welfare of the dear people. While this was going on, Jack L. Murphy (a confidential aid) talked things over with said William Hodges of the Tunnel Transportation company. Murphy is also in jail.

The last meeting of the old city council ended in a first class fist fight over some graft, during which the renegade "socialist," Ralph L. Criswell proved himself to be a better prize-fighter than a law-maker. And now this "model" city council of the labor fakers seems to be the greatest fake of all. The A. F. L. policy of rewarding "friends" and punishing enemies has again turned out to be a complete failure.

ILLINOIS JOBS GROW SCARCER IN LAST MONTH

Carbuilders and Steel Workers Hard Hit

Industrial employment is on the downgrade in Illinois. Reports to the Illinois department of labor from employers of 40 per cent of the factory workers show that for the fifth consecutive month, the number unemployed has loreased. The latest reduction in the factory payrolls has carried the level of employment in Illinois factories to the lowest point touched since early 1922. Employment is slightly below the level of a year ago, but about 15.5 per cent below the peak of 1923. The manufacturing establishments have about 115,000 fewer employees than they had two years ago.

"The labor market of the month has been generally dull", states the report,

"The urban orders in the unskilled market were small. Thruout the month, building labor has been in active demand."

"The ratio of applicants to jobs increased during the month, from 148 to 100 jobs to 153 per 100 jobs. The excess of job-seekers over work opportunities is less than was the case a year ago. In July, 1924, there were 171 applicants per 100 places open.

"In Rockford and Cicero, the reduction in working forces during the month was more than 10 per cent. Other cities in which the employment decline was substantial were Joliet and Moline, where between 7 and 7.5 per cent of the workers were laid off."

"The trend was generally downward in the stone, clay and glass products group of industries."

"The reports for the iron and steel firms were somewhat disappointing on account of the statements that have appeared in the trade journals of the improvement in the buying of steel. For the fourth consecutive month employment at the mills declined, the drop for the past thirty days being 3.2 per cent. There are now about 10 per cent fewer people ingaged in the production of iron and steel than was the case in March, the year."

"In practically all of the other inticularly severe in their layoffs, striking the names of 10 per cent of their employees from the payrolls during July, after removing a like number in June."

"In the agricultural implement industry in which employment has been high thruout the present year, there was a let-up in the extent of production during the month, when 6 per cent of the employees were laid off. The automobile manufacturers and the accessory firms likewise been reducing their forces, the reports show."

N. Y. Teachers May Get Pay Raise But the Top Boys Will Grab Most

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—(FP)—The up-hill, down-dale fight of New York city teachers for pay increases has reached another up-grade with the announcement by the board of education that $5,700,000 is included in the education budget for 1926 to permit wage raises for teachers. The board of estimate has power to grant or disallow the item. If granted, the extra money will probably be spent in $125 raises for elementary teachers, $150 for high school teachers, $200-$250 for principals and assistants, $2,000 for district superintendents, etc.; the higher the rank, the greater the pay increase.

The suggested increases are on a basis opposed by the Teachers Union. The union favors higher increases for lower grade teachers, claiming that their wages have been least increased in proportion to living costs.

Virgin Islanders Protest Against U. S. Navy Rule

NEW YORK, Aug. 28—Lucius J. M. Halmin, former judge of district court, Virgin Islands, is officially representing the people of these former Danish islands purchased eight years ago by the United States and is planning to present the islandrs' case to President Coolidge at Swampscott, Mass. Malmin says that the Virgin Islands residents want a civil government instead of the U. S. navy rule they have had for eight years. The islanders demand the immediate executive removal of the George Washington Williams, present judge of the district court.

One of the chief protests against Judge Williams is based on his arbitrary action in the case of Rothschild Francis, editor of The Emancipator, a native paper. Williams refused the editor a jury trial and sentenced Francis for contempt when the latter attacked Williams editorially for his policies and his denial of jury trial. Williams delegates his authority to his clerk whenever he does not care to hold court himself, Malmin charges, saying that the clerk "knows more law than my grip." "I also understand that he (Williams) has founded a quasi-corporation for commercial exploitation, using the judicial office of the judge and the power of the superintendent of the police for this exploitation," Malmin states.

Every president since the United States took the islands passed authority to the navy department, which was delighted and wished to "hang on to the islands as long as it can" because service there is paid double as foreign service. The islanders want annexation to Porto Rico, only 15 miles away, if civil government is not directly granted, Malmin declares. A navy appointee is governor under the present temporary rule, which has lasted eight years.

'B. & O. BILL' BEING LICKED IN NORTHWEST

Seattle and Frisco Demand Recall

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 28.—Hope Lodge No. 79, Seattle, unanimously endorsed the recall in progress in the International Association of Machinists, following charges from all parts of the country that Wm. H. Johnstone and his associates won offices in the last union elections by fraud. In order to be effective, fifteen per cent of the lodges in the association, or about 150, must indorse the proposition.

George Mitchell, prominent member of Hope Lodge said that the recall can count on the support of a total of 258 indorsements. Reports from San Francisco say tht Lodge No. 68, with 1,500 members, the largest in the association, has gone on record for the recall. In Oakland, Lodge 248, the recall lost by only two votes.

Discover New Way to Measure Crops from Train with Crop-Meter

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 28. — A device for mesuring the acreage of various agricultural crops for comparative reports and charts has been adapted to a railway train by statisticians of the United States department of agriculture. The instrument is in the nature of an automobile speedometer and when attached to the gear of the railwy car measures and records the number of feet of each kind of crop along the right of way. It was designed in 1923 for use on an automobile and was first used successfully in that capacity.

The instrument, besides having a regular mileage meter, such as that on an ordinary speedometer, has 12 special dials, one for each kind of crop, with a set of push buttons which throws them into gear when needed. For instance, when, during the train journey, a field of cotton is being passed the button indicating cotton is pressed and the number of feet of cotton along the road in that particular field is measured and recorded. If the next field is corn, the operator presses the corn button, and the number of feet in that crop are measured and recorded. If the next field should happen to be idle land, the idle-land button is pushed.

Comradely Sympathy

The editorial, business and mechanical departments of THE DAILY WORKER extend to Comrades William F. Dunne and Marguerite Dunne, most heartfelt sympathy in their bereavement thru the sudden death of their young son, William F. Dunne, Jr.

"Little Billy," as he was affectionately called by his friends, was struck by an automobile while crossing the street near his home, at 3552 W. Harrison Street, on Thursday evening. He was thrown to the street and run over by another car which was speeding in the same direction. Death was instantaneous.

William F. Dunne, Jr., was seven years old. He was a bright and promising boy and already had begun to show an interest in the workingclass movement. Their thousands of friends thruout the labor movement will sympathize with the parents in their loss.

The Fight Against Berryism

The series of articles that have appeared in the DAILY WORK exposing the record of George L. Berry, president of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union, indicate the tremendous task that confronts the rank and file of the trade unions, the task of ridding the labor movement of Berryism, which means official scabbery, treachery and class collaboration.

If there was only one Berry in the labor movement, the job of getting rid of him would be quite simple. But unfortunately he is only one of a type and by no menas as dangerous as others of the same cult. Berry is more vulnerable because his methods are more crude than those employed by his prototypes, who have substituted co-operation with the exploiters for the theory and practice of the class struggle.

Recent events indicate a new insurgency in the ranks of organized labor. This is manifesting itself as much in the form of a struggle against the reactionary leaders as against the bosses. The two fights cannot very well be separated. The reactionary leaders are the business managers of the bosses. That they are paid by the unions only makes matters worse.

The DAILY WORKER urges the members of the trade unions to organize within the unions, a progressive bloc, with a program that responds to the interests of the rank and file and under a leadership capable of giving intelligent direction to the struggle. Only an organized fight has any chance of winning. The struggle against the reactionary leadership must not consist merely of a struggle for offices, tho the responsibility of holding office must not be shunned by the revolutionary elemtns. But securing offices without having previously secured the confidence of the dominating majority of the membership is hazardous strategy.

One of the primary objects of this fight must be to sharpen the natural antagonisms between the workers and the employers and to give this developing class consciousness intelligent direction.

The DAILY WORKER endorses the Trade Union Educational League, as the leader of the progressive elements in the trade unions. The pressmen in their struggle against Berryism would do well to give the T. U. E. L. program their most careful consideration. Without such a program their fight against Berryism will be lacking in policy and co-ordination.

What Is Happening in the Riff?

News of developments in the war of independence waged against the French imperialists by the Riffian tribesmen, under the leadership of Abd-El-Krim, is rather scare these days. This should not be taken as proof that the war is over, that the Ruffians have been defeated or that the French have decided to call off their dogs.

The DAILY WORKER is not in the habit of manufacturing news in its editorial rooms as is so often done by capitalist papers that feed their readers on the kind of offal they are accustomed to devour and for which they have developed a taste. Tho we sympathize with the Riffians, we do not win victories for them at 1113 West Washington street, much tho we would like to do so. Unfortunately our guns don't shoot that far.

One of our readers, whose zeal overcame his judgment charged us with letting the Riffiians down because we had not routed Marshal Petain and annihilated his army. "Has the Riffian war ended?" he belligerently inquired. It has not, but as we are not in the fiction business, we prefer to wait for the facts, rather than retail imaginary victories which would not stay very long on the mental stomachs of our readers. Neither would they make things easier for Abd-El-Krim.

There is every reason to believe that the Riffians will succeed in defeating the French imperialists. They have already reduced the Spanish army to a demoralized horde. The French have trouble in Syria besides having their hands full with debt questions and other embarrassments. Tho Britain does not like to see the prestige of imperialism go down in Africa, her quarrel with France is so bitter that she secretly hopes to see Abd-El-Krim victorious tho the French defeat may inspire her own subject peoples in the East to revolt. This is only one example of how imperialism is helping to dig its own grave.

The war in Morrocco is still on. It is not easy to crush a people struggling to be free. The days of imperialism are coming to an end. The almost universal revolt of the oppressed races against it, is one sign of its approaching doom.

IZVESTIA BARES FRAUD OF 'OPEN DOOR' IN CHINA

Soviet Daily Exposes U. S. Policy

MOSCOW, Aug. 28.—(Tass)—Commenting on the latest reports about a would-be understanding reached between Britain and the United States in regard to an accorded policy in China, the Izvestia, in an editorial, emphatically expressed the view that no agreement could settle the radical dissension fatally existing between the British and American policies in China. This, the Moscow paper remarks, is likewise confirmed by comments appearing on this subject in the foreign press.

Interests Collide.

Indeed, while America holds that the national movement in China can be suppressed by military force and that the only way to pacify China is to insure her national independence, the English press, on the contrary, asserts that the actual movement in China is merely a repetition of the Boxer revolt and must be suppressed by force of arms.

These widely different estimates are naturally reflected in the difference of the attitude respectively taken up by the two countries towards China. Ever since the end of the 19th century, the main principle of the United States' Chinese policy was the so-called open door policy, a policy which, owing to her huge economic and financial power,t could not fail to give America every possibility of economic penetration of China. On the other hand, England's treaty ports and other privileges in China are primarily the means of defense against American competition.

Open Door Policy Hits England.

True, the author goes on to say, Japan has since more recent times been America's chief enemy, and it was against Japan that was directed the entire system of the Washington treaties. But today the line of America's Chinese policy must inevitably collide the political lines of other powers in China—more particularly that of England, against whom the main spear of the open door policy is directed.

Not otherwise than in this light, the Moscow leading organ observes in conclusion, can a true estimate be made of the seriousness and durability of the alleged understanding, as mentioned above.

Southern Harbin Reports Increase in Bean Crop

HARBIN, (By Mail.)— From the crop returns received by the commercial department of the Chinese Eastern Railway it appears that, with the exception of certain districts of the Southern (Harbin-Changchun) section of the line and the lower Sungari region, there is a considerable increase of acreage as against last year's, particulrly in the Andy-Tsitsikar district. As regards the Eastern (Harbin-Pogranitchnaya) section, the large sown area is partly due to the growth of population because of immigration.

Rowboat Party Drowns.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 28.—Four in a party of five in a rowboat were drowned this afternoon off Sunset Point in Lake Ontario when their craft capsized in a sudden squall.

The victims are: Anna Moss, 19, Anna Cohen, 18; Martin Lebowitz, 20, and his brother, Theodore, 17, all of Rochester.

The fifth occupant of the boat, Walter Meltzer, 16, of Brooklyn, saved himself by swimming to shore.

RUSSIAN METAL WORKERS DECLARE THEIR SOLIDARITY WITH STRUGGLE OF THE BELGIAN METAL WORKERS

MOSCOW (By Mail).—On the occasion of the Belgian metal workers' strike, the Central Committee of the Russian Metal Workers' Union has sent the following telegram to the Knights of Labor in Brussels:

"The struggle of the Belgian metal workers proves that they are not prepared to accept a worsening of their conditions of labor without putting up an energetic fight. The offensive of the Belgian metal magnates is a part of the attack of international capital which is proceeding on the Belgian section of the front. The Russian metal workers declare their solidarity with their Belgian comrades, and as a sign of this feeling, they send 5,000 rubles for the fighting Belgian metal workers. Comrades, fight bravely, do everything to prevent any attempt at strikebreaking! Band together for a common destruction of the capitalist offensive! Long live the Belgian metal workers! Long live the united front of the international proletariat!

Statement by Group of Georgian Workers Who Endorse Soviet Program

MOSCOW, Aug. 28.—(Tass)—The Soviet press welcomes the publication in Paris by a group of Georgian workers—formerly members of the menshevik party—of a declaration, in which they call on all their former party and fellow exiles to leave the menshevist party and endorse the Soviet platform.

The appeal points out that Georgian menshevism, which had, as far back as 1917, deviated from the revolutionary path, is ever more drifting away from the true principles of the labor movement, and while it is practically getting closer and closer to the position of enemies of the working class it stands at the back of the most disgraceful anti-proletarian actions. On the other hand, the authors of the declaration go on to say, while the ex-Georgian government and former menshevist leaders encouraged the illusions of the Georgian people regarding prospective assistance from Europe, they only instigated Georgia to oppose the workers of the Soviet Republics, which actually and effectively are the only force on which Georgia can rely for her economic and cultural rejuvenation.

"At a time when our enemies are organizing a united reactionary block against the toilers," the appeal runs in conclusion, "it is the duty of every worker to rally to the united world labor front."

The above declaration appeared over the signatures of influential ex-members of the central committee of the Georgian menshevist party. Another analogous statement has also been published by a large group of nonpartisan emigrant Georgian workers.

BRITISH EMPIRE STEEL CORP. EMPLOYS COOLIES AS AID TO CUT WAGES

MONTREAL, Aug. 28—The British Empire Steel Corp. is returning to China the coolies that have manned its coal boats since the war. The system proved a costly experiment. Many Chinese outwitted the guards employed to keep them on the ships and the company had to pay heavy fines as well as head taxes.

But the company, assited by the depression, appears to have achieved its purpose. Wage rates have been smashed until Canadian sailors on the Atlantic coast are once more preferrable to coolies. So for services rendered during the war, the Canadian sailor is coming into his own again — long hours and a meager wage.

Appeal to the Building Workers

MOSCOW, July 25—(By Mail)—The secretariat of the International Committees for Propaganda and Action of the revolutionary building workers, has directed the folowing appeal to the building workers of all countries:

"Altho the building workers of Germany suffered side by side with the other workers of Germany a series of defeats during the difficult times of the inflation period when money became almost valueless and the cost of living rose every day, and the workers entered an open struggle with capitalism for power, yet they found strength and energy enuf, despite the powerful employers' federation, despite the reformist leaders who did everything to divert the struggle of the workers against capitalism, to retain the eight hour day and to achieve a number of improvements in their situation. In the struggles of 1924 which were almost all fought out under the leadership of the revolutionary building workers, the building workers prevented the employers from crushing the workers and destroying their oganizations.

"This year, the German building workers have commenced in various districts offensive strikes. In the main, however, the strikes were defensive ones against the employers' federations who still try to exploit the weakness of the workers' organizations. At the present time, building workers are striking in Berlin, Saxony and in other parts of Germany.

The number of workers involved is already 130,000. The whole of Central Germany is threatened by a lock-out. The lockout can easily be extended further, from one place to the other and demand great sacrifices from the building workers' organizations. We call all branches to a united struggle and for mutual support. We appeal also to the brother organizations of other countries to give their German comrades an energetic moral and material support. The building workers of all cuontries and particularly in Europe must remember that a defeat for the German building workers means a precedent for an economic pressure by the capitalists of all other countries. Immediate assistance for the German building workers means also self-help. Long live the international solidarity of the workers! Long live the united struggle of the working class!

It will have a capital of 1,000,000 Soviet rubles, one-half of which will be held by each of the companies.

BRITISH EFFORT TO BAR NEARING FALLS THROUGH

Baldwin Reluctant to Admit Labor Writer

While the Federated Press was preparing formal protest because of the refusal to grant its special correspondent, Scott Nearing, a visa to enter England, the British government finally yielded and stamped the passports. Evidently it was unwilling to raise the issue of a boycott against labor correspondents.

Nearing applied over a month ago to the British consul in New York for the usual visa that allows foreigners to enter England. It was refused and he was told the matter would have to be referred to headquarters in London. No reasons were given and the consul was careful not to commit himself. When Nearing presented his Federated Press credentials together with specific instructions from the managing editor to report the British Trades Union congress which opens Sept. 7, he was told nothing could be done about it. After several weeks' delay he paid the consul $8 to cover a hurry-up cable to London, again without result.

London Seeks Delay.

It became evident that the British government, which was then in the midst of desperate attempts to head off a general strike on behalf of the coal miners, did not want representatives of an established American labor news service in the country. It probably reasoned that several months' delay on the visa question would permit the labor crisis to pass and the Trades Union congress to adjourn before Nearing made too much of a fuss.

Instead, the efforts to obtain the visa became more vigorous. The consulate in New York shrugged its shoulders approvingly when Mrs. Nearing, who had also applied for a visa, definitely suggested that headquarters in London were stalling.

Nearing to Tour Europe.

Steps to formulate a protest were then initiated, emphasizing the apparent class discrimination by the British Conservative government, which admits capitalist foreign correspondents by the hundreds, yet balks at a single American labor writer.

At last favorable word came from London. It had taken a month to transact a passport formality that usually takes two minutes. Nearing will report the British Trades Union congress and will then proceed to other European countries, writing about labor developments for the Federated Press.

Scab Ship Goes Aground.

VINEYARD HAVEN, Mass., Aug. 28.—Groping her way thru a heavy blanket of fog, the round-the-world Dollar liner President Garfield ran hard and fast on the sandy bottom of Harpoon Shoals off the treacherous Pollock Rips today.

The seventy passengers aboard, including President Robert Dollar, were assured that the steamship was in no danger.

The revenue cutter Acushnet, cruising off the lower end of Cape Cod, came upon the President Garfield and made plans to float the liner at high tide.

SOVIET RUSSIA SURE OF LARGE CROP THIS YEAR AND NEXT, SAYS FRUMKIN

MOSCOW, Russia, Aug 28.—Comrade M. Frumkin, assistant commissar of foreign affairs is elated over the increases made in farm production in Soviet Russia. In a recent statement he reports that excellent crops that are now being harvested in Soviet Russia will bring the value of exports available next year at $500,000,000. Raw material available this year will amount to $250,000,000.

u sing the word "cop." He thot it was a vulgarism. The fact is that our reader is simply ignorant and knows nothing about the evolution of language. The slang of today finds its way into the dictionaries of tomorrow. It is not strange that the person who objected to our comment on the remains of the czar had no hesitation in discharging his dung at the head of a proletarian writer. His protest was couched in very abusive language.

THE aim of the DAILY WORKER is not to reach "the people with intelligence enough to gain the ends of the movement," as our critic believes it should be. We want to reach the masses and we are confident that when we succeed the professional saviors from the so-called intellectual sects, will learn that the masses have the intelligence as well as the power to gain their ends, the emancipation of the workers from wage slavery. A few gems from the letter of our critic may be of interest.

HERE is one: "The overthrow of capitalism has already been delayed a hundred years because the emotionally based people hvae been in control of the movement." Another one: "When I hear the expression: 'I believe in the principles of radicalism, and would like to help, but simply can't stand for the type of radicals I know' I hardly know what to answer." Quite true. A man who knows so little about the motive forces of history that he believes social systems hang on because of the mental twists of those in opposition to them, is quite incapable of coming in out of the rain, not to speak of squelching an insane observation such as the one quoted above.

THE Czecho-Slovakian government which is presided over by the social democrat, Masaryk, fears that the influence of Rovnost Ludu, the official organ of the Slovakian section of the Workers (Communist) Party is detrimental to the peace of mind of the Slovakian workers. This or some similar reason, no doubt prompted the government to ban Rovnost Ludu from Slovakia. The International Press Correspondence is also on the verboten list.

LEADERS of the Communist Slovaks in the United States attribute the ban on the Rovnost Ludu to a recent visit of a Czecho-Slovakian minister to this country. His object was to sing the praises of the homeland under the present regime, to the Czechs and Slovenes in the United States. The Communist Slovaks showed up at his meetings and made life so miserable for him with questions that his tour was a failure. He revenged himself by banning the Communist organ. Communism was a spectre in Europe in 1848. Today it stands on the threshold of realization. The Czecho-Slovakian government will not succeed in keeping out Communist propaganda by building a cordon sanitaire around Slovakia.

Noted Personalities in World of Science Aid Art in Russia

MOSCOW, (By Mail.)— A number of noted personalities in the world of science and arts are at present reported as having arrived or having for some time already been staying at Moscow.

STRIKERS SHOW DISGUST WITH N. S. U. SCABS

Worker Betrayers Fire on Irate Seamen

LONDON, Aug. 28.—Irate marine workers who are participating in the empire-wide strike of seamen against the British shipping combines gathered before the branch offices of the National Seamen's Union in Stepney today to show their indignation towards the scabbing tactics being followed by the heads of that organization in the present crisis.

Bad Record.

The N. S. U., the chief of which is the notorious labor betrayer and reactionary, Havelock Wilson, has refused to take part in the seamen's revolt against intolerable marine conditions, and under the false leadership of its officers has played the part of strikebreaker.

The officials in the hall, frightened by the demonstration below, fired five frantic shots into the crowd, one being wounded. Feeling is running high against Havelock Wilson and his N. S. U., and it is hoped that the present crisis will once and for all rid the British labor movement of an organization whose traditions have been those of incessant class-collaboration.

Austro-Soviet Trade Grows Despite Foreign Powers Blockade Talk

MOSCOW, Aug. 28.—(Tass)—The Moscow papers report, from reliable sources that attempts by foreign powers to involve Austrian industrial circles in an economic and financial blockade against the Union of Soviet Republics have so far failed. Austro-Soviet export and import trade is steadily growing, and even quite recently important deals have been contracted with Austrian business men on a from 9 to 12 months' credit basis, while the Vienna banks, too, have of late been showing an increasing interest for business with the U. S. S. R. and offering various credit operations on favorable terms.

Russia Supplies Coal, Oil, Wheat.

It is further learned, for instance, that the Soviet Trade Mission at Vienna has been negotiating with the Vienna municipal administration with regard to supplying the municipal organs and institutions with all the coal they need—which would mean about one million tons of Donetz (Russian) coal yearly and that, accordingly, samples of Russian anthracite coal have been dispatched to Austria. On the other hand, there is growing demand from Austria for Soviet wheat and rye. Then, there is the Soviet oil, which covers nearly the entire requirements of the more important oil refining works of Austria and Hungary. Negotiations with regard to the sale of certain species of Caucasian wood are continuing. There is much interest, too, in the export to Austria of Soviet agricultural produce, such as eggs and others, Vienna being also a central market for the disposal of Russian medicinal herbs.

Thus reviewing the present stage of Austro-Soviet business intercourse, the Moscow papers note that due attention is likewise being given to the matter by the other party, namely Austrian official and business circles concerned.

ROME, Aug. 28.—Wholesale resignations of the deputies of the Aventine opposition are threatened if the Italian parliament accepts the resgination of Signor Orlando, offered after the recent Naples municipal elections and a reported attack upon Orlando.

Members of those opposition parties headed by Giolitti, Salandra and Orlando are all reported prepared to resign en masse if Orlando's resignation is accepted.

The Report of the Party's Executive

Alexander Bittelman reported to the convention of the Workers (Communist) Party for the Central Executive Committee as follows:

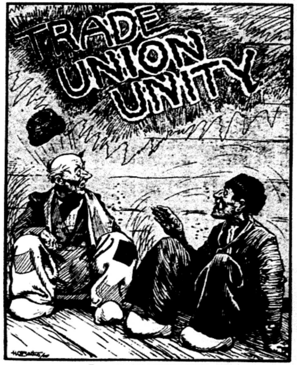
PERMIT me to preface my report with a few remarks as to how the report of the Central Executive Committee should be approached and how it should be considered. We have heard a good deal during recent months about Marxism and Marxian methods and I think that the convention here should approach the report of the Central Executive Committee from the point of view of Marxians and not in the manner in which the C. E. C. has been dealt with so far by some comrades in our party. What I mean by this is that the final result of the sum total of activities of our committee should be judged and analyzed on the basis not only of the policies of the committee but also on the conditions, of the objective conditions in which the party had to carry on its work. It is very important before we proceed any further to keep clearly in mind the following facts: That the objective conditions in the United States during the last 20 months were extremely unfavorable for the quick growth of our party. It is sufficient for me to mention only a few of the more important facts. One of the most outstanding is the fact that American capitalism succeeded in stabilizing itself to a certain extent, to liquidate, truly, at the expense of the masses, but to liquidate the very severe agrarian crisis and also to stabilize partially the industrial situation. This, comrades, is the basic fact. During the 20 months in which the present C. E. C. was in office, there were no severe crises, no severe disturbances and no big mass struggles of the American working class. It is this background that must be kept in mind continually when we analyze our activities during these 20 months.

A SECOND fact, of secondary importance, is the depressed mood of the American workers. Now this is a factor which nobody can overlook and surely not a Communist Party. Communist policies, or in the formulation of Communist policies, the mood of the working masses, their readiness to fight and struggle is a basic factor and when you realize and when you understand, comrades, that during these 20 months the general characteristic of the mood of the American masses was one of depression, was one of unwillingness and unreadiness to offer real resistance to the attacks of the capitalists, you will understand that this second factor considerably influenced the progress, the development of our own activities. The third factor, is the sweep and then the going down of the LaFollette movement. In my report I will go into detail and will analyze what this movement meant as far as our party was concerned. But it is without doubt that this sweep of LaFollette movement and its comparative defeat in the presidential elections, seriously hampered the progress also of the Communist movement of the country. Then the very severe attacks and persecutions against our party and our comrades in other labor organizations.

These four outstanding objective facts in the situation created an extremely unfavorable condition for the development and quick growth of the party. Having this in mind and if you add to this a continual internal fight that lasted nearly 20 months, you will understand with what conditions and difficulties our party and central executive committee had to contend with during these 20 months.

FOR the purpose of my report, comrades, I am going to divide my report into a number of sections. I will divide the period of these 20 months into several sub-periods. The division is not going to be arbitrary because it so happens that during these 20 months we have been passing thru four quite distinct periods. The first period. It lasted from about January, 1924 to May, 1924. That was the period when our party was laying the basis and preparing itself for the June 17, convention, for the St. Paul convention. Now that was the main strategy of our party during those months between January and May, 1924? The main strategy was to bring about a united front of labor and the poor farmers in the presidential elections of 1924. The main objective that our party pursued during that period was to bring about if possible the formation of farmer-labor unity. If impossbile, at least united political action in the presidential campaign, to unite as large a number of workers and poor farmers as could be organized on a certain program or partial demands. This was our basic strategy and undoubtedly, correct strategy in every respect. The second question is how successful were we in that strategy and what means did we employ to achieve our objective. This main objective of our party was defeated.

THE WRITING ON THE WALL



From TRADE UNION UNITY, official organ of the Left Wing of the British labor movement.

OUR party did not succeed in bringing about such a united front in the presidential elections. We failed inspite of the fact that we were successful in bringing about quite a well attended convention in St. Paul.

It is very important for us to understand why our party failed in realizing this objective. Last night in our debate on the labor party controversy the question of our northwest orientation was brought in. This is also an important fact in the discussion of our report. When the present Central Executive Committee came into office, what did it find? It found that the labor party policy of our party was undergoing a certain crisis, a crisis which resulted primarily because of our break of the split which occurred on July 3, because of the failure of the Federated farmer labor party and because of the growing power and influence in those months of the LaFollette movement. When the present Central Executive Committee got into office it realized that it is dealing with a very difficult situation. We found ourselves isolated to a very large extent in the industrial centers of the country. We found that in practically none of the important industrial sections of the country was there in existence a farmer labor movement of any importance at all for us to ally ourselves with and to continue our strategy for a farmer labor party. The only places in the country where there were any organized groups of any substance at all that our party could ally itself with and continue its policy for the farmer labor party were to be found in the agrarian north west and comrades, it is not the present Central Executive Committee that switched itself to the northwestern orientation. The present Central Executive Committee, beginning with January first, found this switch already made by the previous Central Executive Committee. It found in other words, two factors—one of objective nature and the other one was a policy that was pursued and laid out by the previous Central Executive Committee. The objective factor was that there was no mass movement in the industrial centers for a farmer labor party. There was no basis for political strategy along the lines of a farmer labor movement in the industrial center, but there was some basis for it in the agrarian north west.

THE second factor was the policy pursued by the previous Central Executive Committee, the policy of orientating itself on the agrarian northwest. The present Central Executive Committee in pursuit of the main objective of the party which was to bring about a united front in the presidential elections was compelled to refuse to continue along these lines which resulted in the June 17 convention in St. Paul.

Now comrades, it is very important for the party to know that during the months of January to May, 1924, when our party was preparing and building the June 17 convention, there were very serious difficulties of opinion within the Central Executive Committee on the methods and tactics to be pusued in preparing the June 17 convention.

Those of you who think that the Central Executive Committee in those months was united on this question will be greatly surprised to learn that the meetings of the C. E. C. in those months were far from being peaceful on the question of how shall we prepare for this convention. The basic tactical principle that the majority of the Central Executive Committee was insisting upon during those months was that we do not repeat again the mistake of July 3; that we do not go to the St. Paul convention with the same tactics that we brought with us in the convention of July 3; that we take all necessary measures to prevent splits on issues and bases as compelled them in July 3.

THE first question as I remember, a question of importance, that arose in connection with the June 17 convention, was its date. There was very serious disagreement because our party, the Workers Party, and our allies of the farmer labor parties in the northwest, particularly the leaders of the Minnesota farmer labor party. Differences of opinion on policy and tactics and objective. And at one period in the development of our work, the question arose as to postponing the convention until after the July 4 convention of the C. P. P. A. Our opponents, the so-called progressives in the farmer labor movement, were very much determined to make this convention postponed and the question was, can our party compromise on this point? So our party made efforts to come to an agreement with these so-called progressives. Another question that created in the Central Executive Committee very heated and serious debate was under what conditions our party would demand the immediate formation of a farmer labor party. And again we saw in the Central Executive Committee two main tendencies. One was that the main task of the Workers Party in the labor party policy is to create a farmer labor party and to seize leadership, irrespective of whether the party created is a mass party with mass support or is only our own party and a little group of sympathizing organizations. The other tendency in it was that in our labor party policy our main objective is to get a mass party. And there is no use to be impatient about it. A labor party which does not bring us into contact with large masses, does not really satisfy our main objective in the policy. It is true and it must be said now, that while we were fighting in the Central Executive Committee between Januray and May, 1924, on these questions, some comrades of the minority one or two, Comrade Ruthenberg, one of them were at times taking the position of the majority, agreeing with them on the tactics to be pursued in connection with the convention. But this, comrades, is not an important thing, or at least not the most important. The most important thing is that during these months the struggle between the majority and minority was along this central line, i. e. what kind of labor party we are going to fight for. This was the main substance of every political discussion in the Central Executive Committee.

NOW, as I said before, the main objective of the party in bringing about the united front for presidential campaign was defeated. Why? The answer is very simple. Because the forces that were bringing to the surface the LaFollette movement, the economic and political conditions that made this movement big and influential in those months, were much stronger and much more powerful than the influence that our party could exert. I do not need to go here into detail to explain why those conditions were more powerful than our party. The LaFollette movement as it functioned in those months found great sympathy, had great attractive power precisely among those sections of the workers who were beginning to think politically. Precisely among those sections of workers whom our party was trying to attract and it goes without saying that in those months and even now at the present state of development of capitalism in America, the petty bourgeois, progressive, liberal movement which has the backing of the official labor movement, will be much more successful in winning the masses at the present moment than a Communist Party can be. And so the June 17 convention did not produce what our party was striving for. Thus in May, 1924, our party was confronted with a very serious proposition. But before I come to that I must recall to your attention a very important event that took place in the life of our party in May, 1924, something that must not be overlooked when you are studying the report of the Central Executive Committee. Namely, the decision of the Communist International which nullified our proposition for a third party alliance. This is very important. Why?• Because from January until May, until the Communist International decision became known to us our party was basing its policy on the third party alliance. It is true that the last party convention referred the matter to the C. I. but that did not help matters very much from January until May for the reason that the Central Executive Committee and the party as a whole had to function. Political life does not stop for a Communist Party to make up its mind and the Central Executive Committee had to function during those months politically and the only basis on which it could function was on a policy in which it believed in. The Central Executive Committee was nearly unanimous in believing that the policy of the third party alliance was the policy to apply under these conditions. All our tactics all our literature, all of our slogans formulated during the months of January to May were based on this general idea of the third party alliance and then at a certain moment the Communist International said to our party, you cannot do it, and the Central Executive Committee was confronted, comrades, with a very critical situation. I am sure every member of the Central Executive Committee will be able to recall now very vividly the situation we found ourselves in at that particular moment. We were confronted with the necessity of completely reorientating ourselves practically within 24 hours, and comrades, a reorientation which was to take place was in the close study of your library, not in your own room, a reorientation of a political party on the open political arena, under the very fire of the enemy, because you must remember that at about the same time LaFollette and Gompers opened their attack on the June 17 convention and against the Communists. We maintain that the ability of our party to reorientate itself quickly under these conditions is a tribute to the Communist quality of our party. To have changed within one day, almost, fundamentally, our main political line under the very fire of the enemy without in the least demoralizing our ranks, was proof not only of the political flexibility of the Central Executive Committee, but also of the discipline and Communist quality of the party as a whole.

WHEN we came to the June 17 convention, we found that our main objective, the objective of solidifying the farmer labor movement into a party for the presidential campaign, will not succeed. Why? In the convention, one of its basic features or main features, was the predominance of farming elements over the elements from the industrial centers. That was one feature. The second feature was that nearly everybody in the convention, with the exception of our own delegates was in favor of LaFollette being the presidential nominee. And when we came there and established for ourselves these main facts, we realized that there is hardly a chance to fulfill or reach our main objective. And during the convention (the whole Central Executive Committee was in St. Paul) a meeting of our committee was held and this question was raised by Comrade Foster.

IS there any use of our continuing with this convention? Would it not be better perhaps to right here realize that we cannot form this farmer-labor party, that the basis is not here, that the forces outside this convention are so strong and powerful against the realization of our proposition that it cannot be realized? The proposition was that we establish this fact right there and do not proceed on the basis that we can form such a united front. But the majority of the committee, and by the way, on this proposition the factional lineup broke up completely, the majority of the committee, which included comrades from the majority and the minority, decided that if eventually we must give up the idea of forming a united front for the elections, this should not be done at the convention. This should be postponed until after the convention and particularly after the July 4th conference of the C. P. P. A. I will not go into detail as to the arguments. The fact of the matter is that the Central Executive Committee decided to go thru with the convention and watch developments further. But when the July 4th convention was over and our delegates came back from there to report to the Central Executive Committee, it then became clear, at least to some of us, that the Workers Party might be compelled to enter the election campaign under its own banner on its own program and with its own candidates. And that, comrades, was the decision of the Central Executive Committee—it was neary unanimous, I think, two or three comrades voting against it. Why did the Central Executive Committee make the decision. It made the decision for two reasons. One reason was that inasmuch as the formation of a labor party, or its continuance is justified only if it is a real united front between our party and wider masses of workers, and inasmuch as this primary condition for a united front was lacking, therefore there is no reason why we should pretend that we have a farmer-labor party, there is no reason why we should pretend that we do have a united front and base our policies on a wrong basis.

THE Central Executive Committee was determined not to fool itself and not to fool the workers. When we realize that the objective conditions being stronger than our party defeated our main objective, we drew the only possible conclusion, and the conclusion was that our party will take the field in the elections as the Workers Party, on its own program and with its own candidates. The Communist International found that this decision was correct. It found that that was the only possible decision to make under the conditions as they existed then.

Now, comrades, as to the election campaign. You are already familiar with how we carried on the campaign, and what it resulted in. Some comrades of the minority, I think the minority as a group, have found it possible months after the election campaign to bring forward a number of criticisms on the methods and policies pursued by us in the campaign. I do not maintain that there is nothing to criticize in the policies of our party during that campaign. Every act of every Central Committee, even of the best of our parties, can be criticized and should be criticized. But the point to remember is that during the election campaign the minority in the Central Executive Committee made no propositions, no motions, no recommendations that they were opposed to policies of the majority. Or still better, that the Central Executive Committee during the election campaign was unanimous as it never was before and never was afterwards, in the manner in which the election campaign should be carried on so that in this convention today, whether the minority or the majority are going to criticize the shortcomings of our election campaign policies, it should be understood that these were policies of a unanimous Central Executive Committee.

I might perhaps indicate one or two shortcomings of our election campaign not its policies so much, the policy was correct, but the defects and shortcomings in the carrying out of these policies. One is that the party for one reason or another was not fully successful in linking up our presidential campaign with the immediate issues that were disturbing the minds of the masses during those weeks. The policy provided for it, our election program, our pamphlets, our resolutions, our instructions, all provided for that, but in the carrying out of it the party was not successful, and when I say the party, I do not mean the Central Executive Committee, I mean the entire party organization. Every city committee and district committee, our organisers, speakers, writers, etc. The fault was not with the resolutions, not with the policy but with something else which I am not ready to explain. The party did not seem to be able to fully link up its campaign with the labor struggles that were going on in those months. This is one shortcoming which must be criticized and avoided in the future.

THE second difficulty was that one of the main instructions, organizational instructions of the Central Executive Committee for the campaign was not fully carried out in the party organization, at least not with enough enthusiasm and determination. I refer to the decision that in every city and in every district the party should call together conferences of labor to endorse our ticket and election campaign and to organize supporting committees for our election campaign. As a general rule this was carried out but the results we believe could have been much bigger even in spite of the LaFollettee sweep, if our party had shown more determination in carrying out this part of the program.

As to the results of the election campaign, not much need be said here. The party succeeded in winning about the maximum that it could under the circumstances. The election campaign in our opinion established the fact that American capitalism at the present time has immense resources, immense and tremendous resources to break up, to demoralize and to temporarily defeat opposition movements of the petty bourgeoisie. This is a very important factor. I am sure that all of us as well as the entire country not only the Communists, were disappointed partly in the results of the election as far as LaFollettee movement was concerned. Everyone believed, even the capitalists themselves, that in view of the acute agrarian crisis that prevailed for so long a time, in view of the severe defeats of and attacks on the workers by the capitalist, in view of the general disturbed situation, that the LaFollette movement would be able to muster much more strength than it really had and when the count was made after the election, everyone realized that what the LaFollette movement actually achieved was much below that which was expected by everyone. It proved a number of things, but the point I wish to make in this connection is that it proves the immense resourcefulness, economic primarily and then political, of American capitalism in fighting opposition movements.

THE second point proved to us, and it is very important for our future policy, is that, that in spite of the temporary defeat of the third party movement, this movement has not been totally destroyed. This movement will come into existence again and will again roll up much power and influence as conditions develop in the United States.

The LaFollette movement was not destroyed in the elections. It did not emerge from the election as strong as some expected, but the results produced proved that the awakening sections of the American working class in the industrial parts of the country and the poorer sections of the farmers were willing and ready to proceed into a third party movement and actually in the formation of a third petty beourgeois party. And when we are going to adopt our policies for the future, we must keep in mind this very important factor, confirmed again by the results of the election campaign. The basis for a third petty bourgeois party is here. Eventually it will materialize and develop into a power in the United States. And a third fact established in the election campaign proved to us that in the face of this sweep of the LaFollette movement the labor party movement in its present stage could not retain its independence. As we have foreseen so it has happened. The labor party movement was nearly totally disintegrated and then swallowed up by the LaFollettee movement. What conclusions one should draw from this fact is another matter, but it must be established that the labor party movement was not strong enough, was not politically conscious enough to be able to withstand and successfully resist this rising sweep of the petty bourgeois ideology. And the fourth factor that the election campaign established is that our Workers Party, tho small yet in numbers, is already quite firmly established. The number of votes that were actually cast for our presidential candidate should be considered as we have been considering them, in view of a number of other conditions. First, that the most exploited sections of the American working class, those whom our appeal reaches quickest, are disfranchised and could not therefore take part in the election campaign. The second thing to consider in connection with analyzing the result of the elections, as far as we were concerned, is this fact that the LaFollette movement had captured the minds not only of those that just began to awaken politically but even those who thought they were politically class conscious. And if in the face of these two conditions the Workers Party could carry thru its election campaign with the result that it actually scored, I believe it is safe to state that the Workers Party has already firmly established itself. It has a basis wide enough to proceed with confidence and energy in building its power and strength for future larger campaigns.

Now, confronted with this result of the election campaign, the Central Executive Committee was beginning to give serious consideration to what the situation really meant as far as our policy was concerned. Soon following the election campaign our party published its statement on the results of the election campaign, there we made it known for the first time that we no longer believed in the usefulness and appealing force of the labor party slogan. This question was discussed at great length last night, therefore I will not now go into detail about it. What I do wish to emphasize is that the comrades of the minority up until this very moment, still refuse to understand what the real position of the Central Executive Committee was beginning with that statement and following it. I have mentioned a few moments ago the outstanding facts or lessons that we should derive from the election campaign. And what were they, comrades? We must know them in order to understand what has moved the Central Executive Committee following the election campaign to reorientate itself or to change was policies as far as the labor party was concerned. The Central Executive Committee in those months saws the situation as follows. We knew the labor party movement was disintegrated. There was no longer to be found in those months a labor movement in the country, distinct either politically or organizationally from the general third party movement. Second, the Central Executive Committee saw that the disappointment caused by the failure of the LaFollette movement to bring results expected by the masses will militate very seriously against any attempt to promote a movement for a new party in the United States, for a labor party in the United States. This was the true situation and on the basis of this, or from this, the Central Executive Committee concluded that the slogan for a labor party had no appealing force under these conditions and could not be employed by our party with much use in the immediate future. This was the situation when the change in policy was made and these were the reasons why the change was made. This precipitated in our party the now famous labor party controversy.

COMRADES, without going into this matter again in any way, I wish to say that whether this violent struggle in our party was justified or not, whether it was necessary for our party to pay the price that it did for having its policy corrected, the fact remains that never in the history of our movement did a party pass thru a fight of such dimensions, bitterness and violence. Most of the delegates here are not novices in the Communist movement. A good number of them have been founders of our party. Most nearly everyone of us participated in all the internal struggles since 1919 and every one will agree that never did our party have a fight of this kind. And I say that if our party succeeded in withstanding this fight without splitting into about ten or fifteen parts, this again is a tribute to the growth of the Communist quality of our party. We all remember the old days. We know that every fight on a big issue produced a split. In those days we did not seem to know any other way of settling our difficulties than just to part ways and go asunder and then begin a campaign for unity.

A Central Executive Committee of a Communist Party which functions in the face of such an opposition, should not and cannot be expected by anybody to have taken care fully of everything that a Communist Party must take care of.

Now do you know, comrades—I suppose you do—that during these months of factional struggle, party discipline practically lost its meaning for about one-third of our party. It did not mean anything. A decision of the Central Executive Committee would be received and filed. It would be accorded the courtesy of being received and filed, but as far as results were concerned, every minority district organizer, Comrade Jakira, Comrade Ballam, for instance, would be the judge of whether the Central Executive Committee instructions should go into effect or whether it should just be disregarded. This example set by district organizers was followed practically by every minority comrade in the ranks. In the old days a Central Executive Committee would do what? It would initiate a series of disciplinary measures against every one guilty of breaking party discipline, which would result in a split. The recent Central Exectuive Committee of the party did not want a split. And it was for this reason that the Central Executive Committee overlooked many and many things for the sake of retaining the unity of the party, of enabling it to outlive its crisis and proceed further in a unified manner.

Now about the activities of the Central Executive Committee during that period. You are all supplied with copies of our written report. Those of you who have studied the report, have no doubt received a complete picture of what the party was occupying itself with these 20 months. I want to draw your attention to some specific features of our work during these 20 months. The party carried out a number of very important united front campaigns. I will go into some details discussing these campaigns, but before I proceed, I wish to say a few words about some of the "popular" criticisms that the minority has been hurling at the Central Executive Committee in connection with its united front campaign. One is that these united front campaigns were not real campaigns. That the Central Executive Committee was simply passing resolutions, publishing them in our papers, organizing a few meetings and let the matter rest at that. In short, that the Central Executive Committee failed to organize the sentiment and action of the masses in favor of our slogans in these campaigns. If you want to discuss the failures of the present Central Executive Committee, there are many of them. For instance, we failed to seize power in the United States; we did not even elect Comrade Foster to the presidency. We have not yet captured the unions in the United States; but there is one thing comrades which we have not failed to do and that is, we have not failed to resist most energetically the attempts of the minority to drive us into fake united fronts. This we have not failed to do. The policies of the Central Executive Committee that were outlined in connection with every one of our campaigns provided for a united front policy, it provided for it.

IT instructed our organization to proceed to mobilize sentiment for our slogans and organize it jointly with other labor organizations for definite political acts. And if as a result of these campaigns we have not succeeded in creating large mass movements for our slogans, the Central Executive Committee cannot be blamed for that. For instance, during our period of office we were carrying on a campaign against wage cuts in the textile industry and in other industries. These campaigns did not produce a strike movement. There were several sporadic strikes here and there that were liquidated very soon and most of them were defeated. Our party issued the slogan: Strike against wage cuts. We carried on propaganda for these slogans. We took a number of organizational measures to bring about a united front struggle against wage cuts, but the results show that no big strike movement actually resulted. This is a fact. What does this fact prove? Does it prove that the policy of the Central Executive Committee was wrong? Not in the least. The policy was correct. But it proved the fact that I started out with, namely that the American working class still finds itself in a depressed mood due to many, many developments in the past two or three years which did not enable us to arouse them now at this moment for real big struggles against capitalism. And the conclusion to be drawn from this is that our party must be patient and persistent in carrying on its work until more favorable conditions will enable us to secure bigger success as results of our campaigns. But to conclude this, as some of the minority comrades are doing, that irrespective of whether you have succeeded in arousing the masses or not, you must rush headlong in building united front organizations which can have only a paper existence is to make a joke of the united front policy. This conclusion we cannot make. This conclusion the Communist International does not want to make. Some of our comrades in the minority have reached the point where they earnestly maintain that when the party wants to publish proclamations to the American workers, it cannot do that unless its forms united front committees. In the course of our discussion this idea was brought forward time and time again. So our contention is this. The criticism of the minority regarding our united front policy is invalid because the failure of our party to really create a mass movement for our demands is attributable almost completely to conditions outside of our control. Ballam is a minority district organizer. His district includes a good portion of the textile industry. He was doing his best to create a united front, so he says. He said he was doing his best to promote a strike movement and a united front movement. The result, comrades, is such that there is almost nothing to report to the party. As I said before, we had a number of sporadic strikes which we were not able to fuse together and organize into a big strike movement because of the existing objective conditions.

THE failure charged against us to create united front organizations where there is no mass support for them is no failure at all but is realism in carrying on Communist policies. The majority of the Central Executive Committee has maintained consistently that it does not believe in creating paper organizations and is going to maintain their policy in the future.

Another angle of our work during these 20 months marks a beginning in a new field of activity. I refer here to the beginnings made by our party in the field of Negro work. Now this is not the first time that a Central Committee of a Communist Party in America is interesting itself in Negro work. In fact, I remember since the very first day of the Communist movement in America, the C. P. as well as the C. L. P. and then the U. C. P. and then the unified party and the Workers Party have always been interesting themselves in Negro work. Contacts have been established in those years but I maintain that it was only during the present period of the Central Executive Committee that our work among the Negroes was placed on a correct political basis and also on a more effective organiaztional basis. The advice of the C. I. quite naturally played a big part in the successes achieved by the party in this line of work. The fact is that at this moment our party is participating and exercising a great deal of influence in the organization of the Negro Labor Congress. There is a special report on the subject and I will not go into much detail. Suffice it to say that during the last five months the Central Executive Committee has been paying very close attention to work among the Negroes. Suffice it to say that nearly one-third of the membership of the Central Executive Committee was commissioned by the Central Executive Committee as a sub-committee to supervise this work of the party. And we say the party must realize the importance of this sort of work for the future growth of our Party.

DURING these twenty months there developed a number of controversies besides the controversy on the labor party. For instance, the controversy on women's work and how the work should be conducted among the working women in the United States. I understand that there is a legend going about in the party about the opposition of the majority to work among women. Comrades, a cool and calm listening to the facts will convince you that this is, to use polite language, bunk. Before I speak of the controversy let me establish the fact. The fact is that neither during these twenty months that we were in office nor during the four or five years before we came into office, was there any substantial Communist work among women. If the party is to be blamed for it, let the party be blamed for it; if the Central Executive Committee is to be blamed for it, give it all the blame, but remember that Communist work among women has not yet had its beginning.

Now as to the controversy. The party as a whole did nothing—very little was done for work among women. Individual members of the party, women and men, were engaged in a number of cities in work among women—notably in Detroit—the Federation of Working Class Women—in Boston and in New York. Groups of comrades were engaged in those organizations in organizing the working class women on various economic and political issues. Now the controversy in the Central Executive Committee arose over two questions. One point we were making there was that the main and central objective of the Communist Party in its work among women is work among working women—women actually employed in industry, not that we must neglect working class housewives, but the center of attention of our party and its main policies must be formulated on the basis of drawing into the struggle—economic and political—the women actually engaged in the shops and factories. And the main criticisms we were making against the minority comrades in New York was that they have entirely overlooked the central problem of our movement in connection with women's work.

THE second question of the controversy was what is and should be a certain organization of working class housewives in New York. The minority, for one reason or another, took a great fancy to a New York women's organization, called the United Council of Working Class Women. They took such a strong fancy to it, that they were willing to make this the key to the women's movement in the United States, the basis of every maneuver and every campaign that the party is going to make among the working women. And we said we failed to realize this universal greatness and basic importance of the United Council of Working Class Women. Here is what we said. We said this Council of Working Class Women is in reality a very, very small organization of working class housewives. We said, we failed to see how such an organization can become the center . . . . on which we can build and form our movement among the working class women. But the important thing, comrades, in connection with this controversy is that as a result of it, really nothing was achieved except factional capital against the Central Executive Committee.

NOW another point I wish to make, in connection with this, is that up until about one day before the Parity Commission adopted its proposal on women's work the minority still did not know that the main problem in our women's work was the organization of working class women. But it just so happened that the day before the Parity commission made its decision on the women's question, the Inprecorr brought a report of a decision passed by the women's secretariat of the Communist International which contains an elaborate outline, a detailed outline of work among women, and when the minority saw this, they saw the light, and then brought in a resolution which for the first time proposes a program of activity among women in factories.

Now reporting on the Central Executive Committee's work,. I wish to say a few words on our right wing and the struggle against the right wing. This subject will be discussed at length under a special heading. But there is one point I wish to impress upon the comrades in connection with this. And the point mainly is this: That when the minority of the party and Central Executive Committe come to the party and party convention telling us about our alliance with the right wing, about our failure to fight the right wing, I say that there is not a particle of sincerity to all that stuff. I recall, and all of you know, that Lore and Loreism is not something new in our party, even Comrade Bedacht says that. You know Loreism for years, and various forms and shapes, and we knew for some time that Loreism was not a Communist tendency. Why, comrades, at one stage in the life of our government, on the event of the formation of the Workers Party, here is what took place. Something very important and significant. Negotiations were going on between delegates of the Communist Party and delegates from the Workers Council group. And who do you think was representing the Workers Council group in these conferences? Lore! And who do you think was Lore? He was also a member of the Communist Party of America. In other words Comrade Lore in those months was a member of the Communist Party and at the same time was organized jointly with a political group which was fighting our movement bitterly and was negotiating all kinds of terms with our party. And what did the Communist Party do in those days to Lore? Lovestone might tell you something about that. We knew it was bad but we could not do much. We felt we could not do much. And why could not we? Because we knew that to take strict organizational measures against Lore in those months, would prevent the Communists from fulfilling their main objective in those days—the formation of the Workers Party of America.

When Lore Was Respectable.

In the period of the Pepper-Ruthenberg regime in the Workers Party, what did they do to combat Loreism? Nothing! To be a friend of Lore in those months was an honor. It is a disgrace now, and rightly so. But it was no disgrace when Lovestone, Pepper and Ruthenberg were managing

SYNOPSIS.—The official report of the British trade union delegation to Soviet Russia described the workings of foreign trade, transportation, industry, finance and agriculture in the Soviet Union. The trade union leaders concluded that foreign trade is increasing, and that in agriculture and industry the level of production is being raised. The finances have been placed on a sound basis, the report showed. Harm is being done to England by the absence of full diplomatic relations, the union leaders stated. Schools and universities, and literature, music and opera and the theatre were then discussed. Art collections, censorship, newspapers, wall newspapers, and freedom of the press were explained, with the conclusion that "the results of education are astounding." The report then took up hospitals, welfare work, sanitation, birth control, abortion, cleanliness and housing, rent regulations, family life, and prisons. "The Soviet government is achieving most remarkable results in respect to public health, housing, and the prison system," says the report. Regarding the trade unions and labor conditions, the report states, "The Delegation were much impressed by the position and activities of Trade Unions under the Soviet system." The report then described labor regulations, co-operatives, wages, and told of visits to various industrial works. The general conclusion on labor conditions reached by the commission was that, "The U. S. S. R. is a strong and stable state. The government is not only in every way better than anything Russia has ever yet had, but it has done and is doing work in which other older state systems have failed and are failing."

We were also gratified to note the efforts which were being made to take care of the young. We visited the Baby Creche where babies from three to eighteen months are cared for by skilled nurses and doctors in premises kept scrupulously clean, furnished with small tables, toys, and all kinds of the special equipment required for this purpose. Workers have their own hospitals on the job, first aid equipment, schools for their children, gymnasiums and recreation grounds. Medical attention is provided for the workers and special efforts are made to protect the health of their children. Monthly reports are given regarding the progress of each child coming under the care of those in charge of the children's hospital and Baby Care Center.

The average wage paid is 60 roubles per month, the minimum monthly wage being 35 roubles on time work, but 80 per cent of the men are employed on piecework and are employed 24 days per calendar month. While the average piecework earnings during last October were 63 roubles per man, it was stated that in some cases the maximum earnings were up to 150 roubles.

In connection with this, as in the case of all large contracts, the men employed were members of the union, paying Trade Union contributions at the rate of 2 per cent of their wages. The only exception regarding union membership was made in the case of men who were brought into the contract for periods of short duration mainly from the peasant districts for special work requiring little or no skill; 95 per cent of the men were members of the Building Trade Union. In this connection we have to point out that for all grades employed on this huge contract there was only one union, with the exception of the medical and hospital staffs, who were members of the Medical Workers' Union.

The hours of labor were eight hours per day and a 48-hour week, with a fortnight's holiday with pay. In addition to which workers' clubs, film performances, plays and dramatic circle classes were provided at a very low price, together with all the conveniences in connection with the holiday, health and special benefits provided by the unions referred to in another portion of the report.

No rents are paid by the workers employed for the use of the wooden houses erected on the job, food and fuel transport is paid for, but for lighting and rent there are no charges.

For the maintenance of the hospitals and insurance convened for the purpose of providing special benefits the equivalent of 16 per cent of the total wages bill of the contract is taken for the institutions.

The workers subscribe monthly for newspapers and 11,000 copies of the monthly newspaper are purchased regularly.

On making inquiries as to the salaries paid to the administrative staff, we were informed that the chief engineer received 800 roubles per month and the five assistant engineers received 600 roubles per month.

The hospitals, schools, dispensary, and baths provided in connection with this huge electrical undertaking were in every way satisfactory and interesting to the members of the Delegation.

XII

A Visit to a General Engineering Shop

A visit was paid to a very up-to-date engineering works at Kharkov, which appeared to be exceedingly well organized and contained apparently all up-to-date appliances and machinery, and was of very considerable extent.

They were fully engaged in one large shop in building Diesel internal combustion engines, many of them a very large size, and were putting the completed engines through very severe tests.

In another shop were being made electric generators, the beds therefor and accessories. Many of the generators under construction were of very large type, including two being made to order of the Soviet for Turkestan.

In another shop they were building in large quantities four cylinder motor tractors for agricultural work, and from the number under construction it would appear that the output was a fairly large one.

There were also under construction railway locomotive engines of quite a large design, eight wheel coupled with leading and trailing free wheels, specially designed for heavy goods or mineral traffic, and the Delegation was informed that they were designed to draw a train of 1,500 tons under normal circumstances.

Two engines had been completed, one of which was painted and had an exceedingly fine appearance.

In this shop also they had the most up-to-date machinery and many large scale machines, one of which was capable of cutting out five locomotive frames in one operation. The Delegation was informed that they were completing about twelve locomotives per month, but that they had the capacity, if necessary, of turning out 18 per month.

All the shops attached to the works, together with yard space, covered a very considerable acreage, and they were still building yet another large shop at the time of the visit.

With the exception of the electricity works and the aeroplane works in Moscow, the general up-to-dateness and efficiency of this works surpassed anything so far seen during the Delegation's visit to Russia.

In conversation with the directing engineer the Delegation learned that under the Soviet power and the new system of work management the men were working exceedingly well, and when any special order was received the men always exceeded the 1913 output.

In the apprentices' section there was one instructor to each 15 apprentices and working in a well-set-up part of the motor tractor building factory, the boys were busy making small accessories and tools, which were particularly well finished and very creditable to the young people. Several young women were noticed amonst the apprentices, who were being taught to make buckets, cans, and other liquid holding utensils. All the apprentices of both sections appeared to be quite cheerful and particularly interested in their work.

Generally speaking, the Delegation was struck with the whole organization and fittings of this works and with the personnel of the workpeople employed there.

XIII

A Visit to Aircraft Works

A visit was paid by the Delegation to the aircraft works. In these works, 1,800 workers are employed on wood and metal parts, except engines, which are either imported or made at their own engine works in Moscow. All workers are members of the Metal Workers' Union. The lavatory accommodation in the new premises is modern and a vast improvement on the old.

This plant in 1920 consisted of three rather old buildings, and at the same time the workers' share of corn was ground on the premises in a very old-fashioned apparatus. There is a most noticeable improvement in things, though a great many parts are still done by hand in the absence of much-needed machinery.

A very finely built factory is just on completion, the first, second, and third floors being occupied by workmen. The finished machines compare very favorably and are mainly of the D.H. 9 type.

Here, as elsewhere, there does not appear to be any intention to patch up the old building, but rather to rebuild entirely. In the small tubing works for landing bearers ordinary push cycles and a cycle radio machine are being manufactured.

A worker has built a small machine which saves a vast amount of labor in the cutting and shaping of the small parts of the cooling apparatus and aircraft.

There is a very fine set of schools where the lads are being taught (1) the Russian language; (2) physics, and the theory of engineering; (3) geography, etc.

There is also a (1) joinery apprentice shop; (2) blacksmith apprentice shop; (3) engineering and setting-out shop.

All of these seem to have their full complement, there being 30 lads in the latter.

There is a very fine club close by and it is still under reconstruction and extension. The theater is a really well got up place.

A huge building of the "Flat" type is now housing 620 families of metal workers.

XIV

A Visit to a Locomotive Running Depot

The Delegation visited one of the locomotive depots attached to Moscow City. The shed was an old one and consequently did not appeal to the eye as much as the latter-day depots of Great Britain with their excellent accessories. It was, however, quite up to the standard of the older depots in Great Britain, and the work appeared to be quite efficient, having regard to the lack of up-to-date appearance.

During a conversation with the engineer in charge of the depot in his office, before touring the shed, the Delegation was informed that the very high center of gravity of Russian locomotives was conceived in the belief that a less strain was put on the frame of the engine in rounding the sharper curves of the Russian railways. This high center of gravity struck us at once, as the fire-box foundation rests on the top of the framing bearing the axle boxes, whilst the smoke box is carried on a superstructure above the leading framework of the engine. Consequently, the boiler is raised several feet above the frame and necessitates rather long steam and exhaust pipes to and from the cylinders.

In the engineer's office was an exceedingly good half-section of the locomotive now in use for the general passenger service in Russia, from which the Delegation was able to gather that the Walchaert gear is generally in operation on the railways of Russia, together with the piston valve principle. We learned that owing to the shortage of copper, whilst the tube face-plate was of copper, the walls and roof of the firebox were of iron, as were also the boiler tubes. Super-heating is the general practice on the Schmitt principle.

The Delegation also learned that the Swedish engines which we had seen at Sebej did not fur or cork the tubes, as we had been informed, but that owing to the grate construction being different from the general Russian principle, the clinker set on the bars of the Swedish engines, and consequently detracted from the steaming qualities.

In passing around the shed and repairing section of the depot, the Delegation found that the engines were not cleaned as is the usual practice in England, but that tubes were run with a rod, but on coal burning engines fire-box, ash-pan and smoke-box were cleaned in a similar manner to our own. Many of the engines, however, were oil burners, carrying a round tank of oil on the tender, which, owing to the intense frost of the Russian winters, was steam-heated to keep the oil in a usable fluid state. The foot-plate cabs of all these engines were especially built for protection to the men, being quite in the form of a small cabin entirely excluding all draft, consequent upon the running of the train. The Westinghouse brake appeared to be in general use, with quite up-to-date lubricators and injectors.

The axle boxes had quite good oil wells with the usual worsted trimming and worsted pads in the well of the box beneath the axle. Generally speaking, fitting and repairs appeared to be much on the same principle as in our own country.

With regard to the foot-plate men the engine driver is made by commencing an apprenticeship to the fitting, followed by a period of riding as third man, and attending to oiling, etc., until practical driving were acquired. They were also, if necessary, given a course of instruction in firing, but firemen as such were not promoted to the position of engine driver but remained firemen throughout. Drivers had to pass both technical and eyesight examinations, the latter being repeated every year.

At this depot, there were installed baths for the men with attached dressing rooms so that working clothes could be donned at the shed, and put off after the day's work, when, following the bath and change of clothing, the men could go home quite clean and decently dressed. There was also a restaurant with very fine kitchen arrangements and ample floor space for seating some 200 diners at the same time. In addition to this a co-operative store was attached to the depot, where all necessities of food and clothing could be purchased on production of the union card at little above cost price, and members were even allowed a credit card which permitted them to pay for the most expensive articles by instalments over a fixed period of time. There were also attached to the depot dwelling houses for the men, such as we had seen at factories and other works. The working hours were eight per day, and, generally speaking, the Delegation was given to understand that the conditions of the men employed were a great improvement on the old conditions in Russia. Nor was the social side forgotten, as a club, or institute, was also attached with reading rooms, library, lectures, and other educational facilities in addition to facilities for social intercourse.

XV

The First State Boot Factory Established in Russia

This factory, prior to the war, was utilized as a munition factory for the purpose of producing shells. Since the Revolution, it has been turned into a well-equipped modern boot factory. The process of transfer commenced in 1921, but the factory was formally opened and named the Paris Commune Boot Factory on the 12th of March, 1922, the day upon which the Commune is celebrated all over the world.

The factory started with 87 workers. The total number now employed is 632, excluding the administrative staff, numbering 56. The output is 1,400 pairs of boots per day.

Passing from the manager's office to one of the departments, the Delegation noticed a display of colored posters on the walls and were particularly interested in one dealing with the care and training of children, including a very amusing section showing a demonstration of babies demanding the right to be born of healthy parents.

One hundred and eighty women are employed in this factory and the Delegation was informed that men were excluded from their particular kind of work unless there were no women capable of doing the work unemployed. Any vacancies, subject to this provision, could be filled by a male operative.

Special provision is made for the medical care and attention of the employes and in the first-aid department, the Delegation was introduced to the fully qualified doctor in charge, assisted by a fully qualified nurse and an experienced assistant. A factory dentist is also employed to care for the teeth of the workers.

The Delegation was permitted to see the records of accidents in this factory and our inspection showed that the total number of accidents during 1923, and up to the 1st October, 1924, was 83. None of these were very serious and the majority of minor importance.

On the walls of the manager's office, copies of the factory laws and labor laws which had been accepted and signed by the Trade Union representatives for the employes in this factory were noticed. The manager in charge of the factory is appointed with the consent of the union.

The stockrooms and stores rooms for materials were in perfect order, and the finished articles were of a very high order. The leather used in this factory, in addition to Russian supplies, is imported to the extent of 40 per cent from America, Germany and France. Some of this material is very valuable and great care has to be exercised in cutting up the skins that waste should be reduced to the minimum. In order to discourage waste, calculations are made as to what the skins should produce, and a bonus is paid to the worker if there is any increase in the number of leather sections taken from each skin.

Machinery utilized in this factory is mainly imported from America, some of it comes from Germany and the remainder is supplied by Russian engineering establishments.

The Delegation was very much impressed by the utility and finish of the goods being produced in this factory. As far as could be seen, nothing but leather was being used for the soles and there was no evidence of shoddy work. Making comments on this, the Delegation was informed that an effort was being made to defeat private traders by producing goods of a better design and a much more durable quality.

Our inquiry into wages elicted the following information. The wages per employe during the year 1923, to October 1924, per quarter were as follows:—

	Wages per month. Roables.	Copecks.
January	78	10
April	79	24
July	52	52
September	91	81

The average wage per worker as shown for the July quarter was low on account of the fact that this quarter represents the holiday period. Holiday wages are, however, paid, there being no reduction, but these payments do not appear in the books of the factory.

XVI

Rubber Works

The Delegation visited the Leningrad State Rubber Works, where motor tires, goloshes, toys, and surgical appliances were being carried out and several new machines were being laid down, and it was observed that these were from Manchester and that more were to be installed. At present 8,000 workers are employed, the pre-war number being 13,000.

The factory was well organized, though the air space was rather less than that obtaining in such British firms as Macintosh and Dunlop, but this will speedily be changed, as some very extensive new building are being constructed.

Connected with this undertaking is a set of very fine dining rooms. Electrical equipment is used in the cooking of food and even in the cleaning of utensils. The meal times at the works are practically arranged to suit the accommodation at the dining buildings. Thus, the first meal is timed for 11:30 a. m., and two others intervening the last commencing at 1:30 p. m. The meal consists of a fair sized piece of meat and soup, with a portion of sweet pudding and a supply of bread, black or white, or both. The meal is served up ready, but the soup is placed on the table in a number of fair sized basins, and each worker serves himself with a second helping should he need to.

This meal works out at about 7d. per head, and is quite comparable with anything obtainable for 1s. in this country.

The Delegation partook of a meal and served themselves from their own selected positions.

The institution is managed by workers from, and the initial costs borne by the rubber undertaking.

Apart from the dining rooms there is a cafe and bar, and both alcoholic and non-alcoholic beverages can be obtained. There are reading rooms, a club room, and library, a wireless installation, together with a music room and a very fine "Red Corner."

All these are at the disposal of the meanest worker employed at the Rubber Works in Leningrad.

XVII

Visit to a State Tobacco Factory in Moscow.

Each department was taken in turn, cigaret making apparently being the main occupation. The Delegation saw the paper cigaret cases being made and subsequently filled with the tobacco by machinery, and afterwards went into the tobacco-cutting department and were shown some English machines, which, though smaller than the Russian, are considered to be the best, and do more work in the same time.

In respect to machinery, it was stated that more was required, particularly for filling cigarets in the packets, a good deal of which is being done by hand on account of the lack of machinery. There is no doubt English machinery is considered the best, and if it were possible, would be largely used. A good deal of the machinery gave evidence of wear and, in the ordinary way, under other circumstances would be replaced by new. In spite of these difficulties, it was stated the production of the factory was now 95 per cent as compared to pre-war. When it is remembered that the conditions of employment and hours of labor have been immensely improved since then, it certainly appears, under all the circumstances, a remarkable achievement.

the affairs in the party. Lore was in the political committee, Lore had to be in the steering committee at the convention of July 3. Because the minority, then majority, beleived him to be a good Communist. Is the minority ready to recognize and admit their mistake?

I say, on what ground can the minority blame the present Central Executive Committee for the failure to completely exterminate the Loreist tendency in the party? That we have fought Lore and Loreism is beyond the shadow of a doubt. Let me bring to your attention two or three facts. You speak about the majority having been in alliance with Lore. Can you point to a single instance where the majority of the Central Executive Committee sacrificed or compromised its program or policy to satisfy the Lore group in the party? On the contrary, in the last convention of the party the Lore group, or part of them, demanded as price of their support to the majority, that we discard our third party alliance and the only reply we made was that we cannot do it because we believed in the correctness of that alliance.

Not So Backward.

Another fact, a very important fact. Much talk has been made here about the backwardness of the majority followers, particularly about the support of the Finnish Federation. Do you know, I am sure the minority leaders know, that the Finnish Federation, its predominant majority, was against dropping the farmer labor party slogan? Nearly every Finnish branch that went on record on the labor party issue during the discussion, went on record for continuing the labor party slogan and according to those Finnish comrades we were wrong. Did we sacrifice our position to please the Finns? No! It is sufficient merely to enumerate some of these facts to show how ridiculous your assertions are about the alliance between Lore and the majority. You cannot disregard the fact that in our everyday activities, wherever we came in contact with right wing deviations, whether they called themselves Loreism or not, the Central Executive Committee was always very quick in calling down and cmobatting them. I need refer only to a few instances. Our fight against the right wing deviations in the needle trades; our fight against opportunist mistakes in a number of other unions. The reasons why our main struggles against opportunism can be seen mainly on the trade union field is this: It is on the trade union field that these mistakes become very quickly apparent, and because the center of our work is in the trade unions. The C. E. C. was always quick to act the moment it saw the manifestations of any right wing deviation, and therefore the C. E. C. never failed to make clear its position and to fight against all these deviations.

In the time that has been left me, only a few words on our main resolution. Our main resolution dealing with the present situation and our immediate tasks has been adopted by the Parity Commission unanimously. Most of you comrades, in fact all of you, are familiar with this resolution. There is nothing exceptionally new for our party in that thesis. Nothing exceptionally new except a few basic economic and political facts.

No Immediate Crisis.

The basic economic fact is that there is no immediate crisis in the economy of American capitalism. No prosperity, very far from that. Industry is proceeding very slowly. In fact even the most optimistic capitalist papers when they speak of the present economic conditions, cannot work up any optimism at all for the economic outlook of the United States. There is a quiet depression. American industry lives from hand to mouth. No big projects, no big developments and no considerable growth of home industry at present. Is there any outlook for an immediate, severe crisis?

Our thesis says this cannot be detected. We are probably in for a long period of hesitating development on a downward scale with occasional severe disturbances, aggrevating still further the conditions as far as the workers are concerned. This is one of the new factors in the thesis.

As to the political conditions in the United States, naturally the biggest feature is the tremendous growth of American imperialism. The contrast between the growth of imperialism and the slow development of home industry is very striking. Whereas the investments abroad are reaching tremendous proportions, whereas American capitalism manifests tremendous initiative and aggressiveness in penetrating industry and finance in Central Europe, Asia and Latin America, the home industry does not show any such big designs and projects. Imperialism and the growth of it is one of the main determining factors of home economy and policies. And when you analyze the policies of American capitalism of the present day you will see how these are determined by the imperialist designs of big capital. I already mentioned the tremendous growth of the export of capital and imperialist expansion generally. The second major policy is the development of militarism in the United States—something that we must be aware of and something we must react to in a very effective manner.

Trying to Win Farmers.

The third major policy of American capitalism is the sytematic effort that is being made by American capital—by big capital primarily—to win over the farmers, particularly the rich and middle farmers to the cause of capitalism in the United States. Those of you comrades who are following events closely have probably noticed that within the last two months President Coolidge has held several conferences, probably dozens of them, with congressmen and senators from the agrarian section of the country. What were they discussing? One thing. And the thing is how to win the farmers of the United States, the rich and middle farmers particularly, to the cause of capitalism in America, how to prevent a new solidification of the farmers in America for a third party movement on the political field.

The fourth major policy of the American capitalist class is to break the morale of the American workers by wage cuts and various other cuts and to prevent by all possible means the political awakening of these workers and their organization for independent political action. These to us, comrades, seem to be the four major policies of American capitalism at the present day. And the thesis that we submit in the name of the Parity Commission and the Central Executive Committee on our immediate tasks are policies and tactics that our party must pursue in order to combat in a Communist way these policies of American capitalism.

United Party Needed.

In conclusion just a few remarks. The basis of our work in the future, as has been stated here repeatedly in the convention, is a united party. We will adopt in this convention all the thirteen or fourteen resolutions that we submit to you from the Parity Commission, but without Communist unity no effective work will be possible. If, following the convention, we cannot show a united front of all the Communists in the party for carrying out these resolutions, these will not be worth the paper on which they have been printed. I do not speak here now of something that can not happen. To come here and demand the immediate and complete liquidation of the factional struggle is something that no one can expect to happen irrespective of the intentions of any comrade in our party. The impetus of the struggle that accumulated during these twenty months has not spent itself yet, and there is no use in complaining about it. It has not spent itself yet. It may take the party another couple of months before this impetus will spend itself. But I say, comrades, that every member of this convention, every delegate of this convention, must keep this thing before his eyes, to apply all efforts and to take all necessary measures that this factional struggle spend itself and liquidate itself in the shortest possible time.

We have been speaking here about the danger of the right wing. Comrades of the minority have been trying to establish a case here against the majority of the party that it is the right wing. I say as far as I am personally concerned, I am not going to waste a single second to convince anyone of the minority that we are not the right wing, because they know we are not. The question that is of more importance is how soon and by what means can we really unite our party? I have no prescription and no particular means to propose. But there is one thing of which I am convinced, that if the minority and the majority leave this convention with this idea, that the factional struggle, altho it may continue for a while, cannot and should not continue for any length of time, the factional struggle will be liquidated. It will come to an end.

Factional Struggle Must End.

And when it does come to an end, it is then and only then that the resolutions that we adopt in this convention, that the motions passed in this convention, will take life and become part and parcel of the work of our party, of its activities and its future successes. I wish only one thing, that the comrades of the minority realise as much as we do that the factional fight cannot continue, no matter what you say in your caucus meetings, no mattter what slogans you throw out. In Cleveland in the city convention someone read a caucus document of the minority which contained the following saying: "If you give your opponent the right name you have won half the battle." When you will stop to believe that your main objective is to find names for the majority, when you come to the conclusion that the party imposes upon you more earnest duties than to find quotations as to how you can most effectively brand the majority with names, when you come to the conclusion that you cannot continue this fight without ruining this party and ruining yourself in the process, our party will be able to proceed to work in an effective and successful manner.

Ruthenberg Replies to Bittelman

C. E. Ruthenberg, speaking for the minority of the Central Executive Committee, replied to Comrade Bittelman as follows:

COMRADES: As for Comrade Bittelman's closing remarks, I suggest that he should have thought of that before yesterday in his caucus, when the caucus made its decision as to whether the minority in this convention was to have what it won in the party or have a policy of extermination directed against it.

The main basis which Comrade Bittelman laid for the failure of the work of the C. E. C. during the last twenty months was in objective conditions. He told us that in the work during the term of the present C. E. C. the conditions, political and economic, were of such a character as not to be fruitful for effective progress of our party work. Then Comrade Bittelman told us a little later in his discussion in relation to the La Follette movement, that everybody in the United States expected that the La Follette movement would make a much greater sweep, a tremendous sweep in the presidential elections, and everybody was disappointed because of the results. Now, comrades, there could be an expectation that the La Follette movement would make such a sweep, there must have been the conditions among the workers of this country to create such a movement, and Comrade Bittelman was either wrong when he said the objective conditions were not favorable, or otherwise he was wrong in what he said about the La Follette movement.

LET us see if in 1924 we had in the industries of this country favorable conditions. Unemployment existed to a greater degree than for any period since the depression back in 1921. 1923 was a period of the upgrade in industry. 1924, on the other hand, was a period of increasing depression with increasing unemployment, with increasing difficulties for securing a livelihood for the workers; and does Comrade Bittelman expect us to believe that a condition in which the workers are unemployed to the extent of millions is not favorable for the work of our party? If Comrade Bittelman has such an opinion, then under what conditions will our struggle reach its climax if not exactly in such conditions as we had in 1924. There was unemployment, the workers had a difficult time, being forced to fight for food, clothing and shelter. As I declared at the outset that the analysis which says that the conditions were not favorable for the progress of the work of our party has no basis and the C. E. C. majority cannot have such an alibi for its failure in the last year and a half in the work of our party.

Comrades, there is quite a different reason for the failure of the work. Quite an equally important factor in relation to the success of the work of our party, which Comrade Bittelman very easily ignores in his report, and that is the question of what kind of policy did our party follow in relation to the objective conditions? That, Comrade Bittelman, is as decisive for our party as are the objective conditions. If we have favorable conditions for Communist work, Communist agitation, and have the wrong policies, we will not make any progress with our work, and it is our contention, which I am going to prove, that it is because you had the wrong policies that you did not make progress during the past year and a half.

NOW let us deal with the factor which had a great deal to do with the character of the policies which the C. E. C. followed, that is, the makeup of the majority group in our party, the relationship of that group to the Lore group in our party.

We know that at the last national convention the majority won its majority thru the support of the Lore group in our party and that its main additional prop was the Finnish Federation of our party. In other words, its basis in the party is that group which is the right wing of our party and which is not yet developed as a Communist group, that has not yet learned its Communist principles and policies, and, I say, irrespective of the leading group of the majority's different view point, different orientation, the fact that it had such a basis in the party was sure to carry it into the mistakes which it made in the last year and a half. And I say the fact that it has chosen in this convention to again rest itself in the next year on the same basis is also certain that it will make similar errors in the year to come in relation to the work of our party. You can't, comrades, get away from the character of your support. It will have its influence in the shaping of your policies.

YOU will shape those policies to satisfy that particular group which has given you a majority, and that means that you have wrong policies and we will not build this party of ours. We found this support of the majority's influencing its action, I say not only this support but also the development of the majority's itself, at the very beginning of the work of the C. E. C. in 1924. This was on the first political question which we had to decide in the C. E. C. The question of what is our attitude towards Trotskyism That was the first political question of importance that came before the C. E. C. for decision. Did the majority of the C. E. C. have a clear understanding of the struggles in the Russian Communist Party and make a decision? Was it able to go on record in support of the Bolsheviks in the Russian Communist Party without hesitation? Comrades, quite the contrary Comrade Lore had telegraphed to his paper from Chicago, at the end of the convention, that "the Trotskyites have won the party." Our majority wasn't quite sure for five months whether they were Trotskyites or not!

In January, comrades, in the editorial board of the Liberator, Comrade Pepper made a proposal that he write an article for the Bolshevik group and against Trotskyism in the Liberator. Comrade Cannon opposed it, saying he did not yet sufficiently know the facts and wasn't ready to make a decision.

In March there was a full meeting of the C. E. C. and our group offered a resolution to endorse the old group in the Russian Party and Comrade Foster answered by a motion that we take no position but print the material in the party press, and then, comrades, what happened? Along in April when Comrade Foster was already in Moscow, a telegram came to me from Comrade Scott saying that our party should send a telegram to the Russian Party convention endorsing the Bolshevik group, and I was compelled on my own responsibility to send that telegram and put the party on record, while the C. E. C. had refused to take action on it before. (Applause.)

Comrades, on the first of June Comrade Foster came back from Moscow. He had seen the situation there, and then the C. E. C. did endorse the Bolshevik group with a vote of 12 to 1; in other words, it took five months to get an understanding of the situation into the minds of the majority group and get them to act on this question. We say this was not a chance, this was not a happenstance. It was due to the fact of their relationship to the Lore group that made it impossible to get earlier action from them, to get action until after the decision had been finally made in Russia.

Now, comrades, on the issue of Loreism. Loreism developed in our party in a violent form when Lore became part of the majority of the C. E. C. He thought he was part of the leadership of the party now and he could speak. He could express himself, and he did express himself in writing an article on the fifth anniversary of the C. I., a very bad article. The minority said, "We must correct it. The C. E. C. must issue a statement condemning this editorial." It moved to that effect, but the C. E. C. said "No, we will not issue such a statement. Let Comrade Lore write a new editorial in which he corrects these ideas. In other words, they had to protect the member of the majority—Lore—from a public condemnation by the C. E. C. of the party.

NOW we cite these two facts about Loreism and the Trotsky matter to show what the connection was, and I say that it is due to this connection this basis of the majority, that during the year that followed that it successfully moved step by step to a Loreist policy, that it went toward right wing sectarianism in our party. It was the influence of this support in the party reacting on the majority of the C. E. C. that brought about these mistakes, in addition, of course, to the mistaken conceptions of the members of the majority itself, and I am going to cite some of those mistaken conceptions.

During the first half of 1924, our party was still working under the policies that were formulated by the present minority. The policies of 1922 and 1923 were accepted unanimously by the last convention. Our policies. And we continued those policies during the first six months and our party continued to make progress. It was when the majority had to formulate its own policies on main political events that errors began to appear, and the results for the party you know. Let me show you what happened as to figures.

CERTAINLY we must estimate the successes of the work of the party by the results it has attained and how are the results registered. Influence among masses and drawing the most advanced elements into our own party as members of the party. These are the two indications of whether our policies are correct and whether they are being carried out and the results for us. I cannot estimate the influence among the masses by statistics because we have none, but we know that our influence increased during 1922-1923. In 1923 we brought into our party as new members 6,532 members. For the six months of 1924, with the same policies effective, we brought into the party 4,658 members. And then suddenly the results collapsed in spite of the fact that we were in the presidential campaign under our own name, in spite of the fact that that was a good opportunity for propaganda for Communism, direct appeals for the Workers Party. During the next six months' period, the figures were 50 per cent of the new membership taken in and as compared with the first six months of 1924 and 1925, we took in 4,600 in 1924 and 2,000 in 1925.

Comrades, how do we explain that sharp change in the results for our party? Why this sudden change in the number of members we could win for our party? Was it objective conditions as between the first half of 1924 and the second half, the first half of 1924 and the second half of 1923, or was it a change in the orientation of the line of policy which our party was pursuing? Comrades, we maintain that it was a change in the line of policy made by the C. E. C. that is responsible for this failure to secure results for our party.

I am going to tell you now the conception that is fundamental to this error which was made during the period in question. Comrades, we do not always in theses speak our innermost thoughts, and Comrade Bittelman may have written part of the main thesis before this convention, and done it after a C. I. decision and after a bitter struggle in the party and formulation of the policies correctly after this struggle. But I am going to submit to you Comrade Bittelman speaking spontaneously, his own ideas, his own conceptions, before the convention of the Russian section of our party, in February of this year. And what did Comrade Bittelman say then? Here it is: I have quoted it before and I will quote it again to show what cannot be the policy of a Communist Party. "It is becoming clearly apparent that the only real opposition that will ever be developed in the United States against the rule of big capital in distinction to opposition to capitalism as a whole, will come only from the movement that the Workers Party will be able to create."

I SAY, comrades, that is not Communism; that is not Marxism; that is not Leninism; that is something that is alien to every fundamental conception of our movement, and I say further, if you have that thought in your mind you will be opposed to the labor party policy of our party. If you have that thought in your mind you make errors. You abolish united front women's organizations. If you have that thought in your mind, Comrade Bittelman, you bring in a report to make the International Workers' Relief openly a part of our party.

Let us see how it worked out. This conception that the Workers Party itself must create the movements which developed against capitalism, that our party as a party is the basic condition to the creation of opposition not against capitalism as a system only but even a movement against big capital. Comrades, my conception, and I am sure the conception of every member of those who sit on the left of this convention, is that capitalism because of all its contradictions, because of its exploitations and oppressions, brings resistance on the part of various groups of the capitalist social order. That it brings revolts of the petty bourgeoisie. It even brings struggles between two groups of capitalism of very bitter character. It brings the revolt of the petty bourgeoisie against capitalism and is the basic reason for the revolt of the working class. Yes! This capitalist social order, Comrade Bittelman, which you say our party only can build the movement against, this capitalist social order, has created our party. Its conditions create the party, the leader of the working class in the struggle, and you have put it topsy turvy, turned the whole thing around and with that conception you will continue to make your errors on policy.

COMRADE BITTELMAN told something about the struggles in the first six months in the C. E. C. and he mentioned the fact that there was a struggle over the date of June 17th convention. Whether it should be held on May 30th or whether we should change the date, and he said that on this question that I supported the majority. Well, comrades, I would say that the majority supported me on that question (applause) because I initiated it, I proposed the policy and fought for that particular policy.

We also, comrades, had differences in relation to the labor party policy in relation to the C. P. P. A., and it was our view during that six months period the C. E. C. majority showed a hesitating, vascillating attitude, that it did not know where it was going, that it had no clear lines of development. We feared at one time after the St. Louis convention that it might want to call off the May 30th convention and go into the C. P. P. A. convention. There were differences of attitudes in which we believe that our viewpoint showed the right line of policy for our party.

There were distinct differences of attitude in which we believe that our viewpoint showed the right policy for our party and the Communists after the June 17th convention. The C. E. C. majority, in its statement regarding the labor party policy, tells us that it was after the elections that it formulated that policy. It is a fact, comrades, that the policy was abandoned before the November elections; it was abandoned in the middle of October when the fight began over the question of what policy we should pursue in the A. F. of L. convention. We said we must continue to fight for independent political action, to raise the slogan of a labor party, and they said, let us bring in a proposal for a labor congress, and voted down the proposal to bring in a resolution for the labor party. And where is the labor congress that we propagated in the A. F. of L.? It was offered and then forgotten. And that is typical of the attitude of our C. E. C. majority.

We were told, comrades, that after the elections the labor party movement was no longer in existence. Now, that again shows the fundamental un-Marxist way of thinking of our majority. Because in the election campaign the workers who were favorable toward the labor party had been swallowed by the La Follette movement, because of that the labor party movement was no longer in existence. That is the thing the Communist International criticized as basing policies upon superficial conditions. It was a superficial conception of the situation to say that the labor party movement was no longer in existence. The labor party movement might be wholly in the La Follette movement and a part of it might still be in existence. The majority could not understand that and therefore they made their errors and said that we must no longer advocate the labor party slogan.

AND comrades, we had some discussions here as to whether the majority was opposed in principle to the labor party. Comrades, I ask you if the majority could write this thesis on the immediate party tasks, whether they can now disclaim such opposition in principle. Here is the section on the right deviation of farmer-laborism in our party. Comrades, I say to you, I repeat for your benefit that in your own thesis and Comrade Cannon said yesterday, if you believe that farmer-laborism is right-wingism, then you cannot support the farmer-labor policy. If you believe the advocacy of the building of a labor party in the United States was ever right-wingism in our party, then you must be against it and fight it now as you thought it when you wrote this thesis. That is the conception here. And this is a continuance of what Comrade Bittelman wrote in this article. We find this statement in their thesis: "The position taken by the comrades of this tendency (the minority—the farmer-labor tendency, they called it) is the only way to utilize independent action of workers and poor farmers is thru a farmer-labor party. Forgetting the existence of the Workers Party as the political class party of the workers and poor farmers. These comrades also take the position that the only way to build a mass Communist Party in America is thru a farmer-labor party, thru announcing a new principle that the Workers Party can never become a mass Communist Party except thru organizing and working within a farmer-labor party." And then later on: "This non-Communist conception of the role of our party manifests itself particularly in the tendency to resort to all kinds of new political organizations, substitutes for the Workers Party, wherever an opportunity presents itself to appeal to large masses of workers on concrete issues of everyday life."

This, comrades, is the reverse of what Bittelman said in his Russian Section speech. Not in contradiction, but the reverse side of the picture. In his article he says that you can only build a movement against capitalism if the Workers Party creates that movement, and here we have a refusal to build united front organizations for the purpose of carrying on a struggle against capitalism. If you believe that the Workers Party must create a movement itself, then you must be opposed to creating a labor party. You must be opposed to organizing the women's councils for a fight against capitalism. You must be opposed to non-party organizations thru which the party carries on its struggles. This, comrades, shows that this was not merely an error on the labor party issue but was a fundamentally wrong policy, a fundamentally non-Communist conception in the minds of those who were in the leadership of our party. (Applause.)

COMRADES, that conception has manifested itself throut the party work. Comrade Bittelman has spoken of our criticism of the united front policy of the majority group. And here is a very significant thing in relation to that criticism. We have a section in the written report starting "other united fronts and special party campaigns" (other than the labor party, is the meaning), the Save the Lansutzky Campaign, Anti-Abramovich, Unemployment, World Trade Union Unity, the Release of Crouch and Trumbull. Not one of these campaigns, supposedly initiated as united front campaigns, were they actually organized, on any important scale, thru united front committees for the struggle for these policies. Not one, comrades! Yet they are listed here as examples of the united front. And then, comrades, we had one campaign during the regime of the present C. E. C. which succeeded in uniting half a million workers in a common struggle, in carrying on an aggressive fight, and that is not mentioned in this report. What was that campaign? That was the campaign first initiated in 1922 by our group, for the protection of the foreign born, and carried on in 1924 against the new laws with the successful uniting of at least half a million workers in that struggle, as the reports of the national office show, and yet this is forgotten, and these campaigns which fall short of correct application of the united front is used to show how the united front tactic is applied.

That, comrades, shows the line of thought, the line of thought manifests itself in issuing manifestos but yet we do not go to the point of organizing support, of organizing groups, uniting groups of workers, for the struggle in support of these campaigns which we initiate. Comrades, the task of a united front compaign is to draw other organized groups of workers into struggles with us thru delegates or committees and carry on the campaign thru these committees and thus the CEC has not sufficiently understood and has not sufficiently and aggressively carried on the campaign for such committees because that would be the organization of all kinds of new organizations between ours and the masses against which they protest in their last thesis.

AND now, comrades, let us carry the argument a point farther. The CPPA policy of the majority group, and we will get a further light on the conception of the united front of the majority of the CEC. The CPPA had callod its conferense for February 21 here in Chicago and our Party was to take action. We proposed the labor party slogan in relation to this convention. We proposed, the minority, to elect our delegates in the trade unions and send them thru to fight under the slogan of the Labor Party, against La-

Follettism, against Hillquitism, to go into the organization and make the struggle there. That was a correct policy. That's the policy the C. I. decided was the correct policy but what did the majority do. They issued a manifesto and a resolution which our comrades were to introduce in the trade unions which said "boycott the CPPA convention." Boycott the CPPA convention! Comrades, that was deleonism coming to life in the W. P. Boycott a mass movement of workers. Boycott a movement that is a step forward to progressive struggles against capitalism. Boycott a movement of the workers, which typified the development of the American working class since the end of the war, the development toward a fight as a class in their own interests. That was the acme of sectarianism and that was the policy which was offered in place of going to the CPPA convention. The policy offered in CEC resolutions, as a substitute, was that we should ask the workers in the trade unions to fight in a united front struggle with the Workers Party! To join in a united front struggle with the Workers Party! What was that. An application of the united front tactic of the C. I.? No, no, comrades, that was making the tactic of the united front a sectarian principle. Making it a principle to propagate in place of making it a tactic for action of the masses. If we urge the workers to go into a united front with us, we must say "united front against wage cuts, united front against child labor, united front against La Folletteism, the use of injunctions, united front on concrete issues and not a sectarian united front with the Workers Party."

That, comrades, was the policy in Bittelman's article, and the thesis of the majority which was offered next year, opposing in principle organizations between the Workers Party and the masses of workers.

And now, comrades, we turn to the next development of that policy. I thought we would have this discussion in relation to the discussion of women's work, but since Comrade Bittelman has raised the issue, I must answer.

WE had motions in the C. E. C. in regard to work among women. Comrade Bittelman tries to tell you that the issue was whether we should carry on work among women in the factories. Comrade Bittelman, here are the extracts from the minutes of the C. E. C. which you yourself had made. I challenge you to show anything in your motion which shows work among women in the factories and ours which says work among housewives. That was never the issue. What was the issue? Not that, comrades, but we had in New York the United Council of Working Class Women. It was an organization of a united front character; first, delegates from existing organizations, and, second, it had, in addition, individual membership—and the question was, what we were to do with this organization. Your proposal, Com. Bittelman, as it is here, is that the United Council of Working Class Women shall become the Women's Department of the Workers Party. In other words, you wanted to liquidate a non-party organization and take a few of its members and make it the Women's Section of the Workers Party. In answer to that, our proposal was that we shall continue, that we shall build the U. C. W. W. and try to develop it into a mass organization. And, comrades, the minutes went to the C. I., and here we have some letters from the C. I. on a question of party policy, which the C. E. C. has refused to publish for the benefit and education of our membership, has refused to give you the benefit of this advice. (Applause; "Shame! Shame!") And why did they refuse? Listen to this (quotation from C. I. letter):

> The Secretariat of the E. C. C. I. has carefully examined, together with the Women's Secretariat of the Comintern, the Bittelman and Ruthenberg resolutions and has adopted a definite attitude towards them. Both organs have come to the unanimous conclusion that the Bittelman resolution adopted by you, altho the voting resulted in a tie, is in several decisive points contrary to the decisions and directions of the Comintern. The rejected Ruthenberg resolution represents, on the contrary, and precisely in the points in which it differs from the other resolution, the viewpoint formulated clearly and unmistakably in the resolutions and theses of the Third International Conference of Communist Women in Moscow, which were endorsed by the Executive of the Comintern.

AND then, comrades, what next? Well, our majority has had the habit in the past, when it makes political mistakes, of accusing the Executive Secretary of having falsified the minutes of the proceedings, and in this case they proceeded to say the minutes had not correctly explained their position and their viewpoint, and they sent a letter to Moscow—two letters, in fact, one on Feb. 11 and the other on March 14—in which they explain their position to the Women's Secretariat and the Executive Committee, and here I have the answer of the Executive Committee to their explanation dated May 5, 1925. They say on the question of women's sections, it was not the issue between us. The matter is cleared up, but on the main issue, which was the issue between Comrade Bittelman and myself, between the majority and the minority, they continued to say the following: "This settles that question, but the main question of which the International Women's Secretariat differed from the majority of the C. E. C. was the question of the role of the United Working Women's Council and the party's relation with the same." In other words, after their explanation, they get an answer which says they were just as wrong as before that explanation.

WE declared that our party suffered in the last year from a leadership which, because of its incorrect policies, could not mobilize the party nor could it bring the masses of workers under the leadership of the party to any great extent. We say that our membership, which was 16,000 when the present minority was in the majority of the C. E. C. and grew to 17,000 during the first six months of 1924, was again reduced to 16,000 during the first six months of 1925, so that we stand exactly today where we were a year and a half ago, and we say that a C. E. C. which comes to the party with a year and a half of struggle, of work, of expenditure of our forces in the work of our party, and cannot show progress in building the party, does not deserve leadership. (Applause.)

We say, comrades, that the C. E. C. has chosen to follow the same course to unite itself in the party with the same elements which were the basis of its support in the past and which will again, influence it in the wrong direction. We say the majority group in this convention made that choice when it chose to use its power to override the minority in the fact that it took from it the positions of leadership in the party work which it won by vote of the majority in the districts of New York, Philadelphia and Cleveland. Our group sees in that policy of the majority of the C. E. C. a policy of persecution. It made its protest, it made its fight against it. It came back into the convention and said, we will not split this party. It is our party and we will stay in it and fight in it until it is a party which will continue a correct line of Communist policy. (Applause.)

WE say that we will not split this party. No, but we will continue to fight against the policies which were adopted in the past year. We will continue to fight against misapplications of policies which may be correctly worded and resolutions which may be correctly stated but which the C. E. C. majority will not apply in practice so as to gain results for our party. We say present conditions show Comrade Bittelman, that you have chosen to make the continued basis of your support the right wing elements of our party, the Finnish Federation and the Loreist group in the Jewish Federation, in the German Federation and elsewhere, we say to you that you have not any substantial support in this party beside these groups. We say a majority based upon that support cannot lead this party and formulate correct policies for the building of this party. You have chosen to follow a line of extermination and elimination. We say while you have chosen, we made the offer otherwise, we desired something otherwise, we desired that you break with these elements and join us as the leadership of the party based upon the Communist elements of this party and having the support of these Communist elements.

YOU have chosen the other road, and as you chose to be the representative of the right wing of this party, base yourself on that right wing, we have no other recourse than to say that you are the right wing of the party and that we must fight against you. (Applause. Cheers.)

We say that this condition is not the best solution and might have been alleviated yet but you made the decision. You give us no other solution, and therefore there is no other road open for this minority to carry on a militant struggle against those elements which are not yet Communistically developed and which will give you the wrong policy and force us to continue to fight against it, and that we will do. (Tremendous cheers and applause.)

Cowderly Tells How to Keep from Growing Old

By P. B. COWDERY.

The comrades everywhere want to know about touring the country in an auto. The sign, "Frisco to Chicago—Subscribe for the DAILY WORKER," inspires numerous questions, and everyone, even strangers incidentally attracted, are invariably friendly and interested. When we handed out sample copies of the DAILY WORKER they have always said, "Good, we are with you."

"We" are the comrades from San Francisco, Oakland, California, who have already reported in the DAILY WORKER our meetings in Sacramento and Salt Lake City, also Fallon, Nevada. At all of these places we were treated royally. In Denver we held a street mass meeting Aug. 16, with 500 attending and 78 copies of the DAILY WORKER sold, and another good meeting in the Labor Lyceum Aug. 17.

Stoppage of the oil line in our engine on the nineteen-mile climb out of Salt Lake City ruined our engine. Temporary repairs enabled us to reach Denver. Here comrades overhauled the engine completely, thus ending our engine trouble. This unavoidable delay put us a day behind our schedule and made it necessary for Comrade Dolsen to proceed by train to Kansas City and St. Louis, where he held meetings on the dates advertised.

Fall Into a Mudhole.

As to road conditions, the highways are still far from being boulevards, yet each year sees a tremendous lot of new construction. This year serious washouts have occurred in Nevada and Wyoming. Detours are numerous due to construction work. Rain on detours and new grades necessitates frequent use of a towline. In Wyoming we went into the ditch. We merely attached our towline and the first machine passing pulled us out. In western Kansas a thunder storm struck us at 6 p. m. We were on a new grade. The storm so blinded Comrade Dobkin, who was driving, that he failed to avoid a bad mudhole. We camped right there until 8 a. m. During the evening several machines tried to pull us out but could not get traction. After the coming of daylight and a partial drying of the road a big machine with chains easily pulled us out. Fortunately our tin Lizzie was equipped for bunking and the three of us got a good night's rest which we badly needed. To make meeting dates required that we drive night and day. This fourteen-hour delay compelled us to miss our Pittsburgh date. We found that the storm was local and only extended about five miles and we had landed in the only hole that could have delayed us. Our schedule of ten meetings in twelve days between Frisco and Chicago, had we experienced no delay, was found to be possible except the lap between Pittsburgh, Kansas, and St. Louis, Mo. Here we were compelled to travel two nights and one day. Missouri roads are still in very bad condition, especially for night driving, being poorly marked, often narrow and rough and full of sharp turns without warning signs. But rapid progress is being made in road building, even in Missouri. Except for occasional delays, motoring on the main highways is very practicable and enjoyable.

They Drive Auto—Convention Drives Them.

The trip to Chicago was too hurried to be completely successful. After the convention Comrades Cowdery and Roberts plan to take more time returning and secure many subscribers for the DAILY WORKER and Workers Monthly. Comrades Dolsen and Dobkin plan to remain in Chicago. Much has been learned on this trip to demonstrate the economy and effectiveness of using a Ford auto in distribution of literature and obtaining of subscribers. We expect to visit many towns before returning to California and we expect to convince the comrades in these towns of the necessity of circulating these publications. In California we now have two autos on this job year in and year out. Sometimes, as on this trip, excessive expense compels us to accept assistance from comrades and sympathizers who realize the value of our work and are in a position to help us. We ask this only when necessary, and only on condition that we are giving value received to the movement. Our only pay is the regular commission on the subscriptions we obtain. Plenty of energy, accompanied by sheer economy, gets us by. As an example: Between Denver and Chicago, the three of us spent just $2.75 for eats, and for sleeps nothing. We had to save our meager funds for gasoline. We had just 13 cents on arrival. But we landed among friends. And we could have found friends in any town had we stopped to look for them.

A Wide Awake Crew.

As to driving night and day: We seldom stopped either to eat or sleep. Only when we became tired out did we succeed in sleeping in the moving machine. Three of us took turns driving the machine. At the wheel we soon became sleepy. While reclining for the purpose of sleep we remained wide awake. This was the experience of all of us. We found, however, that we obtained sufficient rest even tho we seemed not to sleep at all. It will be easily possible for a crew to drive a machine from San Francisco to Chicago in five days and nights in the near future. One more year, or at the most two more years, will find the highways all graded and dependable.

Why do not comrades use their evenings, Sundays, holidays and out-of-work vacation periods more for the social process of circulating our literature and less for the personal process of mere pleasure seeking? Hunting subscribers is far more exciting and interesting than hunting fun for fun's sake. Learn to put all you meet on record. Let your friends know how disgraceful it is to waste their time and money. Hold them up to some degree of scorn and ridicule if they fail to take the DAILY WORKER and read it. Extend your circle of friends to all you meet. Then meet all you can. Don't let them get away with the idea that it is smart and the thing to be ignorant and wasteful in relation to working class problems. Put up a fight. Nothing short of this can give you any real zest in life. Use your auto to a purpose.

If you want to thoroughly understand Communism—study it. Send for a catalogue of all Communist literature.

WORKERS BE UP ON PICKET LINE IN N. Y. GARMENT STOPPAGE; COURTS IMPOSING HEAVY FINES

NEW YORK, August 30.—Despite the rumors of impending peace negotiations between the factions in the fight within the ranks of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, the beating up of workers still continues on the picket line, according to the report of the Joint Committee of Action.

Sam Goldman, one of the men discharged from Yudovitz & Schwarz, at 124 West 18th street, after the stoppage, was standing in front of that building with a group of workers talking to a member of the firm. Two gangsters crossed the street quickly, attacked Goldman and then escaped after briusing his face and injuring his right eye.

In the Jefferson Market Court, three girls were arraigned on charges of disorderly conduct following their arrest for picketing the Roth Costumes, Inc., at 550—7th Avenue.

Magistrate Silberman, who heard the case, imposed a sentence of 5 days on Lena Lorber; but this was changed to a fine of $50 after Attorney Abraham Goodman had argued on the injustice of such a sentence. Anna Flint was also fined $50 and Mary Kuthy was fined $25 after Magistrate Silberman had severely lectured the defendants.

Picket in Spite of Writ.

Picketing in front of the Roth Costumes, Inc., at 550—7th Avenue continues in spite of the injunction granted this firm yesterday by Justice John L. Walsh, of the New York State Supreme court. No signs or banners were displayed, and pickets were not interfered with.

A hearing on this temporary injunction is to be held Monday in the county court house. It names as defendants Louis Hyman, individually and as president of the Joint Action Committee, and the 11 girls on strike and it states that the injunction was taken out upon the advice of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

The injunction granted to the Roth Costumes, Inc., against Louis Hyman, individually and as president of the Joint Action Committee of Locals 2, 9 and 22, and against Sarah Ragoon, Lillie Henndich, Anna Victor, Fanny Barna, Mary Kaplan, Frieda Gross, Ray Niedelman, Lena Lorber, Millie Gross, Roberta Friedman and Anna Weitzman—the girls of the shop who are on strike, prohibits "any acts injurious to the plaintiff and in violation of its rights under its contract with the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, dated February 11, 1925, from using any sign or em-

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

RUSSIAN industrial production is expected to reach 98 per cent of its pre-war high water mark, in the fiscal year 1925-26, according to estimates from Moscow. The interesting information is contained in a long article by Frederic J. Haskin, one of the most authoritive writers on economic questions in the United States. In 1913, Russian industrial production amounted to $3,600,000.

HASKIN declares that the agreement reached between Soviet Russia and France on the debt question, brings universal recognition of the Soviet power immeasurably nearer. This is a hint that the United States, now the only great power, without diplomatic relations with Moscow, is liable to ditch the anti-Soviet policy of the former secretary of state, Charles Evans Hughes. Herbert Hoover has a commission in Russia at this moment collecting facts for the use of the administration.

THE Russian agreement with France provides for the payment of 40 per cent of the pre-war debt on a paper franc basis. In terms of cold cash, this means that the Soviet government agrees to pay France one-tenth of the original debt. Not such a bad bargain for the workers' republic.

RUSSIA owes the United States government only $251,000,000, a trifling sum comparatively. If such a paltry debt were the reason for this country's refusal to recognize the Soviet Union, Washington would have broken off diplomatic relations with France and Italy long ago. More than one consideration prompts the United States to reconsider its intransigeant attitude towards Russia. Needless to state, all the capitalist powers hate the workers and peasants' government just as much as the United States does, but the other powers, were forced by political and economic considerations to shake hands with the devil.

HASKIN'S article, declares that Russia is growing in strength and that the predictions of Soviet collapse were fantastic. In 1921 Russian production was only 17 per cent of the pre-war figure. The writer calls attention to the charges of inefficiency that were then levelled by the bourgeoisie against the Soviet

LABOR FACES GRIM LOT AT BOULDER DAM

Heat and Hardship to Harass Workers

By FRAPIESA.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 30.—Los Angeles boosters have started a vigorous movement for early construction of Boulder Dam. They are strenuously, if not frantically, appealing to the Washington government for action. This is because work on the dam offers a forlorn hope of stopping the slump in which Los Angeles is speedily seeking the level where the city belongs.

Up to a year or so ago the boosters acted warily over Boulder Dam. The Chamber of Commerce and similar organizations were having great success in inducing Easterners to come here to be divested of hard cash.

POPE'S CHURCH COMES OUT FOR COMPANY UNIONS

Subsidiary Organization Throws Off Mask

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 30.—The catholic church, thru its "social action department" of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, has definitely gone on record as opposed to militant unionism and class struggle, and in favor of class collaboration, by an indorsement of the infamous "B. & O. plan" and a propaganda for similar betrayal of the interests of the coal miners by a selling out of the coal miners' right to strike and a policy of "efficiency" in recompense for the checkoff.

This is recognized by all trade union militants as a scheme to combine the forces of the employers and the cor-

GROWERS LOSE PRUNE DOMAIN OF CALIFORNIA

Profits of Industry Is to Fatten Banks

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 30.—The California Prune and Apricot Growers' Association is the latest producers' cooperative organization to be tucked away securely in the interest of the banks.

All the profits of the industry, yielding an average of 125,000 tons of dried prunes annually, for which the consumers pay $30,000,000, go into the swelling surplus of banks. The growers have all the cares and responsibilities of producing the bankers all the profits.

Betrayal Follows Betrayal

From the start the growers were betrayed. Some 12,000 of them, formed the association and elected a general manager who double-crossed them at the outset.

This individual, a moron as to intelligence and a degenerate as to morality, devised a contract which any grower could break at his own sweet will and leave the association in the lurch. He did this because he was himself a leading grower.

The general manager appointed as sales manager his affinity. By discarding the "Mrs." attached to her honored name the lady led growers to

POLAND MUST PAY INDEMNITY TO SOVIET UNION FOR DAMAGES

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WARSAW, Aug. 30.— An agreemnet has been reached between Polish and Soviet Russia delegates liquidating the recent frontier encounters between the boarder guards of the two countries. The agreement requires that Poland pay indemnity for the Soviet border barracks set on fire by Polish raiders and the Soviet government surrender the two Polish officers now held in Russia.

FRANCE SENDING WAR MATERIALS THRU BELGIUM

Comrade Malman Sees Anti-Soviet Plot

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R.—Moscow newspapers are featuring a startling report that France is equipping Poland, Roumania and Lithuania with large supplies of war materials to be used in a concerted attack upon Soviet Russia. The report is based on an interview with Comrade Malman who came here recently from Belgium.

Comrade Malman says he has many proofs that a military attack upon Soviet Russia is threatening. He declared that every day tons of munitions and war supplies were being received in Antwerp harbor and reshipped to countries bordering on Russia.

The central committee of the Belgian transport workers has protested against handling the shipments and has made overtures to the French workers to co-operate with them.

Railway Mail Association Meets.

DENVER.— The 27th annual convention, Railway Mail Association, a union affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, meets in Denver, Sept. 1-5.

The Railway Mail Association reported 17,900 members in 1924, practically double the 1918 figure of 9,400 when the union affiliated and an increase over every year since 1918.

MINERS LEAVING PITS, HARD COAL STRIKE TUESDAY

Walkout Affects 160,000, Railroads Involved

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SCRANTON, Pa., August 30.—(FP)—If peace in the anthracite industry is to come at the 11th hour, signs of it are nowhere to be seen. The strike call issued to the more than 300 locals of hard-coal diggers will probably be in complete effect Sept. 1 and is being obeyed ahead of time in some localities.

A period of exorbitant prices and culm coal such as characterized the 1923 anthracite shutdown is what the operators are playing for, in the opinion of most of the union rank and file. The various conferences and peace moves still going on at the behest of socalled citizen committees are regarded as last minute efforts to improve the operator case with the public.

The operator offer of arbitration was likewise insincere and for publicity purposes, the union men say. The union opposes arbitration because hitherto the arbitration tribunals have been stacked against the workers. The public fails to that spot the huge profits made in anthracite and the abuses in working conditions that the men want to correct just as much as they want a wage raise.

Every group in the heart of anthracite at Scranton sees the strike as in-

LINEN THREAD WORKERS STRIKE AGAINST THEIR SECOND WAGE CUT; PITTSFIELD, MASS., MILLS CLOSED

ANDOVER, Mass., Aug. 30.—The 400 employers of Smith & Dove Mfg. Co.'s local plant are striking against their second 10 per cent wage cut since last fall. Spinners and polishers employed by the linen thread makers began the strike when they were asked to run three "sides" instead of two on top of two wage reductions. Demands for the old wage schedule prior to the last cut and for time and one-fourth for overtime are being made by strikers.

PITTSFIELD MILLS CLOSED BY STRIKES.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., Aug. 30.—Failing to attract workers from the ranks of strikers against 10 per cent wage cuts, the five Pittsfield woolen mills are closed indefinitely. The strikers tabled a request to submit their grievances to arbitration until the employers' attitude could be determined.

SECRETARY OF RED INTERNATIONAL OF LABOR UNIONS ADDRESSES BIG CONGRESS HELD IN PARIS

PARIS, France, August 30.—A. Losovsky, secretary of the Red International of Labor Unions, with headquarters at Moscow, spoke at the congress of the General Confederation of Labor here, urging world trade union unity, and describing the activities of the R. I. L. U. and the Communist International.

Losovsky was refused a passport to enter the country by the Painleve government, which fears the growing influence of the Communists among the workers. The delegate from Moscow managed to reach the congress, however, and spoke while all doors and windows were barred.

At the conclusion of his speech, which lasted an hour, the lights were turned out, and Losovsky made his way out of the hall.

EXPULSION OF LORE BIG SUBJECT BEFORE THE CLOSING SESSION OF THE WORKERS PARTY CONVENTION

Sunday's sessions of the Fourth National Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party opened at 11:30 a. m. By agreement it was decided that the convention would finish its business during the day and adjourn.

Loreism was the question up for discussion and decision. Comrade Alexander Bittelman reported for the Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party. Bittelman sketched the growth of opportunism from the Second Socialist International and its outcropping in the Comintern in the form of a right wing tendency. As the necessity for bolshevization of the parties in the Comintern had grown as the result of the partial stabilization of capitalism so Loreism and similar opportunist tendencies in other parties had arisen.

As soon as the Communist International began to fight against Lore, Lore and his group began to fight against the Communist International. This fight has become more open since the decision of the Communist International on the opportunism of Lore and his followers.

Loreism Opposes Bolshevization.

The first angle of the fight against Loreism is to root out the ideological tendencies that give rise to it. The test of the Lore tendency is that it invariably opposes the re-organization of the party. Loreism exists in all sections of the party. Many comrades who do not know Lore or even recognize the existence of Loreism, follow the tendencies which he expresses. The time has come when we must cut out all these centers of Loreist expression.

When the decision on Lore was handed down by the Comintern, Lore said that he accepted it and that he would appeal to the Communist International. But instead he has begun a fight, both secret and open against the Comintern. Bittelman gave many detailed instances of this.

Urges Relentless Fight.

The party shows itself ripe and ready to conduct a relentless fight against this tendency. This is evidenced by the fact that both of the major party groups have affirmed they are prepared to wage this fight. But to do this, we must not only fight ideologically against Lore—we must remove Lore from the party. We cannot tolerate this center of opposition to bolshevism.

Lore has not only shown his opposition to the C. I. but is preparing the political ground for a split in our party. It is for this reason there will

POLICE AGAIN RAID GARMENT PICKET LINES

Amalgamated Strikers Firm, Busy Season Here

Following the raid on union offices two weeks ago, Chicago police have descended on the picket line maintained by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers around the plants of the International Tailoring Co. and the J. L. Taylor Co.

Two raids netted 35 and 3 picketers charged with violating the conditions set down by Judge Pam in his injunction, which permits peaceful picketing but classes the use of the term scab with violent measures. Some of the arrested men and women were charged with disorderly conduct, some with assault and some were discharged without being booked by the police.

Bail was furnished for all those held and cases were continued for several weeks. The trial of the 16 officials and others comes up in October. The trial of Asst. Manager Sidney Rissman for an alleged Waukegan conspiracy against non-union clothing makers there begins Sept. 2.

An attorney for the International Tailoring Co. explained to reporters that the police raids and detective frameups are simply incidents in the fight of the company to crush the Amalgamated. The concern's refusal to renew its 3-year contract with the union puts it in a class by itself among Chicago large shops.

BRITISH IMPERIALISM MENACE TO WORKERS OF WORLD, SAKLATVALA TELLS NATIONAL MINORITY MEETING

LONDON, Aug. 30.—"The British empire is a menace to the workers of the world," declared Shapurji Saklatvala, Communist member of parliament, in a speech before the conference of the national minority movement in Battersea.

"Any talk about disarmament on the part of Great Britain is merely intended to deceive the United States," continued Saklatvala, "such talk is also intended to throw dust into the eyes of Europe."

The conference passed a resolution congratulating the Chinese workers for their "magnificent stand against international imperialism."

Saklatvala's speech attracted considerable attention. It is in line with the utterances which he has made continuously since his election to the house of commons, and many of which have been seized upon by opposition members as grounds for expelling him from the house, altho there have been no definite steps in this direction.

During the autumn Saklatvala is going to the United States, it is reported, to speak before the sessions of the International Parliamentary Union in Washington. The government may refuse him a passport.

RED ARMY OF SOVIET UNION GAVE PARTICULAR DELIGHT TO MEMBERS OF GERMAN DELEGATION

MOSCOW, (By Mail)—The members of the German delegation, Kelitz, Zimmermann, Stephen, Neef and Langer have addressed a letter to the Trade Union Council of the Soviet Union in which they express their regret for their early departure and their thanks for the hospitality afforded them. They declare: "In Moscow we saw a proletarian reconstruction. In Moscow even more than in Leningrad we were convinced that the bourgeois phrases about an absolutist Soviet regime and about the dictatorship over the proletariat are simply lies. The Red Army in particular gave us delight. The Red Army is not only a weapon of defense for the Soviet Union, it is also a class weapon of the world proletariat. We came to Moscow as proletarian comrades, and we will return as proletarian comrades to fight for the international unity of the proletariat."

URGE ALL LABOR BUILD DEFENSE IN MINNEAPOLIS

Conference Called for Saturday, Sept. 13

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Aug. 30—The provisional local committee for International Labor Defense, has sent out a call to all working class organizations and trade unions, for a conference to establish the local section of the I. L. D.

It is called for "Labor Defense Day" Sunday, Sept. 13, at 10 o'clock in the morning, at Moose Hall, 43 South Fourth St.

The call points out the fact that despite all talk of "Freedom" and "Democracy," there are still 128 men in American prisons for their loyalty to the working class. Besides, injunctions are used in every strike to terrorize and defeat the workers.

The position of the foreign workers is especially intolerable, as they are being jailed and deported in large numbers.

As a result of the decision in the Gitlow case, the syndicalist laws in 35 states have been sanctioned by the supreme court. This puts the American workers' movement in extreme danger. We must fight back. The need of the hour is a unity of all forces for Labor Defense.

The call emphasizes the fact that the I. L. D. will fight for the unconditional release of all class war prisoners; it will give aid to those prisoners and their dependents; it will provide legal defense for all workers persecuted for their activity in the class struggle.

Every labor organization worthy of the name, should send delegates to this united front conference.

Shanghai Sailors in Slavery at Sea, Workers Charge

NEW ORLEANS—Federal authorities investigated charges by the crew of the schooner Jacksonville that two of their number were shanghaied at Galvestion. They base their proof on documentary evidence in the form of a bill from a detective agency for services rendered. The schooner recently sailed from Port Arthur, Tex., to Port au Prince, but when near Southwest Pass at the mouth of the river it grounded, the vessel was salvaged and brot to New Orleans. Supply houses, members of the crew, underwriters and claimants of salvage filed their claims with the U. S. commissioner and among them it is said that a bill from a detective agency was discovered.

Seamen say it is a common thing for them to be shanghaied in Galveston when they refuse to ship on account of conditions, food and wages. The Jacksonville is a 20-year old schooner carrying lumber in the West Indes trade and, it is claimed, put out of Port Arthur in an unseaworthy condition.

Labor Confers With Japanese.

WASHINGTON.— Among the conferences held, very quietly, in Washington recently by Motosada Zumoto, a Tokio editor and publisher who has come to America to promote better relations between the two countries, was one with some 20 officials of the American Federation of Labor and affiliated labor bodies. At this meeting, Zumoto urged that American labor agree to help repeal the ban on Japanese immigration.

government. Russia is also exporting grain and will sell more than half a billion dollars worth this year. The ravages of the famine have been more than made good and the government has set aside a fund of $40,000,000 for distribution during the next three years in dry regions.

SOVIET engineers and scientists are at work on a plan to prevent visitations such as scourged the Volga region in 1921. This is something that was never dreamt of in the days of the czar. The workers and peasants of Russia are becoming more and more convinced that the October revolution was their revolution and the addle-pated syndicalists, in the United States and in other countries who babble against revolutionary politics, had better not dump their intellectual on the workers of Russia who have experienced the difference between a government of capitalists and feudalists for capitalists and feudalists and a government of workers and peasants for workers and peasants.

THE electrical industry in Russia has passed its pre-war volume already and expects a 72 per cent increase over this figure next year. A rural credit scheme for the peasants with a budget of $167,000,000 has been set aside. All these facts make interesting and welcome reading to the workers of the world. How often have we heard the petrified dogmatists of the socialist labor party and the socialists declare tht Soviet Russia would not be able to exist, because the Bolsheviki did not wait for the new social order to crawl peacefully out of the shell of the old.

AN article calculated to justify the S. L. P. predictions appeared in the Weekly People a few weeks back. It was written by a New York correspondent in Moscow, who writes as fairly as a capitalist reporter can be expected to write about such historic events as the Russian revolution. It saw in the various adjustments made by the Soviet government, in industry and commerce a further retreat to war capitalism. "Ha, ha, didn't I tell you so," yaps the editor of the Weekly People. Socialism cannot be established in all its pristine purity until the capitalism system is fully developed in every part of the world, etc. What bunk?

ALL those so-called revolutionary organizations that disagreed with the Russian workers and peasants over the methods they used in seizing power and holding on to it, have gradually become bitter enemies of the Soviet Union. Better have the exploited masses of Russia remain forever in slavery, than that they should give a practical refutation of the futile policies of the petrified dogmastists, who have debauched Marxism under the banner of Marx. The Russian Communists have proven that the workers and peasants can govern. This used to be a moted subject among the intellectuals.

THE workers will be glad to learn that their comrades in the Soviet Union are making a good job of the business of running over one-sixth of the earth's surface. This is the best kind of propaganda for the social revolution. We may well ask this question. If the workers and peasants in such an industrially backward country as Russia could make so much progress despite unheard of difficulties, what could not be done by the workers of highly industrially developed countries, like Germany, England, France and the United States? The workers need lose no sleep worrying about how they shall run industry after they get rid of capitalist rule.

HEAD OF LETTER CARRIERS' UNION PRAISES BOSSES

Looks Like Tool of the Republican Machine

WASHINGTON.— Preparatory to the 25th convention of the National Association of Letter Carriers, which is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor and will meet in Detroit Sept. 7-12, President Edward J. Gainor has published in The Postal Record his annual report, in which he emphasizes the trade union value of fraternalism and a conciliatory attitude toward the officials of the government. He is plainly smitten with the class collaboration bug.

Gainor recites the mistakes of former Postmaster General Burleson, who for eight years sought to destroy the unions of the postoffice workers. He praises the conciliatory policy brought in by Will Hays and to a less degree maintained by Postmaster New. Despite the fact that the salary increase won by the postoffice workers thru their unions last year was secured over the stubborn resistance of this same New, Gainor finds him "an executive of large affairs, conservative and kindly in character," and announces that New will address the convention.

Report Cargo Carried by the Soviet Fleet During Last 3 Months

SHANGHAI, Aug. 30—(Tass)— The Shanghai agency of the Volunteer Fleet of the U. S. S. R. reports that six steamers of the Volunteer Fleet made eleven travels, with an aggregate cargo turnover of 20,227 tons, during the last three months of 1924 and January, 1925. Of the said figure, the exports account for 10,481 tons, and the imports—for 9,746 tons of various goods.

The main items of exports were coal, timber, fish, and others. As for imports from Shanghai to Vladivostok they consisted, during the period under review, mainly of tea, fats (food and technical), jute, bags, sugar, flour, etc.

As will be seen, this Vladivostok-Shanghai trade from October, 1924 to February, 1925, showed a tendency to increase, as compared to the preceding period, the increase in the Soviet export branch being slightly more noticebale than the imports. What with this fact and other rather favorable conditions of work during [illegible] tioned period, the Volunteer Fleet was able to bring down nearly 10 per cent the rather high Shanghai-Vladivostok freight tariffs.

Steck Leads Brookhart.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30—The Iowa senatorial recount still showed Dan F. Steck, democrat, in the lead, altho his majority over Senator Smith W. Brookhart, republican, was about 3,000 less than it was.

Out of 77 counties, Steck had 310,917, and Brookhart, 303,192. There were 7,972 contested ballots of which 5,907 were for Brookhart and 2,016 for Steck.

ARREST PICKTS IN EXPRESS EN'S STRIKE N. Y.

Try to Enlist R d Caps as Scab

NEW YORK, Aug. 30 Four striking express pickets we arrested when they attempted t persuade a fellow employe of Wes tt Express Co. not to go back to w k. Robert Fitzgerald, Thomas Clar John Larkin and James Leach are t men sent to the workhouse for 10 days. Picketing of Grand Central erminal and Penn station continue. Red cap porters who are bein forced to handle trunks in the dep s complain of the hard work and d y that they are getting big tips. hen taxis—yellow taxis—bring in t nks without passengers, who is t ere to tip the porter, the red caps ask.

Health of Workers Suffers.

Phil O'Brien, president Amalgamated Taxi Association, composed of independent owners and drivers, states that he is absolutely opposed to the practice of carrying trunks on taxicabs.

"The majority of salesmen have trunks as big as a car and they dodge the [illegible] charges of $1 to $1.50 per trunk to pile sometimes two or three trunks on a taxi, saving $2 or $3. The taxi drivers and independent owners do not want to scab on "the expressmen and they don't want to wreck their health doing the heavy trunk work," O'Brien says. "It is about time something was done in this matter" of trunk carrying by taxis. Many of the expressmen are suffering from ruptures or strains from their difficult work.

Fight 10-hour Day.

Independent taxi drivers assert that some yellow cab men are defying orders to stay close to railroad stations for strikebreaking work and are cruising for passengers to dodge the heavy trunk work. Yellow cab inspectors are at the terminals to facilitate baggage transportation in taxis to replace striking expressmen. Expressmen make only $34 a week, 10 hours a day, if they are chauffeurs, $30 if helpers and $28 if clerks. The men ask an 8-hour day.

Over 200 porters joined and a campaign to secure the total 2,000 of the metropolitan district and 12,000 of the whole country will be launched. More pay and better working conditions are to be the porters' demands and the abolition of the Pullman company union which does not represent the workers' interests. A 50 per cent increase in pay for 240 hours a month work will be asked when the organization has grown to sufficient strength to make its demands felt. Porters make from $60 to $90 maximum a month with tips growing smaller.

Fatal Prison Riot in California.

SAN QUENTIN, Cal.—Another riot has broken loose in San Quentin prison under the regime of Warden Frank Smith. This time one guard is dead and one fatally wounded, and six men who tried to escape will be held for murder. "We hope to hang them all," announce the authorities. There are rumors that a general prison break was planned, and that whole set of keys lost by a guard were found by a prisoner. Constant changes have been made in the prison personnel since Warden Smith's entrance, mostly on political grounds. Nearly a hundred California industrial and political prisoners are still in San Quentin, subject to constant danger of life.

Plan Super-Warplanes to Make Two Hops to the Chinese Republic

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, America's jingoes wax enthusiastic over a super-airplane that can make Peking in two hops. Colonel William Mitchell, former head of the air service, makes the announcement that is intended to spur the pay-triotic to make demands upon congress to inaugurate a "gigantic air building plan now," with emphasis on the "now."

No mention is made of course, of the possibility of using this super-airplane for passenger, mail or freight service between the United States and China. Not at all. This is never considered. It is not intended that the space eliminating airplane should help cement peaceable relations between the North American and the Asiatic republics. Spokesmen for U. S. greed hail the super-airplane as an instrument of war. A ton of explosives carried 113 miles an hour for 60 hours, with a single stop at Nome, Alaska, is to be the gift of a murderer that American airmen, ignorant instruments of Wall Street imperialism, are to carry to the gates of the Chinese republic.

It will be noticed that Tokio, capital city of Japan, is forgotten for the moment. Capitalism still lives in Japan. Tokio and Washington can unite in face of the danger that arises from restless China, defying the imperialisms not only of these two rivals in the Pacific, but of all the great imperialisms that have been a unit in seeking to crush her completely. The black flag of the profit system flies over Japan while the red dawn breaks slowly, painfully over China. The pirate flag of Wall Street thus finds its blood brother in the emblem of the mikados, while differences, hitherto magnified, are allowed to be forgotten.

• • • •

The desperate efforts that are being made to raise the United States to the first air power in the world, should convince all workers and poor farmers that Washington leaves no stone unturned to be ready for the next war. There may be differences of opinion as to the efficacy of the battleship, the value of the submarine, the role of poison gas, the changing uses of infantry and cavalry, not to mention the posibilities of the airplane, but these differences fade in the common plan to make the United States the world's greatest military power to advance its imperialistic aggressions.

America's workers and poor farmers have no quarrel with the workers and poor farmers of other countries. That is the slogan that American labor must raise against the military program of Morgan's government. American labor should develop the closest bonds of sympathy and solidarity with the struggling masses of China. Much progress has been made in this direction.

It is announced that Rear Admiral W. S. Sims, a battleship enthusiast, has been won over to a realization that the American dollar needs an airfleet to advance its cause. But this does not mean that he will turn against the battleship. In the words of the Chicago Tribune, "The United States should never be found to have guessed wrong or to have been outguessed. The country is rich enough to make its naval defense complete, with a fleet able to take care of itself under, on and above the water."

Similarly the workers and poor farmers cannot afford to guess wrong, to be led astray by the idea that their interests can be advanced by any capitalist war. Only in fighting the wars of the capitalist class, ending with the overthrew of the capitalist system itself, can the victory of the workers be won. That is not a guessing proposition. It is a fact that all workers and poor farmers should know, and act accordingly.

Graveyard Workers, 50 to 75 Years Old, Face Bad Conditions

Fortyfive cents an hour is the prevailing wage for cemetary workers thruout the country in the best graveyards. Employment is irregular with extensive layoffs in August and September and with hours when at work ranging from 9 a day to 12 and more.

Not a hopeful union organizer but an official of the association of American cemetery superintendents, meeting in 39th annual convention in Chicago, is authority for the above funeral facts. Their character as exploiters of unorganized labor will remain unaltered so far as the superintendents are concerned but from the side of the American Federation of Labor comes an effort to improve working conditions by organizing cemetery labor into a federal union.

The superintendents admit that they do not permit unionization and that they keep their working force docile by constant threats of layoffs and dismissals. Since most of the workers are from 50 to 75 years old dismissal from their job would be serious. Yet the superintendents complain that young men are not attracted to the work.

China Appals Congressman

WASHINGTON, — (FP) — Rep. Wingo of Arkansas, returning from a trip to China, says that death is the only thing cheaper than labor in that country, and that conditions under which the teeming millions live are appalling.

Even from the safe distance of the deck of an army transport, the democratic Solon was impressed by the danger of a political volcano breaking out in China at any moment. He found hatred of all foreigners, but especially against British and Japanese.

SOVIET RUSSIA 70 PCT. AHEAD OF GAME THIS YEAR

Exports Furs, Bristles, and Raw Skins

MOSCOW, July 22—(By Mail)—During the first half of the current economic year, 1924-25, the state trading bureau exported 18,600,000 gold roubles' worth of fur, bristle and raw skin products, exceeding the exports for the same period of the preceding year by 70 per cent and almost equalling the total of 19,200,000 gold roubles for the entire previous fiscal year.

These exports were distributed as follows, according to products and countries: Furs—14,300,000 gold roubles, of which 53.6 per cent went to America, 26.8 per cent to England, 14.2 per cent to Germany and 5.4 per cent to France; bristles—2,900,000 gold roubles, of which 45.5 went to Germany, 44.4 to England, 4.1 per cent to France and six per cent to other countries; horse-hair—558,000 gold roubles, of which 60 per cent went to Germany, 24 per cent to England, and 16 per cent to other countries; raw skins—841,000 gold roubles, of which 84 per cent went to Germany, seven per cent to England, and nine per cent to other countries; and other goods of this class—30,000 gold roubles, of which 83.7 per cent went to Germany.

Fur exports thus constituted 76.6 per cent of the aggregate of fur, bristle, raw skin products shipped out by the state trading bureau during the current season as against 90.1 per cent last year; bristles constituted 15.8 per cent against three per cent last year; raw skins 4.5 per cent as against 3.1 per cent; and horse-hair 2.9 per cent as against 3.8 per cent.

Sales on foreign markets totaled 18,200,000 gold roubles, including 15,000,000 gold roubles' worth of furs, which surpasses the previous year's figure by 150 per cent. The principal markets are: America, 44.5 per cent; Germany, 27.4 per cent, and England, 26.7 per cent.

POLICE REVOKE TAXI LICENCES BY THE DOZEN

Hylan Hard on N. Y. Union Drivers

(From a Worker Correspondent.)

NEW YORK CITY, Aug. 30.—The police department once more is active in rounding up taxi cab drivers who are seen to be smoking, while driving passengers around the town.

The powers they now assume, a person would think that they were in Poland instead of United States. If a driver is unfortunate enough to be caught smoking by one of the Hack Squad, a summons is given to him and his license taken away from him then and there on the street. The complaining officer acts not only in the capacity of a peace officer, but as judge and jury as well.

For a taxi driver to protest is to have his license revoked, as happened to one driver by the name of Turetsky. Turetsky wrote a letter to hizzoner Mayor Hylan complaining against the action of the deputy police commissioner suspending his license and he was told to go back to the office of the commissioner. He went there and was told that his license was revoked and given a warning that the next time he had any complaints not to go over the head of the Commish.

The Amalgamated Taxi Association has filed a protest to the mayor and the police commissioner, and if they still insist upon using unlawful methods in the licensing of taxi drivers and stopping the men on the streets, the case will have to go into the courts.

Hammer and Sickle Picnic in Cleveland Made Tremendous Hit

By N. ROSBOY.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Aug. 30.—Local Cleveland and District No. 6 of the Workers Party jointly took part in a Hammer and Sickle Picnic at Avondale Gardens just outside the city limits of Cleveland. The picnic at the same time was made the occasion for an anti-imperialist demonstration since the day marked the anniversary of the beginning of the world war. Comrade John Brahtin, a member of the local executive committee of Cleveland was the main speaker and pointed out the various methods employed by the capitalist governments of the world to fool the workers into fighting for the profit seeking masters.

The affair was by far the most successful arranged in this district in a long time. Not only was it a financial success, but a friendly spirit prevailed among all the comrades who read the bulletins from the Workers Party convention in session at Chicago with the greatest interest. A telegram of greetings and hope for unity was sent to the convention by the comrades gathered on the picnic grounds.

The Young Workers League was particularly active in this picnic, relieving the party committee of many of the tasks which were necessary for the arrangement of the outing. A complete card of sports and games was arranged and run off with a snap which was commented on favorably by those present.

The big feature of the afternoon was of course the raffle of the various articles. Thirty-six prizes were awarded, starting with a Ford auto, radio set and finally ending with subscriptions to the DAILY WORKER.

Dancing and singing by the German Singing Society completed the day's program. "The best picnic in the party's history," was the comment heard from all sides as the day's events came to a close.

SPEECH ON TRADE UNION WORK BY "BILL" DUNNE, DELIVERED AT CONVENTION OF WORKERS PARTY

IT is not necessary for me to reply to Comrdae Ruthenberg—the Communist International has already replied to Comrade Ruthenberf relative to his scheme of the Communist Party of America becoming a trade union organising body. It said, to foster the belief that Communists will be able to under the capitalist system, to devise mass labor organizations other than the trade unions, is to abandon the realm of reality.

Furthermore, very important for us in this discussion is the following sentence: "Deviations on the question of work of Communists in trade unions conceal the greatest dangers for the work of really Bolshevizing our party." Not one of the greatest dangers, but the greatest danger. I think if we approach the discussion of our mistakes and deviations in a narrow factional spirit, in the trade union field, we will miss much of the benefits to be derived from a review of those errors.

IN the trade unions these opportunistic and semi-opportunistic deviations develop in the largest number of instances because the trade union membership is politically unconscious. The bureaucracy is powerful and wages a relentless struggle against us. Our party is weak and our tactics therefore have to be extremely flexible.

It is no wonder that errors have been committed. Tactical errors. Basic errors on policy are something else and there is little excuse at this day and date for basic errors of policy in our trade union work, and we want to deal with one example of basic error in policy, typical, I think, of all the errors that we have committed.

The steel industry is of importance as a basis for our work, but we have in the steel industry no Communist fraction. In the steel union no Communist fraction, unless it has been organized in the last few weeks. And why do I take the steel industry as an example? Because in the work of our comrades there it shows the three fundamental errors from which flow most of the rest.

First, the resistance amounting to refusal in some instances, to organise Communist fractions. Two, putting the union ahead of the party, believing that the union discipline supercedes the discipline of party and fraction. Three allowing non-party elements to dictate our Communist policy, the policy of our Communist group within the industry and the union.

All these errors have been committed by our comrades in the steel union and the steel industry.

SOME time gao Comrades Wagenknecht, Swabeck and myself, under instructions of the Central Executive Committee, held a fraction meeting in Youngstown, Ohio, and the debate that took place at that meeting, I think would have been very valuable could it have been read to this convention during the debate. What developed there?

First, the comrades were very indignant because the representatives of the Central Executive Committee took charge of the meeting. Two, Comrade White, who is the leader in the steel union and the steel industry for our party, because I outlined the party policy, accused me of making a factional speech. In other words, the correct Communist policy and the advocacy of it becomes in the mind of Comrade White a campaign speech for the majority of the Central Committee.

Then some interesting documents were produced, and I would have you know, comrades, that we have struggled a long time to get a program in the steel industry. Finally we got one. And when we were drafting this program or attempting to draft it, this was the dominant note among the comrades there in their discussion: "What does the Central Executive know about our steel unions? What do they know about our problems? What do these people in Chicago know about the steel unions? We steel workers should draft our own program."

Comrade White even wrote a letter to the district organizer of Ohio, in which he said : "What in hell right have you got to send my program to the popes in Chicago?"

ON the third symptom of opportunistic deviation. The failure to fight for our minimum program in the caucus of the progressives. Our comrades in Youngstown and Warren, and these other cities under Comrade White's leadership, had never waged a struggle for the minimum program of the party.

The consequence, the inevitable consequence, of this opportunist policy, the failure to organize fractions, the misunderstanding of the role of our party, surrender to the progressive elements, so called, has been a complete demoralization of the work in that direction.

NOW Comrade White stated after this fraction meeting that he had received the best lesson in Communism that he had ever gotten in his life, and he showed no resistance after this meeting to the party, but I am afraid that since then Comrade White was successfully vaccinated against our correct policy by Comrade Lovestone and Benjamin—Comrade Lovestone administering the anesthetic and Comrade Benjamin injecting the serum. Up to this day this fraction does not function and I am afraid also, Comrade White, that you came to this convention with the support of the Finnish comrades in Warren on the basis of no fraction, no trade union work, and the eradication of the authority of the leading comrades of the committee.

MACHINISTS OF NEWARK SPURN JOHNSTON 'DICK'

Fechner Slinks from Hall, Anderson Speaks

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 30.— At a meeting held by Lodge 340, International Association of Machinists at Newark, the recall initiated by Lodge 1054 was discussed. The lodge making arrangements with both sides to send representatives, had called the meeting for that purpose.

Both sides responded. Lodge 1054 not being able to send a man from the ranks had chosen J. Anderson and the Grand Lodge sent G. E. Board Member Fechner.

After the special executive opening of the meeting, an objection was made to granting J. Anderson the floor, as he has been suspended. After a wild discussion it was finally decided to adjorn the meeting in order to give J. Anderson a chance to speak. The motion was carried overwhelmingly and J. Anderson took the platform.

Fechner seeing that he could not face J. Anderson openly, finally excused himself and left the hall in a cowardly manner.

In spite of the pleading of many members that he should stay, he left. J. Anderson after speaking for about an hour and giving enough documentary evidence, made a good impression and the recall was indorsed with 46 for the recall and 16 against.

The above lodge voted for Johnstone at the last election.

CENTRAL TRADE UNION COUNCIL OF SOVIET UNION IN WELCOME TO FINNISH LABOR DELEGATION

MOSCOW.—(By Mail.)—In connection with the declaration of the Finnish social democrats according to which the Soviet Unions had failed to invite the Finnish unions to Soviet Russia, the Soviet Trade Union Council declares: "The Soviet Trade Union Council received a letter from the Trade Union Association of Finland, in which the wish was expressed to send a delegation for the purpose of studying the situation of the working class in the Soviet Union. On the 20th of July the Central Trade Union Council of the Soviet Union addressed the Finnish Trade Union Association and welcomed the journey of a delegation of the Finnish proletariat to the Soviet Union."

Max Bedacht Speaks.

Comrade Max Bedacht said that Bolshevisation means the building of a party of action. As long as the main business of the party was limited to theory, there was no especial necessity to fight against a wrong theory because there was no resultant action. The process of Bolshevization means revolutionary action. The reason for a resistance to Bolshevization is an opportunist resistance to action.

It was when the American party was called upon to mobilize for action that Loreism began to take dangerous and definite form. When it was a matter of theory in previous times, Lore was the theoretician of the opposition to action. He is thus striving to divide the party and create an organization close to the social-democracy.

Lore opposed the maneuver with LaFollette, which however was really never proposed. He opposed it upon a basis of opposition to maneuvers in principle.

Loreism Dug Up Old Theories.

He and his group have dug up old theories from the 60's and 70's always using a theory to oppose action.

Loreism expresses the vacillation of the petit-bourgeoisie. This vacillation arises from their economic interests, which are neither in accord with imperialist-capitalism nor with the proletarian revolution. They constantly vacillate between the two—at the same time denying that there is a petit-bourgeois class. Especially do they deny that the petit-bourgeoisie is represented in the proletarian revolutionary movement. The Loreites have a theory that there are only two classes and this causes them to oppose maneuvers aimed at exploiting the differences existing within the capitalist class.

Only a few workers understand the theory of revolution. It is only be experience in the struggle that they learn. Bolshevism takes the view therefore that action results in education. But when this is proposed the Loreites say "no action but education," thereby opposing theory to action.

Bedacht then spoke in detail about Lore deviations and contined: Before us there is first the necessity for a firm fight against all Lore tendencies within our party. Second, we must remove from the party the centers of the Lore tendency. Bedacht then asked for a unanimous resolution by the convention for the expulsion of Lore from the party.

Juliet Stuart Poyntz of New York took the floor to defend herself against the resolution of censure proposed unanimusly by the appeals committee. Among those who followed her were Browder, Weinstone and Cannon.

The delegates to the fourth convention of the Workers (Communist) Party gathered at Waldheim cemetery on Saturday, where revolutionary funeral services were given at the interment of "Little Bill" Dunne, seven year son of Comrades William F. and Marguerite Dunne. "Little Bill," who was a scrappy little member of the Junior Section of the Young Workers League, met death Thursday night in an automobile accident.

All delegates and many local comrades gathered at the cemetery for the services. Several dozen members of the Junior section of the Y. W. L. of which "Little Bill" was a member stood about the grave. The last words were spoken by Comrade Norman Tallentyre. They were an appeal to the Juniors to remember their little comrade and to carry on in the movement as little "Billie Dunne," would have had he been allowed to live. Everyone joined in singing the "International" and the Juniors sang several of their songs in which, in other days, "Little Bill" had joined.

Extensive Discussions

All day Friday the convention devoted to extended discussion on the question of industrial and trade union work. Among those speaking were Comrades Kjar, Jakira, Baker, Tallentire, Levine, White, Swabeck, Ballam, Bell, Wicks, Aronberg, Lifshitz, Overgaard, Bimba, Krumbein, Toohey, Manley, Bolch, Karath, Amter, Reid, Ruthenberg, Dunne and Lovestone, after which Foster summed up the discussion and the parity commission resolution on trade union work was carried unanimously.

Comrade Bittelman, reporting for the credentials and appeals committee then reported for that body. The appeal of the Armenian comrades for rectification of affairs in the federation was unimously referred to the incoming C. E. C. The appeal of Comrade Poyntz was dealt with by a unanimous resolution declaring that Poyntz had followed the line of Loreism and demanding that she cease such policy and abide by the policy of the Communist International. This resolution was, however, referred, without dissent, to come up under the resolution on the liquidation of Loreism.

Disciplinary Appeals

The appeal of Comrade Candela was settled by a unanimous resolution providing that the convention confirm the action of the Philadelphia convention of the Italian Federation and the subsequent action of the C. E. C., and authorizes the new C. E. C. to take up the matter for further action when necessary. This was carried without dissent, as was a unanimous resolution approving the action of the Philadelphia convention of the Italian Federation and the action of the C. E. C. in the matter of Presi.

The convention approved the unanimous recommendation of the committee that the action of the C. E. C. in expelling five members of the Italian ederation for attempting to split the federation and refusing to carry out the decisions of the Philadelphia convention, be approved. The action of the C. E. C. in the matter of Comrade Georgian of Minneapolis was approved.

As to Comrade Brahdy's appeal for a seat on the New York district executive, the convention approved the unanimous motion that since Brahdy had not been elected by any body and represented no one but himself, his desires could not be gratified. The complaint as to non-publication of an article by Comrade Belaikis of Detroit was answered by the statement that it came too late to get into the discussion.

Divide On Seating Fisher

The credential committee had divided on the seating of Comrade Fisher. The majority moved to approve seating, the minority amended to unseat. The amendment lost 21 to 40 and the motion carried 40 to 21. Comrade Chriss was seated as fraternal delegate from the Greek paper.

Friday evening the convention held a short executive session and did not convene, owing to group conferences and the funeral of "Little Bill" Dunne, until Sunday morning.

GERMAN SOCIAL-DEMOCRATIC TOILERS DECIDE THEY CANNOT WIN POWER FOR THE WORKING CLASS PEACEFULLY

MOSCOW—(By Mail)—The group of the German delegation in the textile district Ivanov Vosnesensk took part in a session of the Trade Union Council and the chairman of the group, the social-democrat Offerhagen, declared:

"We are convinced that the situation of the Russian workers is considerably better than the situation of the German workers, altho the housing conditions are better in Germany. Our group consists almost exclusively of social-democrats and we were of the opinion that the seizure of power was possible in a peaceful manner. I am now convinced that this opinion is incorrect. The proletariat can only obtain its freedom after the seizure of power. In the beginning we spoke cautiously, but now we declare unanimously that we reject completely what the Vorwaerts writes about the Soviet Union. This is all lies and slanders. We are no longer social-democrats, we are Marxists. I am startled that Kautsky can write that it is worse in Soviet Russia than it was under the czar. When we go home we will stand for the ideas of Marx and his great follower, Lenin, for the world revolution."

The group of the German delegation in Rostov studied the situation of the women and declared that in Germany equal rights for women existed only on paper. In the Soviet Union, however, they are in actual fact. The women in Soviet Russia play a prominent role in the political and economic life of the Soviet Union, and they enjoy equal rights upon all fields, and this explains the support of the Soviet power by the women.

Sigman Regime Backs Bosses.

The injunction granted to the Roth Costumes, Inc., against Louis Hyman and the 11 girls of the Roth shop, states that:

The International told them they had the right to discharge every worker who left work for the stoppage;

That the union is in sympathy with the firm; and representatives of the union not only warned them against this outlaw combination and their doings, but supplied them with workers in place of those whom the firm discharged.

The position of the International is to discharge every worker who refused to work and the firm is doing it. The International also advised the firm to get the restraining order from the court against the pickets.

Italian Dressmakers' Act.

A membership meeting of Local 89, the Italian dressmakers' local, which numbers over 6,000, was held at 8 W. 21st street. The meeting passed unanimously a resolution demanding that the Joint Board reinstate the expelled officials of Locals 2, 9 and 22, and that the Joint Board be reorganized on some system of proportional representation.

Miners Already Quit Coal Pits with Big Strike Set for Tuesday

evitable—miners, operators, merchants. W. W. Inglis, chairman operator scale committee, when seen at his office in Scranton was more belligerent than at any time since negotiations began. The miners at their homes are quietly but speedily preparing for the coming tussle. Nobody in Scranton thinks it will be anything but a showdown. Nobody has thought differently since the operator and union scale committee first met this summer.

Close 828 Mines

The strike will close down 828 mines operated nominally by 133 coal companies. At least 158,000 men will be involved. The state of Pennsylvania estimates over 160,000. They will quit as a unit except 10,000 maintenance men left by agreement to prevent floodings and cave ins.

Coal operations are located principally in Lackawanna, Luzerne and Schuylkill counties, the center of the anthracite veins. They are largely controlled by less than a dozen companies closely interlocked and owned by the coal-carrying railroads. This "company coal" comprises 80 per cent of the total tonnage. The remaining 20 per cent is turned out by socalled independents. The hard-coal miners thus are pitting their strong organization against a railroad coal monopoly as rich and powerful and entrenched as any monopoly in America.

Vagrancy Club Recruits Workers.

SHREVEPORT, La., Aug. 30.—Starvation wages have kept workers from taking the 10,000 jobs open to cotton pickers in the Shreveport districts. Police in collusion with the cotton growers are rounding up all able-bodied men both white and black. If they cannot prove they are employed they are herded to the cotton fields on threats of arrests for vagrancy and hard labor sentences.

HORGIN AND SLANSKY, SOVIET TRADE HEADS, DROWN IN N. Y. LAKE

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.— Isaiah Hoorgin and George Slansky, representatives of Amtorg, the Soviet commercial agency in the United States, were drowned yesterday in Long Lake, N.Y., it was learned last night by friends here. No details of the drowning were received.

Hoorgin was connected with the Soviet government's purchasing department in New York. Slansky, who was connected with the woolen department of the Soviet, arrived in New York from Europe only a few days ago and had gone with Hoorgin to Long Lake for a rest.

Hoorgin was president of the Amtorg Trading Company, which represents the Soviet Commercial Import and Export Bureau and numerous trade organizations in Russia, the Caucasus and the Ukraine.

The Amtorg Trading Company in New York resulted from a consolidation of the Arcos-America, Inc., and the Products Exchange Corporation. It was incorporated in May, 1924, with an authorized capital of $1,000,000. The company placed orders that year in this country for $10,000,000 worth of machinery for delivery in Russia.

IZVESTIA WARNS WORKERS ARE WITH U. S. S. R.

MOSCOW.— (Tass) — Commenting upon the news reported by the Lupta, leading Bucarest organ, to the effect that military circles in Roumania attach much importance to the realization of such a united front against the Union of Soviet socialist republics as would stretch from the shores of Murmansk to the Bosphrous and would embrace the Baltic states, Poland and the little entente, and that the present moment to be highly propitious for organizing this front, the Izvestia ironically remarks that the Roumanian paper is itself compelled, apparently much to its regret, to admit that however favorable the moment, the materialization of the proposed plan is no easy matter just now. The reason why is quite frankly pointed out by the Lupta, which says that forced delay in the general onslaught on the Union of Soviet Republics is due merely to the necessity for the imperialists to perfect their nefarious preparations.

The toilers of the world, the Izvestia declares, are perfectly clear as to which side is the attacking one, for not even in 1914 were war preparations made with such perfect cynicism. In conclusion, the Moscow paper sounds a warning to all those imperialistic adventurers lest in their blind hatred of the Soviet Republics they forget the fact that the toiling masses of all countries are no longer blind and unconscious as they may have been ten years ago.

Odessa Will Make Them Pay

MOSCOW—Interesting reports have lately been forthcoming from the provinces of Odessa, which, having suffered the most from foreign intervention, is preparing a heavy bill to the interventionists. Thus, it is learned that some 40,000 or more claims, totalling over 130,000,000 rubles, were considered by the first of this July; among the cases filed in are 5,715 murders, over 4,000 bad injuries and 150 cases of rape.

Strikes Continue Against Hotels

SAN FRANSCISCO.—The srike of union waiters against the fashionable St. Francis and Palace hotels continues, the strikers picketing the employe entrances but not interfering with the partial staff of strikebreakers recruited by the hotels. The waiters point out that when they asked for a raise last year the hotel managers asked him to wait. The men waited, only to have their demands refused.

HIT OCCUPATIONAL DISEASE LAW IN N. Y. AS FARCE

Blanket Law Is Urged to Cover All Ills

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Aug. 30.— Support of a blanket occupational disease law will be one of the main points in the New York state federation of labor's legislative program, by decision of the Syracuse convention. Three other amendments will be stressed: A state insurance fund to supplant all private insurance for compensation, increase of workmen's compensation from $20 to $30, and elimination of the $3,500 limit for partial disability.

"The occupational diseases law is a farce," Chairman Thomas J. Curtis of the compensation committee told the convention. "A brakeman who sustains an injury known as drop wrist is powerless to collect a nickel. The painter poisoned by a chemical other than white lead is out of luck. It is high time for organized labor to become interested in the furtherance of a sensible and fair widow pension law."

New York's workmen's compensation law covers only 19 diseases. It does not include benzol poisoning, altho 57 trades use the poison. One authority lists 620 hazardous occupations, so that the difficulty of continually amending the law to cover additional diseases is evident.

Poisons, dusts other than poisons, variations in temperature, compressed air, dampness, too much or too little light, heat, overwork of certain muscles, pressure, skin irritations—all such causes of industrial disease should be covered by the blanket amendment, Burnham argued.

Opposition to censorship of science teaching and specific support of evolution were passed by the convention.

A. F. of L. Wants to Discourage Mexican Labor Coming to U. S.

WASHINGTON—Discussion of possible means of checking the illegal entry and excessive legal immigration of Mexican laborers into the United States was taken up, in conference in the executive council room at American Federation of Labor headquarters in Washington, Aug. 27, by Luis N. Morones, minister of labor, commerce and industry in the Mexican cabinet, with spokesmen of the Mexican Regional Federation of Labor, the A. F. of L. and the Pan-American Federation of Labor.

President Green, Secretary Morrison and Vice-President Woll, with Organizer Clemente N. Idar, represented the A. F. of L. Santiago Iglesias, Spanish inaguage secretary of the P. A. F. of L., spoke for that organization. General Secretary Eduardo Monedo, Robert Haberman and Alberto Mendez of Orizaba spoke for the Mexican workers. There were also present James O'Connell, president of the metal trades department; and John J. Manning, president of the union label trades department; Geo. W. Perkins, chairman of the international relations committee, and C. L. Baine of the Boot and Shoe Workers, for the A. F. of L. Canuto Vargas, labor attache of the Mexican embassy, was in attendance.

One proposal under discussion, it was unofficially reported, was a joint appeal to the two governments concerned, to increase their vigilance against smugging of Mexican peons across the border. Another plan contemplated action by the trade union bodies in the border states and nationally, to discourage the movement of Mexican labor into the United States.

DIG FOR BODIES OF NINE IRON MINERS IN TENN.

Killed in Terrific Blast Last Week

ROCKWOOD, Tenn., Aug. 30—Daily tests by the United States bureau of mines which has been in progress for the past week, established new hopes that the Roan Iron company's mine could be entered shortly and the bodies of the nine imprisoned miners who were sealed up in an entry following a terrific blast and fire which occurred about six weeks ago, would be brot to the surface.

The last test made by the bureau showed approximately 5,000,000 cubic feet of gas pressure and the fire which followed the fatal blast about burned out.

It is believed by mine experts that recognition of the bodies will be impossible, however, unless identification can be established thru some metal articles which the men may have had on their person at the time of the blast.

CHARGE HYLAN FRIENDLY WITH KU KLUX KLAN

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—Mayor John F. Hylan's denial that he had any relations with the representatives of the ku klux klan during the 1924 democratic convention, as charged by Gov. Al Smith, was the high light of the development in the fight for the democratic mayoralty nomination here. Mayor Hylan declared Smith's charges grew out of a visit he paid to William G. McAdoo, at the latter's request, at which he rejected McAdoo's offer of a vice presidential nomination for his support. The mayor declared he supported Smith to the end of the convention.

Gov. Smith, extending his campaign in behalf of State Senator Walker to Queens, following his invasion of Brooklyn, repeated his charges that Mayor Hylan is unfit to be mayor.

Germany Replies to France.

PARIS, Aug. 30—Germany's reply to the French note upon the proposed security pact was handed to foreign minister Briand this afternoon by Ambassador Von Hoesch. It is understood that the reply makes probable the holding of an early conference to attempt to draw up a pact.

BAKERY BOSS PAYS INSIGNIFICANT FINE FOR WORKING 15-YEAR-OLD BOY UP TO 15 HOURS PER DAY

LANSING, Mich.—(FP)—An insignificant fine is the only penalty imposed on the Michigan Baking Co., for working a 15-year-old boy for periods up to 15 hours a day. The state prohibits employers from keeping boys under 18 at work more than 10 hours a day or 54 hours a week or between six p. m. and six a. m. The company kept the boy at work not only from 10 to 15 hours daily but up to two in the morning on occasion. Convicted after a plea of not guilty, John H. Brockhaus, the proprietor, was assessed $25 and costs or 20 days in jail. The law permits fines up to $100 or jail up to 90 days or both.

BRITAIN GRANTS NEARING VISA TO ENTER COUNTRY

Lecturer Will Attend Trade Union Congress

By ESTHER LOWELL.
Federated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—(FP)—American labor should particualrly watch the movement for world trade union unity, Scott Nearing, Federated Press correspondent and teacher, states upon his departure for England where he will attend the British Trades Union Congress. Britain finally granted Nearing's visa and that of Mrs. Nearing but for three weeks only.

Trade union unity means unity within each country of right and left factions and international unity of labor to meet the fascist drive which is already being felt in some parts of the world and is spreading with alarming rapidity. One of the important lines of activity in the direction of world trade union unity, Nearing asserts, is the Anglo-Russian committee which intends to call a conference looking toward a world unity congress. The general council of the British trade unions has approved this plan and will present it to the trades union congress. Nearing expects that the arguments on this question will be the most interesting of the session. He supposes that A. A. Purcell, fraternal delegate to the American Federation of Labor convention this year, will bring this issue to the attention of American labor.

Trade Unionists Approve.

The general council of Russian trade unions approves the world unity congress plan as well as the British. Nearing reminds American workers that trades union delegations from China, Sweden, Belgium, France, Australia, England, Germany and possibly other countries have visited Russia in the last year or so and all of their reports published have been astonishingly favorable. Purcell can remind American labor that there is a world. Nearing says because organized labor in the United States stepped out of the world about 1922.

French left-wing workers have been able to organize to a remarkable extept on the basis of the Riffian war, Nearing says. Over 200 Communists have been arrested and 80 are still in jail because of their activities in this cause. Circulars and posters have been widely distributed and ex-soldiers, the Renters' League and the more progressive General Confederation of United Workers and the Young Communist League have organized a central committee of 125—100 from the big factories of Paris and vicinity and the 25 from regional groups, so that the control of the anti-Riffian war is really on the basis of economic groups.

Nearing expects to be in Europe studying labor conditions in different countries for five months.

Missionaries Are in Bad Worse Than Ever Among the Chinese

WASHINGTON— Should American and British christian missionaries in China live in big houses and be waited upon by many servants, and keep themselves and their children aloof from the Chinese for reasons of health-protection?

That is the problem disturbing the consciences of missionaries gathered in resorts in the hills in the North of China this summer, according to private advices from a famous press correspondent.

Chinese public opinion, stirred by the strikes and by student organizations' appeals, has turned against the white teachers of religion who dare not let their children play with Chinese youngsters. It is becoming derisive toward the comparative luxury in which missionary families live. The Chinese acknowledge that missionaries live more simply than do any other class of whites, but they refuse to accept the compromise as a demonstration of spiritual brotherhood with themselves.

Slowly but definitely the missionaries are being driven out of much of the interior. In Honan province none are left.

Aid Wobblies From Fargo.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—Aid is offered members of the Industrial Workers of the World deported from Fargo, N. D., to the Minnesota line by the American Civil Liberties Union which is protesting to Governor Sorlie and to U. S. Senator Lynn Frazier over the deportation by an armed mob. Many of the 118 men deported were severely beaten in the forced departure, when they were forced to run the gauntlet of the armed men, some of them supposed to be officers of the law. The workers were on their way to the harvest fields when seized on freight cars, thrown into jail and finally deported. Wobblies are boycotting Fargo merchants and preparing legal defense in Moorehead, Minn.

THE OFFICIAL REPORT OF THE BRITISH TRADE UNION DELEGATION TO SOVIET RUSSIA

SYNOPSIS.—The official report of the British trade union delegation to Soviet Russia described the workings of foreign trade, transportation, industry, finance and agriculture in the Soviet Union. The trade union leaders concluded that foreign trade is increasing, and that in agriculture and industry the level of production is being raised. The finances have been placed on a sound basis, the report showed. Harm is being done to England by the absence of full diplomatic relations, the union leaders stated. Schools and universities, and literature, music and opera and the theatre were then discussed. Art collections, censorship, newspapers, wall newspapers, and freedom of the press were explained, with the conclusion that "the results of education are astounding." The report then took up hospitals, welfare work, sanitation, birth control, abortion, cleanliness and housing, rent regulations, family life, and prisons. "The Soviet government is achieving most remarkable results in respect to public health, housing, and the prison system," says the report. Regarding the trade unions and labor conditions, the report states, "The Delegation were much impressed by the position and activities of Trade Unions under the Soviet system." The report then described labor regulations, co-operatives, wages, and told of visits to various industrial works. The general conclusion on labor conditions reached by the commission was that, "The U. S. S. R. is a strong and stable state. The government is not only in every way better than anything Russia has ever yet had, but it has done and is doing work in which other older state systems have failed and are failing."

• • • •

While work was proceeding, the Delegation were shown a joint committee of the Co-operative Society (which has been formed by the workers in this tobacco factory) and the Trade Union, who were allowed during work hours to meet, discuss, and decide on certain matters connected with this Co-operative Society, which plays a very important part in enabling the workers to spend their wages to the best possible advantage. The Co-operative Society runs a restaurant where a very excellent mid-day meal is supplied at cost—expressed in equivalent English money at 8d.—to the members of this Society. It caters for others than members, but these are charged about 80 per cent more than the members of the society, and still it was stated these prices compare very favorably with those of the private restaurants. It was particularly noticeable that everyone concerned took a remarkable pride in the factory and its work.

It was interesting to find that the workers were equally anxious to inquire about things in England. Most of the active workers are young men, who seem deeply in earnest. One remarkable thing in this club, as in others, is that in a corner of one of the rooms is a bust of Lenin, which seems to take the place of the ikon of pre-revolutionary days. This, it would seem, is the way they mark their profound respect for him.

XVIII

Visit to Textile Factory

The most noticeable feature about these factories, which in many cases are well-equipped with up-to-date machinery, was their activity. The factories visited by the Delegation were working at full pressure; and machinery which had fallen out of use during the civil war was being placed in a state of repair to meet the increased demand.

Many of the smaller concerns which were formerly under private ownership have now been, under the scheme of centralisation, closed and their machinery moved to the larger factories.

Thus in 1922 there were 128 factories with 3,000,000 spindles at work, whereas in 1924 these had been reduced to 115 factories with 4,250,000 splindles. The workers had also increased from 180,000 in 1922 to 235,000 in 1924. The output of yarn in the year ending March, 1924, was 47,000 tons, of unfinished goods, 414,000,000 meters, and finished goods, 374,000,000 meters. In spite of the excess of demand over production prices have not gone up. Russia grows her own raw material, and considerable activity in irrigation is being undertaken in the cotton growing districts of the South.

The wool industry has done better this year, and the increase in finished goods was over 3,000,000 meters as compared with last year. This increase was confined entirely to rough goods.

Trans-Caucasia

CHAPTER I

General Position

The present political situation in Georgia and Azerbaijan is entirely dependent on and dominated by the geographic position of Trans-Caucasia.

(a) Economic.—Trans-Caucasia is a country where the most powerful of the strategic and economic interests now controlling the world come into collision. For in Trans-Caucasia, the West, headed by Great Britain and France, is competing with the East, headed by Russia and Turkey, for economic control of oil and manganese resources of immense importance and for the strategic command of the Asiatic Continent.

(b) Ethnographic.—Trans-Caucasia is also a country where there has been for centuries a struggle for supremacy between rival local peoples and political institutions which have been mere pawns in the contest of the Greater Powers. Geogian nationalism or Tartar communism or Armenian internationalism are real factors, but not the moving forces in the situation. After the collapse of the Russian Empire the collision in this region between various nationalisms and socialisms would have been complicated even without the foreign factor. For the flood and ebb of Empires has thrown up here a flotsam and jetsam of six radically different race-strains and some forty different tribes and dialects. Even more raids, like the Crusades, have left their racial relics cold-storaged in the remote valleys of the Caucasus. While modern history, after the dying away of the tidal waves of race migration has left its mark in the colonies established by the Russian Empire for political reasons—such as the colonies of German and of Russian religious exiles.

(c) Political.—Before the war Trans-Caucasia was a bastion of the Russian Empire—very strongly held. Not content with a garrison that was a menace to all neighboring peoples, the Empire engaged energetically in russifying the patchwork of small peoples that had accumulated in this region.

Georgian independence was easily crushed early in the last century, and before the middle of it the surrender of Schamyl in the mountains ended the long hopeless struggle of the mountaineers that had aroused the sympathy of our grandfathers. But right up to the war there remained remote valleys where the Russian tax collector, and even the British tourist never penetrated.

In the present day there are three local races important enough to compete for Trans-Caucasian supremacy—the Georgian, the Tartar, and the Armenian.

The Georgians

It is generally supposed that the Georgians originally came from the North of Babylon. At one time in early Christian history their conquests and influence spread as far as Constantinople. But the Ottoman and Russian empires closed in on them from either side and already in the eighteenth century they reached the last stage by having their independence guaranteed to them. In 1801, Georgia was incorporated in the Russian Empire as the provinces of Tiflis and Kutais, and a hundred years of russification began.

The Georgian though he looks and lives like a European is an Asiatic. He believes in getting what he wants by brain work rather than by bloodshed. He is intensely proud of his ancient national life, his admirable national art and literature, his strange language written in characters that look like wriggling worms, his interesting national customs, and his picturesque costumes. Georgian troops are splendid to look at. But if Tiflis is almost the only town of importance in that part of the world that has escaped uninjured from the last ten years of almost incessant war, it is due to the exceptional intelligence of Georgian diplomats. The Georgian aristocracy accepting titles and offices under Tsarism became superficially russified. But the race itself has emerged with an intense and inbred dislike and distrust for the Russian, and a disposition to turn to any Power likely to support them against Russia. It was this that made them welcome first the Turco-German and then the Franco-British military occupations.

The Tartars

The Tartars are comparatively newcomers in the Trans-Caucasian nationality question, and are indeed even yet scarcely nationally conscious. Their country, known as Azerbaijan, formerly a Persian province, was annexed by the Russian Empire ing Mahomedans, speaking a Turkish dialect, they became the connecting link between the political center of that movement in Constantinopole and the racial center of it in Central Asia. They have, however, no radical connection with the Tartars on the Volga.

The Armenians

The Armenians, scattered as they were through Asia Minor in 1914. They first became important with the development of the Baku oilfield, that brought some of them great riches, and with the development of the Pan-Turanian movement. For, beunder a persecuting Ottoman Empire, with one province enjoying the protection of the Russian Empire, were as anti-Turkish as the Georgians were anti-Russian. International protection was their only hope. And they were alternately championed and abandoned by the Russian and by the British—being in their case, in the end, massacred by the Turks.

Caucasian Race-Wars

The break up first of the Russian Empire and then of the Ottoman Empire brought all these three races a chance of survival which they immediately used in fighting among themselves for supremacy.

The First Federation

After the revolution, when Kerensky became the Dictator of Russia in September, 1917, a Council of the Trans-Caucasian peoples was formed at Tiflis. Georgia, Armenia, and Azerbaijan formed themselves into a Trans-Caucasian Federated Republic under the Russian Republic. No Common policy, however, could be arrived at by these races. The Armenians were pro-British and anti-Turk, the Tartars pro-Turk, and the Georgians on the fence with one leg in the German camp.

The position was impossible, and the Tartars left the Federation. The Bolshevik coup-d'etat at Petrograd in 1917, and the armistice of Brest Litovsk which ended the war between Germany and Russia, then gave a new and more definite orientation to these three main races in the Caucasus.

Caucasian Races and the Revolution

(a) Tartars.—The Azerbaijan Tartars still sympathized with the Turks. But the Armenian contingents of the Imperial Russian armies that were now returning to Russia, remained at Baku; and becoming a sort of national army of Armenia associated themselves with the Russian Republic. This recognition by the fighting Armenians that their salvation lay in restoring Russian supremacy in Trans-Caucasia, not only established the Bolshevists at Baku, but put Georgia between two fires. The Armenians were, however, split among themselves—the Armenian contingent and colony in Baku supporting the Bolshevists, while the population of Erivan, the center of Armenia, supported the Georgian Menshevists, or parliamentary nationalists, in Tiflis.

(b) Georgians.—As the Russian Imperialist Armies drifted home the Turkish Armies advanced into Trans-Caucasia to seize the important port of Batoum and the still more important oil reserves in Baku. The Georgian Menshevist Government then called in the Germans, who were not anxious to let their allies secure such an advantage. So Georgia by clever diplomacy got a German guarantee that the Turks should not enter Georgia and Batoum.

(c) Armenians.—The Turkish armies had therefore to advance on Baku through Armenia, with very disastrous results to the Armenians. And, with the help of the Mahomedan mountaineers, they forced the small British force which was holding Baku to evacuate. They, however, obtained the prize too late to make any use of the oil, though they utterly broke the Armenian hold on Baku, massacring some thousands of the colony.

British Occupation

After the Armistice, British forces occupied the Caucasus to maintain order, and Menshevist Governments were established in Azerbaijan, Georgia, and Armenia. But British policy was hopelessly divided between the European point of view held by their commanders in Georgia that believed in backing the Christian nations and the Indian point of view of their commanders in Azerbaijan, who backed a Pan-Islamic combination. Both were, of course, laying heavily against the winners the Bolshevist Russians. But their different policies sacrificed any possibility of raising either racial or religious opposition to the Bolshevists who were, on their side able to appeal to both sentiments.

Russians Replace British

On the withdrawal of the British Army of occupation in August, 1919, Armenia immediately went to war with the Tartars of Azerbaijan; and the Allied protege, General Denikin, did not help matters by blockading Georgia.

Moscow on being freed from Denikin at the end of 1919, turned its attention to the Caucasus. It first made peace between Azerbaijan and Armenia. Those two States together with Georgia were then granted full autonomy as independent States subject to certain arrangements as to communications. This cut the ground from under the feet of British bids for the support of these nationalities against Russia. For the Allies had not given the Caucasian nations a formal recognition of independence, as they had put their money on Denikin and a restoration of the Empire. The recognition by the Western Powers given later in January, 1920, had, consequently, little effect.

Bolshevist Revolution in—

a) Azerbaijan.—The first result of this Russian recognition was that Azerbaijan accepted a Bolshevist orientation. In April, 1920, the Bolshevist sympathizers overthrew the Mussovat or Menshevist Baku Government and invited Soviet Russia to occupy their country and keep order. Azerbaijan thus became an independent Bolshevist Republic under the protection of Moscow.

(b) Armenia.—Armenia had already fallen out with the Nationalist Turkish Government at Angora over the question of frontiers. In October of 1920 the Turkish Nationalists took the offensive against the Southern frontiers of Armenia. This brought in the Bolshevist Tartars of Azerbaijan to support the Turks by attacking the Armenians on their Eastern frontier.

The Armenian Dashnak or Menshevist Government applied to the Georgian Menshevists for assistance against their common enemies, the Bolshevist Tartars and the Nationalist Turks. The Menshevist Georgians, however, true to their traditions and temperament, refused to help the Armenians. They thereby sealed the fall of their own independent sovereignty. For the Armenians, hopelessly outnumbered, had to surrender at discretion. Moscow intervened to save what it could. But it was bound to keep the support of Turkey in the fight that the Western Powers were still waging with the Russian revolution, so the Treaty of Kars in November, 1920, surrendered to Turkey, not only Kars but the greater part of Armenia. The Armenian State, restricted practically to the Erivan region, became a Russian dependency, and the Armenian Bolshevists, of whom there were already a considerable number, turned out the Menshevist Nationalist Government. Thus Armenia, like Azerbaijan, became a Soviet Republic.

(d) Georgia.—It soon became evident that a similar fate awaited Menshevist Georgia, which was on bad terms with its Bolshevist neighbors and cutting their communication, including the Batoum pipe-line. Several Bolshevist risings had already taken place in Georgia and had failed. But in February, 1921, a combined attacked on the Georgian Menshevist Government was made by Azerbaijan and Armenia with the assistance of Georgian Bolshevists. Soviet Russia disclaimed all complicity, but the extent to which the revolution was from inside or outside is an intricate and very interesting question.* The Georgians tried tried to get help from Turkey, even offering them the port of Batoum as a consideration. The Turks gave no help, but all the same occupied Batoum. Georgia was in the same hopeless position that Armenia had been in a few months before. But Georgia got out of it much better.

* On this point the following evidence is interesting. It was given to the Delegation by one of the Menshevist leaders who fought the Government to the end:—

Mr. Bromley: I want to know, were the Soviet fighting Georgians reinforced by the Red Army in overthrowing the Menshevist Government?"

The Witness: "The troops of the Social Democrtic (Menshevist) Government consisted of some 13,000 volunteers and 5,000 guards. The troops fighting for the Soviets were about 15,000. It is difficult to say how many of the latter were Russians; but they were chiefly Armenians, Tartars, and Georgians, organized by the Georgian Communists. Their chief was killed in 1922 or 1923 in some part of Georgia. These troops were collected between Tiflis and Mtskhet. Some detachments numbering 2,000 consisted of Communists exiled by the Menshevists. These exiles got Red Army uniforms and joined the Soviet aroops. The fight, anyhow, was so short it would have been impossible to get reinforcements from Moscow in time."

Mr. Bromley: "Then it would not be true to say, as has been said in England, that there was a properly constituted Government here, order prevailed, and everything was stable, and that the Red Army marched in and overthrew this stable Government?"

The Witness: "I was a member of the Central Committee of the Trade Unions at that time, and we fought all the workers who wanted to turn Bolshevist. The Menshevists destroyed four unions because they would not fight against the Bolshevist leaders. The Menshevists prevented meetings of their own Trade Unions because they feared the Bolshevist influence and power in these unions. After some of this kind of treatment, such workers left and went abroad and formed detachments to fight the Government. The 5th Regiment and 7th Detachment of the Peoples's Guard went over to Bolshevism. A revolt then broke out in one district. A Soviet Government was formed. All thus was done by the Georgians themselves, with not one Russian." (To be continued in next issue.)

FOUR BILLION IN SOUTH AMERICA OWNED IN U. S.

Wall Street Moving in on Latin America

WASHINGTON—More than four billion dollars of capital from the United States is now invested in Latin American countries, according to an estimate contained in the first of a series of studies of these investments to be published this year by the department of commerce. This initial volume deals with Argentina as a field for extension of the financial imperialism that radiates from Wall Street.

This four billion dollars, which is about 40 per cent of the total of foreign investments of American financiers, is represented by railroads, hydro-electric power plants, streetcar lines and other public utilities, and by mines, factories, land and cattle enterprises and shipping, banking and insurance companies. Because the English bankers have had difficulties since the war, they have lost the virtual monopoly they formerly held in this field. North American money has now secured a strong position.

Argentina has placed a number of loans in Wall Street. At the end of last year a total of $292,800,000 of Argentine government bonds and notes were owned in the United States. Other investments in Argentina, traced to American owners, amount to over $100,000,000.

The commerce department points out the opportunities in Argentina for profitable buying of land, mines and other properties and securities. It does not discuss the inference of increased political pressure upon the Argentine nation which may be expected from the American government and bankers as the total of this mortgage shall increase.

Officers Enjoy Gay Parties; Privates Get Court Martial

SWAMPSCOTT, Mass., Aug. 30.—Marine officers acting as the president's bodyguard at White Court, Swampscott, have been accused of throwing gay parties in which lively debutantes and much liquor figured.

At the same time two guards who were caught asleep on duty will be court martialed. The guards complain that their officers' gayeties led them to forget to change sentries often enuf for the soldiers to get adequate sleep.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—Private George E. Deam of the marine corps, recently on duty at Swampscott, Mass., with the presidential bodyguard, has been sentenced to two years' imprisonment, followed by a dishonorable discharge, for refusal to obey orders, the navy department announced today.

Imprisoned for a minor offense, Deam refused to obey the orders of his jailers, broke arrest and was absent without leave for one day before he was recaptured.

Among the things Deam declined to do while in prison at Swampscott was to take a daily bath in the ocean.

Heads of the advertising campaign became swollen and wished to "leave good enough alone."

They feared that development of the Colorado would result in the building of a great city on the Gulf of California at the mouth of the river and that city would prove a dangerous rival to Los Angeles. But now they realize that scarcity of water is hurting their town far more than any rivalry could. They cannot induce manufacturers to invest in plants because of the lack of water. So, they are setting up a great cry for Boulder Dam and will risk competition with a rival on the Gulf.

Something for Nothing.

Of course, the object of Boulder Dam, as far as Los Angeles is concerned, is to provide water and power for this municipality. The boosters are quite willing that the nation as a whole shall have the honor of paying the bill while they get the benefits of the work.

The dam could be made to contribute to the prosperity of the entire country, but the Los Angeles boosters will see that it does not. Financiers of this city will have all the productive lands of the Colorado river region under heavy mortgage before the dam is completed and products of the irrigated districts will cost consumers more than similar commodities do now, the added charges to go into the pockets of bankers and their allies in extortion, the distributors.

However, the nation will build the dam. It will not allow the greed of the money lenders and landed aristocrats to stand in the way of the project.

A Task for Workers.

While the Chamber of Commerce and similar institutions do all the shouting and puffing as tho they perform the feat of constructing the dam, they will cut but sorry figures in the actual work. The people of the United States will supply the money and the working class the brain and brawn. All the boost organizations could be left out of consideration in the undertaking and never would be missed. Their bluff and foreflushing and bunk are not in any way essential.

The engineering factor, from rodman to chief engineer, will constitute less than one per cnt of the operating force. Mechanics and laborers will be accountable for 99 per cent of the performance. Outside the engineers, mechanics and laborers, in short, the workers, no other human element will be required.

Money and Man-Power.

Estimates of cost of the dam range from $60,000,000 to $80,000,000. The latter figure is the more logical. Height of dam, from foundation to crest, will be over 600 feet, the construction rising between the sheer walls of Boulder Canyon. Height of the overtowering walls above the dam will be 2,000 feet.

In erection of the artificial obstruction and control of the Colorado river a force of 10,000 men will be employed steadily for from five to ten years. The Los Angeles "Times", "Examiner" and "Daily News" have not yet mentioned this. It is possible that the capitalist sheets ignore the requirement of manual labor. They may consider it to be a negligible quantity. After they conclude their spoutings, bluffing and buncoing they will regard the dam as a fait accompli and never deign to credit the labor element as even contributing to it.

Workers Must Prepare.

Nevertheless, practically the entire burden of the Boulder Dam work will fall upon the workers. All the hardships, dangers and exertions will be placed upon them.

Every year hundreds of the toilers will go down in death in the vicinity of Boulder Canyon and by the time the work is fulfilled the graves of more than 2,000 unknown soldiers of the labor army will mark the field of the dam construction. Other hundreds will be carried away annually as permanently disabled by accidents and sickness and when the dam is completed some 4,000 to 5,000 physical wrecks will remember it to their sorrow.

The workers must prepare now to protect themselves against the exploitation and neglect to which they will be liable. It is precisely at this stage of the game that an ounce of prevention is worth many times more than a pound of cure later on.

Terrific Heat.

Few people have any idea as to what the Boulder Dam working conditions will be. Certainly, the Harry Chandlers, Hearsts and Vanderbilts of the press care little what the workers will suffer. For those exploiters a toiler is like any other work animal, to be urged on and on until he falls and is replaced by another. To the taskmakers a mule is more valuable for conservation than a working man. So, the workers must themselves consider what they will face.

The heat in the Boulder Canyon is the most intense to which human beings can be subjected while laboring. From the middle of May to the middle of September it is stifling; from the middle of June to the middle of August it is killing. Work will have to be suspended during the hot months but the workers will not be paid for their idleness altho enforced upon by them and logically not a burden to be borne by them. With Californians in charge it will be a case of: "You will be paid while you work and no more. If you do not like the heat you can leave. There are others to take your place." Under the economic whip of these taskmakers hundreds of workers will perish miserably in the infernal heat unless they take due warning.

Sleep, Workers, Sleep!

At this season workers resort to grim expedients to obtain sleep in the Boulder Dam region. With the temperature ranging from 115 to 130 degrees Fahrenheit, they lay under sprays of water or on floors covered with one inch of water. Otherwise, sleep is out of the question.

Terrible thirst is excited by the heat. Losing control of this, workers drink immoderately of water, especially iced, with the result that they are stricken with paralysis, losing permanently the use of limbs. Young men are even more liable to this affliction than the older ones because they are less precautious.

Under the excessive heat accidents will be at a high rate because of premature explosions, befuddlements, hastiness, etc., food poisonings, enervation, etc.

Remember: This dam is merely the first unit in the development of the Colorado River region. Following it, dam after dam will be built. At least a billion dollars will eventually be expended between the mouth and the source of the river.

Wright Finds an Imitator.

MUSKOGEE, Okla.—(FP)—Chester Wright, former publicity man for the late Samuel Gompers, but dismissed by Pres. Wm. Green from the American Federation of Labor publicity staff, has an imitator in his new occupation of oil stock promoter in the person of Anton Koch, until recently secretary-treasurer of Dist. 21, United Mine Workers. While Wright had to leave Washington for Texas, taking various labor mailing lists with him, to float his get-rich-quick oil hazards, Koch remains right in his district which comprises Oklahoma, Arkansas and Texas where he has "procured a valuable oil lease." Naturally he invites all his friends, gathered from certain mailing lists, to "purchase a few shares of our capital stick and thus get in on the ground floor with us."

But labor men, as Chester advised in his own astute come-on letters, are using their own judgment about hightemerarious oil stock desperadoes.

Carloads of Watermelons.

Of a total of 14 carloads of watermelons recently arriving in Chicago from Texas in one day 11 were handled by the farmer labor exchange which is the clearing house between producers on farms and in unions for their several kinds of goods. While trade unionists benefit from the Texas union farmer's watermelons he benefits from their union-owned and union-mined coal. The exchange is at 179 W. Washington street, Chicago, and is selling agent both for the National Farm-Labor union and for the United Mine Workers of Illinois besides other producing organizations.

CATHOLIC CHURCH COMES OUT FOR COMPANY UNIONS

rupt union bureaucracy against the militant rank and file of the union who strive to prevent the union being transformed into a company union.

Recommend Johnston's Poison.

In a news release for Aug. 12th, the catholics offer the substance of the "B. & O. plan," put into effect by William H. Johnston of the Machinists' Union, on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, a plan which has been repudiated overwhelmingly by the workers in the Glenwood shops, where it was first tried out, and rejected as well by the membership as a whole, when they voted to elect Johnston's opponent, J. F. Anderson, in the grand lodge election for international president.

This election is, incidentally, now the subject of bitter war, since it is clear that Johnston, refusing to yield to the vote of the I. A. M. membership, stole the election and has now begun a war of expulsion on all left wing and militant members, commencing with the suspension of his opponent, Anderson, who is not a Communist, but merely an opposition candidate of mildly progressive character.

What They Say.

The news release put out by the catholic organization speaks as follows:

"The Baltimore and Ohio plan shows a way out of the present deadlock over 10 per cent higher wages and the checkoff and evades the question of arbitration and political intervention. The miners want higher wages because they want more of the comforts of life. They want the checkoff because it is a sign of recognition of the union."

The miners who are fighting with the progressive miners' committee have long recognised that the checkoff may be used against the miners' interests. In the case of the membership electing progressive officials, the reactionary higher officers have used the checkoff to aid them in illegally removing subordinate officials chosen by the miners and installing their own agents, corrupt and inefficient and repudiated by the membership even tho they were—as in the case of Thompson and Watt—in the Illinois field.

Thompson and Watt were legally elected in the sub-district, but the corrupt class collaborationist Farrington's official machine in the district ordered the companies to pay the checkoff dues to his own servile appointee, illegally installed, and the legally elected sub-district officials were practically ordered out of office by the mine owners.

The catholic organization's statement continues:

"The operators refuse the checkoff because they do not want to strengthen a union that is organized to fight them."

That is true, and any union which will be bound and gagged and delivered—so far as suppressing the membership in its desire to fight—will doubtless be approved of by the mine owners. If the U. M. W. of A. officials can do that, the U. M. W. of A will surely be "rewarded" with the checkoff But this will not give the miners more wages and better conditions. In the "B. & O." shops it has given them less relative wages and made them do more work for it.

The regular deceitful bunk of class collaboration is featured by the catholics in the following part of their statement:

"The operators could well give the union the checkoff because of its responsibility in the better management of coal." This sort of advice in the form of counsel to "dig clean coal" was the only thing Farrington had to offer to the starving thousands of unemployed miners in Illinois fields last convention.

"The men would rise above the status of wage hands to the dignity of semi-partnership," continue the catholics, in blithe disregard of the realities of the class struggle, observable in the very "B. & O." shops where the scheme is in operation. This sort of buncombe about "justice," "fair dealing," "dignity of labor," and a host of other glittering abstractions the National Catholic Welfare Conference has been emitting for a long time is thus seen—when it comes to a crisis—to be the fancy cloak for betrayal of the vital interests of the workers, by delivering them, bound and gagged and under bond not to strike, to the speed-up "efficiency" systems, sliding scales that always slide down hill, and all the other mechanisms of bitter exploitation by the employers.

The checkoff was approved of by the progressive miners' committee spokesmen in the anthracite fields, but warning was given that merely because the checkoff in the anthracite fields was a necessary expediency, that the checkoff as a principle was not approved, as it has been used by corrupt officials, as in Illinois, merely to suppress the membership and rob them of their rights in the union, and is generally a weapon against the membership by the class collaborationist official family.

BRITISH AID MURDER RULE OF THE PRIESTS IN LITHUANIA, WORKERS TORTURED, MILITANTS IMPRISONED

By D. PETROVSKY.

VIENNA, Aug. 30. (I. R. A.)—On the banks of the Nieman the bourgeois republic of Lithuania with a population of 2 millions—the deserving executor of the desires of the big imperialist sharks—lies, squeezed in tightly between the frontiers of Germany, Poland and Latvia. The government is in the hands of catholic priests, at the head of the so-called christian-democratic party. In 1919, the Soviet system held sway over the greater part of Lithuania. But the Lithuanian bourgeoisie, aided by detachments of German junkers and French arms, overthrew the workers' and peasants' power, and in doing so, shot about a thousand workers and peasants.

The catholic priests who deceived the workers and peasants with promises of rewarding them with land and work and who had driven the revolutionary workers' party underground, received a majority in the seim, and from that moment have stuck firmly to their ministerial positions. In order to maintain power the christian democrats resorted to the most savage repression. For instance, during the elections to the Seim in 1923, more than a 100 candidates put forward by the labor group were arrested, and also 200 more workers and peasants—members of trade unions and peasant organizations which support these candidatures.

Police Shoot Workers.

In this manner the catholic priests were able to insure that not one representative of the workers was allowed into the Seim. Meanwhile, the investigations into the case of 300 workers and peasants arrested have been delayed already for more than two years, and many of the victims have been in prison during all this period without trial. But the charm of the regime of the "democratic" priests does not end here. They have completely assimilated the methods of medieval civilization. Everything that hinders them from enriching themselves must be swept out of their path. While a handful of speculators from the governmental party buys up the best property centers, opens banks, buys up factories and at the same time enjoys extensive credit from the state bank, while such things as this are going on, the starving unemployed workers are being shot down.

In Kovno, for instance, on January 19th, the police opened fire on unemployed workers who had gathered outside the town hall and began charging them. As a result of this there were three seriously wounded and 20 slightly wounded. In Memel, after it had been united with Lithuania, on January 6th of this year, four representatives of the workers were arrested, among whom was a member of the Memel provincial court.

Militants Persecuted.

All the left wing trade unions have been closed down. Those workers, however, who are suspected of belonging to the Communist Party are particularly savagely persecuted. In Merovsky prison there are up to 300 workers and peasants accused of belonging to the Communist Party. The conditions of the prison regime are most difficult. Due to over-crowding of the prisons there are from three to four persons in the single cells, while in the common cells where the maximum should be eight there are now 16 to 20 people. The food is absolutely insufficient consisting of one poung of bread and some thin gruel. Foul air and a starvation ration are the most appropriate soil for disease. It is not surprising therefore that the Kovno and Ponevezhsky prisons have been the breeding grounds of epidemics of typhus which so terrified the population of these towns that even the government newspaper, generally hushing up the evil doing of the prison administration and secret police, could not remain silent on this question. The officials of the secret police are chosen from among the old csaristt gendarmes (sadists, syphilitics from among the decadent Lithuanian semi-intellectuals), torture by means of electricity is most extensively employed.

For instance, 16 workers from Yenishek and Shavli were submitted to electric torture as a result of which the aged worker Vaidelauskas lost his reason and had to be sent to a lunatic asylum. In the secret police department at Vilkovkshka 50 people were subjected to this torture among whom were 14-year-old pupils of the Marlashkovsky high school. The working woman, Shmaikovskaya was also beaten up and subjected to electric shocks which drove her out of her mind. In Kovno, the student of the Kovno university, Vedrinaitis, and others were also subjected to torture by the electric current.

In addition to electricity, trampling on the chest and stomach is widely employed. How savagely the police agents behave may be judged from such facts as that when the head of the Vilkovyshka police station, Veshis, having become wild began biting those arrested. In the same town of Vilhofyshke in order to force confessions from the prisoners, a syphilitic was brought in who threatened to infect them by spitting in their mouths if the working man or woman did not denounce their comrades. The sadist Veshis received promotion for his savagery and was transferred to Kovno.

Tortures by Police.

The savage treatment by the secret police of those arrested may be judged from the fact that even the ex-governmental party and the social democrats were compelled to make an interpellation to the government in the Seim concerning the electric torture of 14-year-old children, and the torture which deprived Shmaigovskay of her reason.

For participation in 1st of May meetings, and making speeches, the Shavli workers—Preikshtas, Lifshits, Lukovitch, and others, were sentenced to five and six years penal servitude. For distributing Communist literature four Kovno workers (one Young Communist, one social democrat and two non-party) were sentenced to death by the ministry court martial, while the 16-year-old girl, Bal, was sentenced to penal servitude for life. Only the widespread indignation of the workers and the more honest intellectuals in particular the socialist students, saved the lives of those who were sentenced. The death sentence was commuted to penal servitude for life.

Terror Imported by British.

It is impossible in a small article to enumerate all the evil doings of the clerical "democracy" committed against the workers and peasants. The facts we have given refer to recent months. But this is quite sufficient to enable the workers of other countries to get a very good idea as to the conditions under which the Lithuanian workers and peasants must live and fight.

The British workers in particular should understand that this black hundred regime is being supported by the British bourgeoisie who quite recently agreed to grant the Lithuanian clerical government a loan to the extent of 1,000,000 sterling. With this money the Lithuanian priests will be able to erect new prisons and develop their work of "electrifying" the workers and peasants in the secret police departments.

MINT MILLIONS IN PROFITS

By LELAND OLDS,
Federated Press.

Nearly six billions in clear profits to their wealthy owners is the record of 40 corporations whose returns for the 10 years, 1915 to 1924, are analyzed by Dow, Jones & Co., publishers of The Wall Street Journal. According to their analysis the stockholders of these 20 railroads and 20 industrial corporations received $5,919,961,350, a return of 110 per cent on the average par value of their investment.

The profits of the 20 railroads taken by themselves totaled $2,886,397,230, a return of 88.4 per cent on the $3,263,938,035 of common stock. The 20 industrial companies handed their stockholders $3,035,564,120, a return of 144.6 per cent on common stock figured at an average of $2,097,523,820.

But the industrial companies increased their capitalization very materially in the period by issuing stock dividends. The 10-year profits actually represent a return of 175 per cent on the $1,731,762,457 of common stock with which they started the decade.

The profits of the two groups year by year and the rates of return on common stock were:

	20 Railroads' Profit	Rate	20 Industrials' Profit	Rate
1924	$347,022,703	10.1	$374,491,352	13.2
1923	274,400,075	11.1	310,875,075	12.8
1922	223,298,428	6.7	210,192,101	8.8
1921	202,378,268	6.2	75,763,869	3.5
1920	252,987,365	7.8	268,440,046	12.6
1919	281,118,091	8.7	255,366,143	13.2
1918	259,218,542	8.1	321,859,340	17.2
1917	346,645,064	10.8	476,091,083	26.0
1915	234,803,167	7.4	221,890,291	19.1

The enormous industrial profits of the years 1916 and 1917 reveal how the captains of industry took advantage of the war. In these two years stockholders received more than half the entire value of their investment back in profits. If 1918 is included there were three years in which stockholders received nearly three-quarters of their investment back in profits. Industrial profits in the last year of the period were 70 per cent greater than those in 1915 while the railroads had increased their profits by only about 48 per cent.

In the 10-year period the 40 corporations distributed $3,394,760,680 in cash dividends, a return of 63.4 per cent. Owners of the 20 railroads received $1,806,625,320 or 55.3 per cent and industrial stockholders $1,588,135,360 or 75.6 per cent. Cash dividends paid by the industrials in 1924 were 160 per cent larger than those paid in 1915.

The 20 railroads had on hand at the end of the period undivided profits of $2,417,868,469 while those of the industrials amounted to $1,558,742,774. These huge surpluses are available to the stockholders either to guarantee dividends when business is slack or to increase their plant as a basis for larger production and profits in the future.

GROWERS LOSE PRUNE DOMAIN OF CALIFORNIA

understand that she was a man. Discovery of her real sex was not made until after it was charged that she sold the agency of the association for Canada to one firm and that for New York to another and put the proceeds in her pocket. As she was compelled to resign and the general manager followed suit and set up a business in opposition to the associaton.

Contract after contract was repudiated and the repudiation was upheld by the courts. The largest agreement to go by the board was that of the ex-general manager Clever? Indeed! If there is anything considered as clever in modern business it is for the head of a producers' co-operative association to frame contracts intended to protect the organization in such a way that it is left completely without protection.

General manager has followed general manager with the main purpose of betraying the growers. As the 1925 crop is being harvested the complete betrayal has been accomplished.

Bankers Swoop Industry

When the association was first formed a leading banker figured as the heroic friend of the prune producers. After the first general manager resigned this banker ceased to be prominent in the affairs of the association but the prune industry became more prominent as an asset of his bank.

With each succeeding change of management the obligation of the growers to the banks increased. Under the latest general manager the harvesting and marketing of the 1925 crop is essentially an operation to provide interest on loans due from banks.

Consumers Penalized

As showing just what tribute is levied upon the prune consumers of the United States because of the devouring of the industry by the banking system the following example will serve: The average price of prunes to consumers is 12½ cents a lb. Of this, 2—1-5 cents form the amount that first goes from the producer to the banks to pay interest on mortgages and 4-5 cent to pay premium on life insurance necessitated by mortgages. To the 3 cents per pound paid thus by the producer must be added the charge of the distributors upon the fundamental cost. As the distributors' "emolument" is 140 per cent the added charge is 4—1-5 cents. The total extortion chargeable to the banks is 7—1-5 cents per pound and amounts to $18,750,000 a year on the average crop of 250,000,000 pounds.

The bankers receive from the consumers, via the producers, $7,500,000 a year, the distributors $11,250,000 and the producers $11,250,000. As the producers must pay all the cost of producing out of the sum mentioned, which signifies for them 5—3-10 cents per pound, they are not earning the actual cost of production, 4 cents per pound. The $7,500,000 tribute to the banks is a little more than the total profits of the California prune industry. Of the $11,250,000 paid the distributors by the consumers $4,600,000 go to clerks, etc., light, etc., $6,650,000 to landlords for rent, insurance etc., and $6,650,000 to the merchants as profits.

Growers Catspaws of Banks

Two-thirds of the $11,250,000 paid by consumers to distributors or $7,500,000 are based absolutely on the original interest charge of banks to producers. So, the extortion from the consumers due to the banks is $15,000,000 a year. Just one-half what they pay for prunes is tribute to the bankers and their fellow-extortioners, the distributors. When they pay 12½ cents for a pound of prunes they give 6—1-4 cents to the bankers and merchants for nothing.

To satisfy the demands of banks and insurance companies for $7,500,000 a year the prune growers must not only add 3 cents a pound to the cost of their product but as well inflate the value of their lands proportionately (or $75,000,000.) To dispose of acreage at the inflated prices growers must find buyers who are not familiar with the prune situation and who buy bearing orchards in preference to unplanted land. Such buyers are rare. However, if found, the growers do not profit by the sales at inflated prices. The banks are usually the real sellers behind the growers. Proceeds from the inflations go to the banks while the growers get the intrinsic value of the orchards and nothing more just as they get the intrinsic value of the crops.

Growers are simply instruments in the hands of the banks, gouging the consumers and orchard buyers for the benefit of bankers. They assist the boost game even when in the slough of the slump.

Big Prey of Banks

Many producers' co-operative associations have passed into the control of the great financiers in California. As the banking system grows in size it becomes evident that the bankers consider it more economical and gratifying to swallow industries whole than to eat them piecemeal.

One after another, every producers' organization in this state is bound to pass into the control of the banks. But the ultimate victims will be the workers, since the growers are passing and when they are gone the bankers must deal directly with the workers.

The New York Times Backs Sigman

The opposition to the autocratic and reactionary rule of Morris Sigman in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union claim that Sigman is a tool of the bosses and they give facts and figures to support this contention. A recent editorial in an issue of the New York Times bears out this charge more eloquently than all the evidence the Joint Council of Action could present.

The Times, which is the chief organ of American reaction in the financial and commercial capital of the nation, comes out strongly in support of Sigman, the yellow socialist and against the left wing leements who are leading the revolt against his leadership.

The Times quotes with approval a passage from a book written by Louis Levine entitled "The Women's Garment Workers," which pictures the change in the policy of the garment union from class struggle to class collaboration. The passage reads: "For this transformation is the result of the daily adjustments which the international is forced to make in order to achieve the main end for which it exists, namely the advancement of the standards of living of the workers in the industry, and reflects the new realities which have brot the industry and its workers within the ken of American traditions and American ways of thinking and acting."

This is a gem indeed! "American ways of thinking and acting!" This is the way this pen prostitute Levine tries to gloss over the treason of Sigman and the yellow socialists. There is nothing American about class peace. It is no more American than it is German, British or French. It is a world phenomena. Sigman, a foreign born labor faker, claiming to be a socialist is a proponent of class collaboration. Militant labor leaders, like Foster, Howat, and others of that type, tho born in the United States, spurn class collaboration and stand on the platform of the class struggle. Class collaboration is neither "American" nor "un-American." It is simply treachery to the working class.

The Times rendered the left wing in the I. L. G. W. U. a distinct service when it placed the stamp of its approval on Sigman. The most uninformed and prejudiced follower of the reactionary socialist Forward machine will now know that Sigman is the boss's tool. The praise of the Times is sufficient evidence.

The Social Traitors

The congress of the socialist and labor international which concluded its sessions at Marseilles, France a few days ago, indicates that there may still be depths of political infamy that the socialists of the world have not yet plumbed.

This aggregation of renegades wound up the congress by passing a resolution condemning the Soviet Union, the first workers' government in human history and another upholding the league of nations, which was intended by its promoters to develop into a super capitalist government, that would regulate the exploitation of the workers and oppressed peoples and prevent war, one of the Achilles heels of capitalism.

The socialist congress did not concern itself with the class struggle, except to repudiate it. All the discussion was motivated by a desire to assist the various capitalist governments govern better so that the machine of capitalism could run more smoothly. The socialists no longer make the slightest effort to organize the workers for the overthrow of capitalism. They have made peace with the enemy of the working class. As the Fifth Congress of the Communist International declared, the socialists do not occupy the right wing of the labor movement but the left wing of the bourgeoisie.

What a contrast between the yellow socialist congress and the last enlarged executive meeting of the Communist International. The latter was a council of war—a war against the capitalist system and its governments. The two internationals are engaged in a struggle for the ideological support of the workers and peasants of the world. When the Communist International defeats the yellow international in this struggle, as it eventually will, the last days of capitalism can be counted.

A Roman Holiday

The latest scheme of Benito Mussolini, to avert the inevitable revolt against his reactionary regime, is to raise a national fund for the purpose of beautifying Rome, which he calls the "shrine of the world."

This is a modern improvement on the old Roman custom of giving the masses spectacles when on the point of revolting against their sufferings. These spectacles got to be known as "Roman holidays."

Mussolini may succeed in staving off disaster for a while by artificial dodges, but the forces of evolution and revolution are against him. The Italian workers will have their "Roman holiday" when the capital of Italy becomes another one of those red shrines which some day will dot Europe and all the world.

Society women at a French watering place wear jewelry to the beach, and are accompanied by their maids and their poodle dogs. They are hard workers paying no attention to the time clock. Workers who have to toil only eight hours a day don't know how well off they are.

Pickpockets were busy while pilgrims were worshipping a grotto at Lourdes, France, where an alleged virgin is alleged to have appeared. The best time to fleece the worker is when they have their eyes on the stars.

While Spanish soldiers are providing targets for Abd-El-Krim's sharpshooters, King Alfonso is shooting darts at the hearts and money bags of American heiresses in Deauville.

German capitalists have asked for designs for a sarcophagus for Ebert's grave. They have good reason to honor him. He served them well.

George Bakhmeteff, former ambassador of the Kerensky government is now a man without a country. The best he could do was to get a membership card in the league of nations.

Is the Condition of the American Working Class Improving

By J. I. Obolonsky

All assertions and pleadings of the bourgeois economists notwithstanding, the conditions of life of the American working class are steadily growing worse and worse. The proof is furnished by the United States government census as well as by the most authoritative statisticians of the country.

However, before we proceed to state the facts and draw the necessary conclusions it is necessary to make a number of definitions, it is necessary to agree what determines the well-being of the working class? What are its component elements?

The worker sells his labor power and in return he gets wages, money. The wages of the laborer (price of labor power) is determined by the same law which governs the price of any other commodity, i. e. by its cost of production. The cost of production of labor-power is determined by the cost required to produce a laborer and maintain him and is equivalent to the bare necessaries of his existence, or to the duration of labor which is required in order to produce this labor-power. (Read "Wages, Labor and Capital," by Karl Marx.)

Wages must be considered from two points of view:

1. Relative wages, expressed always as a ration and determined by their relation to the profit of the capitalists and

2. Absolute wages, expressed in terms of value which the worker gets in axchange for his labor-power.

vided into nominal and real wages. (a) Nominal wages are expressed by the amount of money for which the worker sells himself to the capitalist.

(b) Real wages are expressed in terms of the amount of commodities which a worker can buy for his money.

It is necessary to remember the distinction between real and relative wages. Karl Marx states this in the following manner:

"The real wage expresses the price of labor in relation to the price of other commodities; the relative wage, on the contrary, expresses the proportionate share which living labor gets of the new values created by it is compared to that which is appropriated by stored up labor capital."

Having given the necessary elementary definitions, we may now proceed to the analysis of the well-being of the American worker.

In the first place let us determine what is the relative wage of the worker? Let us take as the basis the U. S. census from 1860 to 1919:

Year	Cost Product in Billions	Wage in Bill.	Wages of Product Value Per cent
1860	1.887	0.379	20.
1880	5.370	0.948	17.6
1890	9.372	1.891	20.2
1900	13.039	2.331	17.9
1904	14.794	2.610	17.6
1909	20.672	3.427	16.6
1914	24.264	4.078	16.8
1919	62.418	10.533	16.9

This table establishes the following facts:

1. The rate of increase of wages is slower than the rate of increase of the value of the product. The relative wage was highest in 1860, during which year it amounted to 20 per cent of the value of the product. Since then it has been falling until it reached its lowest point in 1908, 16.8 per cent and in the year 1919 it practically stood at the same level. What does it mean?

In the year 1860 for every $100 of value of product the worker's wage equaled 20, that is it made up 0.2 of the entire value of the product. In 1919, after 59 years of bourgeois relations in production for the same $100 the wage of the worker had fallen to $16.90, i. e. it was only 0.169 of the value of the product.

This means that the relative wage of the worker has been sinking during the last sixty years, between 1860 and 1920. At the same time as the capitalist has been acquiring enormous riches the worker as compared with it has been getting poorer. The social inequality has been expanding and with it was growing the abyss between the proletariat and the bourgeoisie.

One may say, however, that while the working class has not been catching up with the rapid enrichment of the capitalist class, yet, its life has been improving, getting better. In order to ascertain this we must analyze the real wage of the working class for a definite period. For this purpose we shall resort to the table compiled by P. H. Douglas and F. Lamberson.

Year	Cost of Living	Nominal Wage	Real Wage
1895	97.1	98.0	97.5
1900	103.0	104.6	101.6
1905	116.4	114.4	98.2
1910	144.1	126.5	87.6
1911	143.0	128.9	90.1
1912	159.2	132.6	85.9
1913	155.7	132.5	86.8
1914	158.5	137.9	87.0
1915	156.5	135.5	86.0
1916	177.6	144.8	80.8
1918	266.6	187.7	70.4

This second table shows that the nominal wage does not "catch up" with the rapidly rising cost of living. The cost of living is rising much faster than the nominal wage. So for instance if we take the year 1890 the nominal wage and cost of living are practically the same, while in the year 1918 the cost of living is one and one-half times that of the nominal wage. It is 2.62 times greater than the cost of living in the year 1890, while the nominal wage has risen only 1.88 times the 1890 value. This shows a corresponding decrease in the REAL WAGE during this period, is evidenced by the table. The highest real wage was received in the year 1890 and the lowest in the year 1918. The real wage of 1918 was only 0.71 of its 1890 value, i. e. less than three-fourths of its 1890 value.

The real wage is falling steadily and without interruption.

What is the meaning of these tables? What is the answer? Very simple: in this land of the "golden blight" the condition of the exploited workers is growing more and more unbearable from year to year, both relatively and absolutely.

"Something is rotten in Denmark." The laws which govern the present system of society (of its most advanced and developed as well as "secure" part) are mightily and inevitably pulling it into an abyss, to a catastrophe.

The working class has nothing to expect of the present system. The emancipation of the proletariat lies in the destruction of the capitalist mode of production and distribution and in the inauguration of the Communist order.

Fresh Treachery from the Second International

By C. DIMITROV (Moscow)

(On the Occasion of the Socialist Conference at Prague.)

THE growing indignation aroused in the ranks of the international proletariat against Zankov's bloody regime and against the treacherous behaviour of the Bulgarian socialists, who support this regime at home and defend it in the eyes of public opinion abroad, spread during the last few months to a part of the Second International and to the Amsterdam Trade Union International.

This forced the leaders of the Second International to convoke a conference in Prague, in order to unify the attitude taken by the socialist parties in the Bulgarian question, and to paralyze the dissatisfaction and indignation against the policy of the Bulgarian section which had penetrated the socialist ranks.

The decision of the executive committee of the Second International, to call a conference at Prague, gave rise to much uneasiness at first to government circles in Sofia. These feared that the conference might adopt the condemnatory standpoint of the English labor party, and the government press therefore began to accuse Zankov's socialist accomplices of incapacity to defend "Bulgarian affairs" before the international.

THE socialists themselves were no less uneasy. They felt that, if they were disavowed by the Second International, they would forfeit the last remnant of the prestige left to them among the Bulgarian bourgeoisie, which simply uses them as an instrument for its policy abroad. On the eve of the conference in Prague, the socialist leader Kristo Pastukhov published the following warning to Vandervelde, Fritz Adler and Tom Shaw in his newspaper "Epokha":

"It is entirely unpermissible that the Bulgarian should be placed in the position of defendants in Prague, as has been insinuated. On the other hand, we must not allow too much attention to be devoted to the question of relations with the Bulgarian government, for this question has an internal local character . . . If the attitude of any country or party is submitted to severe criticism, this will not only fail to promote the peaceful solution of the Bulgarian question, but will on the contrary cause both the Bolshevist wing and that of reaction to grow . . . We hope that the International, which has of late approved of the attitude of the Bulgarian socialists and has begun to speak of national minorities and reparations, will not go back on its words and will not deal only with the past. We have the right to expect that the conference will go forward with firm footsteps."

THE Sofian hangmen and their socialist servants had, however, no need to be afraid of the conference of the Second International in Prague. As the resolution passed at Prague shows, the leaders of the Second International preferred to disavow the English delegation and the dissatisfied socialist elements, and to remain faithful to the end to the Bulgarian mensheviki, who have after all done nothing more than carry out the counter revolutionary policy of the Second International, only rather too zealously.

It need not be said that the instigators of these murders and deeds of violence among the Bulgarian people, and there menshevist accomplices, have been delighted at the declaration made by the Prague conference, to the effect that the conference abstains from inquiring into the situation in Bulgaria, and from ascertaining the truth about the mass murder and violence, and fully shares the opinion of the Bulgarian mensheviki, that "the question of the Bulgarian government is of an internal local character." For this signifies the open furtherance of the horrifying terror in Bulgaria, and this at a moment when even the Minister of War, Volkov, admitted in parliament that murders were being committed without trial and without investigation, and that there are still thousands of arrestants in prison. The governmental newspapers of Bulgaria are full of praise in their comments on the decision of the socialist conference in Prague. They regard this decision as a "great success for the Bulgarian government," and as a brilliant defense of the "honor of Bulgaria." The mensheviki themselves declare in their newspapers "Narod" and "Epokha" with all solemnity, that thanks to them the idea spreading abroad that "Bulgaria is a land of terror, of murder and of barbarism," has been exploded.

THE cynicism of the leaders of the Second International has however exceeded all bounds, for the Prague conference not only declared itself solid with the disgraceful and treacherous attitude of the Bulgarian mensheviki, but declared at the same time that the Bulgarian social democrats had fought against the terror regime, had demanded an amnesty for the political prisoners, and had protested "valiantly" (?) against the state of siege proclaimed after the explosion in the cathedral of Sofia.

The leaders of the Second International had the insolence to issue this lying declaration, despite series of incontestable facts proving the full participation of the Bulgarian mensheviki in the unheard of misdeeds of the Zankov government.

Even at the moment when the Prague socialist conference had already met, the organ of the Bulgarian socialists, the "Epokha", continued to incite the Zankov government to fresh deeds of violence and cruelty against the bleeding masses of working people and peasantry, and against those of their leaders who were still alive.

Thus for instance the "Epokha" published the following base and provocatory article in its number of June 11: "Youths deceived into Illegal Activity.

THE newspapers are full of reports on the legal proceedings being prepared against a few dozen young people—scholars and students—who have become involved in illegal activity. It is easy to comprehend how these misled young people—girls and young men—have come into this position. They are victims of the poison created and spread abroad by the leaders and representatives of the united front. Now that these young people are faced by the terrors of tomorrow's verdict, they experience the frightful consequences of the madness into which others have drawn them, and it is a question whether the authorities have been successful in laying hands on all the braggadocios who have been inoculating this poison for years, secretly or openly, have spread the teaching of the armed insurrection, induced these young people to take oaths, have supplied weapons, received and distributed money, literature, etc. We are convinced that this is not the case. It is however necessary and will continue to be necessary. The bonds and considerations of relationship and friendship must be set aside. The law must be applied against all who have trespassed against it, or the prerequisites for an unfavorable criticism will be created."

The newspaper Epokha wrote in a leading article, published June 12:

"The military courts execute the enactments of the law for the protection of the state. In this time of severest trial for the country these emergency courts lay their heavy hand on the conspirators and their accomplices. The united front of the Communists and agrarians, which has attacked the lives of its antagonistics, and prepared a bloody coup d'etat, has brought its own adherents to the gallows. . The courts martial fulfill their duty. They cannot be reproached in any way. . . The chief culprits of the united front conspiracy have suffered the severest punishment of the law, The united front or heart of the conspiration has been destroyed. Under these conditions the government can in our opinion proceed to the restoration of normal conditions in the country and must not for a moment slacken the watchfulness (?) of the administration and legal authorities."

AFTER preserving silence for two months on the unheard of cruelties and brutalities committed in connection with the explosion in the cathedral of Sofia, the socialist parliament fraction has at last been struck with the idea obviously in connection with the Prague conference—that it was time to put a question to parliament on the mass arrests which have been made since the explosion (June 12). The socialist deputy submitting the question, K. Bosvelyev, made however, the following statement:

"The mass arrests of citizens come as no surprise to us for the misdeed committed in the cathedral gives the state the legal right of self-defense. And we are fully convinced that these mass arrests have been made with the intention, in the first place, of seizing the guilty, and in the second place of preventing the repetition of such crimes in the future. But as always happens in such cases (?), innocent persons, the victims of denunciations, have been arrested with the guilty. . .

"We believe that it is to the interest of the state, and to the interest of public peace, if the position of the arrestants is cleared up as speedily as possible, and the innocent set free. When the stress of such events induces a government to resort to martial law, it is for the reason that courts martial act rapidly, settle rapidly, and rapidly impose the deserved punishment. If there is a lack of military judges for the courts of inquiry, more should be appointed. There are sufficient reserve military jurists well able to lighten the work of the military courts. . .

"We have received complaints from relations of arrested persons who have disappeared. We are far from accusing the central authorities with refernce to such cases of mysterious disappearance. As I have already stated, and now repeat with all the earnestness which this question demands: We are far from accusing the governmental authorities with reference to those cases of mysterious disappearance. We well remember the noble and humane words (?) uttered by the minister of war on the occasion of the proclamation of a state of war, words calculated to warm the hearts of all who heard them (?). We demand that the government throw light upon the actions committed by irresponsible persons (?) in the streets, not only because we are anxious for the government to remain unspotted, but because we are at the same time aware that accusations made against the government are also made against our unhappy country, against Bulgaria. To us it appears perfectly clear that since the government cannot be accused of these crimes, it is the more under an obligation to clear up the matter, to prove to foreign countries that in our country justice is actually being exercised." (Narod and Epokha, June 13.)

Even the bourgeois radical newspaper, the Radical, is indignant at this indescribably servile attitude of the socialist parliament fraction. Its number of June 15 contains the following:

"It must be observed that the representatives of the socialist parliamentary fraction laid their question before parliament without conviction and with a certain irresolution, as if it were not exacly necessary to seek for the truth or to find the guilty, but were merely a question of registering some article by the secretary of the social democratic party was dealt with by the foreign press a few days ago. Thus an important question was submitted to parliament and then removed from the agenda again unnoticed even by parliament itself, and retired into the background in favor of questions not claiming the attention of the Bulgarian citizens at the present time. The representative of the social democratic parliament fraction did not even deem it necessary to convert his inquiry into an interpellation, by which a general debate on the question would have been caused."

DURING the Prague conference itself the socialist leader, Yanko Sakysov, expressed himself literally as follows in an interview with the correspondent, Leon Weiss:

"There is no thought whatever of any description of terror or fascist dictatorship in Bulgaria. The whole matter is that some excesses have actually been committed by the volunteers placing themselves at the disposal of the government, excesses explicable on the one hand by the indignation of the masses (?) against the Communists, and on the other hand by the circumstance that the government has not had sufficient soldiery and police at its disposal. If there had been a regular army and a powerful police force instead of the volunteers, these excesses would not have taken place."

This is the "valiant" manner in which the Bulgarian mensheviki fight against the violence of the Zankov regime, against the state of seige, and for the restoration of the rights and liberties of the masses of the people, now trampled underfoot.

And the Prague conference of the Second International has declared itself solid with this shameful and treacherous attitude. The masses of the working people still under the influence of this International have now a renewed excellent opportunity of reorganizing its true countenance will be roused to the greatest indignation by the cynical decisions of the Prague conference.

NEGRO LABOR CONGRESS UNDER FIRE

By NORVAL ALLEN,
Local Organizer of Congress.

DURING my tour of the Southern states as organizer of the American Negro Labor Congress, I found much discontent among the Negro workers employed in the various industries; the turpentine workers, of Florida; the wages paid these men by their employers are far below the level of decent livelihood. Under these present conditions, it is natural that one finds abundance of discontent does not flow from the propagation of any social doctrines at any time or place but always from economic oppression.

On these turpentine plantations the housing conditions descend to the low degree in which any home-life is a thing impossible and the general arrangement under which the turpentine workers live is that of semi-slavery. Many of the workers in the turpentine industry are men taken from the penal farms and placed there as peons; in 1917 much of the labor on these farms was recruited from the penal farms. The conditions on these farms were of such a character in which the workers were subjected to beating, scanty clothes, insufficient food, etc. This is only typical of the miserable conditions to which a large section of the Negro race of the Southern states is subjected.

THE condition of the Negro miners of West Virginia represents a condition in which we find the white and black worker brot together of realizing a common interest against the employing class. It has been a practice of the operators with the connivance of local authorities to evict strikers on a few days' notice. The coal companies in Ohio and Marshall counties have recently resorted to this practice. Owing to the militant spirit of the miners' organizations, they have been able to gain the concessions; the governor of West Virginia has notified West virginia coal operators that hereafter, eviction of strikers from coal company houses must be in conformity with the law. The governor also assured strike leaders that the right of trial by jury in all eviction cases shall be guaranteed.

The Negro represents the most exploited group in our American life. He is the lowest down and in his struggle for his complete emancipation, his chief and most potent weapon in his industrial strength. The aim of the American Negro Labor Congress is to mobilize, co-ordinate and shapen into a powerful weapon this prime asset—his industrial strength. The charge that the American Negro Labor Congress is the head of a Red movement among Negroes in this country is absolutely untrue. It simply represents a new type of Negro leadership which is now assuming the reins of direction, realizing that the Negro problem today is not a local affair but his its relation to all world phenomena.

The leaders in the American Negro Labor Congress comprehend the fullest significance that the political situation at this time in China has for all oppressed races the world over, that the rise of the Riffian people in Northern Africa is the beginning of a series of uprisings that will result in the complete overthrow of world imperialism that relies for its sole existence on the exploitation, plunder and robbery of the weaker races of the earth.

THE American Negro race problem arises from class exploitation and does not have its origin in the difference of color of skin. No one is born with race prejudice, one can see black and white children playing to gether in the South and in sections where the Negro is most hated. The child does not evince race prejudice or arrogance until brot in touch with capitalist institutions — the school, the press, platform, etc. It is from the institutions that the child develops the venom making for racial conflict and antagonisms, which have always been necessary to the ruling class to maintain their power of exploitation and oppression.

Wine Festival in New York.

NEW YORK—Dear reader, don't be surprised. As good Communists we do not want to violate the eighteenth amendment of our sacred constitution. No, no such thing as that. All there is to it is that the Uj Elore Conference Committee constituted out of the Workers Party branches and fraternal organizations in New York will have a big festival Sept. 6, at Terrace Garden, 58th street and Third avenue, New York City. All comrades are invited not only in order to help cover the deficit of the Hungarian party paper, but in order to have a good time for a whole day with something original, something they have never had thus far. All the fun of the Hungarian folk life will be at hand there, Gypsy music, folk songs, original Hungarian dances performed by the members of the Amateur Society, grape juice, "fresh from the press," singing society and the dancing from noon till next morning.

The Hungarian comrades who were always present at every party affair deserve this attention from the part of the other comrades, besides having a real good time and helping our Hungarian Communist daily to live and thrive.

AN HRACITE DIGGERS DROP PICKS

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

THOSE who believe that the United States government is a government of ALL the people, should watch the administration's move in the present dispute between the anthracite miners and the operators. John Hays Hammond, an unofficial industrial expert of the government has been touring the New England states recently boosting substitutes for hard coal. Great gas mergers have been made in recent months and big business is planning for the future in order to be able to meet any resistance the workers may put up. Unfortunately the labor leaders are not taking such steps.

THE interstate commerce commission, a government body has declared a 10 per cent reduction in freight rates on West Virginia substitute for anthracite shipped to the North Atlantic states. This will save votes for the G. O. P. in New England. It will also lower the cost of production in non-union fields and strike another blow at union coal mining. This is the government in action, and acting very astutely.

ONE of the leading publicists for the railroads declared that the roads were in a position to transport enough bituminous coal to take care of the country's industrial requirements. The railroads and the large coal mines are owned by the same gangs of capitalists. The banks and the insurance companies are behind them. They work together in times of crisis, even tho they may fight like tigers among themselves in normal times.

SO far no attempt has been made by John L. Lewis to prepare for an effective struggle against the operators. He has been too busy fighting the Communists. This may be good for Lewis but it is not so good for the miners. They will find out to their sorrow that they were hurting themselves when they allowed Lewis and his gang to persecute the Communists and the progressives in general in the mining industry. They will learn now that in this crisis only the radicals take any interest in their struggle.

POLAND will pay indemnity to Russia for the burning of Soviet barracks on the border between the two countries set on fire by Polish raiders. In return the Soviet government has agreed to release Polish officers caught trespassing on Russian soil.

PRESIDENT CALLES of Mexico with the aid of the Mexican Federation of Labor, intends ot revise the labor laws of the country so as to make it a punishable offense for a union to go on strike without the sanction of the official labor leaders. Calles is Wall Street's agent in Mexico and his most valuable allies are the reactionary labor leaders.

RECENTLY, during an election in one of the Mexican states there was a contest over the question of who actually won the election. Calles gave the decision to the labor candidate. No doubt this will be given as evidence that Calles in really a friend of labor. Yet such an opinion is far from being the truth. At the El Paso convention of the American Federation of Labor, a deal was made between the American and Mexican federations of labor, whereby the latter was to serve as an agent of American capitalism in Mexico under the supervision and inspiration of the A. F. of L.

THE first step in the carrying out of program was a war of extermination against the Communists. William Green now issues interviews with monotonous regularity on the progress being made by the Mexican labor fakers in expelling Communists from the unions. The A. F. of L. is also behind the Mexican government in the move to outlaw unofficial strikes. And behind it all is Wall Street, whose interests in Mexico are hurt by strikes. Calles is as much a friend of Labor as James Ramsay MacDonald was when he was premier of Great Britain.

PRESSMEN DOWN ULTIMATUM OF BERRY'S BOARD

Clown Cigarette Peddler Given the Razberry

The membership of Chicago Printing Pressmen No. 3, at a general meeting of the union held last Saturday voted unanimously to reject as final the ultimatum of "Majah" Berry's scabby board of directors, that the lookout at the Cuneo Printing company be declared illegal; that all pickets be removed from the plant within forty eight hours; that a notice be posted up in the union headquarters declaring the walkout illegal; that the union stop paying benefits to those participating in the walkout and that the union fill the positions of those who refused to work under scab conditions.

This ultimatum was accompanied by the threat that unless those conditions were complied with the charter of No. 3 would be lifted.

The Clown Peddler Booed

One Berryite in the person of Harry Scheck, a delegate to the Chicago Federation of Labor and promoter of Clown cigarettes took the floor to defend "majah" Berry. He was hooted off the floor after he began paving the way for an appeal to the members to crawl back on their hands and knees to strikebreaker Berry.

Sheck who is one of our local red baiters and Communist haters, tho he does not know what it is all about, began by telling the story about the bull who ran into the oncoming express train. This was as much as to say that the pressmen and feeders who refused to work under scab conditions imposed on them under the name of trade unionism, were lacking in judgement tho he admired them for their pluck. The prosperous and comfortable looking Mr. Scheck was waving the proverbial red flag to the wild bull when he tried to defend scabby George Berry to the members of No. 3. They hopped onto him like

BANKS WREST RAISIN REALM FROM GROWERS

Association in Grip of Financiers

(BY FRAPIESA)

Los Angeles, July 30.—Ralph P. Merritt, general manager of the Sun-Maid Raisin Growers (formerly the California Raisin Crowers Association) issues from Fresno the statement that "the raisin growers have saved themselves" — As is usual with announcement from heads of industries, the satement exemplifies the saying that truthfulness is merely a limitation of falsehood. Merritt is well aware that the growers have saved themselfes for the benefit of the bankers, nothing more or less.

Arrival of Merritt.

In January, 1923, Merritt became managing director of the raisin association. He had been head of the rice growers' assotiation and had delivered that, hog-tied and price-marked-down, to the banks. So, he was ready for another job. As he knew nothing about raisins, he was qualified. He had what is called executive ability.

His principal qualification was understood to be his near relationship to Herbert Hoover, of whom he is a cherished brother-in-law. Very often the association had been threatened with prosecution by the department of

SOCIALISTS UNABLE TO REVIVE PARTY IN LOCAL "CONVENTION"

The socialist party made an unsuccessful attempt to revive their dwindling ranks at a "convention" held in the Douglas Park auditorium, which was followed by a forlorn picnic at Riverview Park.

The socialists had predicted an attendance at the picnic of 15,000, but even the yellow socialist paper 'Forward" declared that only 6,000 showed up. The actual figures are less than 2500 present.

Eugene V. Debs, the principal speaker, made his usual soap box oration, with a few jealous thrusts at the Communists thrown in.

SIGMAN ORDERS BOSSES TO FIRE N. Y. MILITANTS

Joint Committee of Action Makes Exposure

NEW YORK, August 31.—The joint action committee of locals 2, 9 and 22, International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union have addressed an open letter to all New York Cloak and Dressmakers, exposing the aid given by the Sigman machine to the garment bosses.

The letter shows how the employers are discharging union workers at Sigman's orders, but in spite of this, the New York cloak and dressmakers are solidly lined up behind the left wing group.

From the Joint Action Committee
DRIVE THE GANGSTERS FROM THE SHOPS!

Sisters and Brothers:—You cloak and dressmakers have delivered a death blow to the Sigman machine. Through your powerful demonstration you have openly repudiated Sigman and his clique before the entire labor movement, proving that they have lost the right to speak in your name.

At the call of the joint action committee you left your shops giving notice to the bosses that the joint action committee is the embodiment of the great mass power of the cloak and dressmakers. This great demonstration has thrown the Sigman clique into a panic and has driven them to a policy of intrigue and despair.

Sigman Calls In Thugs

They have come to realize that their throne is shaky, that the day is fast approaching when their domination over our union will come to an end and our struggle crowned with victory.

The counteract the great enthusiasm aroused throgh the stoppage, to weaken our forces and demoralize our fighting spirit, they began to spread false rumors of peace, while at the same time initiating a desperate campaign of terrorism at all striking shops.

All their gangster forces were mobilized for the picket line. With a ferocity of beasts they opened a

FOURTH CONVENTION OF WORKERS PARTY CLOSES WITH SINGING OF INTERNATIONALE; PARITY ON C.E.C.

At Sunday evening's session of the Fourth Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party, a motion to adopt as a draft the form of constitution submitted to the convention and to refer it to the incoming C. E. C. with any amendments the delegates might desire, was adopted.

Comrade Wicks rose, under the subject of his appeal against the censure of the C. E. C., and stated that he withdrew his appeal. The report of fraternal delegates was reluctantly dispensed with. The International Workers' Aid was endorsed and all workers called on to rally to this work.

Chairman Foster then read the minutes of the parity commission of Aug. 29, which provided for a Parity Central Executive Committee of ten from each group with a neutral chairman, two of each ten to be proletarians from the shops; also for three candidates for the central committee from each side, to serve as first alternates and be in training for C. E. C. work by attendance at plenary sessions with voice, but no vote.

A Control Commission.

The Parity Commission also provided for a control commission of two from each side, with a neutral chairman to participate in both the control commission and the C. E. C. with the decisive vote. These minutes were unanimously approved and adopted as a guidance for the convention.

Foster Makes Statement.

Before proceeding to the election, Comrade Foster stated that the minutes of the Parity Commission was based on a very recent decision of the Comintern, a decision which had arrived Friday evening. On behalf of the majority he stated that that group was prepared to accept the decision and obey it fully and unconditionally.

"We are Communists," he said, "and realize that when the Communist International speaks it is our duty to obey. Almost instantly the group had accepted the decision in the spirit of true Communists. They believed, however, that the decision of the Comintern had been based upon information which was incorrect and they intended to appeal to the Comintern for a reversal, but in the meantime, the whole group states that it loyally puts the decision into effect and carries out the order of the C. I. one hundred per cent."

Ruthenberg Makes Statement.

Comrade Ruthenberg, speaking for the minority, stated that his group believed that the decision of the C. I. was made for the best interests of the party, that it would unite all the Communist elements for Communist work and that the minority accepted the decision fully and would carry it out.

Comrade Loeb reported for the Press Conference and strongly recommended the necessity of administrative centralization of all the party press with complete control of editorial and business management by a central committee. Not only was this the only Communist policy for political reasons, but for financial reasons of economy and efficiency. The convention then proceeded to elections.

The New C. E. C.

The new Central Executive Committee was then named as follows: From the majority, Foster, Abern, Browder, Bittelman, Burman, Cannon, Dunne, Bud Reynolds and Phil Aronberg as proletarian from shops and the Y. W. L. representative; from the minority were named Ruthenberg, Gitlow, Bedacht, Engdahl, Lovestone, Ballam, Weinstone Minor, and two proletarians White of Ohio and Schmees of Michigan.

Candidates and Alternates.

As candidates the majority named Krumbein, Hathaway and Johnstone; the minority, Puro, Amter and Wolfe. As further alternates were named, by the majority, Manley, Swabeck, Olgin, Sullivan, Owens, Wagenknecht, Gomez, O'Flaherty, and Loeb; from the minority, Jakira, Kruse, Novak, Lifshitz, Bimba, Askenudze, Knudsen, Henry and Kuzenich.

The Control Commission.

For the control commission the majority named Harrison George and Nels Kjar, the minority named David J. Bentall and Felix Henzel.

Following the elections, by viva voce vote of those nominated, Comrade Ruthenberg introduced a resolution, given elsewhere in the DAILY WORKER, and the entire assembly, delegates and visitors, arose and sang the Internationale with profound revolutionary enthusiasm and with cheer after cheer for the Workers Party and the Communist International, the Fourth Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party of America, one

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Aug. 31—Another step in the plans of the Coolidge government to direct attention to the further fortification of Hawaii was to take place today when the two navy planes PB-1 and PN-9 hop off for the Pacific possessions.

WASHINGTON IS NERVOUS OVER COMMUNIST M. P.

Saklatvala May Come to World Conference

By LAURENCE TODD
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, —(FP)— Protests from British tory papers against the coming to Washington, in October, of S. Saklatvala, as a delegate to the 23rd annual conference in the Inter-Parliamentary Union, will probably not result in his being refused an American visa, nor in his being barred from the debates, in spite of the fact that he is a Communist, and a member of the British House of Commons, and a native of Bombay.

Arthur D. Call, executive secretary of the American group in the union, which now comprises 56 senators and 210 congressmen, declares that there is no good reason why a Communist should not attend the session in Washington and "say his say," any less freely than will the fascist delegates from Italy or the royalist delegates from other countries. Saklatvala, like all other members, has joined voluntarily, and if he comes he will take part under the rules, speaking to the questions before the conference.

Grant Freedom of U. S. Port

Unofficial opinion in the state department is that the American consul-general in London will not refuse a visa to a member of parliament who announces that he is coming here to attend the I. P. U. meeting. If he did, the labor membership of the House of Commons, would make an issue of this discrimination as between left and right political opinions, and would make the Washington government ridiculous.

Moreover, the formal letter of invitation, signed by Sen. McKinley of Illinois as general chairman of the conference, declares that "the diplomatic and consular officials of the U. S., located in your country, have been instructed to visa your passport gratis." Freedom from ordinary form-

National Guardsmen Parade as Kluxers, Commander Lenient

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 31.—District of Columbia national guardsmen, in summer camp in Virginia, defied the orders issued by their commander and paraded in white robes and masks with a fiery cross, right up to the commander's tent. He called out the guard, but there was no guard. The parade likewise melted away. When he searched a number of tents he found the guardsmen apparently asleep, but fully clothed. Instead of arresting them, he announced that defiance of his anti-klan parade orders "must stop."

LABOR DAY PICNIC IS DUE TO FURNISH GOOD TIME FOR ALL COMERS

The biggest time in years is due on Labor Day, September 7, when the Trade Union Educational League in combination with the Freiheit will stage a grand and glorious picnic in the cool suburbs of Chicago at Stickney Park, Lyons, Illinois.

All the "fixins" for "eatin" and "drinkin" and "dancin" will be there with games and athletics, fun and politics "an" everything.

Don't make any other date and don't forget the directions, which are: Take 22nd street car to end of line, then take Berwyn-Lyons car, get off at Harlem and Ogden and Ogden avenues and walk six blocks south. A good time is waiting for you there.

ARREST, HOLD 5 CLOTH STRIKERS WITHOUT CAUSE

Booked for 'Disorderly' After 24 Hours

The five strikers from the International Tailoring Co. who were arrested Saturday night and held at the Sheffield avenue police station till 2:30 yesterday morning without being booked will come up in the Sheffield avenue police court this morning charged with disorderly conduct.

They will demand a jury trial for the disorderly conduct charges which have been lodged against them. Among those arrested were Sam Zimmer and Mike De Novi and his brother who is not even a striker. All who were arrested were roughly handled by the police.

The strikers were arrested at Sheridan road and Oakdale street by the flivver squad of the Sheffield police. Since the police had nothing with which to charge them except being strikers they were held at the station without being booked. They were not permitted to get in touch with friends or relatives. When they demanded to know why this was being done they were told they were being held "for identification." Who was expected to indentify them and in connection with what "crime" they were not told.

Questioned While Held.

The police persistently questioned them all during the time they were being held.

When the police saw that they could neither frame them up or get them to talk about non-existent crimes they finally booked them on charges of disorderly conduct.

They were then permitted to phone friends who at once arranged for their release on bonds.

16 Cases Assigned.

The cases of the sixteen strikers who are charged with conspiracy and who were given a change of venue from the court of Judge Lyle had their cases assigned to Judge Albert George. Judge George is now on his vacation and it will probably be a week or more before they get a hearing on the charges against them.

The case of Sidney Rissman who is charged with various "high crimes" in Waukegan will be heard on Sept. 22.

Strike in Tenth Week.

Yesterday the strike against the International and the J. L. Taylor companies entered its tenth week with the picket line as heavily manned as ever and the spirit of the strikers more determined to win.

The DAILY WORKER subscription list is a Communist honor roll. Is your name on it?

HARD COAL PITS DESERTED AS STRIKE BEGINS

160,000 Miners Quit to Enforce Demands

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Aug. 31.—Thruout the anthracite regions workers are leaving mines today as their shifts end. The strike became officially effective at midnight tonight.

Picnics were held yesterday thruout the mining region, while at numerous collieries employers had carpenters erecting "strike fences."

The strike affects approximately 160,000 miners. It was estimated that today more than 50,000 men already have stopped work. Many of these men are said to be contract men whose contracts have expired and it is too late to renew them before the strike call. Of the total number of miners affected, 10,000 will be retained as maintenance crews during the suspension. There will be [illegible] mines shut down during suspension of work. 325 locals of the miners' union are involved.

Headquarters at Philadelphia.

All thru the coal regions loaded trains were moving today. Empty cars were rumbling into Pottsville-Shamokin district to carry forth the anthracite already mined.

The United Mine Workers of America will direct the strike from headquarters in this city at the Bellevue Stratford hotel. Division headquarters have been established at Scranton, Wilkes-Barre and Hazleton.

Expect Long Struggle.

There was every indication today that both miners and coal operators were preparing for a prolonged shut-down.

Both sides maintained a virtually silent attitude. The only statements given out were but reiterations that the operators and miners are standing pat on the same demands which led up to the strike.

823 Mines Stopped.

The two strike orders, one calling for the suspension of work and one arranging for the retention of maintenance of way men in the pits to prevent flooding, were issued to the locals.

Eight hundred and twenty-three mines are affected by the strike. The miners demand a ten per cent increase in tonnage rates, $1.00 a day increase for day workers, the "check off" and betterment of working conditions.

There are estimated to be 500,000

Endurance Drive for Soviet Auto Orders Crossing Caucasus

MOSCOW, U.S.S.R., Aug. 31.—The first fatality of the international automobile 3,000-mile reliability run has been reported. Verley, a German chauffeur ate a cone of ice cream in the village of Artemovsk and died three hours later at Rostov. At the request of the other foreign drivers, the run was halted for the day while the cars formed a funeral cortege to the cemetery.

Of thirty-eight motorcycles in the race three have gone into ditches. The truck section, whose course is the shortest, is expected to finish in Moscow today. The hardest part of the course for the passenger cars, that from Rostov to Tiflis across the Caucasus, is still ahead of the drivers.

Mines Shut Down Before Strike

HAZELTON, Pa., August 31.—The first anthracite mine to shut down preliminary to the general strike is the Oneida one operated by Lehigh Valley Coal Co. Coal on hand that needed breaking before marketing caused the early shut down.

"SCIENTIFIC" MATERIAL OF GERMAN FASCISTS DISCLOSED BY SOVIET COURT TO BE CASE OF POISONS

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R.—The trial of the German fascists Kindermann, Wolscht and Dittmar, who entered the Soviet Union to murder "several hundred Communists" brot out that the members of the German Organization Consul attempted to "get at the Soviet leaders." The "scientific material", with which the fascists entered the Soviet Union, was brot into court, and proved to be large quantities of deadly poison.

BRITISH SEAMEN'S STRIKE IS EXTENDED AS MEN REFUSE TO ACCEPT ONE POUND WEEKLY CUT

SOUTHAMPTON, England, August 31.—Efforts to extend the seamen's strike and paralyze ocean shipping were made more effective today when the crew of the liner Arlanza which is due to sail for Buenos Ayres on Friday, refused to sign on under the new scab agreement, signed by Havelock Wilson, head of the union. At mass meetings held yesterday and today seamen have been urged not to sign on at the new wages. A strike committee has been formed and efforts will be made to bring about a general strike tieing up all shipping.

FOURTH W. P. CONVENTION ENDS ITS SESSIONS

of the landmarks of Communism in America, came to an end at 10 p. m. Sunday, August 30, 1925.

Sunday, August 30th was the last day of the Fourth Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party of America, and was opened by an agreement to limit discussion in order to finish with that session. The subjects up wear as follows: Liquidation of Loreism, Agrarian Work, Women's Work, Negro Work, the Young Workers League, Finance Report, Constitution Committee Repost and Election of the Central Executive Committee.

Chairman Foster announced that news had arrived of the death of two active comrades, Isai Yakovlevich Hoorgin, manager of the Amtorg Trading Corporation, and Efraim Markovich Sklianski, also connected with Amtorg—the directing organ of trade between Soviet Russia and America—both of whom had been drowned in Long Lake in the Adirondacks on Thursday. As a mark of honor to these comrades who have passed for us, the convention rose and stood in silence for one minute.

Poyntz Draws Censure.

The main debate on the Liquidation of Loreism was given in last minute news in yesterday's DAILY WORKER. Juliet Stuart Poyntz in defending herself against the resolution of censure and admonition unanimously proposed by the appeal committee, sharply attacked the leading comrades of the majority declaring that they were the right wing.

She declared that there was no Lore group now in New York, that it was all broken up and that all who opposed Lore as she did, had taken up arms against the majority. She said the resolution on herself had nothing to do with Bolshevization. She was faithful to the principles of the C. I. and was ready to swear belief in the father, son and holy ghost.

Browder Excoriates Poyntz.

Comrade Earl R. Browder, speaking upon the Lore resolution as well as upon the Poyntz resolution, declared that no Communist could be put in the right wing by a document, but only by his or her own acts.

Poyntz' speech, he declared, had proven her an 18 carat Loreite. She had exhibited every evidence of opportunist theory. She had spoken of party principles as of religious formulae, with her talk about swearing to believe in the father, son and holy ghost; she has perceived no political issue between the real right wing and the Central Executive Committee, she inferred that the difference between Wortis and Zimmerman on one side and Bittelman and Cannon on the other side, were mere personal squabbles; she rejects Communist discipline, as all opportunists do, under cover of an opposition to "machine rule" and "mechanical majorities;" she has failed to fight for the party point of view in any non-party group, but within the party she waged a bitter fight against any group with which she was not at the time allied.

Weinstone Castigates Position of Poyntz.

Comrade Weinstone declared that it was impossible for Poyntz to appear in a Communist position. Her position on the LaFollette question was not that of the C. I., nor had it been in the Trotsky question. In many ways she had departed from the Communist line. There were instances in all revolutionary parties, as cited by Marx, when those who wished to follow a correct line of policy were "unconscious opportunists." Poyntz must reorientiate herself, this resolution would put her to the test. If she would correct her line of policy, she may give service to the party, and we should keep those who intend to serve the party and correct all their deviations.

Comrades Cannon, Foster, Amter, Ruthenberg and Bittelman followed Weinstone, speaking on the question of Loreism, and by unanimous vote on the three separate resolutions, the Parity Commisison resolution of the Liquidation of Loreism, the resolution expelling Lore from the party, and the resolution declaring that Poyntz is a follower of Loreism, censuring her for this and admonishing her to correct her policies, all were passed.

Olgin Makes Statement.

Comrade Olgin was given the floor to correct certain statements against his Communist integrity made by Poyntz and other comrades during the present and previous debates. He challenged those who had made these statements to bring forth proof or keep silent, as to impugn the integrity of a leading comrade was to injure his work in the lower party units and before the working class. His work in written articles and speeches since he joined the Workers Party would show his close adherence to the Comintern, or his divergence. From these bring proof or abandon loose accusations.

Communications were read form the Hartford, Connecticut, Kuomintang party and the Los Angeles Young Workers League. Delegate Rönn's communication on co-operatives was referred to the incoming C. E. C. and the lengthy protest of the South Slavic Federation at the seating of Comrade Fisher as a fraternal delegate was recorded in the minutes.

Party Support to Anthracite Miners.

The convention unanimously passed a resolution pledging the full support of the party to the anthracite strikers, moved by Comrade Schachtman, and a resolution moved by Olgin to extend to the left wing fighters of the New York locals the admiration and support of the convention also passed with a roar of applause.

Comrade Knudson spoke briefly upon the Peasants' International and agrarian work of the party in this country and the resolution of the Parity Commission on agrarian work was passed without debate, as was that on Women's Work.

Negro and Youth Work.

Comrade Dunne reported for the C. E. C. upon Negro work, followed by Comrade Minor for the minority. These are expected to be published later. Debate on this issue was shared by Gomez, Wolfe, Schatchman, Wicks, Johnstone and Whiteman, whereupon the resolution of the Parity Commission was carried unanimously.

Comrade Williamson reported upon the work of the Young Workers League, sketching the growth and change in the league from social groups and study classes to a body of action, a political force in American industry. The league had led even the party on shop nuclei and become a political force to contest the rule of American capital.

Y. C. I. Supports League National Committee.

The minority in the party had tried to attack the National Executive Committee of the League thru using the immature political elements in the league against the National Committee and against the party majority. But the unanswerable argument was that the Young Communist International had ruled against the minority in the league and expressed its fullest confidence that the present National Executive Committee would carry out the policies of both the Y. C. I. and the Comintern.

Kaplan spoke for the minority, denying that the league had grown or has accomplished the tasks it should, and stating that the National Committee of the league had furnished the Y. C. I. with incorrect information which had led to the Y. C. I. support of the league's national committee.

Comrades Browder, Zam, Manley, Weinstone, Schachtman and Statchel spoke. Williamson summed up and the Parity Commission on Work Among the Youth was passed unanimously. Adjournment was taken until evening.

HISTORIC DAY OF COMMUNISM IN AMERICA NOTED BY CONVENTION

With cheers and singing of the International, the Fourth Convention the Workers (Communist) Party adjourned Sunday after passing the following resolution introduced by Comrade Ruthenberg:

• • • •

The closing day of the Fourth National Convention of our party falls on the sixth anniversary of the day on which our party definitely split from the socialist party and on the eve of the day of the formation of the Communist Party.

Thru six years our party has held aloft the banner of Communism and the Communist International in the United States. Thru years of persecution, or deportation and imprisonment our party has stood firm and continued the struggle to revolutionize the American workers and mobilize them for the fight against capitalism, and for the establishment of a Soviet government and for a Communist society in the United States.

The Fourth National Convention marks a new epoch in the history of our party. It has taken the steps to clear our party of right wing influences and tendencies and shown the way for the Bolshevization of the party. It has adopted correct statements of principle and policies for the guidance of the work of our party. Our party goes on from this convention to new and greater achievements for the revolutionary struggle and Communism.

The Fourth National Convention calls upon all party units hereafter to celebrate this anniversary by holding of special mass meetings at which the history of our party and its struggle in the interests of the workers shall be discussed and special efforts be made to draw into the party the most advanced and militant workers of this country.

STRIKERS MAY PICKET IN N. Y. DESPITE WRIT

Amalgamated Scores Against International

NEW YORK, August 31.—For the present the teeth have been pulled out of the most sweeping injunction issued in New York, the injunction secured by the International Tailoring company against the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union which aimed to prevent all union activities within ten blocks of the company. Justice Levy ruled in the supreme court that the five Amalgamated members who were arrested for picketing J. L. Taylor and Co., in the same building as the International Tailoring Co., were not guilty of contempt of court because of the International's injunction.

The union considers the ruling a victory in that it permits picketing of any firm but the International in the New York market. Justice Levy said from the bench: "it strikes me that this is the most far-fetched proceeding that has ever been brought to my notice." Magistrate Goodman discharged these same five pickets last week on their first hearing in spite of the argument of counsel for the two companies that they were really one.

Attorney Max Steuer argued for the union that J. L. Taylor and Co. was hardly a "skeleton" when it paid income tax of $45,414.42 separately from the $64,237.23 paid by the International and had entirely separate officers.

Maurice Deiches attempted to persuade justice Levy for the two companies that J. L. Taylor and company pickets acted "in collusion, combination and conjunction" with strikers of International Tailoring Co. and hence were guilty under that section of the injunction which restrains all persons "acting in aid of or in conjunction with" international workers.

The Amalgamated is striking against the two firms because they refused to renew agreements with the union. The union is striking against the Chicago shops of the companies which have an agreement, made since the strike, with United Garment Workers.

a small army of bumble bees and when they got thru buzzing him, Harry looked like the picture of the clown on the cigarette pack he peddles to the members of organized labor.

Scheck Got the Onion

"Shut up, you yellow-bellied labor skate" shouted one brawny pressman, and others took up the cry. Harry gallantly tried to make himself heard but without success. He tried to win favor by denouncing the Communists but the pressmen saw The DAILY WORKER on the picket line and knew that Harry Scheck was selling pajamas and Bull Durham for his own profit when the much abused Communists were helping them to defeat the employers.

Scheck got the raspberry alright and when he gets upon the floor of the Chicago Federation of Labor again to join in the crusade against the Communists, he will not be able to say that his local union is back of him any more than "pink haired" Charlie Wills of the Machinists Union, another pie card artist whose antiradical tirades were repudiated by the machinists.

"Majah" Berry's dummy board of directors, which includes "Marble Top" Marks, also warned Franklin Union No. 4 not to hold any more joint board or general membership meetings with Pressmen's local No. 3. This ukase will be more honored in the breach than in the observance, say the feeders.

At the pressmen's meeting it was stated that The DAILY WORKER was the only daily paper in this city that had a good word for the men who were fighting the Cuneo bosses and the international crooks.

The Three Wise Fools.

James Cahill, a member of the pressmen's union and delegate to the Chicago Federation of Labor sailed into the Communists. Cahill was once a leading light in the now defunct Farmer-Labor Party. After the July 3 convention, when Fitzpatrick broke with the progressives and radicals, Cahill was so reactionary that he could not go along with Fitzpatrick. Cahill lined up with a discredited legal hack by the name of Rodriguez and a gooseberry bush evangelist by the name of Gifford Ernest. This trio did not last long in the political game because they lacked brains and common honesty.

Cahill boasted to the pressmen of his brave stand against Communism. "I have always fought every inroad of Communism" he said. "That's not to your credit" shouted big Chris Larsen, who gave Cahill to understand that the Communists were fighting on the side of the workers while their enemies were in the capitalist camp. Cahill looked exceedingly uncomfortable and Larsen appeared as if he could debate the question any way Cahill wanted.

Red Baiters Unpopular

Anti-Communist ranters were not popular with the pressmen who it appears are more intelligent than the capitalist politicians think.

The membership meeting instructed the officers to inform "Majah" George L. Berry of the strikebreaking tactics of his dummy executive board. They know very well that even tho George's name is not signed to the board's letter that the "majah" is behind everything they do. They want to smoke out the "majah" so that he may not be able to unload the blame on the four lackeys who sign the board's orders.

Glass Workers Fight for No Cut

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Aug. 31.—Windowglass workers and employers are deadlocked over renewal of the wage scale. About 1200 workers are represented by delegates from two unions in negotiations. Employers want a restoration of 1923-24 wages which workers claim is equivalent to an 11 per cent reduction. Workers demand continuation of the present scale.

Nurmi a Finnish Knight

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—Coincident with the announcement of the floating of a $15,000,000 loan to the bank of Finland by American bankers comes news that Paavo Nurmi, champion distant runner, is now a Finnish knight and possesses the order of the White Rose decoration. President Reland of Finland conferred the honors on Nurmi upon his return from America in recognition of the runner's advancement of Finnish finance through his athletic prowess.

Austro-German Union Will Not Pave the Way to United States of Europe

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the continued cracking of the Versailles peace disturbs all Europe, with direful echoes carried into every corner of the world.

The Austro-German Union is again on Europe's political bill of fare, with the French imperialists having absolutely no stomach for this dish that is so pleasing to British capitalist statesmen, as well as to the "Deutschland Ueber Allee" diplomats at Berlin and Vienna.

It is not for nothing that French statesmen wail that if Germany annexes Austria, "it will have won the war and upset all peace treaties." But it was Lenin who long ago pointed out that European contradictions would set at naught the terms of the Versailles Peace, under the banner of which the French thought that they had won the world war.

Under the propelling power of dire necessity, the Austro-German Union is being forced, not to bring peace to Europe, but to open the way for new war dangers, not to establish a "united German republic in the midst of a United States of Europe," peacefully, but to create new balances of power, that will topple again when capitalist rivalries flare into new conflicts.

American financiers have done their best to bolster up Austria, the petted orphan of the League of Nations. But the results have been nil. In spite of the optimistic reports that have been issued regularly by Wall Street, the confession comes again from the League's experts that Austria cannot continue to support the present black economic situation that confronts her. Austria must turn to Germany or strangle in the midst of the Balkanized Europe that was carved out by the peacemakers at Versailles.

Against the interests of the French, even as she wages her diplomatic struggle in Syria and other spots over the globe where France is having her troubles, Great Britain takes advantage of this mid-European development. The British have their troubles in China, where the successful struggle of the great oriental republic will have tremendous repercussions in India, and the Near East. The British support the German claims in the proposed security pact, to create at least temporary tranquility in Europe. The British would have the Hindenburg government tear up the Rappalo Treaty with the Soviet Union, and take a stand with London as against Moscow. All this while President Paul Loebe, head of the German reichstag, tells the Austrians that the German aim is to establish peacefully the "United States of Europe".

In all of these plans the capitalist statesmen take no ac- own borders. German labor agonizes under the Dawes plan. count of the restless, rising tide of discontent within their French labor rebels at foreign wars. Strikes sweep little Belgium. England witnesses continuous industrial upheavals, for which it can find no solution. Fascism in Italy, Spain and elsewhere, blindly plunges from crisis to crisis. All this testifies to the bankrupt economy of capitalist Western Europe.

Half of Europe is already under the Soviet banner. The only workable economy that will come out of a united Europe, must be the creation not of a capitalist United States of Europe, but of an All-European Soviet Union.

Herr Loebe still demands "self-determination, as provided by the Versailles Treaty and promised by Woodrow Wilson." He goes to the capitalist graveyard for inspiration.

The workers of Germany, of France, of Belgium, of Great Britain, of the Scandinavian and other countries, have sent their delegations to the Soviet Union, to bring back unanimously the message of the Russian victory of the proletarian dictatorship.

It is significant that the Germans, even the social-democrats among them, found their greatest delight in the efficient, well-disciplined Soviet Red Army, that the conditions of the Russian working class were better than those faced by the German workers, that there can no be "peaceful" road, but one of bitter and courageous struggle, to the goal that establishes the liberation of all labor.

The proposed Austro-German union is merely another outbreak attesting the incurable disease that afflicts the whole body of that section of Europe still capitalist. Europe will never be rid of this disease until capitalism is destroyed. What applies to Europe applies to the whole world.

Sigman Orders the Garment Bosses to Fire Militants vicious attack on the strikers, provoking fights and causing wholesale arrests.

To save themselves from utter defeat staring them in the face, they have now resorted to the "injunction method" which has been universally condemned by the labor movement. In a sworn affidavit by the Roth Costume Co., 550 Seventh Ave. it is clearly stated that the International ordered the firm to discharge workers, promising to send scabs to take their places, the International were now instrumental in securing the injunction against the strikers.

Their talk of "peace" on the one hand, and the renewed campaign of terrorism betray the sinister motives of the Sigman clique. They aim to weaken our fighting forces and bring demoralization into our ranks so that they may recuperate from our last blow and start a new attack on the membership.

Machine Crumbling

Cloak and Dressmakers:

You are well acquainted with the treacherous tactics of the Sigman machine. Do not permit yourselves to be mislead through their intrigues and falsehoods.

Our struggle has reached a stage where the machine is crumbling. You have bravely withstood all previous attacks. Now, more than ever, we must mobilize our fighting forces. Come in thousands on the picket line.

Break the last desperate effort of the machine to save itself through gangster methods.

Cal Passes Buck to Congress.

Pinchot Keeps Hands Off.

WAYNESBURG, Pa., August 31.—Governor Gifford Pinchot, who arrived here today, declared he had nothing further to add to his previous statement that he would not concern himself with the hard coal strike. Pinchot ended the 1923 strike after it had continued seventeen days. He induced the mine union officials to accept part of their demands and return to work.

COMMUNIST MEET VOTES TO SUPPORT THE ANTHRACITE STRIKERS

The following resolution introduced by Max Schachtman was unanimously adopted by the 4th convention of the Workers (Communist) Party on Sunday, July 30:

THE strike of over 150,000 miners in the anthracite field is a working class struggle of the first importance. The pressure of the rank and file of the United Mine Workers' Union has forced the reactionary president of the union, John L. Lewis, to issue the call for the strike after useless attempts to break down the opposition of the operators to the check off and the wage increase.

The national convention of the Workers (Communist) Party of America hails this struggle of the anthracite miners. We point out that the miners have many enemies to face in this strike. Already the Interstate Commerce Commission is preparing to break the strike with surplus coal. Coolidge, the arch-reactionary strike breaker is discussing ways and means of doing the same thing.

Lewis, the supporter of Coolidge, will continue his black record of betrayal by sacrificing the interests of the miners at the crucial moment. Lewis, who has been the prime figure in the campaign of persecution of the progressive elements in the union, and who has consistently opposed every forward measure for the benefit of the rank and file, cannot be depended upon to lead the strike to a successful conclusion.

The convention of the Workers (Communist) Party reminds the miners of the previous experiences that the workers have had in such fights. All the machinery of the capitalists have been brutally arrayed in an effort to suppress the efforts of the workers to improve their conditions. From the treasonable union leaders, to the kept judges in court, and the armed militia and troops of the government—the tool of the bosses—a united front has been presented against every movement of the workers.

The miners must call upon the railway workers to join them in a united front against the operators. The miners must follow up the endorsement they have given to the idea of a labor party by uniting with all other working class bodies for the formation of a party of the workers.

Miners! Fight your own battles on the economic and political fields! No co-operation with the bosses! Down with arbitration, the scheme of the fakers for the betrayal of the workers!

The Workers (Communist) Party pledges the fullest and most hearty support to the miners' strike. We call upon the workers thruout the country to get behind the struggle of the anthracite miners!

1. Demand a fight to the victorious end against the operators!
2. Refuse the fake of arbitration.
3. Fight against any attempts to kill the strike by injunction!
4. Refuse to yield on your demand for complete recognition of the union!
5. Demand the united support of the railwaymen and the bituminous miners!
6. Unite for a Labor Party!

That worker next door to you may not have anything to do tonight. Hand him this copy of the DAILY WORKER.

BELGIAN METAL WORKERS AIDED IN BITTER FIGHT

Bosses Ask Wage Cuts to Meet Competition

By LAURENCE TODD.

(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

Recognition by European workers that they must support each other irrespective of national boundaries is being forced home by the international attempt of the employing class to depress standards on the ground of foreign competition.

Today large donations are going from unions in other countries to help 80,000 Belgian metal workers win their strike against a 5 per cent wage cut proposed by the Belgian Iron and Steel Masters.

Face German Competition

The contributions have come none soon for the treasuries of the Belgian unions are depleted by the strike which has been on since June 15. Belgian employers insist that the wage cut is necessary to meet competition from iron and steel products made by workers in France and Germany. And the Belgian government has aided this argument by ordering a floating dock, [illegible] barges and a large quantity of rails from Germany.

Export statistics issued by U. S. department of commerce show that the Dawes plan is working out for the benefit of the Franco-German steel interests, enabling them to undercut the workers in Great Britain and the United States. Since the agreement became effective French steel makers, closely allied with J. P. Morgan, have been steadily forging ahead in the world market. French iron and steel exports in the first half of 1925 led the world. Comparing the results of the first half year they have increased from 1,232,616 tons in 1923 to 1,806,218 in 1924 and 2,076,026 tons in 1925. At the same time French demand for iron and steel from other countries has fallen from 304,435 tons in 1923 and 406,592 tons in 1924 to 111,346 tons in 1925.

U. S. Exports Declining

In contrast the department of commerce reports exports of iron and steel from Great Britain and the United States to be declining. In the first half of 1925 England lost her premier position while exports from this country amounted to less than 41 per cent of those from France. The figures are 842,287 tons from the United States and 1,331,556 from England compared with 2,073,026 from France.

German exports have not yet been reported for the full half year but in the first quarter they were more than half again as large as those from the United States. French and German steelmakers together export more iron and steel than Britain and America.

Our Readers' Views

Pleased with DAILY WORKER.

To the DAILY WORKER: Myself, and other railroad men have been readers of your paper for several months and we are well pleased with the news that it contains that will help all working men if they will stop look and listen and follow your advice of how to get rid of the labor fakers in our ranks.

As things look to me the rank and file have only two privileges: To pay dues or not to pay dues. I am not trying to give advice but I feel it would help the sale of the DAILY WORKER among the railroad men if you would expose some of the fakers we havein our rangs.

The Order of Railroad Conductors at their convention in Minneapolis, Minn., May 4, 1925, passed a motion that they would not pay any of their old conductors any funds out of the pension department for three years, as they claimed the funds were getting low, but I notice they had enuf money to raise the grand lodge officers' salaries and give a pension of $2,000 per year to past presidents.

Some of the old conductors belonged to the pension department for years and their pension was all they had to live on, but what do the grand lodge fakers care for that?

Yours very truly,

USE POLICE SPIES TO EFFECT THE MURDER OF POLISH WORKERS, IGNORE CONSTITUTION, TORTURES CONTINUE

WARSAW, Poland.—Political prosecutions in Poland are the typical methods of prosecution for one's convictions.

This inspite of Paragraphs 100, 104, 105 and 109 of the Polish bourgeois constitution, which guarantees its citizens "the rights of free expression of opinion and faith," "freedom of the press," and the "freedom of meetings, formation of unions and societies," and the "inviolability of dwellings."

In Poland children are arrested and tried for their opinions, for spreading revolutionary Marxism, for publicist activities, for taking part in the parliamentary, municipal and friendly society election—they are prosecuted and sentenced: 17-year-old youngsters are sentenced to long terms of penal servitude. In free and united Poland there are three penal codes and three different kinds of legal trials.

Death for Workers.

The Polish public prosecutor even took a leaf out of the book of the Austrian and Prussian absolutism, in order to fish up the effete paragraphs, which had long gone out of use, of "high treason and low treason." On the ground of these paragraphs, the Communist propaganda, the sticking of proclamations and even the pronunciation of a speech are all capital crimes which may be punished with death.

On these grounds Private Segal, suspected of Communist agitation, was sentenced to death by a court martial in Cracow; the Przemysl prosecutor counted on sentencing Comrade Lantsutsky on these same grounds. Comrade Lantsutsky and many others (the Swiato-Yoursky trial in Lodz) escaped the gallows only because the trial by jury still exists in the late Austrian part of Poland; these juries are not quite completely under the control of the state and do not act so automatically as do the courts of officials, who bring in the verdicts ordered by their masters.

Demonstrations Saved Lantsutsky

The trial of Com. Lantsutsky, the enormous demonstration by which the world proletariat interfered with the criminal intention of the Polish government, most decidedly affected the jury and likewise the course of the whole case because in old Russian Poland, in spite of the confirmed constitution, which says: "that all political cases must be tried before a jury," the trial by jury has not yet been instituted. This time it will be far more difficult to snatch Comrade Lantsutsky from the hands of the Warsaw court.

There should be no people in Poland so naive as to assert that a political trial has something or other in common with super-class justice (unbiassed). Here we have a simple struggle against the sowing of social-political ideas amongst the working mass, and a case of vendetta against and weakening of the prominent labor leaders.

There are two kinds of political trials in Poland, namely, public (society) and national.

The number of political trials in the provinces increases day by day and embraces large numbers of people. In April and May, 1925, apart from the trials of the Ukraine delegates—Sasintchuk, Tchukumal and Kositsky, who are accused under Paragraph 129 and 154 of the imperial penal code with a maximum penalty of six years hard labor, 8 other big trials took place, embracing 200 people. Three of them were sentenced to death, and the rest received between them a few hundred years penal servitude. The arrests are so numerous that a daily arrest of a few hundred persons is now a matter of course.

Unbelieveably cruel beatings accompany these arrests, and appeals in parliament of the Ukraine and White Russian deputies speak of continuous abuses, the number of which waxes to awful proportion.

184 Years at Hard Labor.

In 1919 the law reports contained only one political trial in Warsaw—whereas this year, during May only, the circuit court inquired into 35 political cases, embracing 242 persons, two of whom were acquitted, 169 cases being remanded, the rest receiving a total of 184 years had labor.

The courts of appeal this month examined 18 cases, involving 29 persons. Eight of these were acquitted, the rest received sentences totaling to 61 years. The supreme court examined the vedict against two accused persons, and in each case confirmed the sentences totalling four years. The "political crimes" in the case of those accused, consisted only of propaganda, and did not go out of bounds of political activities. People are sentenced for hanging up proclamations, for gathering subscriptions for political prisoners; on the suspicion and denouncement of agents provocateurs. We quote as an example the notice in a bourgeois newspaper, and this is quite enough to serve as a startling example of the mutual relation in Polish society; the Republic writes: "The case was heard yesterday in the circuit assizes of V. Yourchuk, a worker, who was accused of distributing strike appeals at a meeting."

Yourchuck was sentenced to two years hard labor and also to deprivation of his civil rights.

Political Provocation.

Still another reproach falls on the Polish court, namely, the system of political provocation, which is recognized by the Polish court as normal and legal. That which the prosecutor says that the trial is taken for granted and this verdict is based, even though there were absolutely no other evidence.

The czarist government at least tried to shield its provocators. In cases of extreme need as witness, then he had to take his stand with the accused at the bar, and share his responsibility with the rest. He only received a lighter sentence. In Poland the provocator is assured of complete immunity from punishment. This is what really happened in the case of Baginsky and Vetcherkevitch, afterwards tortured by Provocator Zechnowsky, who acting under police prosecution, conveyed bombs and prepared assassinations, being aided in his work by other secret service agents.

All the participators in this action were either agents provocators or those trusted by them, and out of an invisible 40 members of a ninvisible organization only two stood at the bar. All the material of their prosecution consisted of the avowed provocator Zechnowsky. Other evidence was only a mass of lies and fiction which during the trial vanished in a soap bubble when pricked. But this Provocator Zechnowsky took a part in the crime. He should have also been at the bar with the accused and not decide the question of life and death of two innocent officers.

A great number of political trials took place under the shameful banner of provocation. In the Lods trial of the Communist youth provocator Lutchak was witness for the prosecution. After a few months the same provocator Lutchak was killed by a member of the Communist youth, Engel.

Young Communist Shot.

The Engel's trial is, by the way, another striking proof as to what large degree the Polish court depends on the secret political police.

Eighteen-year-old Engel was shot after being sentenced to death by a court martial. Engel was shot for the only reason that the secret service demanded his death, and the military tribunal without hesitation fulfilled the commands of its administrational government. The verdicts brot in often depend on the judges. Once a Russian monarchist from Kherson, Adam Gribowski boasted that "he gave a little Jew five years hard labor only because he trinically smiled during the prosecutor's speech," and added the judge, "let the court of appeals make the sentence lighter." It should be added that the court of appeal nowadays never lightens sentences.

It should be noted, that the Polish prisoners, before appearing on trial, has to pass thru an inquiry prison—an inquiry which rarely lasts less than a year, and as a rule lasts two and more. Even the government commission of the parliament discovered prisoners who had been confined for two and one-half years and more.

The preliminary "inquiry" arrest is not taken into consideration in hard labor sentences.

Joseph Pilsudsky made a speech on the subject, "The Psychology of the Prisoner," in which he recounted his sufferings in the imperial prisons and ended his speech with the declaration that: "The present happy, young Polish generation does not understand the meanng of the words—poverty, prison and hard labor."

Communist "Pravda" Replies to Bauer

MOSCOW—(By Mail)—An article published in the Pravada entitled "Right Cynicism and Left Hypocrisy" draws a parallel between the attitude of Karl Kautsky and Otto Bauer. The latter has recently criticized Kautsky in the publication "The Struggle."

As opposed to Kautsky, Bauer recognises that Bolshevism has fighting revolutionary tendencies, that the party of the Bolsheviki is undoubtedly supported by a section of the proletariat, that it is undoubtedly a socialist party. After this Bauer writes of the "war aims" of the Bolsheviki and thus reveals the game of the bourgeoisie. Bauer writes shamelessly about "despotic socialism."

The delegation of the workers from the shops could teach him that there is no despotism in Soviet Russia. According to Bauer, Dan and Abramovitch took up a correct attitude towards Bolshevism when, without amalgamating themselves with it, they defended it against the counter-revolution. Between Kutsky and Dan there is no difference of principle, both are convinced enemies of the Soviet power—writes the Pravda—Bauer is hypocritical when he draws a distinction.

There is no country in the world outside of Russia with a revolutionary socialist government and Bauer makes common cause with Dan and Abramovitch who are the worst enemies of the Soviet power and who work for its destruction. After that what are all Bauer's phrases worth?

KIDS MINDS TO BE DOPED WITH SATURDAY MOVIES

Plutes' Newest Form of Propaganda

By WM. F. KRUSE

The effect of the movies in moulding the minds of the millions of boys and girls who go to the showhouse every chance they get is not altogether satisfactory to the magnates in control of the industry, nor to their political advisors in the high councils of the capitalist class. They are not content with getting these millions of young minds into an environment where the reality of everyday life is completely shut out, and there filling them with an illusion world always friendly to the present capitlist system and hostile to the organized labor movement. Sometimes the pictures shown are so badly faked that the youngsters catch on for themselves, sometimes, the more rarely, they are so close to important truth that even the youngest in the audience gets the idea — in either case it starts them thinking, and the movies are planned by the capitalists to stop that very thing. The films are meant to entertain, to stop serious thought not to encourage it.

The political combine of the leading big film producers, "The Motion Picture Producers and Distributors", headed by Will Hays, is not only trying to prevent the making of pictures contrary to their ideas of American institutions and conditions, but they are trying to see to it that such as are made are so put together that audience of children will be most potently influenced in favor of what the capitalst want.

Special Saturday Shows.

The program was outlined as follows in The Chicago Daily News: "The leading men in the business now acknowledge that a vital and definite responsibility rests on the producers with respect to the type of pictures shown to children. This summer an experiment is being made in thirty-two key cities of a special performance on Saturday morning for boys and girls, at a special 10-cent admission fee. From among 3300 selected reels enough material was chosen to complete fifty-two programs—a year's supply—each program made up of 8 reels. The pictures had to be chosen with care and skill to avoid too much educational material and retain the entertainment value."

We thus see that the masters fear the stimulation of independent thought even from "educational" pictures, so these are kept to a miniumum, perhaps to win over such parents as hold misgiving on the capitalist character of the movies. It is said that the children will not come to "educational pictures", but this is only a part of the broad campaign to keep the American youth as shallow minded as possible, to build up a prejudice against all serious thought supposedly represented in the films by the educational picture. In Soviet Russia today every educational picture draws big crowds, young and old, into the largest and finest houses.

These "Saturday Morning Movies" impinge upon the last free time left to the child, five days are taken by the State in school, one is closed season for the church, and now the seventh is to go to the film propagandist. All seven are pre-empted by the various agencies of capitalism and this dual recognition on their part of the importance of the children — and of the motion picture as a means—should make all Communists, and especially the Communist children themselves, more detremined than ever to organize sturdy, class-conscious, self-reliant childrens' groups against the master class and poison in school, church and movie.

Workers Must Get Busy

The films have a big advantage over the other agencies of capitalist youth control. No child has to be driven or coaxed into the movies, as is the case with church and school. In Atlanta, Ga., 1400 boys and girls came out to a show on a rainy morning; in Jacksonville, Fla., 1,340; in Rochester, N. Y., 2,704; in South Norwalk, Conn., 1,184. Here are masses of youngsters, and they are being reached along an avenue on which they are most impressionable. The labor movement in self-defense, as well as because of the duty it owes to its own children, back-fire against this insidious raid upon the class allegience of its young. The only way to fight capitalists films is with workers films.

More Communist children groups are needed — and more and better attention to those formed. More literature should be made available for them to help win over material that will enable them to carry on the school struggle against reactionary teachers more effectively. But by no means least in importance, the full use of the picture, still and in motion, to bring before members and masses the truth about the living and working conditions of their class to point the remedy in the organized struggle of their class; and the pledge of success and victory contained in the Russian workers republic.

LIBERALS' "INVESTIGATION" OF POLISH TERROR A FAKE, TORTURE OF PRISONERS THERE CONTINUES

WARSAW, Poland, August 31.—During the international congress of the Friends of the League of Nations, which closed at the end of July, 1925, Messrs. Olar, vice-president of the League for the Protection of the Rights of Man, and his friend, F. Bunsen, visited Warsaw. A year ago, Mr. Olar withdrew his signature from the protest of the group of French social workers against white terror in Poland on the plea that "he was insufficently informed." One would expect that Messrs Olar and Bunsen would want to use they stay in Poland to get proper information on Polish prison conditions, on the treatment meted out by the authorities to political prisoners and finally on the question whether white terror really existed in Poland.

To make this task easier for Mr. Olar, I paid him a visit on behalf of the Association of Polish Free Thinkers in his room in the hotel Europe in Warsaw.

Our conversation was as follows: "It was stated in the press that you are interested in the organization of Polish prisons. Is it true that you intend to visit them?"

"Unfortunately, I will not be able to spare the time for this," answered Mr. Olar. "One cannot give time to everything. But you are here on behalf of the Association of Free Thinkers. Can you tell me something of the state of affairs in your country in connection with religious beliefs?"

"It is as bad as bad can be, sir. The Polish constitution guarantees to the catholic church the position of the dominating religion, other religious beliefs are only on sufferance and must receive special legislation. The teacheing of holy scripture is obligatory in all schools."

"Is that possible?—was Mr. Olar's astonished exclamation. "Poland has a liberal constitution. . ."

Mr. Olar consulted a French copy of the Polish constitution lying on the table, and satisfied himself that he was mistaken.

"You see," said I again, "that it is sometimes just as well to look closer into things. Would it be therefore not possible for you to find time to visit the Polish prisons? The police torture prisoners systematically and with the utmost brutality. If you wish to talk with the prisoners, whose names I will give you; you could hear much that is interesting. You would meet in the prisons young men and girls sentenced to five, six and even ten years imprisonment for such offenses as, for instance, the distribution of Communist literature, and the posting of seditious proclamations.

"I have already told you that I cannot spare the time for this," answered Mr. Olar impatiently.

"But perhaps you would like to make a note of some facts and names? Here are for instance. . ."

"Pardon me," interrupted Mr. Olar, looking at his watch, "I am extremely busy."

"If that is so I will leave you some notes on the subject."

"That would be useless. There is here in Poland a league for the defense of the rights of man and of citizenship. Why do you not place your documents before this organization?"

"These gentlemen are very well informed on this subject. But they do not wish to pay any attention to political prisoners. On the whole, their occupation is rather problematic.

"Tell me rather of the religious situation in Poland."

Taking advantage of the fact that the professor who had just said he was extremely busy, had forgotten about his lack of time, I decided to try once more to arouse his interest in the fate of the political prisoners. But my effort was in vain. Mr. Olar rose giving me to understand in this manner that our conversation was at an end.

"This is my Paris address. Please be kind enough to send me full information on the position of the various religious sects and on the free thinkers."

"May I write you about the political prisoners?"

"Write me only about members of religious sects, and about free thinkers. I am very pleased to have met you."

A few hours later Mr. Olar delivered a public lecture on France and Poland. He made use of my information to comment on the differences which exist between the Polish and the French constitution. . . from the viewpoint of religious creeds.

Galina Stein, a native of Przemysl was recently arrested in Lvov.

Having kept her without examination for six days, the police transferred her under guard to Lutzk. In Lutzk she was also kept two days without being examined.

She was kept in the bureau of the secret police department where the examination of prisoners goes on until one o'clock in the morning. At that time they brought to the secret police department prisoners who were under observation. Their faces bore marks of ill treatment. A telephonogram was sent from Lutzk to Rovno: Kovel and Vladimir inquiring whether Galini Stein was connected with the actions of "terrorists and bandits." In spite of a negative answer in the evening, Stein was sent to Vladimir, where the "first examination" took place. The secret police agent, Zaremba warned Stein that he is an adept at beating and that "Ivanenko could bear this out."

"I belabored him so well that he lost all desire to pay us another visit. We put people in chains for days because we wanted them to be 'confined.' I like this kind of a past-time it sharpens the appetite for dinner. It is a pity that you are so tall. If you were shorter, you could play ball with me. It is so pleasant to see tatters flying under the India-rubber sticks."

At 11 o'clock at night "preparations" were made for the ill-treatment. The blinds were drawn and Lutzk was notified by telephone that the "conversation" with Stein was to begin. Karanda said cynically that he will probably have to his account another Bessarbova (Bessarbova was hanged in 1924 in the Lvov prison) and started the "examination." After that Stein was taken back to the cellar. She was "examined" during two days. On the third day she was lead into the room where the investigation takes place. In this room a big dog was let loose which jumped at her throat and bit her severely. The investigating magistrate was in the adjoining room. He examined her in the presence of Zaremba to prevent her mentioning the ill treatment meted out to her. (I. R. A.)

Miners Strike to Get Pay

LANSFORD, Pa., Aug. 31.—About 800 anthracite miners at Colliery 14 of Lehigh Coal and Navigation Co. struck over differences in yardage pay.

The Hammer, the Sickle and Struggle.

These three symbolize the union of workers and farmers in the class struggle for "all power to the workers."

Quite naturally, they should be chosen as the trade mark of a working class publishing house that sponsors the only daily newspaper in this country, so truly and courageously battling in the interests of the workers.

Of course today only a Communist newspaper could do this. And naturally also, only with the strength of a growing Communist movement behind it.

Force Teachers to Act as Clerks in the Public Schools

Teachers who work as clerks in the public schools while waiting for vacancies should be dropped from the payroll, says the efficiency experts' report sent to E. B. Ellicott, president of the board of education. The report states teacher's training is not required for clerical work.

The same recommendation was made regarding the high schools in a previous report, but the principals objected to the change, stating the work required educational training and that teachers were better equipped to fill these positions than clerks. The former system was retained in the high schools.

SYNOPSIS.—The official report of the British trade union delegation to Soviet Russia described the workings of foreign trade, transportation, industry, finance and agriculture in the Soviet Union. The trade union leaders concluded that foreign trade is increasing, and that in agriculture and industry the level of production is being raised. The finances have been placed on a sound basis, the report showed. Harm is being done to England by the absence of full diplomatic relations, the union leaders stated. Schools and universities, and literature, music and opera and the theatre were then discussed. Art collections, censorship, newspapers, wall newspapers, and freedom of the press were explained, with the conclusion that "the results of education are astounding." The report then took up hospitals, welfare work, sanitation, birth control, abortion, cleanliness and housing, rent regulations, family life, and prisons. "The Soviet government is achieving most remarkable results in respect to public health, housing, and the prison system," says the report. Regarding the trade unions and labor conditions, the report states, "The Delegation were much impressed by the position and activities of Trade Unions under the Soviet system." The report then described labor regulations, co-operatives, wages, and told of visits to various industrial works. The general conclusion on labor conditions reached by the commission was that, "The U. S. S. R. is a strong and stable state. The government is not only in every way better than anything Russia has ever yet had, but it has done and is doing work in which other older state systems have failed and are failing."

• • • •

On March 17th, the Georgian Menshevist Government was driven out of Tiflis and obliged to sue for peace, which was arranged by Moscow. The Menshevist Government left for Paris, taking the contents of the treasury with them, and a Sovietist Republic was proclaimed in Georgia. In return Moscow persuaded Angora to return Batoum to Georgia, which accordingly suffered little loss of territory.

From the foreging it is clear that the overthrow of the Menshevist Government of Georgia and the eventual inclusion of that Sovereign State in the Union of Sovietist Republics was not an unprovoked political aggression by Moscow. The "protection" of Georgia had become a prize for which World Powers were competing so as to secure control of the oil and manganese resources. It had become for Georgia a choice between Turkish or Russian occupation, and the Russians gave them back their full territories and a very full automony, which they would not have got from the Turks.

Second Trans-Caucasian Federation

The wars between these three States were finally ended in a Trans-Caucasian Federation concluded in March, 1922. This Federation includes:—

1. The Sovietist Socialist Republic of Armenia, with a territory of 34,288 sq. versts, corresponding to the old Russian province of Erivan, excluding the district of Alexandropol ceded to Turkey and Nakitchevan, which by Article III. of the Russo-Turkish Treaty of March 16th, 1921, is an autonomous district attached to Azerbaijan. The population of the Republic is 1,214,591, and its capital, Erivan.
2. The Sovietist Soocialist Republic of Azerbaijan, with a territory of 97,297 sq. versts, including the old provinces of Elizabetpol and Baku. Its capital is Baku, and its population about 3,200,000.
3. The Sovietist Socialist Republic of Georgia, including the old provinces of Tiflis and Batoum, with an area of 57,967 sq. versts, a population of 2,372,403, and a capital at Tiflis, which is also the capital of the Federation.

Attached to Georgia are the autonomous Republics of Abkhasia, Adjaria (Batoum), and South Ossyetinia.

The Budget of the Federation is appended to and subsidized by the Union Budget, and each Republic also has its own Budget. That of Georgia has a special status of its own. The status of the Republics in the Union is regulated by treaty, and they have theoretically the right to secede.

To sum up: The formation of the Federation and its inclusion in the Union of Sovietist Socialist Russia seems to have been very beneficial to the peoples of Trans-Caucasia. Politically it has put an end to their internecine wars and given them peace and protection against invasions and interventions. Economically it has secured them the exehange of grain for oil and minerals on which they depend.

CHAPTER II

I—Georgia

Georgia Under Bolshevism

The history of Georgia since inclusion in the Union of Sovietist Socialist Russia has been relatively peaceful and prosperous. There seems no doubt that the Menshevist Government represent a political point of view more congenial to the majority of Georgians than the present Bolshevist administration. But there is a little doubt that practically the Menshevists were as great a failure as the Bolshevists have been a success. Jordania, the Menshevist leader, is on record as having said of the financial situation in 1920: "We are not only approaching a collapse, we are already collapsing." The following figures suggest that the Bolshevist administration has not only stopped the country going downhill, but started it on a pretty steep upgrade.

Economic Development of Georgia

Under the Tsarist regime the industries of Georgia were of no great importance and the policy of the Government was to hinder rather than hasten development, a backward people being more easily handled politically. Under Menshevist rule during the years 1918 to 1921 such industries as there were fell into an almost moribund state, but have greatly improved during the last three years of Soviet Government, as the following figures suggest:

AREA UNDER CULTIVATION.

Tsarist, 1908-15	1,620,000 dessiatines.
Menshevist, 1920	1,270,000 "
Sovietist, 1923	1,800,000 "

RAW SILK PRODUCTION.

Tsarist, 1915	87,000 poods
Menshevist, 1920	15,000 "
Sovietist, 1923	70,000 "

BORJOM WATER (CAUCASIAN VICHY WATER).

Menshevist, 1920	380,000 quarts.
Sovietist, 1923	1,500,000 "

TOTAL EXPORTS AND IMPORTS.

	Exports.	Imports.
Tsarist, 1913	4,037,000 poods	19,340,000 poods.
Menshevist, 1920	903,000 "	3,012,000 "
Sovietist, 1923	12,609,000 "	34,989,000 "

The production of Georgian State industries for 1923 was valued at 7 million gold roubles, about £800,000, in the following perceptages:—

Tobacco	49.7
Brandy and Alcohol	8.0
Timber	7.8
Leather	6.6
Oils and Soap	5.2
Plumbago	5.0
Coal	5.0
Metals	4.1
Textiles	2.0
Pottery	2.3
Miscellaneous	4.3
Total	100.00

In spite of the conditions consequent on the war and constant change of government, the production of the nationalized industries have increased by 35 per cent as compared with 1922.

The total value of all industrial production, both state and privately owned, for 1923 was 9,334,740 gold roubles, an increase of 41 per cent over the value for 1922.

Unemployment, however, exists, and there are 28,000 registered unemployed, only 4,000 of whom are receiving unemployment pay. On the other hand the industrial workers have doubled in number under Bolshevism—increasing from 50,689 in 1920 to 95,777 in 1923.

During the past two years good progress has been made in education although it does not approach the standard desired or that reached in Russia. Under Menshevist rule there were only 156,600 children at school. With the assistance of the Trade Unions this has now been brought up to 230,000. The teachers who numbered 5,680 in 1920 now number nearly 9,000. Their standard, however, is not as high as is desired. Technical schools have been increased from 5 to 17, and science schools from 9 to 19, and the university students have increased from 2,814 to 4,738. There were formerly 38 public libraries, there are now 157.

The Georgian Government has lately granted an important timber concession to a German Armenian Compnay. The concession consists of over 320,000 acres on the Black Sea coast on the river Bzib, which includes the construction of light railways. Other similar concessions are under negotiation. A commercial treaty is being negotiated with Persia, which will allow of that country, like Turkey, using the Port of Batoum for transport of her Western trade.

Nationalization of Land

Over 80 per cent of the Georgian people are agricultural. Land hunger in a country that cannot, even now, grow its own food was always strong. The claim of the Bolshevists that all achievements in the nationalization of land and the breaking up of big estates among the peasantry are due to them and date from the 1921 revolution does not seem justifiable. But it does seem true that their revision of all legislation on the subject by an Act of April 6th, 1921, gave a new impetus, and that not very much had really been done before that. Now about a quarter million dessiatines have been nationalized, of which about 200,000 have been distributed among the poorer peasantry, the remainder being reserved for experimental farms. This is mostly hill land, but does not include the forests, which have been nationalized for the community as a whole.

Success of Bolshevist Regime

Many more figures than the above could be given showing the practical success of the Bolshevist Georgians. But the broad facts are not locally disputed. Last summer, for example, two correspondents arrived with instructions to collect information showing the deterioration of the country under the new regime. Both were honest men. One conscientiously toured the country, writing well-documented articles all proving the contrary, which, of course, never were published. The other, wiser in his generation, enjoyed himself in Tiflis and wrote about the scenery and such sobstuff as he could get about the prisons. And no one who visits the country now and knows what its conditions were can doubt that materially it is prospering as it never did under Menshevist rule.

Insurrections Against Menshevists

In view of the general recognition that the Georgian Bolshevist Government is energetic and efficient, one might have hoped that Georgia would have been content with the measure of self-government it has within the Union, which only falls short of complete sovereignty. But intrigue and insurrection are inbred in the Trans-Caucasian races. During the four years of Menshevist rule there were no less than eight insurrections, which secured for a short time control in certain localities, besides smaller unsuccessful risings. These insurrections were in the Mingrelian, Letchkuma, Ratchinsky, Dushetsky, Sharabanski, and Borchalinsky districts; also in South Ossetia, Abkhasia, Gouria and Old Georgia. There was also trouble owing to Georgian frontier districts supporting the neighboring Sovietist Republics of Armenia and Georgia during the military operations of the Georgian Menshevists against them. This went so far in some cases as the formation of armed bands to co-operate with Armenia and Azerbaijan.

The Menshevist Opposition

One of the first acts of the Bolshevist Government had been to issue a decree legalizing all parties who would renounce armed action and act as a constitutional opposition. But this offer, no doubt naturally enough, was not accepted by the Menshevists. Their leaders in Paris continued to keep their followers in Georgia on a footing of conspiracy against the new Soviet State. For this attack on what was represented as an alien oppression of Georgia and an autocratic suppression of a democracy, they secured the support even of foreign Labor organizations. They were also supported by foreign political parties antagonistic to Russia and associated with the Russian emigres, as well as by financial and commercial combines interested in the oil and manganese wealth of these regions. It is surprising that such a combination of moral forces and material factors should not have produced more trouble than it did to the Georgian Soviet State, and the combination undoubtedly caused great apprehension in Moscow as to another intervention for the overthrowing of the Soviet system and occupation of the oilfields.

Insurrection against Bolshevists

Local risings broke out on August 28th last in remote regions—the Senostski, Tzurgetski, Sugdetski, and Cherabanski districts and the Shiaturi manganese mines. The movement lost momentum within three days and was all over in the course of the first week in September. The risings were local affairs, and the local supporters of the Government for the most part suppressed them without the aid of the Georgian militia, which was mainly used for rounding up wandering bands. The Red Army garrison seems scarcely to have been engaged. Little disturbance was caused, but the loss of life was disproportionately heavy. The shooting by the Menshevists of 18 hostages exasperated the Bolshevists. The worst stories refer to those days of guerilla war-fare in remote villages, which was ruthless, as it always is in these regions. It is impossible to get reliable information as to the number of lives lost, but 3,000 is probably a fair guess.

Character of the Insurrection

It does not seem true, as is asserted by the more enthusiastic and less intelligent Georgian Bolshevists, that the insurgents were entirely Tsarist officers and nobles with their feudal retainers out to get back the land, and mountain banditti out for loot. These elements were prominent, but it also was a real appeal to a national sentiment that could not be satisfied, as such sentiment elsewhere is in the Union, with anything short of complete sovereignty. The insurrection probably had the sympathy of a majority of Georgians, and would have had their support had it succeeded. But it never had any chance of success.

Such support as it had was got largely on false pretences. The procedure was for the leader in any village to let local supporters listen to a telephone conversation with an accomplice in Batoum or Baku, in which information was given as to an Allied naval squadron said to be operating in the Black Sea and a British Indian expedition said to be embarking on the Caspian. These lies were readily believed in view of the recent British and French occupation, the expressions of sympathy given by French and British political leaders when visiting the Menshevist Government, the intrigues of secret agents during the summer, and the notorious disputes of the great oil interests and of the British and French manganese enterprises with Moscow. Thus the insurgent workmen in the manganese mines welcomed the first Government aeroplanes from Tiflis under the impression they were those of a French force. And as soon as the fraud was discovered of course all faith was lost in the movement.

Cause of Collapse

But if this want of foreign support had been the only cause of failure it would not have collapsed so completely. The real cause of failure was that there is in Georgia no active discontent with the Soviet system, only a certain discomfort under it and a dislike of its Russian connections. Moreover, Georgia is inhabited by many other races than Georgians, and these, such as the Adjars at Batoum, had no intention of losing the Home Rule they enjoy as an Autonomous Republic within the Georgian Republic, the Trans-Caucasian Federation, and the Union. They supported the Tiflis Government, and would have joined, if necessary, in suppressing the risings. As would the other races enjoying Home Rule.*

Political Effect of the Insurrections

This sacrifice of brave followers who took the field with swords and pistols against machine guns, by leaders living comfortably in Paris, has for the time being killed the Menshevist cause in Georgia. The party was in course of formal and final dissolution when the Delegation arrived in Tiflis.

The bulk of its leaders have accepted the authority of the present Government, some even taking service with it. In the course of a long conversation with these Menshevist ex-rebels many hard things and home truths were said by them about the part played by all British parties in respect of Georgia, culminating in this year's catastrophe.

* On this point, the following evidence, given to the Delegation by one who was a Menshevist leader, is of interest:—

"During the Menshevist rule all non-Georgian members of the population were severely kept under. Armenians, Russians, Ossetinians, Tartars, etc., to escape from the Menshevist rule went out of Georgia, and formed detachments against the Menshevist Government. The Russians, in Red Army uniform, found fighting against Menshevist rule were Georgian natives who had suffered under Menshevist rule."

BANKS WREST RAISIN REALM FROM GROWERS

Justice and it saw in Merritt a prospect of immunity from further molestation. Naturally, an appropriate salary was provided for the new managing director.

The Savior

Even if Merritt had wished to save the raisin industry (for the growers) he could not have done so. His chances were like those of a swimmer trying to save a sardine in the mouth of a shark. The association was already within the jaws of the banks. But it is questionable if he was at all interested in the fate of the growers.

Merritt, like Hoover, belongs to the ready-made aristocracy of America. If loyal to his class he should be working for the stability of the American order of nobles, founded on the banking system. The method of this order is to subject industry to bankers, the paying of interest serving as tribute to the new aristocrats. Was he true to his class?

Salvation

As soon as he discovered the peril of the association, Merritt hastened to New York City and negotiated a temporary emergency loan of $3,000,000 at a high rate of interest. Then he took his time to borrow $10,000,000.

For some time the names of the money lenders were kept secret, but, nevertheless, the operation was wonderful. To induce banks to lend $13,000,000 to an association which controlled, through contracts, 15,000 growers with over 200,000 acres, of vineyards, worth $100,000,000, producing 250,000 tons of raisins, valued at $50,000,000, per year, was to show the ability that distinguishes masters of business from mere growers of grapes.

By that loan Merritt saved the raisin industry. But he saved it for the banks and American nobility.

Adding Burdens

Interest and insurance charges due the loan amounted to $1,300,000 per year, meaning that the associated growers, unable to provide a certain sum the year before, would be expected to provide that much more the first year of the loan and every year thereafter. To obtain this additional sum, they would have to advance the price of raisins a little more than one-half a cent a pound (on a crop of 250,000 tons).

The growers' advance must be followed by the distributors' advance of 100 per cent, making the cost advance to the consumers one cent a pound. As a rule, the cost of distribution is 140 per cent of that of production, but the raisin association had a system eliminating charges, saving 40 per cent to consumers.

Gouging Consumers

Increase of cost of one cent a pound to consumers took $5,000,000 a year from them. This was owing entirely to the interest of the banks, although those institutions received less than $1,000,000 of the sum. The new tribute from the consumers made the raisin crop cost them $55,000,000 istead of $50,000,000 annually previosly.

Thus, the growers, although unable to dispose of their products the past year at 10 cents a pound would have to make efforts to sell it at 11 cents following the loan. How could this be done?

Simply by icreasing advertising. By spending $2,000,000 a year more in this way consumption would be increased. Cost of the advertising would be put on the consumers. With 100 per cent added by the distributors, another advence of 4.5 cent a pound would be placed on the price to consumers whose tribute to the financiers would be thus raised $4,000,000 more to $59,000,000.

Growers Enslaved

With the average price of raisins to consumers raised nearly two cents a pound, the foreign markets will not buy. The growers each year find a larger unsold surplus on their hands. They are obtaining less then the cost of production. All the advences of prices and inlations of land prices based thereon are for the sole benefit of the bankers and their pals.

Year by year the growers must borrow more. The association will need further financial aid to enable the banks to swallow it quicker. Consumers will pay more for the financial aid. Ruin of growers will continue to enrich the banks. There is no help for the growers. Merritt seved them for the banks to devour when he negotiated the first loan.

This tells the story of penetration and control of industry by finance capital, the story of financial monopoly in the age of imperialism. The story of the workers whose labor produces the raisins in the California fields — that is another and even a more stirring story.

NEW YORK LABOR MEET EXPOSES HYLAN AS ENEMY

Delegates Demand 8-Hour Law, More Wages

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Aug. 31.—A resolution mildly condemning Mayor Hylan, who is now running for reelection in New York City, was passed by the State Federation of Labor convention meeting here. The resolution criticized the mayor for refusing to pay union wages to city employes, and declared he had hindered their efforts to secure the pre-war eight-hour day law.

Many delegates spoke bitterly of the fact that the war hysteria had caused the labor union officials to consent to the abolition of the eight-hour day as a war measure, and now they are unable to wipe off the "war time" law off the statutes.

Speakers pointed out that over fifty letters had been sent by the federation to the state controller and the atorney general without receiving a single reply. Fifty-two trades petitioned the board of estimate and apportionment for eighteen months for the restoration of the pre-war eight-hour law and wage rate, but nothing was done for them.

The speeches showed the bankruptcy of the federation's policy of "rewarding friends and punishing enemies," but some of the delegates have not yet learned their lesson, as instead of working for a labor party they are merely supporting Hylan's political opponent James Walker, who is as much an enemy of labor as Hylan.

Graft in Voting Machine Deal.

New York state could have saved $3,000,000 if it had placed the order for voting machines with the Cummings Vote Register Co. of Crown Point, Ind., a union shop, instead of with United States Automatic Registering Co. of Jamestown, N. Y. it is charged. The New York factory is open shop.

POLISH SOCIALIST LEADERS SHOUT APPROVAL OF MURDER OF BOTVIN, WORKERS HONOR COMMUNIST HEROES

By L. DOMSKI.

WARSAW, Poland.—Botwin has been shot.

The death sentence against him was passed at the trial where neither his comrades nor the public were admitted. Only spies filled the hall in which the military field "justice" decided. It is hard to die under such conditions. But Botwin showed himself a hero during the trial, even as he heroically acted during the assassination and after his arrest.

Had No Regrets.

"I am a Communist, and do not regret my act," declared Botwin to the legal investigator.

"Most cynically declared," indignantly writes the bourgeois press.

When the examining magistrate asked him, did he know that he was confronted with death, he answered with scorn:

"We will talk about that at the trial."

The bourgeois press after the execution of Botwin assured us that during the trial he confessed that he "fulfilled the commands of the Communist Party." This is a manifest foul lie. The bourgeoisie is attempting to take advantage of the assassination of its prisoner for new plots of provocation.

Socialists Desecrate Grave.

Botwin has been shot. The treacherous "braves" from the bourgeois and social democratic press desecrate his grave.

"Parodied revolution," ironically writes the central socialist organ, the Worker. "Communist proclamations promotes these three subjects, (referring to Gibner and his comrades) to the rank of heroes. Of course, in the name of the working class, and is attempting to frighten the bourgeoisie. The proclamation wittingly lies, in affirming that these three Communists were executors of the will and wishes of the working class. This is a foul insult to the Polish workers. The Polish workers, with rams in their hands battled not for life, but for death against the czarist provocation, against the czar's police and gendarmes. But during the period of political and national oppression, during the period of the Moscow yoke this was the only possible means to fight aganist the oppression of the usurping powers."

The Polish mensheviki have already attained their fatherland. According to them, there is neither political nor national oppression in Poland. IN POLAND, THE SOCIAL DEMOCRATS MAY EVEN SERVE IN THE SECRET SERVICE. In this they are unanimous with the bourgeois reptiles, which increase and grow fat in the foul bog of the bourgeois rule.

Workers Repudiate Socialists.

In vain, however, do these traitors speak in the name of the working class. In vain do they defend the honor of Polish labor, "insulted" by the deeds of Communists and Young Communists. The voice of the working classes is not to be heard from the dirty mouths of the mensheviki.

Labor has already made its choice: it has decided against the mensheviki, secret service and against provocation—for Communists. At the funeral of Haitchik and Piliartchick, who killed the provocator Kaminski, the workers of Dombrov appeared thrity thousand strong. The workers of Warsaw greeted the news of the death of Provacator Czechnovski by flying red flags in all the working districts—they covered houses and buildings with inscriptions in honor of Botwin.

This happened after the Warsaw secret service had carried out mass arrests amongst the workers, just after the skirmish between the police and Gibner and his friends. The Warsaw proletariat answered the call of Botwin's deed.

History will write with shame the names of those body-guards of capital, those who murdered Botwin and those shabby traitors who try to wipe away the shame with a flood of abuse against revolutionaries.

The battle is not yet ended. Its next step must be the advance of all workers all over the world in defense of those warriors betrayed to the field court martial in Warsaw.

All to the defense!

Down with the white terror of the bourgeois hangman!

Away with the field court martial!

ACCIDENTS KILL 2500 MINERS AS YEARLY AVERAGE

1924 Figures Are Worse Than for 1923

By LELAND OLDS,
(Federated Press.)

The cost of coal in human lives, according to the U. S. bureau of mines, is over 21,000 miners killed in its production since 1916, over 34,000 since 1911 and nearly 50,000 since 1906. This means an average of almost 2,500 a year for 20 years.

The bureau's report shows further that the gain in safety for the miner between 1906 and 1915 was not continued into the following decade. A hazardous industry run for profit has made no appreciable progress in protecting workers' lives in the last 10 years. The figures show 4.6 miners killed per thousand 300-day workers in 1921-23, compared with 4.03 in 1916-1920 and 4.65 in the period 1911-1915.

Complete figures are not available for 1924, but those at hand show greater loss of life than in 1923. There were 4.31 miners killed per million tons of coal mined in 1924 compared with 3.87 per million tons in 1923.

Figures for the periods since 1906 showing the number of coal miners employed (reduced to the equivalent 300-day a year workers), the number killed and the rate per 1,000 miners employed are:

Coal mine fatalities	No. employed 300-day basis	Miners killed	Deaths per 1,000 employed
1906-1910 (av.)	484,454	2,658	5.49
1911-1915 (av.)	541,489	2,517	4.65
1916-1920 (av.)	599,781	2,418	4.02
1921	474,529	1,987	4.19
1922	405,056	1,979	4.89

Reduction of the actual number of miners employed to the number of equivalent 300-day workers is necessary in order to take account of the extreme irregularity of employment in the industry. While an average of 675,067 men working an average of 215 days produced an average of 451,112,384 tons a year in the 1906-1910 period, there were 844,807 men employed only 144 days in 1922 to produce 476,951,121 tons of coal. The average days worked annually have been 215 from 1906 to 1910; 220 from 1911 to 1915; 237 from 1916 to 1920; 173 in 1921; 144 in 1922; 195 in 1923.

Failure to extend rockdusting as a precaution against explosions of gas and coal dust appears to be one of the reasons why the fatality rate has not been reduced. Failure to utilize explosives termed permissible by the bureau of mines because they are less likely to cause a major explosion than common black powder is another. Bituminous coal mines in 1924 used 165,543,000 pounds of explosives of which only about 20 per cent were permissibles. Of the 63,837,117 pounds used in the anthracite mines about 27 per cent were permissibles.

Newark Police Carry Out Fascisti Orders to Prosecute Workers

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 31.—Almost daily arrests are being made of Italian workers who participated in the meeting at which the labor deputy, Vincenzo Vacirca, was to speak and which was broken up by the invasion of some 60 fascisti. Warrants are out on a total bail of $50,500 raised by their friends. Individual bail varies from $2,500 to $7,500 each, depending on whether charges of assault, inciting to riot or material witness are pending against the worker. J. Dantona, J. Racioppi, F. Candelia, F. Catalano, A. Ruggero, E. Trippo, O Bionna, Lucarelli, Klein, L. Pennacchia, O. Maraviglia and T. Pieroni are the men held. Their Newark friends are determined to continue holding their meetings despite the fascisti and arrests, they assert, and will support one another thru the fight.

Vacirca was telling his audience why he was late, explaining that fascisti had followed him from New York onto the Newark train, when the band broke into his meeting. Vacirca got off the train one stop before Newark, thinking to divert the fascisti.. Six fascisti followed him out to the deserted platform and blocked him when he attempted to board the train again. They took off their distinguishing buttons, searched him, and tried to make him return to New York, warning him that his life was in danger if he went on to Newark. Vacirca was able to call to a girl in the station to get the police and so was saved from violence, he claims, on the part of the fascisti.

Radiator Workers on Strike for 8-Hour Day

BAYONNE, L. I., Aug. 30.—A spontaneous strike for a shorter work day is on at the American Radiator Company plant here. Over 100 out of the 600 have come out so far and as the strike progresses more and more are joining the strikers. Tho the company claims the demand is an increase in pay the workers claim this is not true. They demand the abolishment of the nine-hour day and the same scale of wages for eight hours' work per day. The workes, tho not organized, are putting up a splendid fight. Police surround the plant while the pickets peacefully go about their strike duties.

HOT DOGS AND DOLLS FEATURE OF SUPERIOR, WISCONSIN "LABOR DAY"

By ARNOLD J. RONN.

SUPERIOR, Wis., Auggust 31.—Labor Day will be spent here as has been the custom in the past several years, by eating hot dogs at the Tri-State fair grounds during the fair.

Labor speakers and labor literature will be about as welcome there as a monkey in the state of Tennessee. All that is to be found is the Labor Day committee selling either hot dogs or kewpie dolls.

The following is a letter by the business manager of the co-operative central exchange addressed to the local trades and labor assembly:

Trades and Labor Assembly,
Superior, Wisconsin.

Brothers and Fellow Workers:

Your Labor Day committee called on us today soliciting advertising for your Labor Day program. We gave them an advertisement, but not without a lot of misgivings and so are taking this opportunity to express our veiws in the matter.

Labor Day is the day of all days when workers should go out and celebrate, review the struggles of the past. and build for the future. It should be the day dedicated towards furthering the cause of labor. Our speakers should be able to instill enthusiasm in those workers who are already organized, so that they will bend all efforts toward organizing the unorganized. Our propaganda on that day should be so effective that we would plant the seed for a desire to organize among those workers that today are not organized.

It is pitiable to listen to the story of the worthy brother on the Labor Day committee who has been blacklisted and is being hounded from job to job, and then know that Superior labor is doing nothing to correct such infamous conditions.

With organized labor losing ground daily, it is time that those who are at the head of it, awoke to the conditions that confront them and utilized Labor Day for that which it has been dedicated, and not for the purpose of inveigling workers into cheap, tawdry carnivals and feeding them hot dogs instead of a little fighting spirit for the cause of labor.

We hope yet to see American labor celebrate its only holiday in a manner befitting men and not slaves.

Yours for a World Where Labor is King,

Co-Operative Central Exchange,
By: Eskel Ronn, Manager.

It's high time that the workers of Superior opened their eyes when next electing a Labor Day committee, and elect a committee that is apparently devoid of any ulterior purpose and wouldn't work in so perfect harmony with those in charge of the fair, and that would buckle down to real business and surprise the workers with a Labor Day program befitting the occasion.

Fur Workers' Union Sues Employer.

MONTREAL, Aug. 31.—Officers of the Montreal local, International Furriers Union, are suing Charles C. Coristine, president Montreal Fur Manufacturers' association, for $50,000 damages for libel. The employer told the press that the recent fur strike was fomented by "paid agitators" that "sluggers" were hired "for the purpose of intimidating peaceful workmen" and that the strike was kept up by "a group of reds" for "their own selfish interest."

Big Business Wants Coal Strike.

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—Big business, the financial interests which virtually control the United States, want the anthracite coal strike. C. W. Barron, owner of the Wall Street Journal, has been telling President Coolidge at Swampscott so that Caution Cal won't intervene too soon. Miners knew this all along, charging that operators would not even listen to their demands.

WASHINGTON IS NERVOUS OVER COMMUNIST M. P.

alities of inspection at the port of entry has also been granted.

Other Militants Expected

That Saklatvala, the fiery member for Battersea North, may not be the only aggressive militant in this conference is indicated by the fact that every member of the Danish, Swedish and Norwegian parliaments, which are largely labor has joined the I. P. U.

Among the major topics for discussion among the lawmakers at this year's conference will be the possibility of creating demilitarized zones, and plans for reduction of armaments, as means to peace; development of international law as to its codification, a declaration of the rights and duties of nations, and discussion of the criminality of wars of aggression; the problem of national minorities, the fight against dangerous drugs, and the problems of Latin-America.

Bar "Foreign Policy" of U. S.

Secretary Call declares that no attempt will be made to discuss the "foreign policy" of the United States, and that while the I. P. U. has been a pioneer advocate of a court of international justice, and was responsible for the calling of the second Hague peace conference, it will not discuss American adherence to the world court established by the League of Nations.

Last year's conference, held in Berne, was marked by many bitter speeches on the wrongs of racial minorities in the various succession states to the old Austro-Hungarian empire. Hungarians, Czech and other delegates denounced as a failure the commission created by the League of Nations to deal with these grievances.

It has established an international court of justice, supposed to be accessible to states not members of the league, but it is most difficult for such states to get before the court. The rights of minorities have been given with one hand and taken away with the other, since it is impossible for minorities to get any redress of grievances. Europe has been Balkanized.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., August 31.—The scale committee of the United Mine Workers in the anthracite coal fields has issued the following strike order, which calls for the suspension of all work Tuesday.

The statement tells of the unsuccessful attempts to secure an agreewith the coal operators, and declares that the present agreement expires today. No more work will be done until an agreement is reached, the strike order states. The text of the order is given below:

Philadelphia, Pa. Aug. 27, 1925.

To the officers and members of local unions of Districts 1, 7 and 9, United Mine Workers of America.

Dear Sirs and Brothers:

The present agreement between the anthracite operators and mine workers expires Aug. 31, 1925. Therefore, our membership in Districts Nos. 1, 7 and 9 is advised that no contract being in effect a suspension of mining will automatically take place at midnight, Monday, Aug. 31, 1925.

Concerning the question of maintenance men remaining at work during the suspension we advise that proper instructions will be issued to our membership, as an agreement covering this subject can be consummated with the representatives of the anthracite operators. Please hold yourselves in readiness to put our policy with respect to maintenance work into effect as soon as possible after receipt of its contents.

The New York Election

There is a battle royal going on in New York between Tammany Hall, whose leader is Al Smith, governor of the Empire State and John F. Hylan, mayor of New York City. The prize over which the battle rages is the looting of New York City, the richest municipality in the world and a beautiful city to plunder.

Hylan is backed by the wealthy publisher of yellow journals, William Randolph Hearst. The mayor is one of this country's most accomplished demagogues and can get more propaganda out of a five cent fare than a ku kluxer can get out of the shin bone of St. Anne.

Mayor Hylan won his mass popularity by fighting the traction trust, at least with his mouth. It is undoubtedly true that the traction people are against him. In all other respects he is a loyal tool of capitalism, and during his regime the New York police have raided working class meetings, clubbed and arrested pickets and in general used their power in the interests of the ruling class. Nevertheless Hylan is not entirely satisfactory to Wall Street.

Hylan has built up a tremendous personal machine that threatens Tammany's power in New York City. The metropolitan patronage is tremendous. The Tammany tiger now believes this is the time to scratch out the eyes of the young cub who broke away from the parental wigwam. It is a case of now or never.

Tammany is interested in New York City first and secondly in the state government. It is a willing tool of the big capitalists provided the big capitalists see that it gets its mitt properly greased. Al Smith is a Wall Street favorite and Al being a popular fellow able to do a song and dance political stunt with the best of them and punish a schooner of home brew, Wall Street decided he was just the man to jimmy Hylan loose from city hall and deprive William Randolph Hearst of the role of Warwick the Kingmaker.

In the midst of this battle of giants over the spoils of a big city, Hylan is hit between the eyes with the charge of being friendly to the ku klux klan. Smith fired the shot. Both Hylan and Smith are "good" catholics. Which means that they osentatiously parade their devotion to the pope, and in all other respects live like protestants, atheists, or reformed Mormons.

If Al makes the charge stick, Hylan will wake up the morning after the primary election with an awful headache. But the mayor is enterprising and he may be able to bribe the imperial wizard to blow up his garage or issue a statement in defense of Al Smith. Anything is liable to happen.

Smith says Hylan was playing with the kluxers during the democratic circus in Madison Square Garden. Hylan denies this but claims that he supported Al until he found him in a hotel room in a most compromising position with Lewis Nixon, ten cent fare advocate and the Colonel House of the traction barons.

It is a great game. The mayor declares that a higher fare than five cents will pass, only over his political carcass. The opposition declare that Hylan is as good a friend of the traction barons as anybody else and that in addition he is an incompetent fool.

Between Tammany Hall and Hylan the workers have only a choice of two evils. Both are angling for the good will of big business. Both are playing to the masses only because they need votes.

The only candidate who raises the anti-capitalist standard in the New York City election is the candidate of the Workers (Communist) Party, Benjamin Gitlow. The Workers Party platform declares for the municipal ownership of the traction systems, and for the ownership and control of all the social wealth in New York City by those who created it. The Workers Party uses the election campaign as a means of bringing the Communist message home to the masses. It points out to them that only when they secure political power in New York City and thruout the nation will they be able to begin solving the problems that confront them. Before they solve any problems they must overthrow capitalism. In this election campaign the Communists raise the slogan of a labor party to help break the workers away from the capitalist parties and set their feet on the road that will lead to a final struggle with the capitalists for political power and the ownership of the country.

Berry Is Sore

"Majah" George L. Berry, the notorious labor skate whose record in the labor movement was exposed in this paper, is very angry with the Communists whom he charges with being the only element to support the employes of the Cuneo Printing company who walked out rather than surrender to the open shop conditions that the printing plutes tried to put over on them with the sanction of the "majah."

In a letter to the members of Printing Pressmen No. 3, who are involved in the walkout, Berry's satraps ordered those involved in the Cuneo walkout back to work under scab conditions. The letter contains the following interesting paragraph:

> "You should know that the only support for the illegal action being received by the men engaged in this illegal strike is the Communist Party, who, thru their publication and propaganda, is giving aid, support and comfort to it for the purpose of building up Communism in the ranks of the printing presemen and the printing trades of this city. We cannot believe that the rank and file of the printing pressmen can subscribe to the doctrines of Communism whose principle is to overthrow the United States Government and place this country and its people subject to the dictates of Russia and the Third Internationale. It is well that the International Union make this statement, thru its Board of Directors, that there is no place within the ranks of our International Union for those who believe in Communism, or who associate themselves with the Communist Party. We are an American institution and believe in American principles and ideals. If you believe with us as against that which the Communist Party represents, you will associate yourself with those who believe in the integrity of the organization and the sanctity of agreements."

Many thanks "majah" for the compliment. There is nothing we like better than to be attacked by the enemies of the working class, whether they be capitalists, stoolpigeons or strikebreakers. Berry has good reasons to be angry with the Communists. They threw the Klieg lights on his treachery to labor. Yes, Mr. Berry, we know you are an American if an American is synonymous with burglar, embezzler and scab herder. That we are not and we are proud of the fact.

We are sorry if it is true that only the Communists supported the struggle of the pressmen and feeders against Cuneo and his labor lieutenants. It is a disgrace to the rest of the labor movement, but not to the Communists.

The Soviet Government and Peasants

By A. K.

THE capitalist governments and the capitalist press all over the world are in various ways trying to show how the Russian farmers dislike the Soviet govrnment, that they are merely awaiting a favorable opportunity to rise up against it, overthrow it, and set up a new regime.

What are the facts in regard to Russian farming conditions? Are the Russian farmers better or worse off than they were before the revolution?

Under the rule of the czars the masses of Russian farmers did not possess any land and they had practically no economic and political rights and exceedingly little was done to raise their cultural level. Farm taxes in the imperial days were very heavy. In short, the working farmers of Russia were nothing but slaves and serfs, working for the benefit of some capitalist or landlord and for the maintenance of the tyranny of czarism.

Farmers Support Government.

NOW, since the revolution, the Russian working farmer has been given the land and the Soviet government is opening up practical schools in the villages thruout the Soviet Union just as rapidly as it can educate teachers and secure equipment for these schools. As to the interest the Russian farmers take in the new government it can be shown, for example, that already in many large districts of the country over 70 per cent of the farmers participate actively in Soviet elections. Whenever anything is to be done in a public way in a Russian village today the whole population takes part in the work. The plan of the government is to give everybody something to do in promoting the political and economic welfare of the community. The farmers themselves choose their own Soviets and administrative boards.

Taxes today are one-fourth of pre-revolutionary times. The agricultural tax this year is 280,000,000 rubles, a per capita tax of 2 rubles and 77 kopeks. Most of this tax is reinvested in agriculture, being used for village administration and for the educational and economic development of the rural population. During the next three years the Soviet government will spend 154,000,000 rubles to fight drought in southwestern Russia. The slogan in Soviet Russia today is "the face to the village," meaning that special attention must be given to the development of Russian agriculture.

Farming Modernized.

IT is the aim of the Soviet government to modernize Russian farming methods as quickly as possible. This is herculean task but the government has already attained successes along this line. About 10,000 farm tractors have been bought from America during the last twelve months, many of these having already been delivered, and Russian factories have also started to produce modern farm machinery. For instance, at Karkhoff, at the present time, are 3,000 workers engaged in making farm tractors of the caterpillar type, capable of pulling eight 16-inch plows and turning over a field area of 25 to 30 acres per day. 102 tractors are turned out by this factory every month. Other modern farm implements are also manufactured at this plant.

The Soviet government is establishing farmers' homes, or farmers' educational centers, where the farmers can get together and discuss their farm problems and receive instructions on modern farming methods from experts. At these homes the farmers can get cheap meals and lodging, and here also they can get free hospital and doctor care. These homes are popular and their number is steadily increasing. There are now 171 of these centers in the Soviet Union.

Soviet Farms.

THE government is also devoting considerable attention to the development of Soviet farms, or agricultural experiment stations. The aim of these stations is to furnish the farmers with seeds of good yielding quality and develop better breeds of farm animals. There are now 145 experiment stations in the Soviet Union and the plan is to place them all upon a self-sustaining basis. The influence of these Soviet farms upon Russian crop production is already considerable, and their number and popularity is growing.

Agricultural production co-operatives are being established by the new government. There are three types of these co-operatives. First, the Commune, where the ownership of the land, the production and sale of farm products and the buying and consumption of goods are held on a communal basis. Second, the Artel, where the land, production and sale of farm products are carried on on a co-operative basis but everything else is owned and managed separately. Trird, the Brotherhood of Common Work, in which only the land is worked in common. About 20,000 of these production co-operatives have now been established in the Soviet Union, the Artel and the Brotherhood of Common Work increasing a good deal more rapidly in number and influence than the Commune.

Soviet Co-operative Farms.

AN interesting fact about these co-operatives is that the average number of acres per person is larger for the co-operatives than for the private Russian farm and the average yield per acre is generally greater for the co-operatives than for the private farms. The Russian farmers, therefore, are likely to favor the co-operatives. In Russian villages generally a very large number of farmers belong to the co-operatives. At present there are over 3,000,000 members in the agricultural co-operatives of the Soviet Union and the gross receipts of these co-operatives approximates three-fourths billion rubles per year. The speed with which agricultural co-operation is developing thruout the country is marked.

With the general introduction of farm tractors, modern drills, plows, binders, etc., and the use of scientific farming methods in Russian agricultural production, the crop area as well as the yield per acre is expected to be considerably increased. In the Soviet Union are hundreds of millions of acres of productive land that can be utilized for the growing of food crops, and the Soviet government, realizing both the necessity and the importance of increasing Russian agricultural production, is doing its utmost to secure modern farm machinery and to educate the farming population in the use of modern farming methods in the shortest time possible. It is not improbable that the Soviet Union during the next few decades will experience the kind of rapid extension of the crop area that characterized the Great Plains states in this country durnig the latter half of the nineteenth century.

The foregoing brief facts will serve to indicate what the Soviet government is doing for the Russian farmers. Naturally, these farmers are not very anxious to get rid of a government that is doing so much for them. They know, too, that it is their government.

The Role of Moving Pictures in the Labor Movement

ARTICLE III.

The Production of Revolutionary Films.

ONE of the principal obstacles to our aspiration to exhibit socialistic and revolutionary films has been the fact that in former years no such films were to be had. The European and American film industry is tightly controlled by small, closed companies, generally absolutely dependent upon big bank financial support, and which produce either directly for nationalistic bourgeois propaganda purposes or else like the yellow journal must pander to the wide petit-bourgeois masses in the production of worthless, jazzy trash. One can claim without contradiction that today practically the whole American and west-European film industry operates under these two viewpoints. Change or betterment in this situation is not to be expected.

Just like the capitalist press, so is the film used by big business to control and stupify the broad masses. It is comparatively easy for the workers to fight back the bouregois press with their own; the creation of a paper is far easier and less expensive than the the making of film. Difficult and all but impossible is the production and exhibition of an anti-capitalist and anti-bourgeois film in a capitalist country: for a good film, and only such are worthy of consideration if mass effect is to be attained, such large sums of money are required as to be beyond the resources of any working class organization. A good film with mass scenes and with all essential technical refinements costs today several hundred thousand, and big films even a half to one million gold marks.

THE defeat of the anti-proletarian and bourgeois punk film would be utterly impossible did not the victorious proletarian revolution and the establishment of the Soviet state alter the situation and make possible the production of proletarian, revolutionary film. In Soviet Russia, except for a few dwindling remnants, the film industry has been nationalized and turned to the work of Communist enlightenment and propaganda.

The Russian motion picture industry has, among other advantages, a production field for a country and a people in itself sufficiently large to make production possible and paying. The area of the Russian state embraces today a seventh of the habitable land of the globe, and 120 millions of inhabitants. It is quite understandable that the Russian film industry suffered heavily during the war, and the ensuing civil war and war Communism periods. It is understandable that during the war and the total collapse of industry the state's first concern was for grain, coal, food, etc., and that film and its like had to be relegated far to the rear. But with the general strengthening of Russian economy in recent years there has come a steady recovery of the film industry and its constant further extension.

SINCE 1923, the Russian film industry has again begun to produce and market its own films. The most important production centers are the Kino-Buro in Kiev for the Ukraine, the Northwest Kino in Leningrad and the production units of Meshrabpom and Proletkino in Moscow. Beside a number of strictly educational pictures, practically all energy is being devoted, in recent years, to films concerning the problems of the labor movement, the proletarian revolution, and the fate of the individual worker in the movement and the revolution. Only a very few films serve purely for entertainment and confine themselves to the question that monopolize most western production: love, marriage, and comedy.

Some of the productions, notably, "Three Little Red Devils," "Palaces and Prisons," and "Lenin's Warning," are models of proletarian film production. The first of these was produced in Tiflis (Georgia) and shows the part played by three young workers in the Soviet Army campaigns against the bandit Makno, and ends in the complete rout of the whites. The film has gripping moments in which it shows the conflict of the Red Army against the Makno bands and their German and Austrian supporters.

THE film, "Palaces and Prisons" presents the unparalleled torture and suffering in the prisons and jails of czarist Russia, and is especially significant in that it was taken right in the Peter and Paul fortress, the site of the tyranny dealt with in the film.

"LENIN'S WARNING," produced by the I. W. A. production center in Moscow, shows the life of a young working class girl of Leningrad in wonderful contrast to the complete eclipse of the white guard emigres, and the slow but sure ascent of Soviet Russia under the leadership of Lenin. This film, in its strict ideological execution as well as its vital and thrilling treatment, as well as in its excellent photography and technique the best proletarian film thus far produced.

True enough, through years of extended isolation and blockade Russia was cut off from the world market, and consequently her film production is, even in 1924, technically and photographically, not quite up to the American or Swedish standards. These are deficiencies, however, that can easily be overcome, and last year's productions show decided progress in technical lines. But most important and decisive is precisely this fact, that in Soviet Russia today, for the first time in the history of the film industry, there exists the possibility to produce films of enlightenment independent of and uninfluenced by bourgeois capitalist and banking circles.

THIS gives a guarantee for the development of the proletarian film. First, as already indicated, the financial-commercial possibility, since a field containing 120 millions of people is sufficiently extensive to cover the costs of all films produced in Russia, and on the other hand the inexhaustible store of motive (plots) to be portrayed in proletarian film. As was indicated in the second article, "Picture and Film in the Revolutionary Movement," there is no danger that after ten or fifteen films the steady repetition of plot would weary and cease to interest the optiences. The revolutionary film has the possibility to portray innumerable historical events in separate pictures. It can show the revolutionary movements of various epochs, delineating their revolutionary background —the theme of the political and economic struggles of the workers against their bosses and against the capitalist state is inexhaustible.

Soviet Russia, with its new proletarian social life, offers in itself an endless measure of interesting happenings which, if properly treated in film, can count on greatest interest on the part of the entire working class. The development and battles of the Red Army, the development of industry, the life of the eastern republics, etc., offer a wealth of material. Of great value would be the making of international films, for instance the struggle of the French miners and the help extended to them by their Russian brothers, or, the life of a young worker wandering through the world, which, through the illumination of the universal exploitation of labor shows the international necessity for class struggle.

THE films mentioned, "Three Little Red Devils," "Palace and Prison," and "Lenin's Warning," prove that the proletarian film can present our ideological material in clear and free manner, and through thrilling and struggle full treatment, grip its optiences.

To summarize: the Russian film industry today makes possible the creation of revolutionary, proletarian films. This furnishes the first requisite for the execution and development of an ambitious proletarian film propaganda, and is likewise a valued fruit of the victorious revolution of the Russian workers and peasants.

THE WAY OUT FOR THE NEGRO

By OTTO HALL,
Member of National Committee Calling the American Negro Labor Congress.

MY attention has been called to an article appearing in a Hearst newspaper, containing what purported to be a marvelous expose of Red activities among American Negroes. These wonderful discoveries were alleged to have been made by a certain Brousseau, a Negro Sherlock Holmes, who is a terror to pilferers of Pullman blankets, hotel silver, etc.

Now it is an admitted fact that the condition of the Negro worker, in the United States particularly, is deplorable. They the spokesmen for the capitalistic class admit this themselves. The thinking Negro worker, who has long been aware of this condition has been trying to find a way out. He realizes that he, the Negro worker, is in the majority of his group. Therefore, if he would improve his condition, he must organize.

AS for the Red scare that you are hearing so much about, that is merely a shiboleth that the capitalistic oppressors are trying to raise before the Negro worker to confuse him and disrupt any attempt at organization. Now when they lynch, burn, jim-crow and seggregate and exploit us, we do not need a wire from Moscow telling us that we are being mistreated. We would be stupid indeed if we needed to be told from an outside source that we are being abused, we Negroes are beginning to think for ourselves, that is the reason that we have prepared to organize an American Negro Labor Congress which convenes in Chicago on the 25th of October, 1925.

The American Negro Labor Congress is being called in an attempt to get-together the working-class element of the Negro race in order that they might decide on ways and means of finding a way out of the miserable life, only the working class can do that, because it alonse has the power, its industrial strength. Mobs of the squth are not lynching Negro bankers, Negro doctors or lawyers but men and women of the working class. It is always they who suffer and it is they alone, of the working class of our race, because of the large place that they hold in the industrial life of the country. And particularly the southland that as a factor in the struggle of the race for its complete liberation, they alone have the supreme means and power to determine the future destiny of the race.

THE national committee calling the American Negro Labor Congress appeals to every Negro of the working class with real fighting blood in his veins to rally to the support of the great congress of Negro labor to take place October 25. It is proposed that the American Negro Labor Congress shall be indeed more than a mere passing affair in the life of the American Negro, but shall be permanent institution radiating its influence thruout the race and far into the future—time and space as steadfast, uncompromising and militant social morce making for proper racial adjustment in this country.

ting terroristic acts, disclosed that the fascists had signed confessions, each trying to save his own skin by betraying his companions.

The evidence of the examining Judge Rosenfeld is taken. Rosenfeld declared that he, Rosenfeld, left Kindermann up to the last moment in the belief that he believed in Kindermann's Communism. Kindermann asked permission to write a request to the Comintern asking to be allowed to study at a Communist university after his release. On the evening of the same day the examination took place which commenced with the presentation to Kindermann of the note which he had written to Wolscht in which he called upon the latter to persist in the former statements, whilst earlier Kindermann had declared that Wolscht was a fascist.

After the reading of this note Kindermann had recognized that all further pretense of Communism was impossible. He had then made exhaustive statements. Apart from Rosenfeld and the minute taker, no one else had been present. The examination took place with such a degree of freedom that on occasions the examining judge had left the room and Kindermann had continued to dictate himself. At the close of the examination Kindermann had embraced the examining judge, shook his hand and declared that at last he had found the correct way and was glad that he had confessed all the crimes.

Kindermann Cannot Deny Statements.

Rosenfeld had also examined the case of Baumann and declared that from August to February, Baumann would confess nothing. Rosenfeld had been of the opinion that the confession of Kindermann would have the greatest possible effect upon Baumann, he had therefore arranged that the latter should listen in an adjoining room to the statements of Kindermann. On the next day Baumann had made exhaustive statements upon the purpose of his illegal journey to Russia, which were in agreement with those of the so-called expedition. Baumann had been then once again placed in the adjoining room to that in which Kindermann was being examined. After the confession had been made, Kindermann had composed the appeal to Djerjinsky. On this occasion, only Rosenfeld had been present.

The prosecutor then read one or two notes of Kindermann to the examining judge from whcih it was seen that Kindermann regarded the latter as practically a friend and advisor.

Kindermann was unable to contradict any of the statements of Rosenfeld and said nothing more about the alleged hypnotism. He contented himself with declaring that on the 6th and 7th of February he had been "rather excited."

Wolscht Connected with Legation.

The question of the prosecutor, had Wolscht during the search of the house attempted to destroy a visiting card of the Legationstrat Hilger, was answered by Wolscht in the affirmative.

Hereupon the witness Baumann who is under arrest for inquiries, was heard for the second time and declared: That Wolscht had said to him: "How fine it would be in these wonderful days now that the right block is in power, to be in Germany. Already many Communists had been finished with and now twice as many would be settled."

To this Wolscht declared that he had said all sorts of things to Baumann in prison as there one wanted to distract oneself. (Laughter.) To the question of the prosecutor, had he said to Baumann that Dittmar was a suspicious person, and that Kindermann was reactionary and that he, Kindermann, had joined the Communist Party of Germany with secret political sins, Wolscht answered in the affirmative.

Betray Each Other.

During this, Kindermann looked at his "friend" Wolscht, as he was in the habit of calling him, just as startled as in the morning session Wolscht had looked at Kindermann when it was stated that Kindermann had confessed everything long before the confession of Dittmar and that Kindermann had betrayed his accomplices and hoped in this way to recover his freedom. Wolscht declared that he could no longer remember having said to Baumann that he had hidden one of the Rathenau murderers in the student's home.

Wolscht could also not remember having said to Baumann that he had brot enuf poison with him to kill a also had forgotten that he had said that the most important thing was to get at the chief leaders. Wolscht no longer remembered his statement, that the examining judge, who had taken a bottle of pyrmaidom (a kind of aspirin) from his waistcoat pocket would get no good from it as it contained cyanide of potassium. Immediately after Wolscht declared that if he had perhaps made such statements, he had done so in order to maintain the good relations with his fellow accused.

Supplied with Poisons.

Hereupon, the drug case of the accused was placed upon the table of the court. It contained a tube of cyanide of potassium, morphium, a large quantity of other poisons, and further amongst other things, the pyramidon bottle already mentioned and the two pistols with several cartridge clips, etc.

Wolscht turned pale and attempted to hide his obvious excitement by unrestrained insolence, declaring that the experts' report upon the contents of the case and the nature of the poisons, proved the low level of chemical science in Soviet Russia."

Hereupon, Kindermann put several questions to Baumann in which he attempted to compromise the latter. He was however compelled to corroborate statements of Baumann to the effect that, amongst other things, they had various German nationalist friends in common, that they had discussed together intimate details of the organization consul, etc.

Activity as Fascist.

The insolent attitude of Kindermann provoked Baumann to such an extent that he wanted with clenched fists to get at him. Baumann stated further what Kindermann had told him of his life. The crime of his father had damaged him, Kindermann, in his studies. He had had no comrades and had lived a very isolated life as a student. He had said that he liked to withdraw himself like a nanny-goat (loud laughter.)

Kindermann blushed. When Baumann told of him, Kindermann's activity as a "Consul" man amongst the separatists, Kindermann said: "Ach Baumann, you are really a hero, give me a kiss, a good German kiss."

Dittmar was then heard. He declared that Wolscht had undertaken the obtaining of the poisons in Berlin, according to the instructions.

HYMA[illegible]OSES FAKE "PEACE" PROPOSALS OF SIGMAN AS BUT ANOTHER WAY TO SAVE HIMSELF

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 1.—In reply to President Sigman's peace proposal, the Joint Committee of Action of the suspended I. L. G. W. locals have issued the following statement:

"Mr. Sigman's peace manifesto purporting to bring peace and harmony in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union is not intended to create peace in the union, but will only tend to sharpen the internal conflict now existing in our union.

"Since the suspension of the 77 officers of the three locals, the large mass of the membership backing these three locals have put forth three demands on the basis of which peace could be established in the union, viz.: 1) The resignation of Sigman, Feinberg and Perlstein; 2) The reinstatement of the suspended officers of the Locals 2, 9 and 22; 3) The reorganization of the Joint Board on a basis of proportional representation.

Sigman's Terrorism.

"In answer to these demands Mr. Sigman instituted a campaign of terrorism in order to force the insurgent members into submission. In spite of his assertion that the entire membership was backing him, he has repeatedly refused to submit the entire controversy to a referendum of the membership under the supervision of an impartial committee.

"The peace proposals of the International and the Joint Board do not in any way offer reforms that will help to alleviate the present situation. Mr. Sigman proposes a new election of all locals affiliated with the New York Joint Board. However, he prohibits both the suspended officers and those who were recently elected in their places, from running for office. This proposal is neither just nor constitutional. One can readily understand why Mr. Sigman would deny the suspended officers the right to run in the future election. We have continuously fought his policies in the union and are regarded as his enemies. But why deny this right to the recently elected officers? Mr. Sigman is in error when he believes that the suspended officers and the cloak and dressmakers are appeased when others are also denied their democratic privileges.

Funny Proposal.

"Mr. Sigman's second proposal permits the suspended members to appeal to the General Executive Board of the International against the Joint Board's decision in suspending them. This proposal is preposterous. Imagine appealing against the decisions of a lower court when the judges of the higher court are the same as of the lower court, as is the case in this instance. Even Mr. Sigman realizes how ridiculous this proposal is, and therefore he invites representatives of the labor movement to look on while he dispenses justice. Our suggestion for an impartial committee has been entirely ignored by him. The suspended members are to have no say in the choice of this impartial committee.

Communists Entirely Barred.

"Only such members who are not Communists may appeal their case. Communists are even denied that right. According to Mr. Sigman's present interpretation of the constitution, they are barred from holding any office in the union. If the constitution has any such clause, why

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

THE reactionary labor leaders are always trying to put the rule of the workers and peasants in Russia in a false light by catering to the popular prejudice against dictatorship, ignoring the fact that all capitalist democracies are dictatorships in actual practice. Any system that places the economic life of the individual at the mercy of somebody else has little to recommend it, except to those who own the means whereby others can live.

"THE Communists don't believe in democracy" bleat the reactionaries, "they believe in a dictatorship." And then they go on to picture the fate of those who have to work under the Communist regime in Russia. They shed tears over the misfortunes of the czarist parasites who had to work or starve when the workers and peasants seized power. Yet those very labor skates have no hesitation in depriving members of their own unions of a livelihood for merely disagreeing with them on political questions.

ALL the international unions, with hardly an exception are now joining hands with the employers in persecuting the radicals. The one I am concerned with just now is the Journeymen Barbers' International Union of America. The president of this organiation is a gentleman by the name of Shaunessy. The secretary-treasurer's name is Fisher. Not so long ago these capitalist tools expelled "Con" Foley of Pottsville, Pa., because "Con" stood for progressive policies and made common cause with the radicals. Even tho Foley was an old timer in the organization and had done much to build it up, he was expelled for his political convictions.

HERE in Chicago a group of barbers were expelled from the union by order of the International even tho the local refused to take such action. Not only were they expelled from the union, but the business agent refuses them permission to work at their trade, tho their unionism is without taint which is more than can be said for the per capita sharks who had them expelled.

THOSE labor fakers care very little how those barbers are going to get money to buy the necessaries of life for their dependents. They worry over the condition of the Russian grand dukes and duchesses but members of their own unions are subject to persecution, provided they refuse to dig out their brains or do their thinking according to the faker's code. But the progressive barbers are not laying down. The current issue of The Progressive Barber tells the story of the struggle in the barbers' union and does it in a very creditable manner.

THERE is only one way to handle the reactionaries and that is by conducting an organized fight against them, based on progressive principles as well as dealing with the personalities of the crooks. The Progressive Barber sets a standard which other left wing papers should do well to emulate and surpass. This is not an easy job. The little paper is well gotten up and the material is mostly all original and pertains chiefly to the barbers' problem, with enuf outside matter to link up the struggle in the barbers' union with the whole left wing fight in the labor movement. The paper is issued monthly. The subscription is $1 a year and it is pub-

Waterfront Blaze Puts 125 Firemen on Sick List in N. Y.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—One hundred and twenty-five firemen were on the sick list today as the clouds of smoke from New York's worst riverfront fire cleared away. The blaze partially destroyed Pier No. 95 at Fifty-fifth Street and the Hudson River, imperilled two passenger liners and sent gusts of smoke across the heart of the city.

Scores of the disabled fire fighters are suffering from temporary blindness, others are in bed from smoke poisoning while several are under treatment for submersion after being rescued from the river where they were tossed by wriggling hose.

"Smoky Joe" Martin, veteran fire chief, was treated three times for smoke poisoning. He said it was the worst waterfront fire in his forty years experience.

UNION REFUSED TO STAND FOR SCAB POLICY

Pressmen Plan to Wage War on "Majah"

The Board of Directors of the International Printing Pressmen's and Assistants' Union, under the instructions of strikebreaker George L. Berry, yesterday lifted the charter of Chicago Printing Pressmen No. 3, for its refusal to sanction the introduction of the open shop in the Cuneo-Sears Roebuck printing plants.

Since the union's dispute with the Cuneo-Sears people, Berry has been supplying strikebreakers to take the places of the men that walked out. He has transported them from all over the country just as he did in the New York strikes of 1919 and 1923.

As was told in recent articles in The DAILY WORKER, Berry planned to life No. 3's charter for a long time. He never forgave the Chicago pressmen for showing him up as labor crook, when a court found him guilty of misappropriating $165,000 of the union funds. When the union finally agreed for the sake of peace to let bygones be bygones, Berry reward this action by calling a meeting of his lackeys in the notorious bawdy house in the red light district at 22nd and State streets and laying the wires to lift the union's charter.

The Conspiracy.

The scheme was to unite with the employers in forcing open shop conditions on the pressmen and when they refused, as he knew they would, to work under those conditions, to lift their charter.

This is just what happened in the Cuneo walkout. Berry agreed with the Cuneo bosses to reduce the number of men on the machines. The men refused to do this and walked out. Berry imported strikebreakers and finally when the union refused to obey his order to participate in his strikebreaking activities, he lifted the charter.

Many members of both the pressmen and feeders' unions, believe the

STRIKERS SEEK ACTION AGAINST SLUGGING COPS

Take Jury Trial in Sheffield Court

The five striking members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union who were arrested in the picket line in front of the International Tailoring company building, demanded a jury trial yesterday in the Sheffield Ave. police court.

The strikers were kept in jail a day and a night, and Sam Zimmer, one of them, was roughly handled by the police. Attorneys for the Amalgamated, R. P. Poulton and J. A. Ryan demanded that the judge take action against the police officers who are charged with assaulting the strikers.

The judge on the Sheffield avenue police court bench refused to take action, declaring the union would have to take the matter to the police trial board.

The date for the trial of the pickets will be set later.

$29,000,000 YEARLY ANTHRACITE PROFITS TO IDLERS WHILE MINE WORKERS TOIL IN HELL OF PITS

By ALEX REID

(Secretary of the Progressive Miners' Committee.)

Seventeen million dollars dividends, and twelve million dollars in royalties wrung out of the sweat of the hard coal miners in one year are the net returns to come of those who live on the sacrifice of the miners in the Tri-District coal region of Pennsylvania.

Considering these profits, and the coal operators' refusal to grant a ten per cent increase of wages to the miners, it is well that the workers examine the conditions under which the miners work, and the dangers attending their employment.

Working Conditions Bad

Many of the anthracite mines are old properties, and the working places have extended a long way from the bottom of the shaft. The coal seam in many of these mines is very low and running on a very stiff pitch. Many places at the face are wet and the disagreeableness and handicap of the miners under those circumstances can be readily imagined.

The miners cannot work standing up in those low mines but have to crawl on their hands and knees and sometimes lay flat on their belly. In this cramped position, they have to shovel coal for eight hours, with the water continuously dripping on them. At the end of their eight hour shift the miners find themselves totally exhausted.

Many are the dangers encountered in the anthracite mines, as the official records show many fatal and serious accidents. Last year alone five hundred men were killed, and over twenty thousand were injured, many of them to a major degree. The state labor department figures show that the major accidents include broken backs, and internal injures that leave the victims worse off than if they had been killed outright in the first place.

They are continuously beset by unseen dangers. One of the worst dangers being the treacherous roof, which is full of slips. The water on these slips gradually lossen the roof, and finally without warning a large piece of roof slips out, sometimes weighing many tons, and falls on to the road-

THOMPSON, WATT SCORE TREASON OF OFFICIALS

Mass Meeting in Zeigler Protest Prosecution

ZEIGLER, Ill., Sept. 1.—Freeman Thompson and John Watt, deposed officials of the Springfield sub-district of the miners' union, addressed a large mass meeting in Zeigler called to protest against the prosecution of 18 Zeigler miners charged with conspiracy to murder. The meeting was held under the auspices of the miners' defense committee recently organized in Franklin county to defend the arrested Zeigler miners.

Thompson and Watt scored the treason of the officials of Sub-district 9, Franklin county, who were responsible for the arrests. A fight in the union hall in Zeigler, after the officers of Local 992, President Henry Corbishley and others, had been deposed by the sub-district officials, resulted in the murder of a miner, Mike Saravich, a Corbishley supporter, and the injury of a number of others among whom was sub-district Vice-President D. B. Cobb. It was Cobb who swore out the warrants charging Corbishley and the leading miners of Local 992 with conspiracy to assassinate him.

Officials Desperate.

Thompson and Watt pointed out that the real reason for the criminal charges is a desperate effort on the part of the sub-district to remove the progressive leaders of Local 992 from the picture. These men have constantly challenged the leadership of the sub-district officers and accused them of corruption, class-collaboration and election fraud.

Practically every local union in the county is in sympathy with the Zeigler miners and in each of them defense committees have been set up to prevent the railroading of Corbishley and the others to the penitentiary. In addition to this a demand is being made that will doubtless result in the calling of a sub-district convention.

Hearing Today.

The preliminary hearing is to be heard on Wednesday at Benton, the county seat. The International Labor Defense jointly with the local miners' defense committee have retained attorneys E. H. Morgan of Christopher and Judge White of Marion.

House to house collections are being carried on by the local committees for the raising of a big defense fund and International Labor Defense is conducting a national campaign for the same purpose. It is known that Frank Farrington, president of District 12, has put himself on record as behind the prosecution of the Zeigler men. This means that Cobb will have the support of the large resources of the district organization in pushing the prosecution.

Klan With Officials.

No secret is made of the fact that an outright frame-up case is expected. It is known that the sub-district officials have the support of the klan element in their action against Local 922. It is known also that any number of persons in Zeigler can be found to testify to anything on the witness stand. The sub-district officials are desperate enough to go the limit in a frame-up proceeding.

Another defense meeting will be held in West Frankfort next Sunday. Duncan McDonald of Springfield, will be the principle speaker.

HEBREW MEAT CUTTERS WIN SHORT STRIKE

Wage Increase and Short Hours Won

The strike begun recently by Local 596 (Hebrew) of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen for increases in pay and decreases in hours by chopping off Sunday work—as told of in the DAILY WORKER, is won.

In an agreement containing twelve articles, the fight of these workers is crystallized in victory. Closed shop and union control is assured. The demand from a minimum wage of $46 to one of $51 a week was won, with a similar demand won for minimum wage for apprentices from $35.50 to $40 a week.

There was extreme discontent over the previous hours, when these workers had to report for duty every day of the week. Now their demand for the abolition of Sunday work is granted and they can have that day free to enjoy a respite from slavery.

The contract operates for one year, beginning Sept. 1.

SYRACUSE ALREADY ON EMERGENCY RATIONS, AS COAL STRIKE BEGINS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 1.—With Syracuse on emergency coal rations it became known today that coal has been rushed into Canada by way of Binghamton, Syracuse and Oswego at a tremendous rate for the past eight weeks since rumblings of an impending strike were first heard.

ENTENTE MEETS IN LONDON TO HATCH ANTI-SOVIET PLOT

LONDON, England, Sept. 1.—The representatives of France, Belgium, England and Germany have begun their meetings here to discuss the drafting of the proposed "security" pact which is in reality an attempt at an alliance against Soviet Russia.

At the last minute the Italian government declared its intention of taking part in the negotiations, and Sig. Pilotti is now in London representing Mussolini.

The possibility of an Austrian-German alliance and the question of the eastern frontier of Germany will also be discussed.

MINERS PREPARE FOR LONG FIGHT, 828 PITS CLOSE

Country Flooded with Refuse by Bosses

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 1.—Anthracite mining in the mines of Pennsylvania was at a complete standstill today. Reports reaching the miners' headquarters at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel here indicate that 148,000 miners answered the strike call, issued by the United Mine Workers of America last week when the miners' representatives and owners failed to come to an agreement on the new wage contract. The old wage contract between the miners and operators expired at midnight Sunday.

Mine leaders say that the suspension was 100 per cent effective. A force of 10,000 miners remained at work as maintenance men, as agreed.

Statement of Lewis.

John L. Lewis, head of the U. M. W. of A. just before the hour for the miners to cease work, issued a statement in which he assailed the stand taken by the operators.

After reiterating the demands of the miners, Lewis blamed the operators for the strike, asserting that "they have consistently refrained from any good faith attempt to negotiate an agreement."

He accused the mine owners of taking advantage of the public fear of a strike "to unload at enhanced prices a greatly augmented tonnage of coal of inferior quality."

Lewis added that the present policy of the operators is "considerate only of commercial profit; utterly ignoring the right of the anthracite mine workers to fair treatment and entirely devoid of any concern for the public interest."

The miners, Lewis continued, are prepared to wait until their demands will be given consideration.

Operators Are Silent

No statement was forthcoming from the headquarters of the hard coal operators. Edward W. Parker, head of the anthracite bureau of information, to whom all inquiries were referred, said there was nothing to say, and that there was no likelihood of any

One Survivor in Flight to Promote Hawaii War Plans

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 1.—Plane number 1, sole survivor of the navy's two-plane, 2,100 mile non-stop flight to Hawaii for the purpose of working up sentiment for the further fortification and militariation of that island possession, was expected to reach its destination today.

Destroyers were stretched along the course of the flight to guide and aid the fliers. The PN-3 was forced to leave the air because of broken oil pressure lines. The ship was taken in tow by a destroyer.

BRITISH YIELD TO SHANGHAI LABOR UNIONS

Native Bosses Under Fire of Labor

SHANGHAI, China, Sept. 1.—Isolated by the shrewdness of Chinese diplomacy which has played one imperialist power against another, first separating America from Japan and British interests, then forcing Japan to settle her end of the Shanghai strike and leave Great Britain to fight alone, the British in Shanghai have finally been forced to surrender, forego their arrogance and yield at least partially to the demands of the Chinese.

At a mass meeting of the Shanghai British chamber of commerce and the China Association (alien in composition) the British voted unanimously to abandon their former stiff-necked attitude, to favor the full terms of the Washington conference (which is a wily trick of American imperialism rather than any help to China, it must be said), yielding the mixed court to Chinese control and Chinese representation in the Shanghai municipal council.

It is to be noted that the Chinese unions are taking up the strike weapon they have learned to use against the Japanese and British, and are now demanding and forcing the Chinese owned industries and establishment to grant wage increases similar to those the foreign imperialists were compelled to grant.

The strike against the British mills and shipping still continues, and the capitualtion of the British has yet to be put into effect there, but even this in over-shadowed by the persistent effort of the unions to force the native mill owners to grant the wage raises the unions have already forced out of the alien owners.

SOMETHING BIG TO BE PULLED OFF LABOR DAY

Juniors, T. U. E. L. and Freiheit in Fun Fest

Chicago workers are to be treated to something in the line of picnics this Labor Day, which they have never before experienced. The Trade Union Educational League has combined its fourth annual Labor Day picnic with the Freiheit, and both have mobilized an unusual entertainment program for the affair which will take place Labor Day, September 7,—Monday—at Stickney Park, Lyons, Illinois, a suburb of Chicago.

"Always Ready!"

A unique feature of the picnic will be the entrance of numerous athletics into the fun. In this, the Junior Section of the Young Workers League is going to show the old folks what real entertainment is like. There are to be baseball games between boy and girl Junior teams, races between Juniors, recitations by Juniors, and speeches by Juniors in which it is expected that the fight against right wing deviations will be accented. "Always ready!"—We'll tell the world!

Games of all kinds, with baseballs to throw at your favorite enemy, darts to shoot from Quackenbush "rifles," dancing, eats, speeches and beaming comradeship for all who come will be the order of the day. All language groups are asked to mobilize their forces to make the picnic a success.

How to Get There

To get to the picnic grounds, take the 22nd street car to end of line, transfer to Berwyn-Lyons car, get off at Harlem and Ogden avenues and walk six blocks south. Admission is fifty cents and you'll get ten dollars worth of frolic out of it.

CHINESE REACTIONARY GENERALS MURDER 16 COMMUNISTS IN AN EFFORT TO STOP LABOR UNIONS

MOSCOW, September 1.—According to a report from Pekin, Chang Tso Lin sent gendarmerie to Tientsin who arrested all suspected persons and closed all trade union and public organizations attached to the national revolutionary movement. In consequence of these events there is the greatest indignation in radical circles in Pekin.

Representatives of various organizations protested to the President Tuan Chi Jui and demanded the removal and punishment of those responsible for the bloodshed. The students' league has sent a deputation to Tientsin and has commenced collections in aid of the victims. A mass meeting was called. In order to hold down the movement the Pekin police have published an order according to which street agitation is a punishable offense.

Bloody Suppression of Communist Workers.

In Tschendun, General Tchantzuntchen, a supporter of Chang Tso Lin, has executed 16 workers on account of their membership of the Communist Party. Many others are under arrest. Three newspapers have been prohibited and an order has beem issued that all papers must deposit a bail of $1,000. This means the end of the workers' press.

After examining the proposals put forward by the employers for the conclusion of the strike, the Shanghai trade union council has decided to call off the strike on the following terms: 1. Recognition of the existing trade unions without waiting for the promulgation of the necessary law for this purpose. 2. Immediate payment of $100,000 as payment for the strike days. 3. Immediate payment of $10,000 as compensation to the relatives of the murdered and to the wounded. At the same time the trade union council demands from the government that it pass a law embodying the demands of the workers.

Union Terms.

The trade union council has issued an appeal according to which a certain alteration of tactics is necessary, and district agreements may be made for the ending of the strike under the following conditions: 1. Immediate handing over of the rights of the mixed courts to the Chinese authorities. 2. In the foreign settlements in Chinese towns, Chinese must be granted complete freedom of press and organziation. 3. Equal rights for Chinese dwellers in the foreign settlements with the foreigners. 4. Recognition of the trade unions. 5. No dismissals on account of the strike. 6. Half pay for the strike days. 7. 15 per cent increase of wages. 8. Better treatment for the workers. 9. Compensation for the families of the killed and wounded workers.

I. W. R. Active.

The Chinese section of International Workers Relief addressed an appeal to the Amsterdam Trade Union International in which after describing in detail the consequences of the unequal agreements, the exploitation of the Chinese workers by foreign capital and the oppression of China by the foreign imperialists, it calls upon the Amsterdam International to give the fighting Chinese workers moral and material support in their struggle and it further expresses the hope that the working class of the west will form a united front for the support of the Chinese people.

JOHN L. LEWIS, president of the United Mine Workers of America has written a book, entitled, "The Miners' Fight for American Standards." One little quotation from the book is interesting in view of the increasing demoralization of the bituminous unions since the Jacksonville pact was signed. Lewis writes: "With a three-year agreement in the union fields, which forestolls strikes and leaves no hope for profiteering at the expense of union fields during suspensions, the non-union interests . . . are gradually bankrupting themselves in a vain effort to overcome geography by selling enslaved man-power in competition with coal." The miners will say this is the bunk and it is.

CAL, WITH INCOME TAX OF $14,000, OPPOSES PAY RAISE FOR CLERKS

SWAMPSCOTT, Mass., Sept. 1.—President Coolidge does not look with favor upon the proposal that the minimum wage for government employes be increased to $1,500, he said here.

He sees no justification for increasing wages of those now receiving the minimum of $720 annually by more than 100 per cent, he said.

Coolidge paid an income tax of over $14,000.00. He should worry.

CAL WANTS TO KEEP IT DARK.

SWAMPSCOTT, Mass., Sept. 1.—That section of the revenue act which permits newspaper publication of income tax returns still meets with the opposition of President Coolidge, it was stated in his behalf here today. He will renew his recommendation to congress that the section be repealed.

'MOTHER' BLOOR BLAZES TRAIL THRU NEW YORK

"I had a strenuous time making connections, but so far, all goes well," writes Comrade Ella Reeve Bloor from Utica, N. Y., Tuesday. Leaving Chicago last Thursday, "Mother" Bloor resumed her continental hike, begun from San Francisco a month ago and interrupted in Chicago for a week's attendance at the Workers Party convention.

As this Communist pioneer crosses the continent, she leaves behind her newly established camps of class-conscious workers. New branches of the Workers Party, new Junior groups, hundreds of new subscribers to the DAILY WORKER: all as the result of "Mother" Bloor's mass meetings to point out the need for organized activity among the workers and farmers in order that their best interests may be furthered.

This week, Comrade Bloor is blazing a trail thru the caste-hardened east. Already, she has had big demonstrations in Buffalo, Rochester and Syracuse, New York. Today she is in Utica and will go on from there to carry out her schedule, which is as follows:

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 4; Troy, N. Y., Sept. 5; Schenectady, N. Y., Sept. 6 and 7; New York, N. Y., Sept. 9 and 10; Newark, N. J. Sept. 11; New York, N. Y., Sept. 12; Boston, Mass., Sept. 13 and 14; Providence, R I., Sept. 15; Hartford, Conn., Sept. 16; New Heaven, Conn., Sept. 17; Bridgeport, Conn. Sept. 18; New York, Sept. 20; Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 22,23 and 24; Wilmington and Arden, Delaware, 27 and 27; Baltimore, Md. 29; and Washington, D. C., Sept. 30.

Gasoline Cut One Cent

A reduction of one cent a gallon in the retail price of gasoline was made effective today by the Standard Oil company of Indiana in the 11 states in which it operates. The cut, the second within a week, brings the price to 18 cents a gallon.

Both reductions, according to an announcement from the company, brought about by "competitive conditions." The Standard Oil is playing its usual game of freezing out independents and later raising prices.

EVEN U. S. GOLD FAILS TO AID POLISH ARMY DEFEAT SOVIET RUSSIA

NEW YORK, N. Y., Sept. 1.—Poland paid indemnities to the Soviet Union's army for losses incurred in a recent border fight between the two countries with U. S. gold. This fact is disclosed in a recent article that appeared in a Polish paper.

The article states that six New York banks, the Irving Bank, the Columbia Trust Company, Morgan, Schroder, the American and the National Park Bank advanced the Polish government $6,000,000 on July 9, at 7 per cent. This money was used, says the article, for the mobilization of the Polish army for the recent demonstration against the Soviet Union.

Another Polish paper tells how the reserves of 1899 and 1900 had been called out for four weeks' training to defeat the Soviet army and failed.

statement from the operators within a day or two.

Commenting upon the reported boycott of anthracite coal by consumers thruout the New England and middle atlantic states, proposed by the conference of New England governors, President Lewis, leaderof the miners said: "Bunk, pure bunk. Anthracite is the great domestic fuel wherever it is obtainable, as bituminous is the great industrial."

Send Out Bad Coal

ARCHIBALD, Pa., Sept. 1.—Culm coal is again on its way to the New England, New York and other eastern markets to be sold to the consumer as high grade anthracite. That happened also on the eve of the 1923 hard coal strike when the operators began to reduce their banks of refuse alongside the colliers by mixing 'ashes and cobblestones," as the miners call it, with the cleaned coal.

At the Gravity Slope colliery at Archibald the culm mixing is going on at a great rate. The culm is flushed with a hose and is then shot down from the bank thruogh a chute to be emptied into the cars. John Boylan of the 1st inspection district of Dist. 1, United Mine Workers, charges that 200 cars of the culm were taken from the banks in a short time last week. The government knows about it but the miners think it will sit tight. Tom Davis of the federal department of labor recently took pictures of the culm-mixing and sent them on to Washington where they will probably gather dust until the strike is over.

Government Aids Operators

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 1.—The United States government attempted to force the miners' union to accept the operators terms when at a crucial period in the negotiations, the interstate commerce commission declared a ten per cent freight reduction on West Virginia coal shipped to north Atlantic states.

"The effect is to play non-union anthracite against union coal," it was announced at the headquarters of the American Federation of Labor.

Seven Hundred Strike

Philadelphia, Pa., August 30.—The seven hundred miners employed by the Lehigh Coal and Navigation company at Lansford went on strike in order to force a miner to put himself in good standing in the union.

The miners are not waiting for Tuesday to leave the mines. Hundred have already left, taking their tools and effects with them. Scranton reported that contract miners have already quit work.

Railroads Lay Off Men

The wages paid to the anthracite miners total $1,150,000 daily. The operators make a profit of $70,000,000 a year in the hard coal fields.

The ten thousand maintenance men who will work during the strike to keep the mines in repair will contribute $5.00 from each semi-monthly pay envelope to the strike fund.

The railroads are already laying off men, and 10,000 will be unemployed in the strike area within a week.

Over the 500 square miles in northeastern Pennsylvania which contain the anthracite mines, not a colliery whistle was blowing and not a car can be seen on the breakers.

Many of the strikers will spend their time at home reparing their houses.

All mules in the mines are being hauled to the surface.

The operators declare their overhead during the strike will be at least $200,000 a day.

South Bend, Indiana, Is Urging Recognition of the Union of Soviet Republics

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, South Bend, Indiana, farm implement and automobile manufacturing center, thru its "News-Times," urges recognition of the Union of Soviet Republics.

This bee-hive of American industry uses no subterfuge in stating its arguments for recognition. It doesn't believe, with the august state department at Washington, that the Soviet Union is an "economic vacuum." It has ceased to worry about the form of government that the Russian workers and peasants have set up in their country. It is highly elated because former Governor James. Putnam Goodrich, of Indiana, banker, railroader and public utility magnate, has been sent as one member of an American commission to investigate conditions in the Soviet Republics. It feels "business" is coming its way.

It may be taken for granted that the South Bend viewpoint is beginning to permeate the United States more and more.

Various sections of the nation, like the cotton growing states of the south, have learned that the Soviet Union is an increasing purchaser in the market of American products. This, on top of the fact that the stability of the Workers' and Farmers' Government remains unquestioned, is productive of some sane thinking on the question of Russian recognition. The South Bend (Ind.) News-Times puts it this way:

> "Russia needs practically everything that this country produces. She needs, first and foremost, agricultural implements.
> "Reopening of more friendly relations with Russia might be one means of stimulating growth in South Bend, for her purchases of such implements would undoubtedly come in no small part from this city."

• • • •

The News-Times then utters the profound prayer that, "Let it be hoped that Governor Goodrich finds the way to re-opening pleasant business relations with Russia, even if it goes to the extent of recognizing Russia as a decent and orderly government."

• • • •

South Bend is an open shop town. Its great industries are unorganized. Working conditions are dictated by the great employers, the Studebaker Bros. Manufacturing Co., the largest of its kind in the world; the Oliver Chilled Plow Works, the Singer Sewing Machine Co., to mention just a few, making it the fourth manufacturing city in the state.

It is not inconceivable that the workers and peasants of the Soviet Union, as they get around to it, will examine more closely into the conditions under which the goods are manufactured that they purchase.

The Soviet Union is anxious to purchase only those products that are turned out under union conditions. But it has already become apparent that some industries, the products of which are needed by the Soviet Union, have been absolutely untouched by American organized labor, due to its backward stage of development.

• • • •

Just how the Russian workers will make their demand for "union products only" felt in this country has not yet been revealed. But it will come in time. There can be no doubt that it will be received with enthusiasm by America's workers, unorganized as well as organized. It will be interesting, however, to watch the reaction of the Chambers of Commerce and other organizations of "open shoppers," in South Bend., Ind., and elsewhere, as they feel this power of the Russian workers and peasants creep up to their very doors.

COMMUNIST CONVENTION HAILS LEFT WING NEEDLE WORKERS OF LOCALS 2, 9 AND 22 OF THE I. L. G. U.

The following is the resolution on the struggle of the left wing of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union of New York, introduced by M. J. Olgin, and adopted by the Fourth Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party, Sunday, August 30:

The convention sends its brotherly greetings to the thirty thousand members of Locals No. 2, 9 and 22, of the I. L. G. W. U. who are at present engaged in a sharp struggle against the bureaucratic machine of their union, and who are striving to make their union an instrument of revolutionary class struggle.

The convention sees in this struggle a manifestation of the deep dissatisfaction and restlessness which are spreading among the masses of the workers as a result of increased pressure of capitalism and the capitalist state on the one hand and of the betrayal of the union leaders who become tools and agents of capitalism among the organized workers on the other.

The struggle of the New York garment workers forecast of the future when the majority of the workers will rally to the class struggle under the slogans of the Communist Party and the Communist International.

Against Capitalism.

The convention calls to the attention of the workers that their struggle is not only against the machine of Sigman-Peristein Co., but against all the forces of the capitalist government which are aiding their employers and the union leaders.

We call to the attention of the workers that the present terrorism of the bosses in the interest of Sigman and Co., proves that the union bureaucrats are friends and servants of the bosses and that the struggle of the garment workers is part of the general class struggle of the proletariat against its exploiters. Success in this fight requires that it be militantly carried against the employers for the demands of the workers.

Amalgamation and Struggle for Power

The convention declares that this struggle must lead not only toward reorganizing the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union as an instrument of class struggle but must lead also to the amalgamation of all needle workers into one great union and to their uniting with the entire proletariat in the struggle for political power.

Greater unity, greater militancy, greater determination, a clearer understanding of the class struggle, a clearer distinction between enemies that must be fought and friends that must be followed, will bring about a victory of the heroic needle workers in their present struggle.

CITY RULERS OF MINNEAPOLIS TO REDUCE WAGES

Unions Split by the Labor Fakers

By JOHN G. SOLTIS.

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 1—The city fathers have practically authorized the finance committee of the city council to proceed at once with the reduction of the wages of the city workers.

While no definite announcement has been made with reference to the cut in wages, it is believed that the slash will be around 20 per cent.

Conservatives Make Good Threats.

This action of the city council follows closely the defeat of the socialist laborite majority last June. The conservatives are making good their pledge of economy, by reducing the wages of the city workers. This is the only kind of economy they understand; in the interest of the capitalists.

The city workers are organised into the "City and County Employes' Union." It was a strong organisation once, based upon the principle of industrial unionism. However, Paul J. Smith disliked this kind of solidarity, so he split it up into several fragments this spring. This, he regarded, as a blow against the reds. In reality it was a crime against the workers of the city.

Reds Fight Splitters.

The reds fought the splitting up of the industrial union, standing squarely for the principle of solidarity, as always.

It now remains to be seen just what kind of assistance the city workers are going to get, from Paul J. Smith and his satellites, in the coming clash over wages with the city fathers.

Workers Flock to Get Low Paid Jobs from Government

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 1.—At a recent civil service examination held here last week for position of postal clerks and letter carriers, one thousand, one hundred and forty four persons were participants. Salaries to the successful ones ranged from $140 to $175 a month. Government officials say these applicants represented the largest body of persons ever seeking civil service appointments in New Orleans.

A Correction

In the issue of the DAILY WORKER of August 31, I am reported as having said in the convention in my speech on Loreism: "As long as the main business of the party was limited to theory there was no special necessity to fight against a wrong theory because there was no resultant action."

This sentence is theoretical nonsense and practical opportunism. I never said such a thing. At this moment I do not have the stenographic report on hand. But I can reproduce the basic thought I did express.

I said that bolshevization means mainly activization. As long as the party was inactive and the opportunists differed from the party as a whole and the Party's concept only in theory they, (the opportunists,) could very well submit to the party and could refrain from fighting the party's policy. But when the party becomes a party of action then the opportunists are also driven into action. But not into action for and with the party, (because they are fundamentally opposed to the party engaging in action) but into action against the party and the Party's policy. Thus the progressing bolshevization of the party beings the conflict of the party with opportunism, Loreism, to a crisis.

This is the gist of what I said.

Fraternally yours,
Max Bedacht

MOVIE "EXTRAS" EXPLOITED, HURT, GET BAD CHECKS

Producers' Bunk Does Not Fill Stomachs

By L. P. RINDAL.

LOS ANGELES, (By Mail.) — Jack Rose, representing the Players Service Studio Agency, 1117 Vine street, Hollywood, phoned the organizer of the I. B. W. A. (the "movie extras'" union), Murphy, 420 Standford avenue, for men recently. He wanted 40 fairly well dressed workers to report at his agency at 10 a. m. The wage was $3 a day and lunch (one meal). When 8 to 10 per cent, or more, in employment fees, plus carfares—from 20 to 80 cents—is deducted, there isn't much left to live on while "studying for stardom and fame."

The agent was informed that the organization, as such, could not send out men to work for a pittance like that. It was against the rule to work for any less than a standard wage, that is, from $5 to $7.50 per day for extras. Individuals, however, sometimes do what they please—or, rather, they have to do things that are contrary to their wishes when their stomachs are as empty as their pocketbooks.

Work Day and Night, Earn Nothing.

At the time and place mentioned above, 25 men reported on their own responsibility, and 24 went to work at the California Studio, Sunset and Gower streets, Hollywood. They were kept busy all day and all night. All told, 85 men and 15 women took part in this picture. About half of this number received checks, the rest spent about three days trying to get them. In addition to time lost, a number of extras spent nearly as much money collecing their pay as the wage amounted to. From 40 to 80 cents carfares plus 25 cents rakeoff to the employment shark were paid by all.

Eyes Injured by Artificial Light.

The eyes of the majority were injured by kleig lights during the night. Among I. B. W. A. men hurt are Bruhl, Frazer, R. Clark, H. Williams, J. Reynolds, Boylan and Mike Conley. Medicine had to be bought. Mike Conley spent $1.75 in hard earned cash out of his own pocket before it pleased the California Studio to pay his "huge salary" of $3, minus $2 expenses, which is nothing, according to the writers' arithmetic.

No Money in Bank.

When the workers appeared at the Commercial National Bank, 9th and Main streets, to cash their checks, made out to cash, they found that the studio, named after a "golden" commonwealth, had no money there. So all that glitters in sparkling brilliancy and splendor is not gold either in Movieland, Hollywood, or in the "Golden State," California.

Case Criminal.

From the bank the crowd went to Deputy Labor Commissioned Barker, only to be informed that the case was one for the police to handle.

But, not having any more oversupply of confidence in the forces of "law and order" than in the representatives of screned-off humbug, those exploited, injured and fooled movie extras hesitated to follow the advice of said labor commissioner.

Anyhow, after some more delay, the bank honored the checks, in order to save some "worthies" connected with the picture industry from additional dishonor.

Free Employment Bureau Promised.

The Association of Motion Picture Producers unanimously decided, according to press reports a couple of weeks ago, to maintain and operate their proposed casting bureau for extra and day employes on an absolutely free basis. "Specifically, this means the agent's commission, 8 to 10 per cent and up of wage every day, paid by the extras. Under this new management the full amount of the voucher goes to the employe," it was stated. "The decision to maintain an absolutely free bureau is the result of a long, thoro study by the association."

Yes, and many gray hairs and sleepless nights are other results, I suppose, of this hard "study" by the "noble" directors in the interest of their poor, underpaid and overworked slave extras. The writer is deeply moved—almost to tears. This "free" bureau—planned for the "near future" long ago—"will be operated on a basis of absolute fairness." Just think of it, you victims of the movie fever, kleig lights, employment sharks and bad checks!

The Workers' Millennium.

The millennium of the Christians is a period during which Satan will be bound. But the millennium of the movie extras and other wage slaves will come when the employment sharks and similar exploiters of labor are bound to a wheelbarrow and dressed in union-made overalls.

Complete House Cleaning.

"The economic result of establishing this bureau is hailed to be more far-reaching than anything yet done in relation to employes," a report says. But a statement like that does not mean much, coming, as it does, from the mouths of owners of an industry with an extremely low labor standard. The new bureau will also "automatically wipe out of existence all questionable employment agencies, makeup schools, schools for acting, scenario schools, and other pretended agencies," they claim.

The records in the office of the labor commission show that in the past ten years 85 agencies have been closed because of their questionable methods. But, in spite of this so-called house cleaning, Hayes is the head of the greatest fakerdom in the country today.

Annually this industry has over 200,000 placements of casual labor, the largest of any industry. Idle men, children, widows and fatherless are exploited to their bones in their struggles for jobs that give them a miserable existence from day to day.

Slim Chance to Become Stars.

Eighteen Hollywood hopefuls, including a heterogeneous array of blondes, brunettes and bellboks, are the lucky remnants of an army of 30,000 who had competed in a nation-wide elimination contest for the privilege of attending a movie school. The hope of stardom on the silver screen cost the students a paltry sum of $1,200.

From the point of view of both extras and would-be stars, the motion picture industry offers no good opportunities to the masses either in the way of bread and butter or stardom. The hope for riches or fame, or both, in movieland is as much of an illusion as the ridiculous saying of the master class that "every mother's son has a chance to become president or a millionaire in this country."

Workers' Rule Only Hope.

Under the workers' rule, however, this industry could be directed into a powerful medium for useful education in the interest of the producing class—workers and real tillers of the soil. At present it is only an instrument thru which the master class is pouring out streams of poisonous propaganda for the benefit of money kings and other vested interests, in their ceaseless effort to keep the rotten capitalist system alive a little longer.

Wake up, movie extras! The time for action is now! Agitate! Organize! Educate!

COMMUNIST CONVENTION DESIRES ARMENIAN COMRADES JOIN PARTY

The Fourth Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party, by unanimous vote, carried the following resolution to express its wishes toward the unification of the Armenian Communist elements in the United States, some of which are outside the party, with the party, and more firmly with all Communist elements in the party, by the reorganization process:

• • • •

Motion on the statement of the Armenian comrades to the convention signed by T. M. Korkikian, of Detroit, A. Schmavanian, of Chelsea, Mass., T. Kaligian of New York City, and S. E. Simonian, of Chicago.

• • • •

The convention regrets the fact that there is still a number of Armenian comrades outside of our party, and that the Communist elements within the Armenian section of our party have not yet succeeded in unifying their forces for harmonious work. The convention is of the opinion that this situation in the Armenian section of our party, which is due to past internal conflicts, demands a thoro investigation and settlement that will unify and strengthen the party activities among the Armenian speaking workers of the United States.

The convention is of the opinion that the reorganization of our party on the basis of shop nuclei and international branches and the centralization of the party apparatus will prove an effective means of unifying the Communist forces also within the Armenian section.

The convention refers the statement of the Armenian comrades to the incoming Central Executive Committee for immediate action on the matter, towards the end that all the truly Communist forces among the Armenian speaking workers be drawn into the party and unified for common Communist work.

PRAVDA SHOWS CHINESE COUNTER REVOLUTION IS AIDING IMPERIALISM

MOSCOW, Sept. 1. — An article published in the Pravda, referring to the events in China, says that the mobilization of the forces of the Chinese counter-revolution is proceeding side by side with the mobilization of the counter-revolutionary forces of the imperialists.

The English press continually demands that Chang Tso Lin should suppress the national revolutionary movement. The Chinese bourgeoisie, shocked at the might of the growing trade union movement, wants to drown it in blood.

In Tientsin Chang Tso Lin is acting as the tool of the English, Japanese and Chinese bourgeoisie. The counter-revolution is using force against the workers; the workers must therefore, answer force with force.

A REPLY TO MR. GREEN

By A. C. BAILEY, of the American Negro Labor Congress, member of the local committee, New York City.

THE American Negro Labor Congress is accused by Pres. Green as a Communist movement, and warns the Negro to stay away especially those who are member of the A. F. of L., that if they attend the Congress Oct. 25th, they will be expelled from the organization. The Negro should look upon Mr. Green as a hypocrite or a lunatic. Since when did Mr. Green take upon himself to advise Negroes what to do? For instance, in these United States when Negroes are being lynched, jim-crowed and disfranchised, burned at the stake and all the rest of the evils, Mr. Green is silent.

One of the greatest crimes that could ever be committed to a human being was committed to Mrs. Turner in 1918 in the state of Georgia. Mrs. Turner's husband was lynched and Mrs. Turner said, if she knew who lynched her husband, she would take out a warrant for them. A group of white christians and members of the upper class were coming from church in their automobiles caught Mrs. Turner, tied her by her legs to a tree and poured gasoline on her, then appplied a match to her clothes. Mrs. Turner was eight and one half months with child, she was burned until her abdomen bursted and the child fell out and cried twice. The mob stepped up and crushed the child's brains out.

MR. GREEN what step did you or Mr. Gompers or any other official in your organization take towards this dreadful act on the part of these civilized christian men and women?' At the same time, we have the ex-President, Woodrow Wilson telling us how cruel the Germans were towards the Belgium women and children. But not a word of sympathy towards poor defenseless Mrs. Turner. Negroes should remember that this did not happen in Bolshevik Russia but in civilized America.

In 1919, in the state of Arkansas just after the great war for democracy, black men were held on the farms as peons, they got together in one of their churches to organize so that they would be in a position to protect their interests, they were met by agents of the U. S. government with shot guns and were murdered in cold blood. It took an organization like the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People to save some of their lives from the electric chair.

IT happens that the national organizer of the American Negro Labor Congress is a member of the Communist Party, that does not signify that the congress is a Communist movement, no more than you could call the American Federation of Labor a christian movement, simply because Mr. Green happens to be a member of the protestant church.

Demand Right to Pray.

NEW YORK — (By Mail.) — The right to pray has become a cardinal right of free speech in the mine fields at Okmulgee county, Oklahoma, where striking coal diggers and their wives prayed for the souls of the strikebreakers who took their places, till Sheriff Russell, backed by the governor's militia, interfered, and the American Civil Liberties Union has entered vigorous protest and offered its assistance to the union.

Striking miners and their wives and children, singing hymns, have been marching to the shafts at quitting time, praying for the souls of the strike breakers and asking divine aid in persuading them to quit their jobs. Something moved the strikebreakers' hearts, for many of them quit, and Sheriff Russell, becoming alarmed for the success of the operators with whom he was allied, issued an order banning prayers. Governor Trapp backed him up with 62 National Guardsmen.

The strike began in April when the operators canceled the 1924 scale and substituted the 1917 wages. Twenty-five hundred men are on strike.

Radiator Workers' Strike Grows.

BAYONNE, N. J.—Several hundred more employes of the Bayonne plant, American Radiator Co., are out with the original 100 strikers demanding restoration of the 8-hour day and hourly wage scale. Since April the plant has been changing to a speed-up piece-work system with 9-hour days. Pouring men now being paid 78 cents an hour want 10 cents more; shake-out men getting about 50 cents an hour want 65 cents on the hourly rate.

Manager Adam E. Geddes, of the plant refused all demands of the strikers when deputy chief of Bayonne police Daniel Kilduff arranged a conference between Geddes and workers' representatives. Geddes says only 150 men are out while strikers claim over 400 of the 600 workers are striking.

WARSAW METAL WORKERS ON STRIKE DEMANDING 50 PER CENT INCREASE

MOSCOW, Aug. 31.—According to reports from Warsaw, all the metal workers of the town have struck as the negotiations of the Metal Workers' Union with the employers in consequence of the rejection by the latter of the 50 per cent wage increase demanded by the men, have been fruitless. At a meeting of the strikers there were energetic demands for the transfer of the strike leadership from the existing leaders, consisting of members of the Polish socialist party, into the hands of a mixed commission. The trade union leaders rejected this demand and declared the meeting closed.

ENTENTE MEETS TO FORM ANTI-SOVIET COMBINE

"Security" Pact Plot Hatched by England

PARIS, France, Sept. 1.—The Painleve government has suddenly taken a more hostile attitude toward the so-called "security" pact of European countries, following the speech of president of the reichstag, Paul Loebe. Loebe declared that the proposed agreement would enable the Hindenburg government to unite with Austria, and France could not interfere if bound by the league of nations.

The "security" pact was proposed to France in February by the German government, who, however, received its inspiration from Lord D'Abernon, British ambassador in Berlin. The British backed by the Coolidge government, plan to overthrow the Rapallo treaty between Soviet Russian and Germany, and form a united anti-Svoiet bloc.

The Hindenburg government is hoping to re-open the eastern frontier question.

The French, German, English and Belgium representatives meet today in London to discuss the pact.

HOLLAND'S WHITE TERROR GETS THE O. K. OF DUTCH YELLOW SOCIALISTS

By W. REESEMA.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 1.—(IRA.)—The political prisoners in Holland and in the Dutch colonies are treated like common criminals, and subjected to the most refined system of torture which the "very christian" Dutch bourgeoisie has put in practice against those who sin against "sacred property."

There is everything to be desired in the conditions in the Dutch prisons. The food, the clothing and the housing are all equally bad. Corporal punishment and ill-treatment, altho officially forbidden, form the order of the day. The slightest breech against "discipline" is rigorously punished.

These frightful conditions are no secret to Dutch "democracy" and the so-called socialists. They have repeatedly called the attention of public opinion to them; for example when the social-democrats in the '90s, during the first revolutionary movement in Holland and numerous proletarians were cast into prison on account of exceeding the law for the regulation of rationing.

On this occasion the Telegraf whose chief editor was an entente friend, himself made the acquaintance of the prisons as a "political." In both cases the entire campaign was confined to a heated press discussion which of course brot no changes, since on the other hand the responsible government was supported by the "opponents."

Yellows Now Quiet.

Since the close of the war when the doors of the prisons were opened for "Bolshevik criminals" these gentlemen are completely silent. Therefore the Indo-European soldiers, members of the Soldiers' Council of Juramija, have been obliged to spend 6 years in the cells of the Leeuward prison without the social-democrats raising a finger on their behalf. The young anarchists, the victims of the bomb attack in Boog (1921), which was incited by the police, will be slowly but surely ruined in the cells without "democracy" thinking that the new campaign of the Communist Party of Holland on behalf of an amnesty for political prisoners and the improvement of prison regime, should be supported.

A short time ago an editor of the Tribune, who had to undergo a sentence of four weeks was in a manner characteristic of the treatment of political prisoners in Holland, chained to a common criminal and transported from Amsterdam to the Lutfen prison.

Flogging to Death Common.

There are two kinds of prisons in Dutch India; those for Europeans and those for Indians; the code of criminal law also is different for both races.

Conditoins in prisons for Europeans: bourgeoisie who are "rash," differ very much from those in Dutch prisons. The treatment can even be termed good, a fact which is valued highly, doubtlessly by the numerous "victims" of the wave of corruption which has swept over the army of officials and police circles in Indonesia during the past years. The settlers who have to sit "their six months" for whipping to death Indian and Chinese coolies, relate after their liberation that they had a rollicking time in the prison. They are treated with the greatest respect, and enjoy very many privileges.

Quite another regime exists for "Indian criminals" and European proletarians, the revolutionaries. Granted that the treatment in Indian prisons is scandalous, then the thousands who are condemned to penal servitude cease to be considered as human beings at all. Corporal punishmnet, flogging to death are daily occurrences. Food consists of the worst kind of rice, with the result that the berry-berry disease and tuberculosis rage, and syphilis also claims numerous victims.

Use "Goldfish."

Already at the examination, the prisoners are so tortured and often in such a vile way, that the peasants in order to avoid bodily torture make a clean breast of things, and say whatever the police want. Thus recently the Java man who was condemned on account of "murder" to 20 years' hard labor, was liberated because after three years the supposed victim of the murder returned from his exile. The accused who had not even known the "murdered man" acknowledged the murder during the "painful" examination for reasons which may be easily understood. It is no rare occurrence for prisoners to be beaten to death in the preliminary examination as was disclosed this year in the month of May in the case against the policeman Bergman. On the occasion of such trials the most abominable facts are disclosed. And the democrats and social-democrats remain silent. They are only "half-civilized Indonesians." Only the Communist Tribune braves the storm against the bloody deeds of the Dutch oppressors.

At night time the prisoners are huddleded together in a narrow room where 20 to 30 men sleep anyhow on tables. In this way homo-sexuals are produced, sexual diseases spread, and the prisoners are strongly demoralized. We must admire the heroism and perseverance of the young Javs revolutionaries who have been lingering for years in these prisons and when they are liberated from this hell recommence their proletarian activities.

But It Pays Well.

The Dutch bourgeoisie, which already today squeeses from the Indonesians an annual clear profit of 500 million gulden and within a few years hopes to increase the stream of gold to 3 milliards, think that by using this refined system of government over the Eastern Asiatic islands, they will be able to strengthen their rule for years to come. But neither white terror nor the disgraceful prison regime will be able to destroy the revolutionary movement which is already firmly rooted among the Java peasants and workers. They are welding the Java proletarians together into a firm whole which by its revolutionary courage, sacrifice and determination promises to conquer the leadership of the national revolutionary movement.

"India free from Holland." That is not only the slogan of the Indian but also of the Dutch revolutionaries, and will liberate the workers of Holland and the Dutch Indians and break the rule of Dutch imperialism.

MASS PICKETING IS WILLIMANTIC STRIKERS' REPLY

Official Visits Mill, Finds Few Scabs

The strikers of the American Thread Co., enlarged their picketing forces the day E. F. Kaley of the company's directorate visited the mill. Strikers who have been out 25 weeks walked to a mass meeting in Town Hall later where speakers of the United Textile Workers addressed them.

The evicted strikers and their families are living in the tents the union erected on the edge of town for them. The camp is pleasant enuf on warm days but in rainy weather and with the coming coolness conditions are not comfortable.

Special demonstrations will be held to show again the sympathy of all Willimantic's organized labor with the strikers. The company claims that 1,200 workers are now busy in the mill. This is half the regular force required, but strikers assert that not over 200 strikebreakers are at work.

HOTEL WAITERS STRIKE FOR PAY RAISE ON COAST

All Races Solid in Fight on Bosses

By TOM LEWIS.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 1—A strike of the waiters in the Palace and St. Francis Hotels, is now in its third week.

Since going on strike the best spirit of solidarity has been shown not only by the strikers themselves, but also by the Chinese and colored workers. There are about 250 waiters on strike, and their demands are as follows:

Increase of 50c on three meal shifts.
Increase of 45c on two meal shifts.
Increase of 25c on one meal shifts.

The wages of the first, previous to the strike were $2.50. Should they win their demands, then it will mean $3.00 per meal shift.

The wages of the second category previous to strike were $2.30. Should they win, the wages per the two meal shifts will be $2.75. And the third category now get $1.75 should they win, then it will mean $2.00 which is sadly needed.

Chinese and Negroes Aid.

The fight is on and not a break in the ranks, the spirit of solidarity being well demonstrated, as no scabs can be found among the Chinese or the colored workers, and the reason is, the waiters here in Frisco never turned against their fellow workers on account of race, creed orcolor. On the contrary, they were always ready to co-operate with them, realising more or less the class struggle, with the result that they are now getting the solid support of their yellow and colored brothers.

To give you some idea of the progressive spirit of the Waiters' Union, when the resolutions "Hands Off China," "Stand by Russia," was presented, they voted unanimously for them, and more, they donated $25 to the Shanghai strikers, thru the Chinese Union Guild, a local Chinese labor organization.

The Chinese are now holding street meetings in Chinatown, advising their countrymen not to scab on their white brothers.

A steward of the St. Francis Hotel tried to engage Chinese bus-boys and waiters. He was turned down cold in all Chinese private employment offices, with the curt reply, "We stand for solidarity of all workers, no scabs in our ranks or among our people."

Newspapers Also Help.

The colored local of Oakland, a union composed mostly of dining car workers was called upon to supply help. When they heard of the strike, they said, "No, sir; we absolutely refuse to furnish scabs," thereby showing, when they are recognized as coequals on the job with their white brothers, the bosses must look elsewhere for scabs.

So here in Frisco at the present time, we are observing in the Waiters' Union strike the real spirit of working class solidarity, and to add to its magnificence, Young China, the Chinese daily gave a full account of the strike, with the admonition, that all Chinese must support the strike.

Connecticut Movies to Be Closed by Trust

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 1.—A national walkout of all members of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and Motion Picture Operators employed in moving picture houses is threatened if film producers and distributors carry out their intended boycott of Connecticut, thus throwing over 500 workers out of jobs.

Eugene Trieber, head of the New Haven local of the union and state secretary, says that the national organization will back up the Connecticut locals if distributors actually carry out their boycott of the state because of its $10-per-10,000-feet tax on all movies.

Most of the 15 film exchanges in New Haven are closed and thruout the state the distributors are preparing not to release further films after present contracts are fulfilled.

The film distributors and producers are in the same organization under direction of Will Hays, who ordered the boycott of Connecticut "as an object lesson to other states not to pass movie tax laws." The moving picture industry is virtually a trust controlled by five big producers, including Metro-Goldwyn, Lasky-Famous Players, Universal, etc. Many moving picture theaters thruout the country are controlled by the producer-distributor combine.

MACHINISTS ON COAST WELCOME THE COMMUNISTS

Condemn Johnston and Fitzpatrck Tirade

By TOM LEWIS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Sept. 1.—At the regular meeting of Machinists' Local Union No. 68, a communication was read from the International Executive Board calling upon all Communists, T. U. E. L. and Young Workers' League members to sever their connections with those organizations or stand expelled from the union after October 15.

A communication was also read from President John Fitzpatrick and Secretary Ed. Nockels, of the Chicago Federation of Labor attacking the Communist Party and its kindred organizations.

Refuse to Expell Militants.

After the communications were read a motion was made to resist the International Executive Board and after considerable discussion took place in which none favored the tactics of "B. & O." Johnston and his satellites, the motion was carried unanimously.

Each speaker expressed his view of the acts of the organizations and members attacked. The red scare was sneered at by nearly all present, and it was stated in plain English that the T. U. E. L. was an educational organization and not a dual union as asserted in the communication. Speakers also stated that all members had a right to their political views whether Communist, republican or democrat.

Further, that making such silly charges against the Reds was tending to destroy the unions, was all bunk as the Machinists' Union had lost over 250,000 members or thereabouts since the war period. "Can that be charged to the Communists?" they asked. "On the contrary, it must be charged to the failure of our own leaders."

It was also stated that the Communists were few in number, comparatively, and if they could capture the union, or break it up, as feared by the leaders, then the sooner it happened the better, "because, as we stand at present, we can take no pride in our organization." "Since the war, we have been continually on the down road. Therefore, if the Communists can infuse new life into the union, rather than expell them, we should welcome them."

Fitzpatrick Supports K. K. K.

It was brot out in the discussion that the International Executive Board and the Fitzpatrick and Nockels communications were consciously or unconsciously supporting the K. K. K. when they opposed the organization of Negro workers into the unions and tho they may not have meant it that way, the fact they are opposing the Negro Labor Congress, places them in the light of siding with the K. K. K.

As no one took the occasion to attack the Communists, the Young Workers' League members or the T. U. E. L., Mr. "B. & O." Johnston had better learn from his colleague, Mr Sigman, now of nowhere, that the day of peddling the "Red Scare" is past in the unions.

The rank and file are learning fast who the fighters are and how they are struggling to build the unions against the fakers who have sold them out or are selling them out with their quack nostrums. The awakening spells a wonderful change in the unions in the near future, so the fakers had better be preparing themselves for the inevitable downfall of the whole brood including the two "white feather dusters" of Chicago, Fitzpatrick and Nockels.

After the meeting adjourned, several unionists were heard to remark, "If they are going to expell the Communists, then, we will walk out too."

SYNOPSIS.—The official report of the British trade union delegation to Soviet Russia described the workings of foreign trade, transportation, industry, finance and agriculture in the Soviet Union. The trade union leaders concluded that foreign trade is increasing, and that in agriculture and industry the level of production is being raised. The finances have been placed on a sound basis, the report showed. Harm is being done to England by the absence of full diplomatic relations, the union leaders stated. Schools and universities, and literature, music and opera and the theatre were then discussed. Art collections, censorship, newspapers, wall newspapers, and freedom of the press were explained, with the conclusion that "the results of education are astounding." The report then took up hospitals, welfare work, sanitation, birth control, abortion, cleanliness and housing, rent regulations, family life, and prisons. "The Soviet government is achieving most remarkable results in respect to public health, housing, and the prison system," says the report. Regarding the trade unions and labor conditions, the report states, "The Delegation were much impressed by the position and activities of Trade Unions under the Soviet system." The report then described labor regulations, co-operatives, wages, and told of visits to various industrial works. The general conclusion on labor conditions reached by the commission was that, "The U. S. S. R. is a strong and stable state. The government is not only in every way better than anything Russia has ever yet had, but it has done and is doing work in which other older state systems have failed and are failing."

Menshevist Party Dissolved

The Menshevist or Social Democratic Party at one time included a very large majority of the politically conscious population. The upper classes in Georgia under Tsarism had been more inclined to socialism and democracy than anywhere else in the Empire. With power put in its hands by the Revolution the party membership grew to 60,000, and with supporters could count on a vote of 80,000, the active membership being about 15,000. With loss of power in 1921 the party rapidly fell in numbers and divided into a "constitutional" opposition and an "illegal" organization. And the position of the "constitutional" opposition became more and more impossible between the Bolshevist Government and their "illegal" colleagues; so that the question of voluntary liquidating the party gained favor. In the autumn of 1923 a party Congress representing 12,000 members voted by majority in favor of liquidation, an example followed by the Young Marxians with 5,000 members. A minority of Constitutionalists decided to carry on. But after the collapse of the insurrection there has been a final liquidation of the constitutional Menshevists, who have either become Communists or as non-partisans co-operate with them, as elsewhere in Russia. There remains a residuum of "illegal" Menshevists of not more than 2,000 members, who continue to conspire with the help of the Menshevist emigres[*]

Elections

The elections are conducted by show of hands as elsewhere in Russia, and what is said in the report on Russia about them is applicable to Georgia. With the addition that, no doubt, in Georgia fear of another race and a ruling class, and above all, of the Tcheka does count for a good deal. Under Menshevist rule the average attendance at elections was about two-thirds of the electorate. It now seems to be about three-quarters. The disfranchisements under the Soviet system are about 2 per cent. And if the elections were a mere farce, it is difficult to see why they should be so well attended.

The Tcheka

The least satisfactory feature of the Trans-Caucasian situation is the maintenance of the "Tcheka" or Extraordinary Commission abolished in Russia itself at the close of the civil wars. There is a Trans-Caucasian Tcheka for the whole Federation, and under it a Georgian Tcheka run by Georgian Bolshevists. Moscow disclaims any responsibility for either, but the Trans-Caucasian Tcheka was not long ago in charge of the man who ran the Russian Tcheka during its greatest activity. It is the Georgian Tcheka that has been "liquidating" the August insurrection and that is responsible for the numerous executions and exiles. The severity of the suppression of a revolt that was never formidable is justified by Tchekist officials with the arguments usual in such cases. And these severities have been so exaggerated and embroidered that it is almost impossible to arrive at any real facts from opponents of the Government with which to check official information. Some of these stories were inquired into, but no real evidence could be got of wholesale terrorism. Since the fighting finished there is a discrimination between those responsible and the ignorant; and there seems no reason to suppose that the innocent are suffering. But undoubtedly the name of Tcheka alone would create an atmosphere of terrorism.

Army

As a National Republic incorporated in the Union, Georgia has its own army or militia. This has been overlooked, partly because the uniform of the infantry is the same as that of the Red (Union) Army—though the cavalry has a uniform of its own.

As to the total strength of the troops in the Caucasus, the authorities were naturally reticent for reasons of foreign policy. But it was not difficult to ascertain that it was less than half that of the Tsarist garrison. The Red Army in Georgia is less than the British Army of occupation, and is on better terms with the population. The Caucasus is one of the very few places abroad where stories are told of misbehavior of British troops; and though no doubt untrue this shows the temper of the population to that occupation and to occupations in general.

Georgian Language and Customs

An unmixed asset accruing from the present position is the complete cultural liberty enjoyed by Georgia after a century during which its language and literature were practically proscribed. The delegation attended some interesting plays in the national language, in which Tsarist Russia was mercilessly guyed. The publication of books in the Georgian language has gone up. Under three years of Menshevism, althogether 162 Georgian books were published. Under three years of Bolshevism, 505 books were published by the Commissariat of Education alone. Moreover, there were published ten Armenian, seven Turkish, and ten other books in minority languages, as against four only under Menshevism. The total copies issued under Menshevism were 405,000; under Bolshevism, 3,500,000. In other words, there has been a great impetus to national culture.

The Delegation in Georgia

This was the situation on the arrival of the Delegation in Trans-Caucasia. And even before leaving Moscow it was evident that the atmosphere in Trans-Caucasia would be different from that in the rest of Russia; more resembling, in fact, in its unrest that which was found in Russia in 1920. For example, the Delegation was warned that the Union Government would not be responsible for the safety in Trans-Caucasia of one of the advisory delegates who had been associated in an official capacity with the British armed occupations. But the delegate in question was prepared to take the risk, and the Delegation did not wish to lose the advantage which his exceptional local knowledge and personal connections afforded them in arriving at a just estimate of the situation. On arrival in the Caucasus this delegate moved freely among his former acquaintances without interference and without untoward results.

During their stay in Tiflis delegates were constantly receiving communications from the "illegal" Menshevist organization. Most of these were found to be of no value. One of them, however, contained a statement that a porter of the hotel and a servant there had been arrested for trying to convey a Menshevist letter to the Delegation. The Delegation having ascertained that this was so, the Chairman, accompanied by two advisory delegates, visited the Georgian Tcheka and without great difficulty secured the release of these men. This was the only incident of the kind. And members of the Delegation in Tiflis, as elsewhere, visited persons of every point of view without obstacle or observation.

The Tiflis Citadel

Most of the lurid stories circulated in the Georgian capital have their scene in the citadel. This mediaeval fortress is perched on precipitous rocks over the gorge of the Koura. It is the political prison, garrisoned by Russian troops, where several hundred prisoners were still awaiting trial for participation in the insurrection. Daily executions were said to be still taking place there, and undoubtedly convicts were still being sent thence to prison camps in Siberia.

The advisory delegates took an early opportunity of visiting the citadel without notice and unaccompanied. On the bridge over the gorge they were warned by a passer-by not to point at the scenery or loiter, as the sentinels shot at everyone supposed to be signalling to the prisoners. They penerated, however, without difficulty into the interior of the citadel and talked to the young Red Army guards. These did not know who they were talking to, and described with great freedom all the doings in the prison. In no country are such doings pleasant and each country thinks those of another worse than its own. It will be enough to say that the sensational stories circulating in Tiflis were clearly untrue. They then asked to see the political prisoners. This rather cool request led to the Governor being fetched up from the town, who explained that this could not be done without a governmental order. As a visit to the "politicals'" quarters under such conditions would be of no particular interest the matter was not pursued further.

Delegation's Reception

The reception given to the delegates and the numbers that marched in the public processions convinced them that a large portion of the industrial population of the capital were enthusiastic supporters of the present Government. The situation in Georgia, in fact, seems to be essentially the same as in Azerbaijan and Armenia—that is, a majority of the industrial workers with a nucleus of Russians are prepared to lay down their lives for the present Government. The small minority that remains in opposition are not now prepared to lay down their lives to overthrow it.

Delegation's Recommendations

On its return to Moscow the Delegation put before the Union Government its view of the Georgian situation. It pointed out the great advantage that would accrue to the prestige of the Union of the Sovietist Socialist Republics if the "Tcheka" were now abolished in Georgia as elsewhere and the Red Army withdrawn, say, to Baku—Georgia being left to its local militia like other Autonomous Republics. This was fully admitted, and it was indicated in reply that these two measures were only a question of time. In fact, that in the interests of economy it had been suggested to the Trans-Caucasian Federation that the Red Army should be withdrawn, but they had asked that it should be left until the situation was clearer. As to the "Tcheka," it was pointed out that it was not only a question of the internal position in Georgia, but of the international situation also. The Caucasus under Tsarism was garrisoned by a very large force. It was now practically held by local militia, but was still an object of foreign intrigue, and might possibly become an objective of foreign intervention. The frustration of such intrigues in the interests of peace required special precautions.

In fact, the Delegation was left with the impression that adoption of the two measures recommended depended mainly on the international situation.

General Conclusion

The mediaeval independence of Georgia has never been forgotten by its people, and in spite of compulsory incorporation in the Russian Empire for over a century, they continued to struggle for full sovereignty.

While the time at the disposal of the Delegation did not make it possible for extensive inquiries, the conclusion reached by the Delegation as to the Georgian situation was that for the Georgian workpeople the advantages of inclusion in the Union were many, among them the assurance it gave them of peace and prosperity. The guarantee secured of peaceful enjoyment of a "Dominion" autonomy only falls short of complete sovereignty. The practical advantages of inclusion in the Union might be considered on material grounds as outweighting the disadvantages.

With respect to the national minorities in Georgia there can be no doubt at all that the present system by which they secure Home Rule gives the best practical possibility of satisfactorily securing their lives and liberties.

Finally, that it is in the interests of the workers and peasants of Caucasia and of the world that the inclusion of the Trans-Caucasian Federation in the Union of Socialist Russia should continue, and that the Caucasus should not again become the scene of rival miliary occupations and race wars.

CHAPTER III

Armenia

The Delegation did not have time to visit the neighboring Republic of Armenia, and therefore does not report on it. But it is in possession of information from various sources showing that this State has made even more remarkable progress than Georgia and Azerbaijan. The Soviet social system seems to have been accepted whole-heartedly by the Armenians, and this very industrious and intelligent race is making full use of the liberty the Union Constitution gives to national culture and the help it gives to economic development.

The Union of Sovietist Socialist Republics can justly be proud of the work that is being done in saving the relics of this most ancient and oppressed of the Christian races, for whose fate Western Europe and North America have so melancholy a responsibility. And it is pleasant to note that the British people are joining with the Russians in this humane undertaking. The 10,000 and more Armenian refugees now being forced to leave Greece can be received by the Armenian Republic—which has already provided for 300,000 refugees—if £20 a head be subscribed for transport and settlement. And it is much to be hoped that Great Britain will by providing this money make a small recognition of the Treaty responsibilities it has repeatedly undertaken in respect of this long-suffering race.

CHAPTER VI

Azerbaijan

The Delegation visited Baku, the capital of the Mahomedan Republic of Azerbaijan and the center of the Caucasian oilfields.

Changes in Baku

In outward appearance there is a considerable improvement in the town itself. The old horse trams have been replaced by a very extensive system of electric tramways, which connect all parts of the town with the Bibie Eybat oilfields, and the refining districts outside the town itself. Large spaces of waste ground have been planted with shrubs and trees and utilized as public gardens. Most of the houses are stone built, therefore the necessity of a coat of paint is not so obvious in the general appearance of the town as elsewhere in Russia.

It was, however, in the population itself that the transformation was most surprising. Formerly in Baku large fortunes were amassed or lost several times in a generation. Huge sums were spent on dress, entertainment, and gambling. At the same time Baku was socially as democratic as any town in Europe. Social distinctions among the middle class hardly existed at all. Nobody knew whether a millionaire might not be living on credit to-morrow or a beggar be driving in his own motor-car in the following week. Two of Baku's greatest millionaires had never taken the trouble to learn to read or write. For this reason perhaps their wealth did not create so much hatred, envy, and malice as elsewhere.

[*] On this point an extract is given from the shorthand report of evidence given to the Delegation by a Menshevist, who opposed Bolshevism until last autumn.

"At the present time the position of the members of the Menshevist Party is this—the leaders are remote from the working class, and do not realize what has been happening in Georgia. They continually assured the peasants and workers that the Soviet power in Russia was very temporary. Each day they said it could last only one day more. And when it didn't fall they said it would last only another week, and when the week was over they said it would last only another month, and finally it became years, and still the Soviet power in Russia lasted. The reason the Georgian Menshevists kept on working so long was because they were relying on foreign help. They believed that any minute the Soviet power in Russia would fall, and then Georgia would be in the power of the foreign capitalist States. And they preferred an independent State under the protection of foreign countries. The Menshevists were afraid that they would lose all they had gained by the February Revolution if they allied themselves with the Soviet Government and relied on the Russian workers instead of on foreign Governments. The Committee abroad was receiving help from foreign Powers. The Committee in Georgia, which is now liquidating the party, is sending a special Commission abroad to Comrade Jordania to ask him to refrain from destructive agitation and to co-operate with the Soviets."

Mr. Purcell: "When was Jordania elected for the last time to represent Georgia in the Second International; when was the last time that Georgia paid affiliation dues to the Second International; and who authorized the Second International to raise the question of Georgia with the League of Nations?"

The Witness: "Jordania has never been elected to represent the Menshevist Party in the Second International. Four members were delegated in 1918 by the Central Committee—Tseretelli, Akhmedishvili, Tchkhelli, and Tcheidze—to serve as a liaison between the Second International and the Central Committee. No elections since that time have taken place. The last time affiliation fees were paid was in 1920.

"While I was a member of the Central Committee it never did anything to raise the question of Georgia in the League of Nations. The 'illegal' Central Committee asked Jordania to raise the question in the League of Nations, but no one here and no one on the Presidium in Georgia ever authorized such an act. The question was not even discussed by the real Central Committee of the Party."

BARBER SHOWS UP FOUL PLAY OF OFFICIALS

Expulsion of Chicago Militants Explained

At a regular meeting of the Bronx Local No. 560, Journeymen Barber's International Union, Brother Magliacano severely criticized the organizer Alle, for his tactics of suppression of freedom of speech. To prove his contention he traced the history of the local for five years showing up the tactics employed by the officials to annihilate any member that dared to rise in opposition to them. He said he spoke three times. After the first speech he was attacked on the grounds of being an emissary of the I. W. W., the second brot accusations of his being an anarchist and now they have decided he is a Communist and are more afraid of him than ever.

Chicago Expulsions.

He told of the case of seven members expelled from the Chicago Local No. 548. These workers were victimized by the reactionary officials of the Chicago local and 50 members were suspended from the union by the General Executive Board of the International on flimsy charges made by local officials.

Magliacano is well acquainted with the Chicago situation because he was a member of Local 548. He told the New York members of an incident that took place at the Barbers' Convention held at Indianapolis last September. J. Rose, one of the agents of that local, and a supporter of the officials, is well known as a "loop" gangster in Chicago. At the convention the president of the Master Barbers, the bosses' organization, addressed the delegates expressing venomous accusations against the barbers. Brother Magliacano took issue with the representative of the Barbers' association. J. Rose was near and when he heard that he made a vicious and brutal attack upon Magiacano threatening to throw him out of the convention if he said another word. Magliacano was not a delegate, only a visitor.

Loyal to Union.

Magliacano described the loyalty to the union and the activity of our seven Chicago brothers and explained that they aroused the enmity of the officials thru their loyalty to the cause of the Barbers' Union.

He presented a resolution protesting against the decision of the G. E. B. and an appeal for the reinstatement of our seven Chicago brothers, and appealed to the members to express their solidarity with these active and courageous brothers.

As soon as Brother Magliacano finished speaking, every official present, one after the other, got up and in the most violent terms attacked him, expressing indignation that any member should dare to present a resolution against the action of the G. E. B. They then gave a long harangue on the dangerous influence of the seven brothers who were expelled accusing them of trying to destroy the union.

Magliacano asked for the floor again to defend the Chicago brothers, but of course, he was not granted the floor.

The reactionary officials had one of their henchmen make a motion to close the discussion. The motion was carried with only three members voting—the rest sat silent.

Chicago Local 45 of the International Furriers' Union held its special meeting Friday last at the Capital building. This was called in accordance with the decision of the last regular meeting to invite Kaufman, international president, and a representative of the New York Joint Board, to debate the issue involved in the controversy between the International officialdom and the New York membership.

The meeting opened at 9 p. m. with Milstein, seventh vice-president and business agent of the Chicago local, presiding. At the outset it was seen that the Kaufmanites were playing for time.

Milstein Hired Private Detectives.

Before the debate started, members of the local executive committee raised a strong protest against Milstein's hiring of private detectives to "guard" the election meeting held two weeks ago.

The only defense Milstein could furnish was that rumors had been spread that "I. W. W.'s Communists and anarchists" would break up the meeting and then, said he, "It is no crime for the union to give the poor detectives an opportunity to make a few dollars." . . . ! ! !

The debate began with Kaufman as the first speaker. He spoke for over an hour. First a plea for unity and a plea to the representatives of the New York Joint Board not to bring the facts of the controversy before Local 45. He repeated several times that the special convention called for November will smooth things out.

Lusk Committee Stuff.

His desire to keep the membership in the dark on the real issues was evident. He constantly dodged issues. But the fake plea did not last long, for he started to attack the New York Joint Board most bitterly, raising the "red scare" and all that goes with that. The Communist International was paying Benjamin Gold and all the rest of the Joint Board, he said, to force him, Morris Kaufman, out of the presidency, the Communists want to break up the organization, etc., and etc.

On the other hand he tried very hard to shirk the responsibility for the slugging tactics, graft, and corruption committed while he was leading the New York Joint Board. He tried to lay all the blame on Brownstein, former manager, who today finds himself out of the union.

Brownstein—He Did It.

He repeatedly stated that Brownstein was to blame for everything and that he, Kaufman, was guiltless as a lamb for all the crimes against the New York membership. But his long speech produced little effect upon even those whom his followers had brot out to pack the meeting, in fact they showed they didn't like Kaufman's talk.

Ben Gold, manager of the New York Joint Board, took the floor and for about 45 minutes bombarded Kaufman with facts of the controversy. Kaufman showed how nervous he was under the whipping.

Gold Whips Kaufman.

Gold stated to Kaufman: "If you want to debate Communism, I am ready at any time or place, but at this membership meeting of the Chicago union, I want to acquaint the membership with the facts of the present controversy between you and the New York Joint Board.

"You plead with us not to inject politics into Local 45, but you forget to tell them that you use the official organ of the Furriers' Union to poison the minds of the membership against the New York Joint Board, with no opportunity for the New York Joint Board to present its side of the case.

"Why," he asked, "does the General Executive Board accept a report on the New York situation without giving a representative of the New York Joint Board opportunity to present its side? Why do vice presidents tour the country discrediting the New York Joint Board?"

Results Tell the Story.

Gold pointed out that under the former administration a system of graft, corruption and slugging prevailed. Blackjacks were the law. Honest criticism and the morale of the organization was destroyed, and the employers took advantage of it to intensify exploitation. Under the present administration, graft, corruption and slugging have been eliminated. The rank and file participate in the work of the union and the bosses have been compelled to moderate their exploitation.

Rank and file committees of 100 shops do the organization work. Many strikes and stoppages had taken place to enforce union conditions. Increases of $10 a week or more were obtained, about $12,000 in back pay collected and a ruthless campaign was launched against contractors, with satisfactory results.

Gangsters Get New Bosses.

Sluggers who had worked for Kaufman by slugging members of the union and breaking up meetings, were doing so today when the union members let them—but today they were being paid by the bosses,and not—at least—by the union itself. They now work for the bosses or scab agencies.

Recent acts prove the above. Jack Cooper, a Kaufman gangster, has slugged M. Pinchefsky, a Joint Board delegate, on the picket line at Kramer Brothers. Nine stitches were taken in his scalp and he lies in a hospital in a critical condition.

Membership Goes Over to Gold.

Gold's speech cracked the majority the Kaufmanites thot they had built up by packing the hall. Members all cheered Gold heartily during his speech. Gold had to plead with them to listen to Kaufman's rebuttal. Only upon the promise that Gold would speak again did they remain thru Kaufman's drivel.

Kaufman did not answer any of the real issues raised by Gold. He only tried to spread a "red scare," accompanied by a lot of lies about the New York Joint Board.

Sorkin, the assistant manager of the New York Joint Board, then asked for the floor, but was refused by Milstein, who stated that the New York Joint Board will never speak for this local. But the workers from the floor howled Milstein down with cries that both Sorkin and Gold will in the near future address the local again.

Beginning of End.

This debate proves again that Kaufman is a defeated man, bankrupt and certain never to wear the presidential crown again after the Furriers' union holds its convention, and with him will go all his vice presidents, with the load of graft, gangsterism and corruption, the tactics that prevailed under Kaufman's administration.

It may be stated that Milstein at a shop chairmen's meeting held last week, stated that the left wing is trying to put the manufacturers out of business by their demands for better conditions and the enforcement of conditions the union is already supposed to have but which are ignored.

Agricultural Report Shows Progress Made in U. S. S. R. for 1924-5

NEW YORK, Sept. 1—The following is a report of the comparative conditions of crops in the European republics of the U. S. S. R. for 1924 and 1925 issued by the Russian Agricultural News Service:

MOSCOW—An above-average crop has been secured in the provinces of Samara, Saratov, the German Republic of Volga, Stalingrad, Astrachan, Donetzk, Charkoff, Ekaterinoslav, Odessa, Crimea, Poltava, Kiev, Chernigroff, North Caucasia, Vologda, Jaroslav, Tver, and Moscow. The area where the chop is above average is equal to almost half of the total of seeded area in European Russia.

Husbandry in U. S. S. R.

According to the report of the representative of the planning committee of the department of agriculture, Prof. N. Makaroff, the increase in the number of cattle in 1925 has been about 4 per cent. The increase of cows has been 1½ per cent, and the increase of calves 11 per cent. The increase of sheep—4 per cent (in Siberia—5.1 per cent; in Crimea—20 per cent). The increase of horses in the main horse-breeding regions is equal: in the Ural—1½ per cent; in Siberia, 4 per cent; in Kirgisia—5 per cent.

Purchasing Power of Peasant.

It is expected that the Russian peasant will purchase this year manufactured goods to the extent of 2 to 2½ billions of rubles against 1½ billions last year,—an increase of purchasing power of 47 per cent.

Electrical Plow.

An electric plow is now undergoing tests near Moscow. This plow is able to turn over from five to six dessiatins in seven hours at a cost of nine rubles per dessiatin.

Eletro-selstroy (organization which constructs electrical stations for villages) has worked out a plan to electrify the villages. The plan will be fulfilled in five years. In 1926 work will commence in 56 counties in different provinces and will cost about 10 million rubles. The department intends when installation is completed to deliver service to peasants at lowest rates, possible.

In Minsk.

The seeded area of the White Russian Republic was equal in 1924 to 2,287,277 dessiatins—a little more than in pre-war times. The population of this republic is very dense. In pre-war times the peasants of the provinces of this republic immigrated to America and Siberia. The revolution increased the peasants' holdings 15½ per cent, but there is still a shortage of land. The average holding today is about 1.56 dessiatins per member of a peasant family. The government of the White Russian Republic is trying to solve that question by introducing better methods of agriculture and by the drainage of all damp and marshy land, which will give an addition of 1½ million dessiatins of land.

Strikers Return Under Cut During Arbitration.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., Sept. 1.—Nearly 3,000 striking woolen workers of Pittsfield, five mills are returning to work pending arbitration of their dispute over a 10 per cent wage cut. The cut is effective pending outcome of arbitration. Fred M. Knight, state conciliator, suggests that the books of manufacturers be thrown open to the three arbitrators (one chosen by workers, one by employers, and third by these two) and that a thoro investigation of salaries, costs of production and profits be made and that a survey of living costs in Pittsfield and similar towns be included in the arbitrators' investigations.

Another Mill Cuts Wages.

PAWTUCKET, R. I., Sept. 1.—Worsted workers, dyers and bleachers employed by Hallewell Co. are notified of a 10 per cent wage cut. About 250 are affected.

COMMUNIST·CHILDREN'S·COLUMN

INTERNATIONAL CHILDREN'S WEEK

(August 30 to September 6.)

MOSCOW, (By Mail)—No neutrality is possible in the tremendous and decisive struggle between the proletariat and the bourgeoisie. Even the children are not inactive. It is of great importance whether they play a revolutionary or a counter-revolutionary role. For the future of our struggle depends on the nature of the education now being received by the children. The bourgeoisie and its servant, social democracy in every country, is fully aware of the extraordinary importance of the revolutionary children's movement. For this reason they exert their utmost endeavors to keep the children out of the children's groups, and to induce the children to join children's organizations in which the children are kept out of the class struggle. Where they do not succeed in doing this, they get the police to prohibit the Communist children's movement.

Pioneers Go Forward.

But in spite of all prohibitions, the Communist children's movement is not to be suppressed. The greater the difficulties, the more determinedly we stride forward. Young pioneers, march forwards on the path of class war and class education of the children! Form school nuclei and transform every school into a Communist fortress, fight for the abolition of corporal punishment in schools, for the abolition of religious instruction and patriotic doping by reactionary teachers. But at the same time you must do all you can to win over the teachers for our cause, to convert them into participants in the revolutionary struggle.

In a number of countries, especially in the United States of America and in the East which is oppressed by the imperialists, children are kept at work in the factories from the tenderest age, under the most inhuman conditions. Raise your millions of voices, in the International Children's Week, in protest against child labor, against the brutal exploitation of the little ones of the proletariat!

The capitalists of the whole world are preparing a fresh war against the first workers' state, the Soviet Union. Let the cry of the young pioneers be: "Down with war! For peace with the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics!"

One and One-half Million Pioneers.

ALMOST one and a half million young pioneers are united under the banner of Communism in the Soviet Union, and are working towards building up a new life, under the leadership of glorious Russian Leninist Young Communist League. Our young Russian pioneers, besides their social and educative work, accomplish much work in the family. They induce their parents to join the party, their brothers and sisters to become members of the Young Communist League. Pioneers of the whole world, follow the example set by the Russian comrades, and learn by their experience. You too must win over your parents, brothers and sisters for the great struggle, for the emancipation and victory of the workers.

REMEMBER that you are to be the worthy followers of your elder brothers, that you must form the reserves for the Young Communist League and for the party, and that it is only possible to create a real fighting organization in co-operation with the Young Communist League and under its leadership.

During the International Children's Week we think of our brothers who have been murdered or thrown into prison, and we send greetings to those still living, promising them to hold out during the struggle.

Nuclei in the Schools.

During this week the young pioneers remember the thousands of comrades working and fighting in other countries.

During this week the whole world will re-echo with the cry:

Form a Communist children's union in every country, under the leadership of the Communist youth!

Go to the masses of worker' and peasants' children!

Found nuclei in all the schools!

Down with child labor and corporal punishment in schools!

Long live the alliance with the millions of pioneers in the Soviet Union!

Against fresh wars, hands off the Soviet Union and China!

Pioneers of all countries! Be prepared for the fight for the revolution and for the victory of the proletariat!

Moscow, July 25, 1925.

The Executive Committee of the Young Communist International.

DURHAM, N. C., Sept. 1.—Strikers at Marvin Carr Silk Mill are not willing to go back to work until assured that the company will not discriminate against members of the Full-fashioned Hosiery Workers' Union of the United Textile Workers. Edward F. Callahan, spokesman for the 107 strikers, charges the company with bringing in strikebreakers at $60 a week where workers regularly get only $25 to $30.

The Hammer, the Sickle and Struggle.

These three symbolize the union of workers and farmers in the class struggle for "all power to the workers."

Quite naturally, they should be chosen as the trade mark of a working class publishing house that sponsors the only daily newspaper in this country, so truly and courageously battling in the interests of the workers.

Of course today only a Communist newspaper could do this. And naturally also, only with the strength of a growing Communist movement behind it.

Black Lies for White Guards

The Chicago Tribune is considerably worried over the revolutionary speeches now being made by A. J. Cook, secretary of the British Miners' Union, an organization of 1,300,000 members, the largest single industrial trade union unit in the world today.

Cook warns the workers in Great Britain that they be ready for the next test of strength with the capitalists and with their government. He talks revolution and says that only the overthrow of capitalism is a solution of the serious situation that confronts the working class of England.

The Tribune is amazed that the English workers would pay any attention to Cook's speeches. It points out Russia as a horrible example of what Communism can do to a decent country and furthermore declares that Italy and Hungary had their fling at Communism and gave it up as a bad proposition. Italy and Hungary did not give Comunism a test. So much for that. Now as to Russia.

The Tribune says: "Russia has been existing under Communism for seven years and is worse off than when the experiment began." The Tribune is a vicious enemy of the working class and of the first working class state in the world in particular. But the Tribune is not always stupid. On this occasion it lies very clumsily.

Yesterday's DAILY WORKER contained a summary of an article by Frederick Haskin, that appeared in a conservative capitalist paper, which showed that Russia's industrial production is now within two per cent of the pre-war standard and that the electrical industry had pased that standard and bid fair to almost double it within the next year. What is true of her industrial production is also true of her agricultural production.

It is the general opinion of fair-minded people who visited Russia that the Soviet Union will lead the world in industrial progress within fifteen years. What concerns us most is that with every increase in the productive capacity of Soviet Russia the livnig standard of the workers rises.

It is not true that "Russia has been existing under Communism fro seven years." The Russian workers and peasants have only begun the task of laying the basis for a Communist social order. What exists in Russia is a proletarian government led by the Communist Party. The backwardness of Russia industrially and technically made the astablishment of Communism impossible. With the gradual removal of those handicaps, Communism will be gradually introduced and this process will go hand in hand with the development of Communist strength in the capitalist countries and the disintegration of capitalism.

The Tribune picked the wrong time to get off one of its editorial lies about the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

The Industrial Spy System

In the city of Detroit the fact was brought out at an arbitration proceeding that the municipal street railway system employs a corps of spies to keep track of the movement of the employes. Another army of inspectors is employed to watch the movement of the spies. This goodly array of parasites is paid by the users of the street car system.

It should not be forgotten that the city of Detroit owns its street railway. But the city is controlled by capitalist politicians. The mayor of Detroit, tho endorsed by organized labor, is a capitalist politician. It is true that he caters to the labor officialdom, just as President Calles of Mexico caters to the reactionary labor leaders of that country, but the interests of the working masses and the interests of the labor fakers as far apart as the poles.

Nationalization of industry or the municipalization of public utilities, no matter how bitterly fought by the owning classes can only be used in the interests of the workers when they become the governing classes. Communists favor those demands for the reason, among others, because they are sure to arouse the opposition of the capitalists who always fight every move to curtail their power. So long as the capitalists hold the reigns of government there will be spies in industry whether these industries be nationalized or municipalized. The Detroit workers are learning this fact even tho they have a "friend of labor" in mayor's chair.

Yellow Socialists and Blue Blood

If the British socialists and reactionary labor leaders have not stood up well in the struggle against the capitalists the same cannot be said about their attendance at public functions as guests of the aristocracy. The following news item from a British paper speaks so much louder than our words that it is given without any comment other than the use of italic on the names of the socialists mentioned.

"At a brilliant party given by the duke and duchess of York on Friday evening at St. James Palace, the following were among the distinguished company:

"Mr. Austen Chamberlain, the Duke of Connaught, the Maharajah of Jodhpur, the Yuvaraja of Mysore, Sir William Joynson-Hicks, Mr. Winston Churchill, countless knights, baronets and military people. Mr. and Mrs. Philip Snowden and Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Thomas."

French and Spanish guns pulverize a Riffian city and there is hardly a squawk from our pacifists. The socialists may have convinced them that civilization demands the crushing of "backward" people before universal peace can be attained.

The British in Shanghai magnanimously voted to surrender to the Chinese after the latter had cleaned up on them. Who said the Chinese were pacifists?

While Spanish soldiers shoot the Moors and get shot in return the Spanish king is having a good time playing the role of a beauty conniseur at a French watering place.

Soviet Russia has a bumper crop this year. This is another bump for the prophets of evil who have been predicting the fall of the Soviet government since October 1917.

HYMAN EXPOSES FAKE 'PEACE' OF SIGMAN

Shows Up Attempt to Fool Workers

did Mr. Sigman permit the Communists to run and be elected to office?

"For the past 12 weeks a vicious campaign of terrorism has been carried on against the suspended officers and now Mr. Sigman grants the right of appeal to non-Communists. But if there are any non-Communists, as he now admits, why were all these members suspended?

"Mr. Sigman is gracious enuf to permit those to whom he may grant an appeal, the right to run for any other office even as high as general manager of the Joint Board; but he may not run for the office from which he was suspended. Imagine Mr. Enright suspending a policeman, and after he is exonerated from the charges, permitting him to occupy the position of sergeant, captain or even police commissioner, but forbidding him to serve as a policeman again.

Representation—Not Now!

"On the question of proportional representation, Mr. Sigman states that this cannot be carried thru now. Instead, in a very unconstitutional manner, he deprives three small locals of any representation whatsoever. We believe it to be unfair for a small local to be deprived of all representation just as we deem our present system unfair and demand proportional representation because a small local of 200 members has the same representation as one of 12,000 members. This reform of his is so vague that it can always be misused to his own advantage.

"Mr. Sigman, in his statement, promised further reforms at the convention; but he offers no method whereby the membership shall be more fairly represented than heretofore when all conventions were packed by delegates representing artificial locals. Surely the proposal for an impartial committee to supervise these elections is meaningless. This committee, no matter how sincere it may be, cannot guarantee an honest election thruout the country. Such an impartial committee can only be of value when working in conjunction with a committee representing both factions.

Hyman Condemns Ban on Communists.

"Mr. Sigman's ban against the Communists, while they are legally placed on the ballots for political office thruout the country, is unjustifiable and will receive the condemnation of every member of our union. We further brand Mr. Sigman's statement that the constitution prohibits Communists from holding office, as false. This is proven by the fact that Mr. Sigman permitted Communists to run and be elected to office.

"The entire so-called peace proposal is nothing but a brazen fraud, and will be taken as such by the entire membership. It demonstrated the insincerity of Mr. Sigman and his machine. Mr. Sigman may continue his reign of terrorism, but the cloak and dressmakers have been once more convinced that no real peace can exist until Sigman and his clique have been entirely eliminated. The Joint Committee of Action, which thru the consent of the membership has been conducting this struggle against corruption in our union, is determined to carry on the fight for a union representative of the membership."

Designers Condemn Joint Board.

On Saturday afternoon, a membership meeting of Local 45, the Designers, was held at Hotel Pennsylvania and by unanimous vote a resolution was passed demanding that the Joint Board reinstate the expelled officers of Locals 2, 9 and 22 and that the Joint Board be reorganized on a basis of proportional representation.

The meeting also passed a resolution denouncing the Joint Board officers for their neglect of the interests of the Designers and pledging each member to give $5 toward a new and energetic campaign of organization.

The Designers pledged that, should the Joint Board refuse the demands of the Designers with reference to Locals 2, 9 and 22, they would support unanimously the fight of the Joint Committee of Action against the corrupt machine of the International.

Shop Chairmen Meet.

A meeting of shop chairmen, called by an impartial committee in Manhattan Lyceum on Saturday afternoon, voiced in one speech after another, approval of the Joint Committee of Action and also passed a resolution for reinstatement of the expelled officers and reorganization of the Joint Board.

Over 600 registered shop chairmen were present.

Injunction Postponed.

Hearing on the injunction granted to the Roth Costumes Inc. against Louis Hyman and the eleven girls of the Roth shop, was postponed from this morning to September 10 in the New York state supreme court.

EATON, BACKED BY EMPLOYERS AND KEPT PRESS, RE-ELECTED HEAD OF W. VA. STATE FEDERATION OF LABOR

By A. G. MURPHY.

WHEELING, W. Va., September 1.—It does not take a prophet or the son of a prophet to foretell on whose side, John B. Eaton, re-elected president of the West Virginia State Federation of Labor, will be found, when it comes to a question of conflicting interests of labor unionism and the industrial corporations which have converted the workers of West Virginia into feudal slaves, their condition only comparable to the workers of Russia under the darkest czarism. The trend of our capitalist press is the key to this secret.

When during the spectacular and stormy sessions of the convention of the State Federation of Labor held during the middle of August, Easton was re-elected to succeed himself, by a narrow vote of 175 out of a total of 269 delegates registered, the kept press sent up paens of thanksgiving that Easton would succeed himself and that the progressives in the convention had been steam rolled.

Two Factions Fight

It was to be expected that the same wave of reactionarism which was, for the moment, sweeping the trades union movement in the country, would show its head here and when C. Frank Keeney former president of district 17 United Mine Workers, was placed in nomination for state president, it was soon made evident that short shift would be made of his boom, by the oligarchy. William Blizzard, floor leader of the miners delegation from the southern district, attacked Easton record and showed him up as a traitor to union principles and accused him of failing to support the child labor amendment in this state but to no effect.

Finally Blizzard and the miners from the southern district, 87 in number, bolted the convention and retired to a hotel to await developments. During the morning session of August 12th the day after the miners bolted, Keeney appeared at the session and said the miners refused to take any further part in the proceedings, "unless they were dished out a square deal" by the other faction. But the other faction was, evidently, not dishing out square deals and Keeney withdrew his name leaving Easton unopposed for the office.

That Easton fulfills the heartfelt wants of the business interests of the state can readily be seen in the comments on his election by the kept press and concerning his record of helping to defeat the Child Labor amendment the Parkersburg News, the organ which laid the egg and hatched the Guy Goff boom, and landed that Teapot Domer and son of the late Senator Nathan Goff, into the United States senate, has this to say in an editorial:

"The State Federation of Labor elected as president John B. Easton, of Williamstown, to succeed himself.

"Among one of the 'unpardonable sins' charged by Blizzard against Easton is that the latter did not support the child labor amendment. Few thinking persons in the state backed this move to further hamper the state with federal control; few thinking persons want a government at Washington so centralized and so omnipotent that it can say when and where and how children should play and work. When Mr. Blizzard brings such a charge against Mr. Easton he is not hurting the Wood county man but rather is paying him a tribute for common sense thinking."

QUINCY, Ills., Sept. 1.—The delegates to the annual convention of the Illinois department, American Legion, today voted down a resolution to President Coolidge asking that the French war debt measures be so arranged that they would not be "too hard on the French people."

Steamer Burned; One Dead.

ERIE, Pa., Sept. 1.—The lake steamer Colonial, of the Western Reserve Navigation company, was burned to the water's edge off Westfield, N. Y. The boat was enroute to Dunkirk, N. The passengers and crew were taken from the boat by life saving crews from Erie, Buffalo, and Dunkirk.

DAWES PLAN PLUNDER TOTALS 238 MILLION U. S. GETS A SLICE

PARIS, France, Sept. 1—The total payment of reparations made by Germany under the Dawes plan to the allies totalled one billion gold marks ($238,000,000) during the first year, S. P. Gilbert, Jr., agent general for reparations payments reports.

The last payment, 60,000,000 gold marks, has just been made by the German Railway company.

The United States received $18,000,000 of this amount.

Strikebreaker Berry Lifts Charter of Pressmens' Union

best thing for the unions to do right now is to amalgamate. There are 3,800 members in the two locals and recently Berry has been able to use the feeders against the pressmen.

A Berry Tool.

Recently both unions agreed on a common program of action and Berry warned Franklin No. 4 not to meet any more in joint conference with the pressmen. It is probable that Berry will take action against the feeders similar to what he took against the pressmen. The president of the feeders' union, Hugh Crambert is a Berry tool, but most of the members are against him.

"Majah" Berry appeared before the convention of the New York Sttae Federation of Labor a few days ago and made a speech on conciliation and arbitration. There should be no more strikes and lockouts, he said. The following day, an advertisement appeared in the New York World, appealing for scabs to man rotary presses on an out-of-town job. The ad read: "Pressmen wanted. Out-of-town positions on rotary presses. Good make ready men. Phone, Pennsylvania 0543."

This is the phone number of the George Detective Agency. It is rumored that Berry has part interest in this fink concern. The scabs were wanted to work in the Cuneo plant under the notorious New York gangster, Seymour "Stuss" Singer, who is accused of slugging Johnny Grant, a New York pressman, to death.

The local pressmen intend to fight Berry to the bitter end and the plan of making the fight a nation-wide one is popular among the rank and file.

TWO KILLED IN BLAST OF GAS FILLED MINE, OTHERS ARE INJURED

CENTRAL CITY, Ky., Sept. 1.—Two men were kilide and another was burned, perhaps fatally, here today when a gas accumulation in the mine in which they were working exploded.

Several other miners suffered minor burns and injuries.

BIG PROFITS TO ANTHRACITE COAL BARONS

way. Many of the miners are caught in this manner and crushed to death.

Operators' Vultures Swindle Families

The figures portraying the number of accidents tell an awful tale, but no mention is made of the wives and children who suffer most as a result of those accidents.

When a fatal injury occurs in or around the mine, the body of the victim is not yet cold until the mine operators have their lawyers, doctors, priests or preachers busy advising the grief striken widows to accept a small amount of money in full settlement of their claim, against the coal company.

I have seen widows nearly crased with grief after accidents in the mine, pounced upon by these human vultures, and in this condition have seen them sign away their claim against the coal company for a paltry two hundred and fifty dollars. The settlement made with many of the widows of the miners after the Cherry mine disaster,—a disaster that killed [illegible] miners was an example of the length to which the coal barons will go in their nefarious work.

Prey On Grief Crazed Widows

Many widows whose charred husband's body was still laying down the burning sealed mine in Cherry, were approached by the coal company's lawyers and preachers and encouraged to settle their claim for two or three hundred dollars. Many of those widows in the height of their grief, not knowing what they were doing—signed the papers for a few hundred dollars and found afterwards to their sorrow, there was no recourse at law.

The terrible condition of those women and children, husbandless and fatherless, betrayed by priests and preachers and left to cold charity is well understood by the widows of the murdered anthracite miners.

A Demand More Justiefid

In view of the working conditions of the anthracite miners, in view of their living conditions as I have explained in the DAILY WORKER, and in view of the coal commission's report part of which was also published a few days ago in the DAILY WORKER, showing the awful social conditions of the miners, the workers throughout the country will understand what a defeat of their demand for a miserable ten per cent increase in wages will mean to the hard coal miners at this time.

If you want to thoroughly understand Communism—study it. Send for a catalogue of all Communist literature.

"OUTLAW" SEAMEN'S STRIKE TIES UP WHITE STAR LINER

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SOUTHAMPTON, England, Sept. 1.—One hundred and ninety deckhands and engine room workers of the White Star liner Majestic have given formal notice that they will not sail with the ship tomorrow. Officials of the White Star Line stated today that they hope to be able to mustre sufficient crew to enable the Majestic to sail on time tomorrow.

The action of the members of the Majestic crew is the biggest success yet made by the leaders of the unofficial seamen's strike.

British Intrigues in Arabia

By J. B. (Jerusalem).

AFTER the conquest of Mecca by the Wahabiti in October of last year, there was for a time peace in Arabia. Whilst Ali who, as successor to his father Hussein, had been made king of the Hedjas, was desperately appealing with cries of help to the whole Mohammedan world in order to save Jeddah, the port of the Hedjas, which was the lest remnant in his possession and even then was threatened by the Wahabiti—the latter comfortably installed themselves in the conquered kingdom and especially in the holy places of Islam—the English confined themselves to observing strict "neutrality" i. e. inciting both opponents thru money and promises to continue the war until the moment which seemed favorable to England for her to get the greatest advantage out of the situation.

First of all the new king of the Hedjas was to be compelled to accept the agreement with England which meant shameful abandonment of the most elementary demands of Arabian independence, and which Hussein had persistently refused to sign until the catastrophe with which his rule ended. Ali however refused to consent. A few weeks ago it was announced that the negotiations with regard to an Anglo-Arabain agreement had been broken off. In this way England gained a free hand for her further policy in Arabia.

AFTER his defeat by the Wahabiti and his abdication, King Hussein had fled to Akaba, a port which had, from time immemorial, belonged to the territory of the Hedjas. As this town is situated about in the middle between Mesopotamia, Transjordinia and the Hedjas, it was possible for Hussein from there to remain in close contact with these three countries, ruled by his three sons, and to stir them up to fight against England, which had behaved towards him in such a treacherous and underhand manner. The representative of the British government therefore came to an understanding with the colonial ministry to drive Hussein out of Akaba. The old king opposed all the English demands. The Mohammedan organizations of various Arabian countries protested against the British demand. The English however, were not deterred from using force. A British cruiser landed sailors, took Hussien prisoner and conveyed him to the island of Cyprus which is to be his residence in future.

This however was not the end of the affair. In order to consolidate their stategic position East of the Suez Canal, the English had always planned to extend their mandatory territory. In view of the promises made to the Arabs, as well as to avoid acute conflicts, they had however repeatedly postponed occupying Akaba. Now Hussein's "obstinacy" gave them a pretext for the military conquest of the town. Regardless of the threatening attitude of the population, who gave expression to their fanatical hatred of the English in the form of processions and protests, Akaba and its surroundings were on July 1st annexed to the British mandatory territory. The arbitrariness of this annexation, even from the point of view of bourgeois international law, is evident from the fact that esteemed English politicians, even members of the conservative party, protested against this deed of violence on the part of the British government.

NEVERTHELESS English policy in Arabia is far from seeing the end of its difficulties. On the contrary, the anti-English propaganda among the Arabs is becoming more and more popular, and the enthusiastic reception of the Turkish diplomatic representative both in the British and French mandatory territories, is symptomatic of the attitude of mind of broad masses of the people, who thus express their sympathy for Turkey which has been freed from the imperialist yoke.

The intrigues thru which England has achieved temporary success, will in the end be the doom of British policy in Arabia.

ONE DAY

By a MINER'S WIFE.

(Reprinted from the London Daily Herald.)

AFTER lying awake since about four a. m., fearful lest I should sleep late, I creep out of bed very quietly in case I wake the baby, dress and poke up the fire, which has been "banked" overnight.

On goes kettle and frying pan for bacon and egg. Call hubby. Fill "box" and "Jack" and he is all ready. Clear up kitchen. In comes Bill off the night shift. Get bathwater hot and prepare breakfast for Bill and for the five kiddies going to school. Have my own breakfast, and take up "Gran's," who is bedridden.

Bathe baby. Wash up. Make Bill's bed. Wash Gran, and sweep and brush up the room. Start washing flannels.

Comes a knock on the door. "Please, will you lend my mother a loaf?"

"Yes," quite cheerfully.

Trot the length of house, only to discover I am nearly out myself. Start flannels again. Hello, Gran's banging on the boards. Upstairs for about the eighth time.

This morning I manage to get a few things out on the line at last. Now there are the children coming home to dinner, and Jack to go out on the afternoon shift. Same process as with hubby. Off go the kiddies back to school and baby for her nap.

Now, at last, I can get a bite. Spread out "Daily Herald" for tablecloth. Get half way thru cocoa, and very interested in "Gadfly," when hark, what is that? Run to front door. Here comes the dreaded ambulance cart. Where will it stop? No. 5, No. 7, No. 9, yes, No. 9. Run down now to see if I can be of any help. Poor maimed bread winner, and such a house full of little mouths.

On returning the copper fire has gone out, and lo and behold, what has happened to the clothes? The line has broken and the clothes are all dirted up in the garden path. Well, here comes hubby. Three o'clock. While he bathes cook dinner for all. In come the kiddies from school. All have dinner. Take up Gran's. Now 6 o'clock. Make other beds. Tidy up again. Mend line.

Not a Communist Meeting.

Re-swill clothes and out they go once more. Wash and change and hurry to labor meeting. Yes, a labor man speaking. "We must have shorter hours for the men and more leisure time!" What about the men's wives? I would like to ask Mr. Speaker.

Meeting over. Back home half-past 8. Put kiddies to bed. Get hubby's supper. Prepare for Bill going out at 10 on night shift and Jack coming in off afternoon shift. Put white clothes to soak for to-morrow's wash. Take Gran her cocoa. Bank in the fire for the morning. Just simply drag upstairs. Drop down on my bed and wonder when mother slavery will be abolished.

URG SEA TOILERS FIGHT WAGE CUTS

'B. & O. BILL' JOHNSTON GANG DEFIES RECALL BY MEMBERSHIP BY RULING ON THEIR OWN CASES

By LAURENCE TODD

(Federated Press Service)

WASHINGTON, September 2.—Warning that the recall petition against the present grand lodge officers of the International Association of Machinists will be held void if it is indorsed by the necessary 15 per cent of lodges, was given by Secretary-Treasurer Davison, at Washington headquarters, when informed that the Seattle and San Francisco lodges had voted endorsement of the petition.

Davison Tries to Wiggle Out.

"That document does not contain specific charges, such as to meet the requirement of the constitution that the accused officers shall have opportunity to defend themselves in statements of 500 words sent out with the notice of election," said Davison. "It is plain that I cannot defend myself unless I know with what specific offenses, what acts and specific failures to act, I am charged. They charge that I am incompetent. That is not specific.

"Moreover, I am charged in general terms with acts which if committed at all occurred during my previous term of office. I cannot be recalled for acts done prior to the recent election. My acts before that time were known and discussed before I was chosen to my present term."

A Fat Chance for Recall

Davison explained that the petition, if endorsed by the legally required number of lodges—and he did not think it would get that number—would come to President Johnston. Johnston would pass upon its legality, since a protest has already been lfied on that point. Appeal would then be taken to the general council.

This general council, which is made up of the officers whose recall is sought, will decide whether the petition is legal or void. They will decide it void. Then the opposition, led by J. F. Anderson, recent presidential candidate against Johnston, will have to start recall proceedings all over again.

In reply to this statement, Anderson declared that he has more than enuf endorsements, already, to meet the legal requirement for a recall election, and he will continue to add to the number until the time limit expires on Sept. 12.

Anderson Fires Back

"The charges are more specific than were made in any of the five recall petitions that have been held valid in the past, under this same clause of our constitution," he added. "I myself was once the object of one of those petitions. There has never been any question that the purpose of that recall provision was to enable the membership to remove at any time any officer with whose services they were no longer satisfied. The idea that an officer cannot be recalled for acts committed prior to a recent election is one which Mr. Davison holds alone."

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

FOR refusing to scab on the employes of the Cuneo Printing company who walked out rather than work under open shop conditions, Geo. L. Berry, president of the International Printing Pressmen's and Assistants' Union has lifted the charter of Chicago Printing Pressmen No. 3, which means that the union is ousted from the International. This is a nice brand of unionism indeed. Such incidents are not uncommon in the United States.

HAVELOCK WILSON, the president of the British Seamens' Union signed an agreement with the ship owners, which reduced the wages of the seamen by about five dollars a month or approximately one pound in British money. Wilson dines with the lords of British industry at least once a week. He draws a good salary. Yet he was quite surprised when the seamen refused to accept the cut and went on strike. Now the armed forces of the government are being used to crush the strikers.

THE Communists are blamed for inciting the British seamen to refuse the wage cut. They are not accused of asking them to accept it. The capitalist press and the labor fakers blame all social disturbances on the Communists. They do this in an effort to poison the minds of the workers against the Communists. But, when a worker sees the boss take a wallop at his meal ticket, he is not particular who comes to his aid. And it so happens that only the Communists are willing to fight for him.

IT is a reasonable assumption that if anybody attempts to sell the virtues of peace at any price to the Chinese, that anybody is liable to be taken away in pieces. Formerly it was a favorite outdoor sport among the lackey of foreign imperialist powers to walk all over the meek and humble Chinese. Preachers of Confucianism and christianity, sermonized on the wisdom of turning the other cheek when one was smitten. Perhaps the Chinese linstened, said nothing and abided their time.

IT was a cruel libel on the Chinese to say that they could not or would not fight. The British in Shanghai will no longer base their policy on this belief. After the Chinese got thru fighting the British and the Japanese, the latter looked much the worse for wear. It is more than likely, that in the future capitalist editors will not hold up a China as an example of the debilitating moral effect of pacifist propaganda on the fighting ability of a nation.

SOVIET PROTEST ON SNUBBING OF FLIER IN JAPAN

Second Aviator Now in Tokio from China

TOKIO, Sept. 2.—Soviet Ambassador Kopp is expected to strongly protest the decision of the Japanese government compelling the Soviet Russian aviator who landed inside the prohibited military zone near Shimonoseki to dismantle his plane and transport it outside the zone before continuing his flight.

The minister of war turned down the aviators' request for permission to hop off inside the zone, claiming the law was explicit and unalterable.

The second Russian aviator, flying from Pekin to Tokio, arrived in Tokio this afternoon.

COOLIDGE PREPARING TO BREAK ANTHRACITE MINE STRIKE IF NEEDED

SWAMPSCOTT, Mass., Sept. 2—President Coolidge is prepared to "take a firm hand" in the present coal strike in event a public crisis is reached, it was indicated here today following a conference between the executive and Senator James E. Watson, republican of Indiana.

The Indiana senator intimated that the president was mapping out a decisive course for the administration to follow in event the interests of "the public" are placed in jeopardy.

For the time being, however, there is nothing in the present situation which calls for intervention by the government and if the strike is of as short duration as anticipated, the present "hands off" policy will prevail, it was stated.

BERRY BOOSTED OFFICIAL WHO FIRED PRINTERS

"Majah" Claims Credit for Appointment

Typographical Union No. 16, may become interested in the struggle between Printing Pressmen's Union No. 3 and George L. Berry, in view of the fact that Berry is one of the two responsible for the appointment of George H. Carter, as public printer, by the late President Harding.

Carter was denounced in a resolution at the recent convention of the International Typographical Union held in Kalamazoo, Michigan. Among the charges made against him are: employing stool pigeons to spy on the employes under his jurisdiction; and with being ineligible, incompetent and tyrannical.

The resolution called on President Coolidge to summarily discharge Carter. As public printer Carter refused to deal with the officers of the Washington local of the I. T. U. After making a country wire quest for printers he laid off 127 without any justifiable cause.

One Scab Boosts Another

Carter was one of the principal guests at the 1924 convention of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union. That Berry holds this union hater in high esteem is shown by the following speech made by George L. Berry in introducing Carter to the delegates at the convention:

"President Berry: We have with us this morning a member of our organization who holds the highest and most important position in the United States in so far as it has to do with the conduct of the printing department. He is the director of the largest printing establishment in the

Senate to Decide Whether Brookhart Wins Against Steck

SWAMPSCOTT, Mass., Sept. 2.—The Iowa senatorial election contest between Senator Smith W. Brookhart, the incumbent and Dan F. Steck, his democratic opponent last November is "exceedingly close." and in all probability will have to be settled by the senate itself, it was stated here by Senator James E. Watson, republican of Indiana, chairman of the senate committee on election contests.

Complete returns of the recount in Iowa were filed with Watson yesterday in Washington. Because, he said, the returns created a "delicate situation." Watson would not disclose the final figures, but he said the matter would go to the sub-committee, then the full committee and then probably to the senate floor.

CHEAP TRICKS OF CLOTH BOSS AMUSE PICKETS

Amalgamated Strikers Determined to Win

Several new tricks of the International Tailoring company aimed at intimidating the striking employes quickly collapsed yesterday. A letter typed on International stationery defying the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union was withdrawn from the windows of the company's building at 847 W. Jackson Bluvd., when the strikers failed to take it seriously.

The company also posted another fake "telegram" on the windows purporting to be from New York, which declared that the company was securing strikebreakers for their struck plant there. This "telegram" was also quickly withdrawn from the window.

The International has posted numerous varieties of signs and posters on their building, which serve to amuse the pickets, who are as vigilant as ever in keeping away scabs. The signs aid the strikers, for the checkerboard appearance of the walls of the building show unemployed workers at once that a strike is on.

A new sign, offering $1,000 reward for the apprehension of "acid throwers," is now bedecking the building. The International insists on attempting to frame-up the Amalgamated on charges of lawlessness.

Meanwhile the strike meetings are as enthusiastic as ever. The strikers are determined that now that the busy season is on, the they will strike until the garment bosses come to terms.

There was one further arrest, Tony Galloti being taken off the picket line by the police. He was released on $400 bail charged with "disorderly conduct."

USE STARVATION AGAINST MINERS IN ANTHRACITE

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 2.—"Future strikes and suspensions in anthracite mining must be eliminated." This is the ultimatum delivered by the operators in a statement by Major W. A. Inglis, chairman of the operators negotiating committee.

Inglis made the statement in reply to John L. Lewis, president of the United Miner Workers of America, who said the miners had no other course than to strike.

The operators' spokesman chided Lewis for not permitting the miners to work pending an agreement on a new contract.

This attitude, he indicated, made it imperative that the netx contract between the mine workers and operators, contains a clause under which operations be continued pending an adjustment.

Operators Use Starvation Against Workers

A number of coal companies in the Hazelton district have notified striking employes that credit would not be continued at the company stores. An exception was made to old employes in good standing.

Reports from the mining regions were suspension of work started Monday midnight, indicated the workers are having a holiday and enjoying themselves by going to picnics, athletic games and movie theatres.

Anthracite Bureau Backs Bosses

Edward W. Parker, director of the anthracite bureau of information has attacked the strike call as "bombastic and false."

President Lewis at headquarters today said that 'everything was quiet in the strike region and I have absolutely no further statement to make."

Call on I. W. W. to Join the Growing World Struggle

RED INTERNATIONAL COMMITTEE ASKS I. W. W. SEAMEN TO ASSIST BRITISH STRIKE ON WAGE CUTS

The Red International Affiliation Committee, representing the Executive Bureau of the R. I. L. U. in its relations with the I. W. W., has addressed the following call to the Marine Transport Workers' Industrial Union 510 of the Industrial Workers of the World:

• • • •

Fellow Workers:—A conflict has arisen in the marine industry of Great Britain which deserves the closest attention of all marine workers. On the one side are the rank and file of the British seamen, on the other the reactionary union leaders headed by Havelock Wilson allied to the ship owners.

A Clear Issue.

The issue is, shall the united front of labor fakers and exploiters be successfully whipped by the solidarity of the seamen, or shall the workers be driven back into the stoke holes and forecastles with $5 a month slashed off their already niggardly wages?

Fellow workers! It needs no extended argument to prove that in this struggle, the interests of the membership of M. T. W. 510 are bound up with those of the rank and file of British seamen. Nor does it need any especial clarification of the spirit and letter of the resolutions adopted by the New Orleans conference to prove that the M. T. W. 510 stands shoulder to shoulder with the British seamen against the treachery of Havelock Wilson and company and the wage cut of the bosses.

Time For Solidarity.

Already the White Star Line and other British shipping is being tied up by this so-called "outlaw" strike. The struggle is growing more fierce every day. The Marine Transport Workers' I. U. 510 of the I. W. W. can play a splendid and effective role in aiding the British seamen. The Red International Affiliation Committee therefore asks that you use every effort to throw the moral and material support of the M. T. W. behind the British seamen, who have actually been fired upon at Stepney by the labor fakers and whose strike is spreading thruout the British empire to the seamen of Australiasia. Help to defeat the wage cut and break the united front of fakers and bosses with the united front of the toilers of the sea!

For solidarity in the class struggle,
Red International Affiliation Committee.
Harrison George, Chairman.

RIFFIANS DEAL NEW DISASTER TO SPANIARDS

Sink Transport, Drive Off Landing Force

MADRID, Spain, Sept. 2—The attempt of the Primo De Rivera government to land troops on the shores of Alhucemas Bay, North Africa, to fight the Riffians, has met with disaster. The Riffians have sunk the transport Espana Quinto, with one thousand Spanish foreign legion troops aboard. The Spaniards have been unable to land an army in Morocco.

An acute situation prevails in Spain. Marquis de Magaz, vice-president in the Spanish directorate, has presented his resignation because Rivera insists on continuing with the project to land troops, which Magaz considers too perilous. The opposition to the Riffian war is growing among the workers.

The sunk transport had taken on troops at Penon island, 1.000 yards off shore, and was steaming full speed ahead with other transports to debark the troops on the mainland, when several Riffian shells plowed thru the engine room. The transport sank immediately and practically every one of the soldiers aboard perished.

The Spanish government has placed a strict censorship on all news, fearing the effect on the workers. Representatives of foreign newspapers have been forbidden to enter the country. The censor at Melilla has suppressed all reports of the correspondents.

The Spaniards have landed some troops, which are being slaughtered by Riffian machine gunners as the Spaniards attempt to climb the rock hillside toward Adjir, the Riffian capital.

Quake Shakes Illinois.

HARRISBURG, Ill., Sept. 2.—An earthquake disturbed this section of southern Illinois at 5:57 this morning. Two distinct tremors were felt, the first lasting six seconds and the second five seconds. No damage was reported.

McAndrew Would Have Board Borrow to Put His Schedule Thru

Superintendent William McAndrew has again started his fight to get acceptance of his new teachers' salary schedule by the board of trustees. He suggested as a measure to secure immediate action on the bill that the board issue tax anticipatory warrants. In this he was supported by the secretary of the finance committee.

This move was opposed by the president of the board, Col. Edward B. Ellicott who said he would not sanction the adoption of the schedule until the board of education can raise the $17,000,000 needed to finance it. He said he would wait and let the people of Chicago vote on school tax increases.

No attempt was made at this meeting to consider securing the money that the school board is robbed of every year by the tax dodging big property holders of Chicago.

The Chicago Teachers' Federation claims that not only would there be sufficient funds to meet the needs of the McAndrew schedule but there would be sufficient funds to make possible a real raise in teachers' salaries in which every teacher on the staff would share.

Raising the tax rates of the people of Chicago without first correcting this condition in our tax regulations is only a means of forcing the small tax payer to shoulder the responsibility shirked by wealthy tax dodgers.

SEAMEN'S STRIKE GIRDLES GLOBE; FIGHT WAGE CUT

Walk Out in Denmark, Japan, India, Africa

LONDON, England, September 2.—The seamen's strike begun here against a wage cut has spread round the world, as the seamen and stevedores unions of Denmark have walked out demanding increased wages, and the Japanese crews of the Canadian lines have gone on strike in Japan.

The Australian ports of Sidney, Melbourne and Newcastle are tied up by the union there affiliated with the Red International of Labor Unions and the strike is spreading in Australian and English ports. African and Indian ports are also feeling the effects of the strike.

The large ocean liners of English companies are delayed, including the White Star liner Majestic and the Cunarder Berengaria. The ports of London, Southampton, Hull, Avonmouth and Swansea are affected by the strike.

Ex-Service Men Scabs

The British companies are endeavoring to secure unemployed ex-service men to act as strikebreakers. Nine big English liners are in ports here facing delay. From South Africa it is reported that the crews of twelve liners are striking at Durden. Several ships at Rangoon, Burma are also held up by a walk out of East Indian seamen.

The seamen employed by the Danish Shipowners Association went on strike in protest against the employers refusal to grant an increase in wages. The Unskilled Workers' Union and the Swedish and Norwegian Stokers' Union are supporting the strike.

Crew Takes Possession

In Japan there was a walkout of the Japanese crew of the liner Empress of Russia. This crew was hired to replace the Chinese crew which struck with the Chinese seamen. The present Japanese crew refuses to leave the vessel at Yokohama or to accept discharge, until their demands are met. The Japanese authorities refused to interfere in behalf of the Canadian lines.

NAVY, EAGER FOR WAR PUBLICITY, TO SEND 3RD PLANE TO HAWAII

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 2—The navy will send a third seaplane, the Boeing bomber No. 1, from here on an attempted flight to Honolulu. The government is concentrating its efforts at war preparations on the Pacific, and is endeavoring to create sentiment for the further fortification of the military base at Hawaii.

No word has been heard of the missing plane No. 1, which was forced down a few hundred miles from Hawaii. The other plane, No. 3, which a tempted the flight, has been towed into San Francisco. The plane was forced down about 300 miles from its starting point.

WORLD CONGRESS FOR CHINESE IS HELD IN BERLIN

Workers' Relief Aids Oriental Strikers

BERLIN (By Mail.)—More than 1,000 people attended the international conference held in Germany in the Prussian house of representatives here by the Workers' International Relief for the purpose of establishing united action for the relief and aid of the Chinese workers, students and intellectuals who are waging a determined battle against foreign capitalist and imperialist invasion.

George Ledebour, the old veteran of the socialist league, presided and in his speech called upon the delegates to unite their forces solidly behind the people of China in their struggle for self-determination.

Pledge Support to Strikers.

Among the countries represented were Germany, France, England, Austria, Czecho-Slovakia, Russia, Belgium, Holland, Switzerland, Ireland, Iceland and America.

Telegrams were received from many labor fraternal, and benefit organizations from all over the world, pledging their financial and moral support and approving the stand taken by the conference in its "Hands off China" demand.

The conference unanimously adopted a resolution of fraternal greetings to the Chinese people approving their struggle for national and social freedom; warmly commending the fraternal relations existing in the action for relief carried on by the W. I. R. committee and pledging its individed support and further calling upon the people of Europe and China to join hands in fraternity.

American Branch Campaigns.

The Workers' International Relief has already opened many soup kitchens and calls upon all fair-minded people to support them in their work.

The American branch of the W. I. R. with headquarters at 1553 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill., is now carrying on a campaign for relief of Chinese sufferers, and calls upon all friends of the oppressed to send in their contributions.

INTERNATIONAL COAL OPERATORS TO FORM GIGANTIC COMBINATION IN FIGHT ON ALL MINE UNIONS

LONDON, Sept. 2.—While the United States suffers an anthracite coal strike, negotiations are under way between owners of the German and British coal mines to reach an agreement for co-operation and control of export coal prices in the European market. The United States coal operators may be invited to join in the combine, as the British mine owners are fearful that an Anglo-German combine might lead to a price cutting war with the United States.

Proposals for the agreement came from Germany, and includes not only control of export prices, but limitation of coal exports, division of markets and the fixing of minimum prices. Each party to the agreement would agree not to invade the other's allotted territory. That common attacks against the living standards of the miners of all nations will result, is foreseen as a certainty.

In view of the perilious situation which the British coal industry is in, and mindful of the severe competition which it has had from the German coal fields, the British coal barons and the government agencies dealing with coal are inclined to look with favor upon the proposal. It is held in some quarters, however, that a mere agreement between Britain and Germany would not be sufficient, and the United States would have to be brought into the agreement to make it effective. By this means also a fight against the miners' unions will be carried on upon an international scale by a united front of European and American operators.

Premier Baldwin's ten months' truce, arranged with the miners and operators at the price of a subisdy, still continues a truce and offers no prospects as yet of definite peace.

MELLON ONE OF WORLD'S RICHEST MEN, INCOME TAX FIGURES REVEAL

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 2.—Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury, stated today that he believes the publicity clause of the revenue act should be repealed. Mellon opposes general publication of tax returns on the ground that "this intimate detail of personal business should not be aired in public."

When it is remembered that Mellon paid an income tax of $1,882,609,25, revealing him as one of the richest men in the United States, his annoyance can be well understood.

The income tax publications show that the government is run by millionaires in the interests of big business.

Berwyn Car-Riders Force Trolleys Off Streets, Cops Active

Berwyn will have no traction barons dictate their transportation needs.

Two policemen, Frank Prezek and James Hodowal, stood guard today over the wrecked street car of the Chicago and west town railroad under orders from Chief of Police James Mikes to prevent any movement of traffic on the lines until further orders. And just to insure the execution of orders, three automobiles were run on the tracks to prevent cars from tunning in either direction. This action was forced by car-riders who wrecked the car.

International Youth Week

MOSCOW, (By Mail.)—Never since the great war came to an end in 1918 was the fearful danger of a new world slaughter so near to us as at the present moment.

Situation in Morocco

War is raging in Morocco. Thousands are falling as victims to the robber-greed of the French and Spanish bankers. All the means of destruction of modern warfare are being brot into the field by French imperialism in order to crush the brave free Riff people and convert their land into a colony.

It appears as if this war is only being carried on between French imperialism and the people of the Riff. But behind the scenes of this war it is already clear that a number of other imperialist states, even if only indirectly, are involved in this conflict and that therefore the Moroccan war bears the seeds of a great international conflagration. This war will not be of short duration. The precarious situation of French imperialism compels the French bourgeoisie to mobilize fresh and new classes of young workers and peasants who are doomed to perish in the tropical heat of Africa.

And in China.

CHINA is all ablaze. A people numbering hundreds of millions is carrying on its struggle for emancipation against the imperialist invaders, before all against the yoke of English and Japanese rule. One can already see England and Japan again at work in order to plunge this unhappy country again into a fresh civil war from which the imperialists hope to gain advantage. But divided as they are among themselves and jealous as to who is to have the greatest share of the booty, the various powers can at any time come into collision with results which cannot be foreseen.

The struggle in Morocco, like the events in China, are only the commencement of a fresh wave of imperialist conflicts, of a new and frightful world war.

The socialist working youth who only a year ago expressed their (pacifist) attitude in innumerable demonstrations (No More War), in all countries are marching at the tail of the Second International, are marching hand in hand with those people who just recently, in the French chamber, voted for the war credits for the Moroccan war. Only the Young Communist International and the Comintern are at this moment fulfilling their international proletarian duty, true to the attitude of the bolsheviki during the world war, as their various sections in all the imperialist countries, in the event of a new war, are endeavoring with all means to do what Lenin and his followers did in their time, to organize the defeat of their own bourgeoisie.

Attack on Soviet Russia.

BEHIND all this there looms the new attack upon Soviet Russia. For many months past the reactionary English government has been systematically making every preparation for this purpose. Sometime it seems that the matter is postponed for a time but the danger, the facts still remain and are becoming ever more threatening. A new war against the first workers' republic of the world is being prepared.

Fellow workers, comrades!

Shall the lives of hundreds of thousands be again sacrificed on the battle fields of an imperialist war? Do you wish to be used as cannon fodder in a war against your beloved workers' republic of Soviet Russia? We call upon you. No, and again, no! Fight against the imperialist war! Peace for the Workers' Republic! Freedom for the peoples of Morocco and China! Forward to a powerful demonstration against the imperialist war in the week of the anniversary of the last world war.

FORWARD to a great week's campaign before the International Youth Day from the 31st of August to September 6, 1925!

Forward to the fight against war, now, in this very hour!

Young socialist workers! Socialists!

Your leaders and organizations, what are they doing?

Feeble resolutions here and there, demonstrations in order to keep up appearances. But in reality? Support of the robber war in Morocco by the French socialists. Approval on the part of the German social-democracy of the security pact and war against Soviet Russia. Shameful indifference towards the struggle for freedom of the Chinese people. Complete inactivity in the face of the real danger of fresh wars. 1914 is coming again, is already here.

Comrades!

Put an end to this! Set up the united front against the imperialist war, whether you are workers, apprentices, soldiers or peasants!

Down with the imperialist robbers!

All for Soviet Russia!

YANKEE LOANS GREASE CALLES, U. S. RELATIONS

Sheffield to Return to Mexico City

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—A number of problems in connection with the relations between the United States and Mexico are to be discussed here next week at a conference between Secretary of State Kellogg and James R. Sheffield, American ambassador to Mexico, who has been in this country since last June.

It was stated officially today that there has been no change in the plan of Secretary Kellogg to send Sheffield back to Mexico as ambassador despite the fact that certain elements there would like to have him declared persona non grata, but reports persist nevertheless that Sheffield will not stay in Mexico City for very many weeks after his return there.

"Strain on his Health"

Not only must Sheffield face open hostility in some quarters close to the Calles administration, but the high altitude of the Mexican capital has been a severe strain upon his health.

Since the exchange of public statements last June by Secretary Kellogg and President Calles of Mexico, relations between Washington and Mexico City have been without incident, but there have been indications that the two governments are quietly approaching an understanding—which translated from diplomatic language means that Calles has surrendered to Yankee imperialism in exchange for loans.

One of Kellogg's principal reasons for complaint was that the Mexican government was not giving serious consideration to the adjudication of claims of American citizens whose property was seized under the agrarian laws. Within the past two months however, progress has been reported in that direction. Calles has given evidence of complete submission with the result that relations between the United States and Mexico appear to be improved even if they are not as satisfatcory as the Coolidge administration would desire.

Pepper Wins Freedom for Prisoners in Clever Jail Break

CARROLLTON, Ill., Sept. 2.—Fred McLane, one of two prisoners who escaped from the Green County jail by throwing pepper in the eyes of Sheriff Thomas Conlee after calling him to their cell on the pretense of needing medical attention, was captured here today. Charles Clowers, McLane's companion, was captured in a corn field. Both men had been held on a charge of forgery.

Manganese Ore Is Exported in Large Quantities by U.S.S.R.

MOSCOW, Sept. 2. (Tass)—According to Soviet customs reports, 225,000 tons of manganese ore valued at about $4,500,000 were exported from the Soviet Union during the first half of the fiscal year, Oct. 1 to April 1. Most of the ore came from Chiaturi fields.

By April 1, over half of the Chiaturi manganese planned for export during the current fiscal year had been sold on contract to foreign firms.

CALLES MAKES HIS BETRAYAL MEXICAN LAW

Mexico Now "Safe for Democracy"

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 2.—President Calles has gone before the Mexican congress with recommendations designed to make capitalism safe in Mexico, especially the capital furnished by American imperialism.

Now that he has sold out to American imperialism, Calles is undertaking the problem of restraining the workers and peasants of Mexico from interfering in their own interests with the interests of capital both foreign and domestic.

Calles is asking for "interpretation" of the oil, land and labor clauses of the Carranza constitution such as will "attract" foreign capital.

Calles is asking that the agrarian law be modified so that limits be placed on expropriations in the interests of the landlord class.

In labor legislation, Calles recommends similar fake reforms to those in the United States, such as employers' liability, labor insurance, personal injury laws, etc., but also he intends to turn all of the nationalized industries, railroads, telegraph and telephone lines over to the hands of private exploiters, mostly foreign capitalists, and designs by this complete grovelling to American and British imperialism to get loans from the international bankers to strengthen his position, fit out his army for repression of the discontent his program produces and furnish the Yankee imperialists with a strangle hold on the Mexican people.

INDIAN COLLEGE TRAINS STUDENTS TO USE WEAPONS

British May Oppose Native Decision

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—The Indian independence movement welcomes compulsory militray training because it believes the military knowledge gained will some day be used in defense of India. So say exiles in New York, commenting on the news that the huge University of Calcutta has for the first time declared for compulsory military training for its host of students. The university is the largest educational institution in the world in point of numbers, 33,000 students having matriculated last year.

Indian Labor Leader Not Strong for Soft Stuff.

The military training decision was taken by the university senators, a body of 100, the university's governing body, and this action has the support of the Swaraj (Independence) Party. In a recent statement Motilal Nehru, president of the party and of the Indian labor movement said:

"To my mind the addition of one Indian to the number of those capable of taking part in the defense of their country is worth more to the nation than the appointment of ten Indians as governors of provinces."

British May Interfere.

In contrast to the nationalist Indians' desire for the military training their movement may some day require for its fruition the British government has opposed general military training for the subject people of India. The University of Calcutta is a government controlled institution and the decision of the senators is considered as a case where these Hindoos got out of hand. It is possible that the British government will interfere with the carrying out of the policy.

Unemployment Is Great in Textile, Shoe, Steel Fields

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2—Edgar Wallace, field representative American Federation of Labor, reports that about 40 per cent of the shoe workers are idle, 50 per cent of the textile workers have no steady employment, and that steel plants and metal establishments are running about 60 per cent capacity. Soft coal unemployment this summer, he found, was only a few degrees worse than those other industries in many sections.

Fight Secession Move in Brotherhood of Railway Clerks

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2—Spokesmen of the anti-FitzGerald group in the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks who disapprove the secession of a part of the express workers from the brotherhood in protest at tactics employed by Pres. FitzGerald at the recent convention in Kansas City, deny that the seceding body will number more than 5,000 men.

"Socialists" Show Selves Staunch Allies of the General Electric Trust

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the latest issue of "The Citizen" of Schenectady, New York, arrives as usual in an envelope with the return address of the publicity department of the "open shop" General Electric Co., of that city. The electric trust is entitled to have its own official organ, but it just happens that "The Citizen" is also a mouthpiece of the "socialist" party, with the "socialists," Herbert M. Merrill and Hawley B. Van Vechten, as president and managing editor. It is interesting for the workers to know that "socialists" are espousing the cause of the great anti-labor electric trust, aiding it in camouflaging its crimes.

Enclosed with this issue of "The Citizen" is the latest propaganda of the electric trust to the effect that altho the total amount paid in wages to workers has increased during the years 1921, 1922, 1923 and 1924, the profits taken by the stockholders have practically remained stationary.

To be sure, the publicity agent of the electric monopoly does not stress that the number of employes has increased, that the 61,638 workers employed in 1922, received only $87,448,000 in wages, less than the $87,505,000 received by a smaller number of workers, 59,233, employed the previous year, showing that wage cuts must have been put into force somewhere. For the two following years, the wages merely kept abreast of the increased number of workers sent upon the treadmill of this industry.

Statisticians and publicity agents are, of course, hired to make figures lie. The effort is made to show that the parasite stockholders have been forced to be content during this four-year period with an average profit toll that fluctuated annually between 16 and 17 millions of dollars.

But this does not tell the whole story. The electric trust has issued another table of statistics, no doubt intended for stockholders, but not for the eyes of its wage workers.

It is shown that during this four-year period the General Electric Trust completely wiped out $46,000,000 worth of notes, while outstanding bonds were reduced from $35,000,000 to $2,000,000. This monopoly, therefore, started the present year $79,000,000 to the good, over the same date four years ago, enabling it to issue $26,700,000 special six per cent stock at par, to pay dividends on which the lash must fall heavier upon the backs of the "General Electric" slaves.

• • • •

Thus do the Schenectady "socialists" glorify the profit achievements of the General Electric Co., surrendering completely to this voracious corporation, while making no effort to fight for increased wages and better conditions for the workers.

The "socialists" no doubt believe that the continued growth of the electric monopoly will eventually result in its peacefully falling into the hands of the workers, thru some form of public ownership. They vision the super-power monopoly as something that will be nationalized without a struggle, for the benefit of the workers, in the hour of its greatest strength.

• • • •

Under the slogan, for instance, of "public ownership should be obvious to all," James H. Maurer, "socialist" head of the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor, in this same issue of the "socialist" Citizen, expects to win control of super-power under the present capitalist dictatorship.

Taking this view, Maurer, with his friends in the "socialist" party and in the American Federation of Labor, attack the Communists for wanting to disturb this utopian dream by calling the workers to battle against the capitalist state, for its overthrow and abolition.

The capitalist dictatorship is the political instrument for the protection of private property in the great monopolies, like the General Electric Co., and for the enslavement of the workers, including the 75,000 employes of this electric trust. One hundred per cent trade union organization in the shops is one of the first requisites for the workers' successful struggle for power. The workers' political organization, that is firmly rooted in industry, thru its shop nuclei, is the party that will lead the workers to victory in this struggle. That organization is the Workers (Communist) Party, that wages the war upon the capitalist dictatorship and its "socialist" allies.

world, the public printer of the United States, and, as I indicated, a member of the I. P. P. and A. U. You who attended the last convention will recall the splendid address he gave upon that occasion, and I venture the prophecy that his message today will be equally interesting.

"I recalled to you then that a peculiar circumstance arose in connection with his selection as Government printer of the United States. There were two men in America who felt that George Carter should be the public printer. There were a great many others, but these two were particularly anxious that he should be appointed. These two were actuated by somewhat different motives. One was actuated by the fact that Mr. Carter and the other gentleman had been friends for a period of years. That gentleman was the secretary to the president of the United States at that time, George Christian. The other energetic and actively interested person was the president of your international body. I was interested in order that we might place in that position a pressman for the first time in the history of the republic. As a result of our joint interest we conspired together, and conspired against the lovable character who has passed to the great beyond, President Harding.

"Two weeks later I was ushered into President Harding's presence, accompanied by George Christian. The president arose and said: 'George, how are you?'

"I am fine.

"And what brings you here?

"I responded by saying: Mr. President, I have come to ask you to appoint George Carter public printer.

He said: I shall permit no East Tennessee democratic hill billy to come up here and tell this republican administration what I shall or shall not do. If you will recall, I said some kind things about Jimmy Cox during the campaign, but I had said nothing unkind of Mr. Harding, then Senator from Ohio.

"We sat down and talked the matter over, and it became a contest between the president and myself which might say the nicest things about George Carter. When I arose to go he said: I suppose I must appoint him. He did, and Mr. Carter had the honor of being confirmed in the open session of the senate, without having his name go before a committee. I am glad he has come here and I will take pleasure in presenting George H. Carter, public printer."

This eulogistic speech was delivered by Berry after Carter had committed the acts which brought down on his head the condemnation of organized labor. Does Berry still sponsor George H. Carter?

SHOP CHAIRMEN REJECT SIGMAN 'PEACE' PLAN

Resolution Calls It Fraudulent

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 2—At the meetings of the shop chairmen of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union called by the Joint Action Committee of the suspended locals, 2, 9 and 22, the following resolution was adopted after enthusiastic applause for the similar sentiments expressed by the speakers who adress the meetings—there were two halls filled to overflowing:

We, the shop chairmen of the cloak and dress industry of New York City, assembled at shop chairmen meetings in Webster Hall and Manhattan Lyceum on August 31, 1925, at the call of the Joint Committee of Action of Locals 2, 9 and 22, I. L. G. W. U., adopt the following resolution:

Whereas: Morris Sigman, having failed in his campaign to terrorise our members into submission to his leadership by the use of gansters, wholesale discharges, arrests and injunctions, has now come forth with a so-called "peace" plan embodying a program of fake reforms; and

Whereas: This plan completely ignores the repeated demands of the great mass of our membership for the resignation of Mr. Sigman, the reinstatement of the expelled officers of Locals 2, 9 and 22, and the reorganization of the Joint Board on the basis of proportional representation;

Therefore be it resolved: That we, the shop chairmen reject these proposals as a method of bringing peace in our union and brand them as a fraud intended to mislead our membership into believing that the officials of the International and the Joint Board actually desire peace; and

Be it further resolved: That we pledge anew our loyalty to the Joint Committee of Action and shall refuse to consider any peace terms not directly negotiated with the Joint Committee of Action which has been authorized by the great mass of our membership to carry on our fight to a successful conclusion.

DEATH OF HOORGIN AND AID MOURNED BY N. Y. WORKERS

Skliansky Was Red Army Aide to Trotsky

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—Isaiah J. Hoorgin, late chairman of the board of directors of the Amtorg Trading Corporation which acts as purchasing agent in America for the Russian government and Efraim M. Skliansky, former assistant to Leon Trotsky in the red army, both of whom were drowned at Long Lake, New York, are mourned by New York Russians who visited the funeral parlors where the bodies were lying in state preparatory to cremation.

Both men had brilliant careers. Hoorgin, 38, was originally a professor of mathematics at Kieff and since the revolution has risen rapidly to posts of increasing responsibility. He served with distinction with the embassy in Poland and in the economic department in Moscow, finally coming to America where his keen business ability and industrial understanding made him invaluable in the extensive financial operations the Russian government had been conducting in this country.

Skliansky, 33, graduated from the University of Kieff as a physician, joined the army in 1916 and as a delegate to the army committee in 1917 took part in the October revolution that seized power from Kerensky. Later his organizing genius brought him to the front as Trotsky's assistant. Transferred at last to the economic department he was sent to America to purchase machinery for the state woolen trust.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2—More than $4,000,000,000 of capital from the United States is now invested in Latin American countries, according to an estimate by the department of commerce. This is about 40 per cent of the total of foreign investments of American financiers. It is represented by railroads, hydro-electric power plants, streetcar lines and other public utilities, and by mines, factories, land and cattle enterprises and shipping, banking and insurance companies.

SHOE FACTORY WORKERS FIGHT OPEN SHOPPERS

Philadelphia Union Strike Edwards Co.

By D. DOLLSCHEK.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 2—A strike has been called in the factory of the J. Edwards Co. by the Shoe Workers' Protective Union. The trouble started in the turn finishing room which has been the only department that has been able to maintain complete organization in the shoe factory thruout the long continued depression in the industry.

One man who had worked on the job for seven years was suddenly discharged, the reason being given that he was unable to do the work satisfactorily. The rest of the crew were convinced that it was an attempt to break up their organisation and they demanded that the man be put back to work. Edwards & Co. refused and the finishing department was ordered off the job.

About 25 edgetrimmers, edgesetters and finishers were later joined by 50 turn lasters, second lasters and woodheelers and efforts are being made to still further extend the strike.

Like a Jail.

Conditions in the shoe factory of the J. Edwards Co. are said to be very bad. The workers charge that they are not allowed to talk to one another, that a man who is waiting for work is not allowed to leave his machine and that the men are even spied upon after working hours.

Several cases have been cited where the bosses have warned workers that they have been seen talking with members of the Shoe Workers Protective Union and the streets after working hours and that this must cease.

Skilled Crafts Strike.

The method of operating the modern shoe factory makes it possible for these strikers to completely stop operations in this factory. The making of shoes is divided into many parts, each part constituting a trade in itself which it takes many years for the workers to master sufficiently to enable them to handle fine shoes. The strength of the position of the Shoe Workers Protective Union in this strike can be readily seen.

The Organization of the New Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party

THE central executive committee of the party which was elected by the convention which closed Sunday held its first meeting on Tuesday, Sept. 1, to organize itself to conduct the work of the party. All the members, as well as six candidates were present at the meeting at which Comrade Green, chairman of the parity commission, presided.

Comrade Green, in discussing the situation in the C. E. C., made the following statement:

"Of course we have now a parity C. E. C. but it is not exactly a parity C. E. C. With the decision of the Communist International on the question of the groups in the American party there goes parallel instructions to the C. I. representative to support that group which was the former minority. If the C. I. continues this policy, that will always be the case, that is, the C. I. representative will be supporting that group and therefore altho we have a nearly parity C. E. C., we have a majority and a minority in the C. E. C."

The election of the sub-committees and officers of the central executive committee was then taken up and the following plan of organization was adopted, and the committees and officers named elected:

Political committee, which will direct the work of the party between the meetings of the central executive committee, consisting of five members and two candidates. The candidates are to participate in the meetings with a voice but no vote. The political committee elected consists of Comrades Ruthenberg, Lovestone, Bedacht Foster and Cannon. The candidates for the political committee are Comrades Dunne and Gitlow.

Comrade Ruthenberg was elected general secretary with the functions of political and executive secretary.

Comrade Lovestone was elected organization secretary and head of the organization department.

Comrade Bedacht was elected director of agitprop department.

The secretariat elected consists of Comrades Ruthenberg, Lovestone and Cannon.

Comrade Foster was elected head of the industrial department.

In addition to Comrade Bedacht, head of the agitprop department, Comrades Bittelman and Engdahl are members of the committee.

The industrial department, in addition to Comrade Foster, head of that department, consists of Comrades Dunne, Minor, Gitlow, and enlarged sessions of the industrial department will be held in connection with the full meetings of the central executive committee in which the four members from the shops and factories elected on the C. E. C., Comrades Reynolds, Aronberg, White and Schmess will participate.

The committee on Negro work elected consists of Comrades Minor, Dunne, Bittelman, Lovestone and Lovett Fort-Whiteman.

Committee on the agricultural question consists of Comrades Lovestone, Bittelman, Browder, Ruthenberg, Minor and Knutson.

An editorial committee for the Workers Monthly was elected consisting of three members, Comrades Bedacht, Minor and Dunne, with Comrade Bedacht as responsible editor.

Comrade Browder was elected head of the research department also to work on the DAILY WORKER staff. Comrade Bittelman was elected representative of the agitprop department on the DAILY WORKER staff.

The political committee will immediately begin work to mobilize the party to take up aggressively the campaigns authorized by the national convention. The organization department will immediately begin the work of planning the reorganization of the party on the new basis.

C. E. Ruthenberg,
General Secretary.

CAL CONSIDERS CONSOLIDATION OF RAILROADS

Giant Trustification Program Reported

SWAMPSCOTT, Mass., Sept. 2.—Senator James B. Watson, arch reactionary from Indiana, is the chief caller on Coolidge's engagement list, and the subject noised about is the further consolidation of the giant railroad combines into still greater combinations, few in number and strong enuf to gobble any weak lines which try to hold out against them.

With reaction rampant, some of the old guard want to amend the Esch-Cummins act which provided for a "voluntary" merger, to make the further trustification of the great railroad systems compulsory. But Cautious Cal thinks that they merely should be let alone to do it themselves—in other words to "let nature take its course" with the little, weak lines being "absorbed" by the stronger groups.

Coolidge has already approved of the Van Sweringen merger, at least by implication, and his word cuts a big figure in what the interstate commerce commission now "considering" it, will finally say. The commission is also investigating the possibility of reducing freight rates, but it is doubtful that such will be done.

THE pope is considerably embarrassed over the growing tendency among Italian women to reduce their wearing apparel to the irreducible minimum. His holiness finds it difficult, according to reports, to concentrate on his god's business while his carnal eyes roam over a sea of garnished temptation. In order to prevent a reduction of his efficiency the pope stationed several priests at the church door, with orders to deny entrance to those whose conception of dress conflicted with that entertained by his holiness.

ARREST KLUXER CAUGHT BURNING A FIERY CROSS

WAUKEGAN, Ill., Sept. 2.—Carl Cushman, well-to-do farmer of Wauconda, was identified by 12-year-old Virginia Newburger as the leader of a band of men who placed a big, fiery cross in front of the Newburger farmhouse, three miles from Wauconda and fired several shots into the house, State's Attorney A. V. Smith of Lake county announced.

Cushman, his wife, and Roy Lomax of Davis Lake are under arrest on warrants charging conspiracy, sworn out by Mrs. Harry Newburger, mother of the girl, who, with her husband, three children and a niece were twice besieged in their home by armed marauders, they assert.

Cushman, questioned by the state's attorney today, asserted he was at Lomax' home. Returning home, he passed the Newburger home, he said, and saw the fiery cross burning. Asked why he did not stop and aid in extinguishing the blaze, he gave no answer.

PAN-AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR BALKS AT TRADE UNION DRIVE IN LATIN-AMERICAN LANDS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—No attempt will be made at present to send a mission to Latin-American countries to arouse interest in trade unionism, but instead there will be a determined effort thru letters and other appeals to induce existing labor unions in Latin-America to contribute their fair share of the funds for such an undertaking.

This decision was reached at the meeting of the executive committee of the Pan-American Federation of Labor in Washington, at which President Green, Vice-President Morones and Secretaries Iglesias and Wright made reports on the situation.

DAILY WORKER AGENTS MEETING IN NEW YORK SHOWS LABOR DAY EXCURSION WILL BE SUCCESS

NEW YORK.—The DAILY WORKER excursion to Stony Point on-the-Hudson next Monday, Labor Day, September 7, promises to be a great success, judging from the successful DAILY WORKER agents' meeting held in New York last night. Over forty branches were represented at this meeting, and reports were that active comrades everywhere are working hard to qualify for membership in the DAILY WORKER Builders' Club, which will be organized on this occasion.

This DAILY WORKER Builders' Club will not be an ordinary organization. It will be quite a distinction to belong to it, since ONLY those will be admitted who have performed certain service for the DAILY WORKER and thereby proved the earnestness of their devotion. Membership will be strictly limited to those that have secured at least six dollars worth of subscriptions or three dollars worth of tions for the DAILY WORKER during July and August, and to those that help regularly with the work in the DAILY WORKER New York office or New York news stands.

To each one qualifying in this way a ticket to the excursion on the steamer Miramer will be given free of charge. The capacity of the steamer is four hundred. It looks at this writing as though this number will be reached before time of sailing.

The list of those who have already qualified will be published in the DAILY WORKER tomorrow. To these tickets have already been mailed. Any one entitled to a ticket who has not received it at time of reading this notice should call at the DAILY WORKER office, 108 East 14th Street, at once.

All who have DAILY WORKER summer campaign collection lists in their possession must return these lists together with all funds collected to the DAILY WORKER New York office, 108 East 14th street, not later than Saturday, September 5, to receive excursion tickets.

The Teachers Should Call McAndrew's Bluff

Beware of the Greeks who come bearing gifts!

Superintendent of Schools William McAndrew has just returned from his vacation. The capitalist publicity work shops are set in motion. In big headlines and bigger stories Chicago's kept press broadcasts his utterings. This time he not only spills crocodile tears for the Chicago school teachers alone but for ALL the school teachers ALL over the country. He wants all the teachers to get higher wages, he says.

The arguments he makes are carefully sugar-coated so as to appeal to all the teachers. But let us diagnose this pill.

Here is a paragraph from the latest statement made by McAndrew:

"The result is that each year it is more difficult to induce the right kind of young women and young men to enter the teaching profession when they are graduated from college."

Really a Wage Cut.

This would lead us to believe that his program calls for higher wages for all teachers on the Chicago staff to meet the present-day cost of living. But what are the facts? The facts are that his budget not only does not give an increase in wages to beginners on the teaching staff but it CUTS their wages. The teachers in the first five years of their careers are to get less wages than heretofore if his program is accepted.

His program specifically advocates increases for a distinct select portion of the teaching staff. And these favored few would naturally be entirely under the control of McAndrew to be used as a whip for any teacher who dared to criticie McAndrew's rule.

The methods used by McAndrew are no different from those used by the boss when he picks out a few workers and gives them a better wage for which the others workers are made to pay. Thus as in the factory there is created two strata of workres who will fight each other and keep the exploitation by the boss safe, in the school there will be created two classes of teachers to keep the interests of big business in Chicago safe.

Teachers Should Get Busy.

The Chicago school teachers are the only ones who are logically fitted to make and carry out a demand for higher wages for teachers. The Chicago school teachers have an organiation, the Chicago Teachers Federation. This organization should begin at once an active campaign for increase in wages and to call Superintendent McAndrew's bluff.

If the cost of living has increased for the higher paid teachers it has increased equally as well for the lower paid teachers. If teachers are to receive decent wages the raises must affect all the teachers and not start at the top with the few selected by boss McAndrew.

Mexicans Demand Jobs Back, Boss' Lackeys Hurl Bricks

By L. P. RINDAL,
(Worker Correspondent)

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Sept. 2—A "riot" which broke out yesterday at the City Brick company was quelled after Cipiano Gaxiola, the leader of the Mexican workers in the company, had been knocked unconscious and Dave Lozano and Vic. Medina, employes of the company, were injured by bricks thrown by rioters, the reports state.

The trouble is said to have started when 15 Mexicans who had been laid off from the yards called on the company superintendent and demanded they be reinstated. When their demands were refused a riot started, and "law and order" made the affair still more complicated, of course.

Lamar and Julius Agree.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—W. H. (Bill) Lamar, war-time censor of the American press and suppressor of more than 125 radical and liberal publications in that period, is now quoting F. Haldeman-Julius, publisher at Girard, Kans., in support of Lamar's claim that the protestant churches are driving the United States toward a religious war. Lamar is pleading against prohibition, and in the course of this task he attacks the klan and the protestant churches and the anti-saloon league.

Pennsylvania Mine Owners Try Out the 1917 Scale; Few Scabs

MONESSEN, Pa., Sept. 2.—Over a thousand union miners held a mass meeting at the Fairhope ball ground.

District President P. T. Fagan and organizers appealed to the men to stand firm and not to go to work in the Banning Mine No. 2 of the Pittsburgh Coal company which has opened up to operate on the 1917 scale.

They stated that the men who are working in the mine now have been imported from elsewhere and, that the union ranks have not as yet been broken.

Very little coal is being mined as the scabs are inexperienced and few in number.

Six Lost In Swamp

NORFOLK, Va. Sept. 2.—Search was continued today by fire fighters and friends for the six missing members of one family believed to have become bewildered in wismal swamp near here, and either to have drowned or perished in the fires that are smouldering there.

Many persons have perished in the swamp since the coming of English settlers in the early seventeenth century.

'PEACE' PLAN OF SIGMAN IS PROVEN FRAUD

Fight Continues in Garment Shops

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 2.—All talk of immediate peace in the ranks of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union had subsided today following the gathering of over 3,000 shop representatives in Webster Hall and Manhattan Lyceum on Monday night, where President Sigman's fake peace proposals were exposed and unanimously rejected.

The Joint Committee of Action is continuing its work of reinstating workers who were discharged after the stoppage, and of picketing those shops on strike as a result of discharges. One dress shop was settled today, but there are 23 cloak and dress shops still on strike. One cloak shop struck yesterday when the boss demanded that all workers turn over to him their union books and one-half the dues which they owed to the Joint Board. When the workers refused they were forced to stop work.

Arrest Pickets.

At the Siesser Dress Shop, 13-15 E. 22nd street, two girls were arrested for attempting to speak, quietly, to the scabs being brought to the shop in an automobile. Jennie Locker, one of the pickets, has been arrested once before for the same offense and her case for the previous arrest will be heard Wednesday. Yetta Ziel was arrested with Jennie Locker this morning, they were taken to the 57th street police stattion and were released on bail until Friday.

Following the announcement that the Joint Board has called a meeting of shop chairmen in Cooper Union on Wednesday night, but that every shop chairman who is to attend must obtain from the Joint Board a card of admittance, the Joint Committee of Action states that it knows the meeting will be packed not with shop chairman, but with those known to be Joint Board followers—and there will be no possible chance for the expression of honest opinion, particularly no chance for criticism of the Joint Board and its actions and policies.

The Joint Committee of Action is certain that the majority of the shop chairmen will not respond to this call for meeting since they no longer recognise the authority of the Joint Board and would refuse to go to its offices for an admission card, or for any other purpose.

Workmen's Circle Rap Sigman Rule.

The Joint Committee of Action has learned that at a meeting held on August 30, branch 50 of the Workmen's Circle passed a resolution condemning the officers of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and their campaign of terrorism against the members; that they voted $25 to the defense fund of the committee; and they voted in favor of calling a general meeting of all members of the Workmen's Circle in New York for the purpose of discussing the present fight of the rank and file in the union against the corrupt political machine and its leaders.

While distributing a leaflet on West 38th street during the noon hour yesterday, Celia Feller, a member of Local 22 was arrested and held under $500 bail on a charge of disorderly conduct. Miss Feller is one of the girls who has spent many nights guarding 16 West 21st street, the headquarters of Local 22, against the attacks of gangsters. Her case will come up for hearing on Friday.

SOVIET PRIMERS TELL FOLKS OF CONGRESS ACTS

No. 1 Tells of Finances of Soviet Union

By ANISE.

MOSCOW, Sept. 2.—Little red and black booklets are appearing in the Moscow book shops, issued in editions of 50,000 copies, thirty-two pages in size, with bright red illustrations on the covers. They sell for two and a half cents each, and they tell the people of Russia, and especially the peasants, all about the recent decisions of the Soviet Congress.

They are found all over the book store counters, for the information of the Soviet people. I bought five booklets, one on finance, one on industry, one on the agricultural tax, one on village co-operation, and one on hand industries. They are so simply and neatly told that I am passing on the information.

"In the month of May" begins the booklet on finance, "we had the third Congress of the Soviet Union, to settle all important government questions. The congress also took important decisions on the questions of finance.

"Shall we strengthen or weaken the Soviet treasury and what shall we do to strengthen it? This question is important to every worker and peasant. It is obvious that the stronger the treasury is, the more help it can give to improving all the farming and industry of the land" . . . How naively different from Coolidge's comments on tax-reduction!

The Farm Tax.

But in spite of the needs of more money, the farm tax must be reduced. "For Comrade Lenin always said that as our conditions improved, taxes should grow lighter. They are still too heavy. And yet if we consider what the peasants paid under the czar, they are paying now much less.

"On May 7, 1925, the congress decided to reduce the farm tax from 470 million rubles to 280 million for 1925-26. At the same time they will put 100 million of this into local taxes, for schools, roads, hospitals."

There will be more about this under the primer on the farm tax. But this finance primer passes quickly to the question of government budget, which reminds me that only recently have we had such a thing in the United States. "Every kopeck that is spent must be written down in the budget, which is the account of the income and expenses of the government." . .

"By the budget you can see all needs of the land; and also if the land is strengthened or weakening in economic power. And our budget is growing; it is growing not from bigger taxes, but from other income, from our factories, our mills, our railways, our banks, our trade. From the budget you can see just what grows fast and what slowly.

"In 1923 we had in our budget one billion, 300 million rubles; in 1924 it was half again as large; and this year it is nearly twice as big as two years ago; it is two and a half billion rubles." . . . If any American, trained by the tax reduction speeches of Coolidge, thinks this very naive exultation, let him go on to the next sentence. "But in 1923, of every hundred rubles, 17 came from the farm tax; now only 11 comes from the farm tax.

"Last year much money from the budget went into the equipment of industry, factories, mills, mines. The czar's war and the civil war ruined the factories and the government had to put them on their feet with its own money. But now most of our factories are giving profit into the government treasury. So this year industry needs much less help, and more help can be given to the farms.

"Already the help to farms is higher than to industry. To equip industry we are giving this year 110 million, and to help farms 145 million. Of this 60 million is help to peasants suffering from the bad harvest; this does not count the help from social organizations. Then 75 million goes to farm credits and to various ways of building up farming; this will keep on increasing in the future; every extra ruble must go for this, for it is our next chief need . . .

"One of the biggest state expenses is for army and fleet. It costs us 417 million rubles. This is very much less than the czar's army which cost 850 million; he needed it to put down revolution and to grab other lands.

"Our biggest bill is for railroads, 855 million rubles. But this money all comes back, for the railroads pay for themselves now. Only last year we still had to give them 40 million, but this year they are paying their way; they have grown strong and do not need help.

"Thanks to all this we can now give out more money for schools, hospitals, road building, farm building. For education we gave last year from the central budget 66 million; this year we are giving 114 million. For health we also increase this year by 45 million.

Sound Money.

"Our success has been much helped by our sound money, which we have now lived on for a year. For more than two years we had this sound money, but not enuf of it, so that the workers and peasants still lived on 'sovsnaks' (paper emblems). When you got any money you must spend it at once, for next day it would not buy much. But now with our sound money, if a peasant cannot at once buy a plow, he can put his money in the credit association and save until he has enough; the money remains the same.

Foreign Debts and Loans.

"Everyone can see that our national housekeeping gets better. We could do much better still if we had a foreign loan. But the foreign capitalists will not give us one because we refuse to pay the czar's debts . . . These debts were not for the good of the land but for suppressing revolutions and making war. They are 9 billion rubles, which is 300 rubles for every peasant's household, See from what chains of debt the October revolution freed us. And the president of the Sovnarkom. Alexander Ivanovich Rycoff said at the congress: "We categorically refuse to recognize any debts incurred before the Soviet Republic began." . . . In this we are all with him.

"But still, to get a loan, we might make some concessions to the foreign capitalist This is how. They get 6 per cent for their money in foreign lands; we would give them 10 per cent; then this ten per cent could go to pay the foreigners who lost money thru our revolution. This would be good for them and good for us; we could get on our feet much quicker. We could easily afford ten per cent for a loan. But the capitalists have waited for eight years for us to recognise the czar's debts and they still think we will. But under that slavery we will not go. Even without a loan, we will build up our husbandry, tho more slowly, until there is no more poverty, no one in need in the whole Soviet Union . . . So said the Congress of Soviets, and all Soviet organs from the Central Committee to the smallest village Soviet, must bring this resolution into life."

(Articles on Soviet Primers No. 2 and 3 will be published in later issues. Ed. Note.)

"Ghent" Subsidy System.—The so-called "Ghent" system of paying subsidies to unemployed workers has been effective since April 1, 1925. Unemployment.—There is unquestionably marked unemployment in Vera Cruz at present, due, it is said, to the closing of the sugar mills for the season and curtailment of the manufacture of alcohol, on account of the high taxation placed this year by the federal government upon the manufacture of alcohol.

NETHERLANDS.

Domestic Problems.—German servants who a few years ago came to Holland because of the depression of the mark are now returning home or emigrating to the United States. Dutch housekeepers must now depend almost exclusively upon Dutch help, who receive in wages about twice the pre-war rate.

SYNOPSIS.—The official report of the British trade union delegation to Soviet Russia described the workings of foreign trade, transportation, industry, finance and agriculture in the Soviet Union. The trade union leaders concluded that foreign trade is increasing, and that in agriculture and industry the level of production is being raised. The finances have been placed on a sound basis, the report showed. Harm is being done to England by the absence of full diplomatic relations, the union leaders stated. Schools and universities, and literature, music and opera and the theatre were then discussed. Art collections, censorship, newspapers, wall newspapers, and freedom of the press were explained, with the conclusion that "the results of education are astounding." The report then took up hospitals, welfare work, sanitation, birth control, abortion, cleanliness and housing, rent regulations, family life, and prisons. "The Soviet government is achieving most remarkable results in respect to public health, housing, and the prison system," says the report. Regarding the trade unions and labor conditions, the report states, "The Delegation were much impressed by the position and activities of Trade Unions under the Soviet system." The report then described labor regulations, co-operatives, wages, and told of visits to various industrial works. The general conclusion on labor conditions reached by the commission was that, "The U. S. S. R. is a strong and stable state. The government is not only in every way better than anything Russia has ever yet had, but it has done and is doing work in which other older state systems have failed and are failing."

The visitor who had known the city before might, therefore, have expected to fine some remnants of the wealthy and middle class, especially among the Mahomedan Tartar population: their elimination, however, appears to have been complete. There also appears to have been less resistance on the part of the Tartars to the advent of the Soviets than in any other part of the Caucasus. Several Tartar millionaires were quietly deposed. Some resisted and were killed. Those who fled the country appear to have been comparatively few in number. A few who were too old to work were granted a pension and allowed to retire to small but comfortable quarters in the villages, while some, regardless of their political color, were granted posts in the various Government Departments. Many of the wealthy Armenians and Russians had already disappeared prior to the establishment of Soviet rule, but several still remain in high administrative posts, either as specialists in the Oil Department of Aznepht or in the Government itself.

The "26 Commissars"

The Delegation visited the Liberty Square, formerly a large plot of waste ground which has now been laid out as a public garden. At one end of the square is a monument to the 26 Baku Commissars who were murdered by the Menshevists at Kizil Avat in Transcaspia. The bodies have now been brought from their former place of burial and re-interred in the center of this square.

Members of the Delegation were profoundly shocked to learn that the massacre of these 26 unarmed prisoners, which has now become one of the principal historic features of the Russian Revolution in the Caucasus, is attributed to instructions given by certain officers in command of the British Forces at that time operating in North Persia and the Caucasus. Since returning to England the Delegation has made careful inquiry into this incident and finds that the evidence entirely exonerates the British Forces and their officers.

In view of the fact that these accusations are generally believed throughout the whole of Russia, the Delegation is of the opinion that the matter should be definitely cleared up by a joint inquiry.

The Oilfields

Both the Grozny oilfield and Baku oilfields were a great object lesson to the Delegation, not only as regards the possibilities under a scheme of nationalization, but as tending to disprove the statement that Russia's need of funds is seriously affecting her economic stability.

It was evident to the most casual observer of the works and of the production returns which were seen by the Delegation that vast sums of money could immediately be obtained from the industry by curtailing capital expenditure and putting in cheaper and less durable work.

Nevertheless the Soviet Government has no intention of exploiting a paying industry to the detriment of the workers or the future of the industry itself; but, on the contrary, has consented to a program of progressive capital expenditure, both in housing and industrial development, which is to be covered by the increasing revenue received. The results of the reconstruction of the oil industry by the Soviet Government are dealt with in detail in the following section.

PART II

Special Industries and Institutions

I.—Visit to Baku Oilfields

The Delegation, while in Baku, paid a visit to the oilfields and the Refineries.

The main Baku oilfields consist of two areas, the larger and older fields are at Balachani, situated some twelve miles from the town: the smaller and more recent fields known as Bibie Eybat are on the outskirts of the town itself. Formerly, when under private ownership, these fields were divided into plots of 20 or 30 acres, most of which were worked as small units, the power used being usually steam or internal combustion engines.

Now, by means of nationalization, all the great projects for the electrification of the whole oilfield, and the concentration of the industry, which have been talked of for the last 15 years, are practically completed.

The large electric power station, which formerly provided power for lighting the town and oilfields and for driving machinery on the properties of those who found it more economical to pay the tariff charged than to use their own power, has now been extended and its output increased. By this means electric power is used all over the Bibie Eybat field, and the complete electrification of the Balachani fields is well advanced. Further extension of the power-houses is still in progress, and a new battery of six Babcocks-Wilcox boilers is in the course of erection at the large station in the refinery town.

As a result of this centralization of power, an enormous economy both in fuel (about 15,000 tons) and of labor has been affected, and both town and oilfields are better lighted. Another economy is the construction of a series of new pipe lines around the bay connecting the Bibie Eybat oilfield with the refineries. The Bibie Eybat oil was formerly pumped into barges and towed across the bay to the refineries. These pipe lines total in measurement over 18 miles.

The general system now followed in working these oilfields is to treat them as one huge concern. Light railways to a total length of over 120 versts have been built to connect both the Balachani and Bibie Eybat oilfields with large central warehouses and stores from which all material for the fields is delivered. This light railway system is now carrying 300,000 tons of material a month for distribution to various points on the fields. All the large workshops, machine shops, boiler works, wire rope works, tube factories, etc., have also been reorganized in various centers, and are connected with the fields by these railways or good roads over which motor lorries and tractors can travel.

The centralization of the industry has in a great measure enabled the experts to cope with the serious question of the flooding of the oil strata with water. A special commission has been formed for dealing with prospecting and trial borings which are being put down in all likely localities.

The whole scheme of centralization and electrification follows very much the same lines as those worked out by the expert Commission some time before the war; but which was impossible of realization owing to the conflicting interests of private enterprise. It is now considered that half the scheme is complete, but another 30 millions of roubles is required for its total realization.

Production

During the last three years more energy has been expended on this great centralization scheme than on actually increasing the production of crude oil. In 1921 the gross production of the Baku fields had fallen to 157 million poods as compared with 468 million in 1913. In 1922 it rose to 212.6 million poods, and in 1923 it had already risen to over 250 millions. A further increase of 20 per cent is expected from this year. The old form of baling the well with a baling bucket and drum is being eliminated wherever possible, and the American pumping system is being very largely used. In 1921 production received from gushers amounted to 10 per cent of the total gross production, and in 1923 to 15 million poods, or 7 per cent of production.

Drilling

It is only by fresh borings that production on an oilfield can be maintained or increased. In 1913, 76,938 sajens were drilled. Owing to the difficulty of obtaining labor and material, this fell during the war to 32,430 sajens in 1917. During the revolutionary period in 1919, only 5,000 sajens were drilled of the whole Baku fields. Very much the same was the case in 1921-22 when 7,000 sajens were registered. In 1923, however, when the new organization was already in working order, the amount of new borings was increased to 23,661 sajens. It is estimated that 40,000 sajens will be completed by the end of the current year. From this increased drilling activity a marked increase of production is expected over the year 1925.

Refining

Of the 33 refineries in the Baku area, 14 of the largest and most up-to-date are working at full pressure. A considerable amount of capital expenditure has been effected in these refineries and the plant wherever possible has been improved. In 1923, only 126,615,358 poods of crude oil were driven over the stills. The proportion of products received was as follows:—

Illuminating oils	22.39	per cent
Lubricants	6.32	"
Solar	10.30	"
Benzine	.42	"
Gasoline	1.08	"
Mazout	57.74	"
Special products	.36	"
Lost in distillation	1.39	"

Exports

Export of products from Russia is confined to illuminating oils, lubricants, solar oil, and benzines. Five and a half million poods of kerosene, two million poods of lubricants, one and a half million poods of solar were shipped to Turkey and Europe in 1923. Figures for 1924 are not yet available, but no great increase is expected, as the requirements of liquid fuel in Russia still exceed the output.

Shipping

Owing to the events during the war and the Revolution shipping on the Caspian Sea suffered very considerably. At the present time the oil transport fleet consists of six Diesel driven tankers, with a capacity of 808,000 poods, 52 tank steamers, with a carrying capacity of 3,775,000 poods, and 14 schooners, with a capacity of 1,075,000 poods.

Finance

At the time of the nationalization of the oilfields the total amount of cash in hand at Baku was 59,000,000 gold roubles, and the workers were already in arrears of pay. Consequently the industry had to borrow very heavily from the central authorities in order to fulfill the program of centralization and electrification of the fields.

Now, however, the industry receives no subsidy from the State; and the whole of this capital expenditure is being paid for out of revenue. Last year the industry was able to pay 24 millions in taxation to the central Government and 700,000 roubles toward the electrification of the town tramways.

The accounts and balance sheet for the financial year, which ends on October 1st, are not yet available, but it is not expected that the industry will be on a profit-earning basis for another two years, when the effect of the intensive drilling program will be realized and the expenditure on reconstruction cease.

Labor

As may be imagined, the intensive activity on the reconstruction has called for an increase in labor. Whereas in 1914 48,000 men were employed producing nearly 500 million poods, the same amount of labor has been required in 1923 to produce less than half that quantity. Owing to the general conditions in Russia and the increased demand for skilled labor on the Baku fields consequent on more scientific methods of production, a very considerable change has taken place in the composition of the labor. Whereas in 1923 the labor employed on the oilfields was composed as follows:—

Persians	28	per cent
Armenians	20.3	"
Russians	24.2	"
Georgians	8.8	"
Azerbaijanese	8.9	"
Jews	1.0	"

it is now—

Russians	42.0	"
Persians	20.4	"
Armenians	12.6	"
Azerbaijanese	13.9	"

Of these different nationalities, 79 per cent of the Russians are employed as industrial workers and 21 per cent in administrative positions. Most of the industrial workers are, therefore, Russians. Of the 50,000 workers 52 per cent are employed in production of oil—that is, baling or pumping 16 per cent, on drilling rigs, 9.9 per cent refineries, 2.9 in storage depots, 6.9 per cent in power stations, 1.9 per cent sweepers and cleaners, etc., 3.9 per cent transport, 2.2 per cent, schools and hospitals, and 2 per cent in the supply department.

The workers are paid a monthly, and in some cases a daily wage. The average monthly work per man is 21.4 days a month, with hours overtime. According to local regulations, which are confirmed by the collective agreement of the All-Russian Miners' Union, the workers and employes are divided into 17 categories or classes. The wages are paid according to the category of work into which the worker falls. Category No. 1 consists of unskilled laborers such as yardmen, street cleaners, and porters; the highest category, No. 17, consists of head bookkeepers, office superintendents, managers, etc. There are further classes consisting of five categories of specialists such as engineers, skilled chemists, and the secretariat staff, dealing with finance and confidential information. The pay of the lowest category of ordinary worker varies from 20 to 30 roubles a month, rising gradually through all the grades up to 200 roubles a month for 17 category; specialists receives very much higher salaries.

The working day for industrial workers consists of seven hours in the dayshift and six hours at night, with a six-hour day on Saturday and on the eve of every public holiday. Workers in offices work one hour longer than the industrial worker. Overtime is paid at the rate of one and a half times for the first two hours and double wages for every subsequent hour. Work on public holidays or Sunday is paid for at double rates.

Public holidays are as follows:—

> Ten public State holidays at various dates commemorating revolutionary events, These are public holidays throughout the land.
> Eight religious holidays of the Christian Church, which include two days at Christmas and two days at Easter. All who work on these days, regardless of faith or nationality, receive double pay.

Apart from the above, there are nine Mahomedan feast days and seven Jewish holidays, when it is not obligatory for either a Mahomedan or Jew to come to work. Any Mahomedan or Jew working on any of these days receive double pay.

Workers and employes are engaged through the Labor Exchange after notification and confirmation by the factory committee of workers. Unemployed members of the Trade Unions have preference in all cases.

A worker receives two weeks' notice of discharge and half a month's pay. In the event of his being discharged without notice he receives a full month's pay. Should he have worked continuously for three years he receives an extra fortnight's wages and a full month's pay in the event of his having completed five years' service.

Each worker or employe who has completed five and a half month's service becomes eligible for a forthnight's yearly holiday on full pay. Should he have to travel any distance to his home the time occupied on the journey, should it occupy not more than one week, is not counted as leave time. During the time of travel, however, he does not receive pay, but 50 per cent of his journey money up to 1,500 versts within the confines of the U. S. S. R. is paid for him; on the remaining 50 per cent he receives a rebate according to the category in which he is placed. He has the right to accumulate leave for two years.

A worker who lives outside the region of his work and has to travel by train or tram receives his journey money.

Over and above the minimum wage the worker has certain privileges such as rates for piecework, extra compensation for working on holidays, overtime, and money for clothing provided by the undertaking. In this manner, on an average the workers employed on the production side of the oil industry increase their yearly wage 54½ per cent. A driller is paid foot money, which enables him to increase his yearly wage 114½ per cent. Men employed on storage tanks can increase their wages by 48½ per cent. Employes in the offices, clerks, etc., are able to increase their salary by 15 per cent.

In the event of the death of a worker, his family receives two months' pay from the date of his death. If his death occurs whilst at work, or as a consequence of his work, the family receives four months' pay. All medical aid and hospital treatment is given to the worker free of charge. In the event of destruction of a workers' clothes or property through fire or while performing certain classes of work, he receives full compensation either in kind or cash.

LAWSON'S WILL LEAVES DAILY NEWS IN DIRECT CONTROL OF EMPLOYERS AND BANKERS WHO FIGHT WORKERS

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Full power to control one of the country's leading organs of public opinion goes openly and directly to the country's capitalist overlords by the will of Victor F. Lawson deceased, owner of the Chicago Daily News. Henceforth under the unconcealed supervision of big business the editors are not likely to take the side of labor or even liberal opinion on causes which the open shop interests choose to tar with the smear of Bolshevism.

The Daily News circulates in the middle west to about 400,000 copies a day. It is a "home" newspaper probably directly affecting the views of over a million. Absolute control of this paper is given to the Illinois Merchants Trust Co., a giant banking merger with resources totaling nearly $500,000,000.

Controlled by Big Business

This trust company is in essence just one of the financial boards at which representatives of big business assemble. Railroad, steel, packing house, lumber, commercial and investment banker interests will now unblushingly guide the policy of what Pres. J. J. Mitchell of the trust company terms "that great living agency of public intelligence." Here are some of the big capitalists on the trust company board, who by the will get control of this agency of public intelligence:

H. A. Blair, president Chicago Surface Lines.

E. B. Butler, chairman Butler Bros., (giant wholesalers).

Benjamin Carpenter, president G. B. Carpenter & Co. (giant hardware interests).

H. P. Crowell, chairman Quaker Oats company.

Marshall Field, head of Marshall Field financial interests.

E. A. Hamill, chairman Illinois Merchants Trust Co.

Hale Holden, president Burlington road.

Marvin Hughitt, director Chicago & Northwestern.

C. H. Markham, president Illinois Central.

Cyrus McCormick, chairman International Harvester Co.

J. J. Mitchell, president Illinois Merchants Trust Co.

J. & Russells, chairman Pullman Co.

E. L. Ryerson, chairman Ryerson & Son, Inc. (steel).

C. H. Schweppe of Lee, Higginson & Co., investment bankers.

J. G. Shedd, chairman Marshall Field & Co.

J. P. Soper, president Soper Lumber company.

[illegible] F. Swift, vice-president Swift & Company.

Lawson himself was one of the principal stockholders of the trust company, which is probably the largest bank in Chicago.

But this list falls far short of showing the full extent to which the editors of the News will be responsible to big business. A careful check of the members of the Illinois Merchants Trusts directorate shows that they hold at least 66 directorship on the boards of 47 major corporations. In addition they include one governor of the Chicago board of trade, one member of the Rockefeller foundation, one trustee of the Carnegie institute and 12 members of the reactionary Union League club.

The 47 major corporations represented include eight of the great New York financial institutions in which the money power of the country centers. These are the National City Bank (Standard Oil-Rockefeller); the Guaranty Trust (J. P. Morgan); the Bankers Trust, U. S. Trust, New York Trust, Chase National bank, all representing Morgan Rockefeller interests combined; the American Surety Co. and the Mutual Life Insurance Co.

Other important corporations represented in addition to those shown above are Illinois Steel (U. S. Steel subsidiary), Commonwealth Edison, Peoples Gas Light & Coke, Illinois Bell Telephone, Western Union Telegraph, Willys Overland, Libby McNeil & Libby, and 18 leading railroads including the Pennsylvania (leader of the open shop), the St. Paul, the Rock Island, the bitter anti-union Indiana Harbor Belt, the B. & O. and the Union Pacic.

Enemies of Labor.

These corporations are more or less constantly in conflict with organized labor and are equally constantly opposing legislation looking toward real public control of banking, railroads, public utilities and monopoly. The attitude of the directors toward the editorial policy of a newspaper which they control can hardly be in doubt.

The feedbag muzzles the press. How it muzzles the pulpit will be shown in a succeeding article on Lawson's will and the church.

Victor Fremont Lawson, publisher of the Chicago Daily News, left an estate valued at $20,300,000, his will, filed for probate here shows.

Proof of heirship was filed with the will by Iver Norman Lawson, of San Diego, the only witness.

No Seats for 75,000 School Children When School Opens Tuesday

With the opening of the fall public school term on Sept. 8, 75,000 Chicago school children will have to stand because of the seating shortage and the lack of school houses, is the estimate made public by officials of the Chicago school board.

The speeding up of the building program that we have been hearing so much about has brot forth only one new school building which will be ready for occupancy when school opens. That one is the Stockton Junior High School at Beason street and Montrose Ave. All the others are still in the stage of construction.

UNION PRESSMAN POKES FUN AT 'MAJAH'S' GOD

Faker Rubs Gobbo on Back Every Morning

The following letter was sent to the DAILY WORKER by a member of Chicago Printing Pressmen No. 3. The paragraph in quotation marks is from The American Pressman of March, 1924, of which Berry is editor.

"Upon my desk there sits the image of Gobbo, the smiling god of good fortune, the divinity of optimism, whose motto is 'be cheerful and you will be rich in everything' given me by one whom I loved and with whom I was honored to be associated as labor adviser in Paris."

I, "Majah" Berry, rub "Gobbo" on the back every morning and say to myself, I am the greatest labor faker and strikebreaker of the day and I know I am not and never have been a soldier but Gobbo, every morning I rub your back I say to myself "how much misery can I create today for others?" for me, "to be cheerful and be rich is everything."

In fraternal orders of which I am a member, I have a very remote chance of causing discord and dissension, so I must devote my "cool, calm and deliberate" energy to my union, the organization I have been misrepresenting for eighteen years.

Again my dear Gobbo, I have before me the exact standing of all local unions of pressmen and assistants of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union of North America so it behooves me not to make the weak unions stronger.

No my dear Gobbo, it is characteristic of me to make the strong unions weaker. This will bring about my desired result, "to be cheerful and rich in everything."

One more rub on your back Gobbo. Ah! I hear that the Chicago Printing Pressmen's Union No. 3 are entirely too prosperous, much too peaceful and happy. I shall create dissension among these members regardless of the cost, worry or amount of money is lost or families it injures, just to have my vindictiveness and ambition served.

To proceed on a plan of action to descend, decisevly for my protection, I will call on my board of directors, Marks, McHugh, Brophy and Orr, to execute my wishes, first select one or two of the largest printing shops in Chicago, I have my paid agent "Stuss" Singer, the underworld monger of New York and the knave, Fox, of Minneapolis and my friend, Hugh Crambert, of the Franklin Union No. 4 to assist in this venemous undertaking.

Now, for the picture. What do I see? The Cuneo Press and the Cuneo Printing corporation, the two largest pressrooms, lock out their pressmen. What else? The helpers, oilers, assistants and feeders have left their positions refusing to work with scabs, finks and strikebreakers.

This surely is unexpected and surprising. It is the first time an occurrence of this kind took place, feeders supporting the pressmen like real union men. That resembles solidarity.

I may find a few more pay roll patriots. Here they are: Booby Polston, Clark and Porter, two saps, and the champion double-crosser, "Bonehead" Barry. The wrecking crews must do the dirtiest contemptible work to receive their few paltry dollars.

ESTATES OF MASTERS MENACED IN CALIFORNIA FOREST FIRE, JOBLESS CALLED IN TO DO THE DIRTY WORK

By L. P. RINDAL,
(Worker Correspondent.)

LOS ANGELES, Cal., September 2.—California is burning up—on the surface, this time for a change. Estates are going up in smoke and beautiful red flames, which can be seen from my room—miles off to the northwest.

The so-called owners of all this destroyed wealth have again proven themselves to be nothing but useless parasites in a rotten, unjust society. They have neither sufficient courage nor physical strength to protect their robberies—stolen from the workers. So the forces of "law and order" are drafting 300 down and outs from the Midnight Mission to go into the hills and stamp out the Tujunga canyon fire. "Brother" Tom Liddicot, the sky pilot of this soup joint, did not head his ragged army. Oh, no! Work means disgrace to him. His specialty is the handing out of soup, "flaps" and salvation.

The "men will be back in a day or two," Tom says, and issued an appeal for clothing and shoes because of the "prospect that the fire-fighters would return with burned apparel." This seems to indicate that the men are expected to be paid but very little—if anything at all—for their work, ruined clothes and physical as well as mental injuries. Charles Hazen of Los Angeles, was forced into the fire zone like hundreds of others. Now he is laying in the Pasadena hospital, Pasadena, with the reasoning power burned out of his brain, and therefore, unable to locate his family.

Fire sightseers are facing drafting, it is stated, because the parking of their cars have become such a menace to the fire cars. False alarm! The idle rich will not be put to work. That element could not do any kind of useful labor. So, in order to "carry out" the bluff, two Mexicans, Jesus Castro, 19, and Manual Paldes, 23, were arrested and lodged in the Pasadena jail. They must have refused to go to work. These two boys did not block the road, however, they were standing on Mount Wilson enjoying a smoke and taking in the sight of the flames below and the sparkling stars above.

How high up in the air must a worker in the land of the free go, to be allowed to breathe the air in peace?

Army Lieutenant to Hang

MANILA, P. I., Sept. 2.—Lieut. John S. Thompson, army signal corps officer at Fort McKinley, was today sentenced by court martial to hang for the murder of Miss Audrey Burleigh, 16, a step-daughter of captain Hamilton P Calmes of the army medical corps, Manila, April 4.

Lieut. Thompson, whose home is in Brooklyn, fired five revolver shots at his victim because the latter did a hula dance at the army and navy club.

IMPERIALISM AND AFRICA

By KEWKU BANKOLE,
of the American Negro Labor Congress and member of the local committee of Pittsburgh.

COMING events are casting their shadows before. It seems proper that a this moment when the turning point of the darker peoples is expressing itself in the world, that we should remind ourselves of some of the unpleasant events which have been committed to the sons and daughters of Africa by foreign imperialism.

Africa, a continent second to the largest in the world, has been parcelled out by various European governments, they are today looking to this continent for their future existence. France, who now poses as friend to the black people, massacred the natives of Equatorial Africa and Dahomey. Italy followed France by massacring the natives of Tripoli. England butchered and robbed the women and children of their lands in East, South, North and West Africa. But none of these horrible incidents were so pronounced as what was committed by the christian Belgians under King Leopold to the hundreds and thousands of unprotected black souls in the Belgian Congo. In "free" United States lynching is in its full swing. These atrocities are still fresh in the minds of young Africans. What their retaliation will be is unknown.

THE present war in Morocco headed by the gallant Adl-El-Krim is only a beginning to the great one that is yet to come, should the foreign imperialists gain the upper hand, it will not mean a complete defeat but encouragement to the young people of the whole continent of Africa. If history does repeat itself, then, the time has come that imperialictic powers should be aware of the fact that their days are numbered.

We learned from the various periodicals that the natives of the various parts of Africa which were recently visited by the prince of Wales were enthusiastic over the presence of the future Caesar of the British empire, the fact of it is, that in South Africa the natives were forced to pay homage to his highness and in the West Coast of Africa, they apparently revived him, not because of loyalty but of curiosity. In all parts of Africa the natives are mercilessly exploited for the benefit of Europeans and he, the native, is gradually awakening to this fact, and he is expressing himself in form of organization to combat these foreign pests from his shores. Young Africa is determined to paint Africa black rather than have it painted white under the yoke of foreign imperialism.

THE American Negro Labor Congress will be a history in the making in the economic and social life of the black peoples in both the Western and Eastern hemispheres.

The oppressed peoples of the world are uniting. Let imperialism beware for the coming events are casting their victorious shadows on the side of the oppressed. Nothing will keep them assunder.

Still Insist That Sheffield Will Go Back to Mexico City

WASHINGTON, —(FP)—Secretary of State Kellogg again asserts that Ambassador Sheffield will return to his post in Mexico City within a few days. He denies that Sheffield will quit.

Sheffield, at a conference with Coolidge, Kellogg and Borah in the White House in the middle of June, made bitter complaint against radicalism in Mexico, and induced Kellogg to issue to the press a statement hinting that the Washington government would welcome a revolt in Mexico. President Calles replied with a sizzling rebuke for this affront to the Mexican nation, and Kellogg had nothing more to say.

Recognition of the Calles government by the British government, after a diplomatic break of ten years, is felt among Washington experts on Latin-American affairs to have a basis in some secret understanding as to Mexican treatment of British investors in Mexico. Suspicion is held that Pres. Calles has forced the hand of Kellogg by dealing directly with London on economic issues—possibly arranging some concessions in oil or metal mining for British companies, when American companies expected to gather these plums.

Butler May Not Run

There is a report current in republican party headquarters that Wm. Butler, grand strategist of the G. O. P. council of war will not stand for the senatorial seat vacated by the death of Henry Cabot Lodge and which was filled by Butler by presidential appointment.

Butler is one of the biggest mill barons of the country. Despite the protection of a high tariff wall, the owners of the textile industry claim they are unable to pay their employes anything like a living wage. Only recently the textile slaves were given a ten per cent slash in wages, and President Coolidge saw nothing in this except a justifiable effort to help the industry.

The textile workers who had to reef in their belts a little more after the latest wage cut do not hold the same high opinion of Butler that Coolidge does. Butler is an able servant of his class. He is very satisfactory to them and his place is in the senate. But even capitalist candidates need votes to get elected. And it quite possible that the workers of Massachusetts and the textile workers in particular, might be so lacking in enthusiasm for the textile baron that his opponent may slip in. Not that his opponent will do any more for labor in the senate than Butler did. But he is not, at least not yet, as closely hitched to the big business machine as Butler is.

If Butler contests the election against Walsh, the democratic candidate, and loses, it will be a great blow to the prestige of the republican party, and will have the effect of defeating the Coolidge myth. If he fails to enter the fight, it will be a confession of weakness and this will only be little less injurious to the prestige of the G. O. P.

Like the religious fatalist, who believed he was born only to go to hell, Butler is "damned if he does and damned if he doesn't." What the workers of Massachusetts should do in order to use the election for the purpose of exposing Butler, the mill exploiter, the capitalist system and its harlot political parties is to raise the standard of working class political action under the banner of a labor party.

Calles Made Good

Before his inauguration as president of Mexico, Plutarco Calles visited Europe and on his return via New York he participated in a parade organized by the socialist party in that city.

On last May Day, Mexican labor celebrated the workers' international holiday with red flags and revolutionary hymns. Calles reviewed the parade and tipped his hat to the red flags.

Shortly afterwards the employes of the American oil kings went on strike and Calles threatened to use the army against them. Bank clerks struck and Calles brought the mailed fist down on their heads. Wall Street was chuckling. Calles was doing nicely. But Wall Street is not easily satisfied. It knows that half a loaf is better than no bread. But it wants the entire loaf when it can have it.

Suddenly, like a bolt from the blue sky came the harsh statement of Secretary of State Kellogg, criticizing the Mexican government for its failure to protect American lives. Calles came back like a ton of mortar and the socialists shouted: "Atta boy, Plutarco; you are givin' 'em hell." Only the Communists advised all and sundry to wait for developments.

Since the exchanges between Calles and the U. S. secretary of state things have moved fast in Mexico. Calles has proceeded to write off the books whatever reforms were accomplished by the revolution. A few days ago it was announced that a law would be introduced to make so-called unofficial strikes illegal. There is reason to believe now that the United States government is satisfied with the progress made by Calles in preparing the way in Mexico for complete domination of that country by American capital.

Calles may still tip his hat to the red flag. But to him it means no more than the red flag that flies over an open manhole. Which is further proof that a person's loyalty to a principle cannot be judged by the button on his coal lapel or even by the words that flow from his lips. Actions speak louder than words.

The Riffians Score

The joint campaign conducted against the Riffian tribesmen of Morocco is hitting snags. French commanding generals are being replaced, which is a sure indication that things are not going well with the invaders.

The French and British censorship is clamped down tight and the correspondents are not allowed to send out any news. This prohibition, however, did not prevent the story of the greatest disaster suffered by the French and Spanish during the war.

A Spanish transport with 1,000 foreign legion troops aboard was sunk by Riffian fire and all the troopers perished. This does not bear out the glowing reports issued a few days ago by a Chicago Tribune reporter who pictured the advance of the Spanish-French forces on land, sea and air, in a way that left nothing but defeat staring Abd-el-Krim in the face.

The disaster to the Spanish transport may cause serious political disturbances in Spain. It is known that the vice-president of the directory, who is second in command to dictator Primo De Rivera, was opposed to the landing of the troops at the point where the sinking took place. This disagreement in addition to the dissatisfaction at home over the costly Moroccan campaign may bring about the downfall of the dictatorship.

The Riffians appear to be holding up their end pretty well. The surrender of the British and Japanese to the Chinese gives them additional encouragement. The imperialist powers are not particularly fortunate in their efforts to press the crown of thorns farther down on the brow of the subject peoples those days. And, in the words of the comic strip artist: "The worst is yet to come."

The European capitalist powers are still discussing the security pact. The workers are also discussing a security pact—against capitalism.

A Chicago judge is hard on morons. This is not surprising. Morons are usually hard on each other.

"The local hog market displays strength" says a headline. So does the odor from the stockyards.

The Basis for the Continuation of the Labor Party Policy

Speech by Comrade C. E. Ruthenberg on the Labor Party Campaign of the Workers (Communist) Party at the Fourth Convention Just Adjourned in Chicago.

COMRADES: This resolution we are now discussing provides the basis for a continuation of the labor party policy. It lays down the detailed policy which our party is to follow in carrying on this campaign. However, comrades, it is equally important in relation to this resolution that our party be mobilized for this campaign, that also the party secure a fundamental understanding of why, in the United States, at the present time, the labor policy must be one of the chief policies of our party, if not the chief policy of our party. Why is it, comrades, that we must carry on this campaign?

It is not sufficient that the membership of our party agree to the carrying on of the campaign; it is equally necessary that the party be educated to an understanding of what underlies the policy and the campaign we are proposing. It was one of the chief weaknesses of our party in the labor party campaign in the past that our party as a whole did not grasp, did not understand, the reason why we had such a slogan and waged such a campaign.

I WANT to present as my contribution to this part of the discussion briefly the underlying motives that make this campaign necessary. In the United States we know that the masses of workers have not yet become class conscious. We know that the masses of workers are still supporting the republican and democratic parties and we know that the masses of workers have not developed a mass party of the workers to fight their battles on the political field. In each of the European countries we find the development of capitalism and the working class has reached the point that the workers have cut loose from the capitalist parties . . . they were sufficiently conscious to form mass parties thru which they carried on their struggle. Social-democratic parties and the labor parties have developed in European countries. So we have an entirely distinct situation in the United States as compared with the European capitalist countries and we must find a means of bridging the gulf between the working masses who are still republicans and democrats and the revolutionary party of the workers, the Communist Party. It is the labor party which serves as the bridge fo that gulf. We may ask ourselves why it is, why is the labor party the form of organization which we must advocate, fight for, in order to draw the workers out of the old parties and draw them into independent political action as a class.

WHY the labor party as the means of arriving to that goal? What is there peculiar to the labor party which makes it the effective means of achieving that end? Comrades, what we find in the United States today is that the workers have developed organs of struggle for the immediate demands in the factories. They have organized trade unions; they have organized these as the means of carrying on the struggles of various sections of the working class against their employers for better conditions and better wages. These organs, however, represent today the means of fighting the struggles of various groups of the workers. The miners have their union, the needle workers their union, the railroad workers their union. They represent not organs of struggle in the interests of their class, but in the interest of certain sections of the working class. Now, our Communist duty, our fundamental Communist aim, must be to develop out of these instruments for struggle in the interest of sections of the working class, an instrument, a means for struggle in the interests of the workers as a class. In other words, we must find a unifying slogan; ; we must find a method of bringing together the workers in the mines, the workers in the textile industries, which will give them a common basis of action, a common organ thru which they struggle against capitalism. We must find the means of unifying the struggles of groups of workers into a struggle of the working class.

That is our central Communist purpose in this stage of development of the working class and it is just because the Labor Party is such a unifying organ of struggle that it is the most effective policy at this stage in the United States. The Labor Party will unify the workers of the machine shops, in the mines, in the railroads, in the textile factories in a common struggle for class interest common to all groups as against the trade unions which is the organ of struggle for the interest of sections of the working class. And a second reason that the labor party slogan is so important to our present situation. We must not only develop struggle as a class but we must develop a struggle politically against the capitalist government by the working class. This is the second part of the immediate tasks of the Communist Party in this country. First unifying the struggles of the workers: Secondly, directing the struggle against the capitalist state power and the labor party, drawing the workers into political struggles as a class also drawing them into a struggle against the capitalist state power. The labor party therefore serves effectively to achieve the two fundamental tasks of the Communist Party in the United States at the present time and for that reason it is and must be one of the most important weapons, the most important policy of the Communist Party in this country at the present time.

THIS, comrades, must be part of the immediate program of our party that we discuss this which I have stated not in a ten minute speech, but in discussion in the party press, in educational work amongst our party members in order that the party understands that we are carrying on this struggle and when we have that understanding we will be able to mobilize our party for the struggle and actually make achievements in carrying out this policy to build a labor party.

Now as to the resolution itself. We have laid down in this resolution in detail, the methods which we shall use for this campaign. We have first said that we must base it upon the immediate demands and experiences of the working class. And comrades I submit that that was always true in our labor party campaign. I know that I have never written an article or a manifesto for the party or a leaflet for the party that the labor party policy was not based upon an argument—the capitalists use injunctions against you, the capitalists use the state power against you in strikes, the capitalists use the state power in legislative work against the working class. These experiences of yours should teach you that you must organize a party of your own, that thru which you can struggle against this capitalist state power.

Just as we have done that in the past, just as we have shown thru the interference of Harding in the miners' strike thru the use of the Daugherty injunction in the railroad strike, that these are the reasons why the workers must mobilize their strength politically in a labor party, so locally, so on a state scale, so nationally, we must use the experiences and demands of the workers for their immediate struggle as an argument pointing to the labor party as the means of carrying on the struggle for these demands. The resolution states so.

Our policy is that we shall go into the local unions to fight there for the resolutions to put the organization on record for a labor party but we shall not stop with resolutions. We shall organize in these unions where we are able to carry our resolutions, committees to carry on agitation in the trade union movement for the labor party. We shall go into the organizations of the C. P. P. A. which still exist and have support in the trade union movement and we shall there carry on the agitation for a labor party and if we are able to put such organizations on record for a labor party we shall there form committees to carry on the agitation on a broad scale and if we succeed in organizing such committees in the trade unions and in the C. P. P. A. then we shall bring them together to carry on a common agitational campaign for a labor party.

YES, we shall also go into non-partisan committees which have mass support from the local unions and there carry on the campaign for a labor party. We shall go into the central labor bodies and there carry on the agitation thru resolutions and set up committees where we succeed in achieveing an endorsement for continued agitation in the whole trade union movement of a city for the labor party thus developing the basic support in the trade unions, in the political organization of labor as the Committee of Progressive Political Action.

That is basically the policy laid down in this resolution.

We shall use the municipal elections this year for the propagating of the labor party idea thru first proposing a united labor ticket, and comrades, to show you that there can be achievements I cite the fact that in Lima, Ohio, where the central labor council adopted a resolution after their experiences with the LaFollette movement to keep out of all politics for the future, we had an active member of our party, Scott Williams by name, who in spite of this resolution of the central labor council expressing the disgust of that body and its experiences in the last election, went into the local unions to carry on agitation, secured endorsement and got the endorsement of the central labor body for a labor party for which a committee was formed. The committee nominated candidates in the city election and succeeded in nominating two of them in the final city election showing that it is possible today to secure results for our labor party policy.

NATURALLY we must not get the notion, comrades, from the use of the election campaigns for agitation for the labor party that the labor party is merely a machinery for entering into election campaigns. That comrades, would be a wrong conception of the labor party. Not only for eletcion campaigns but for other struggles of the working class for parliamentary action, yes, but also for political action outside of the election campaigns, must the labor party be an instrument for work among the masses of this country.

Our resolution goes farther, lays down our relationship to the existing farmer-labor parties on the basis of the C. I. decision. It declares that we shall remain in the existing farmer-labor parties. We shall work to build up a labor bloc and form the labor party and make a united front with the organizations of the farmers in a bloc form of some character and further than that, the resolution also teaches another phase which is of the utmost importance and that is the role of our party in the labor party. We have made errors in that respect in the past. You remember how in April-May of last year we had certain opportunistic developments in Detroit. We had certain comrades in Minnesota who had a wrong policy, the wrong tactics in that respect and it is vital that our party at the same time that it reorientates itself to an understanding of the labor party policy also has a clear conception of the role of the Workers Party in such a labor party.

WE declare that wherever a labor party organization exists we shall enter into it. We shall affiliate with it. We shall participate in its work. We declare that where such a labor party enter into the election campaigns we shall nominate Communist candidates on the labor party ticket in the primaries and these Communist candidates shall run not as labor party-ites, but as Communists, standing on the Communist program of the Soviet government and the dictatorship of the proletariat as the ultimate aims, but carrying on the struggle while at the same time raising immedate issues of the class struggle. If our candidates are nominated on the labor party ticket they will run in the election campaign as Communists with a full Communist program and when they are elected to office they will enter into their duties as Comunists and carry on a Communist struggle in the legislative bodies to which they are elected. We declare, therefore, that we must at all times carry on our Communist propaganda. Yes, the labor party is the means of reaching the masses of workers with our propaganda, not hiding ourselves, not obscuring ourselves, not minimizing our program, but carrying on systematic agitation among the workers we draw into the labor party for the Communist principles, for the Communist program and recruiting from the labor party the most active elements for our Communist Workers Party.

It is only if we follow both parts of the labor party policy that we will make the fullest use of that policy. The first part is to draw the workers out of the old parties, to draw the workers into the class political action, to draw the workers into a struggle against the capitalist state. The second part is to use the labor party as the means of developing the power and strength of our Communist Party. As a means for propaganda, as a means for recruiting to our party in strengthening our party, building it into a mass Communist Party. Comrades, if we can mobilize our party for an effective efficient campaign on the basis laid down in the present resolution, if we can develop the energy, the enthusiasm which was put into that campaign in 1923, if we can again reach out among the masses, establish our prestige and influence among them, our party will be on the right road again and we will have substantial progress in extending its influence and in building its membership.

COMRADES, I think that from this brief statement of the situation the meaning of this resolution you will recognize how important this part of our policy is, how necessary it is that the party understand it clearly, apply it energetically and make a fight to really build a labor party in the United States and in the process of that, build the Workers Party into a mass Communist Party of the United States. I am not going to enter into any controversial questinos on this issue. I am going to ask merely that the comrades who are here, the delegates who are here will go back to their party units, go back to the party branches and help in this mobilization help in bringing our party into this fight, not scatteringly, not only here and there, but as an organized whole, because of the influence we will gain for our party in this struggle.

History Repeats Itself in Mussolini's Battles

By EDMUNDO PELUSO (Rome)

When history repeats itself, the repetition in invariably a caricature of the original event. Mussolini has looked on whilst the Soviet Union successfully fought the battles of the grain and of the ruble, and this has now induced him to declare that he is going to fight the battle of the grain and of the lira.

He has called together his general staff, in order to discuss the strategy of the campaign. His officers are nothing more nor less than the Italian big landowners and big peasants, and the object of the campaign is to discover how agrarian production can best be carried on at the expense of the Italian proletariat. One can see how much resemblance there is between the battles fought by Mussolini and those fought by the Soviet Union! In the Soviet Union the grain battle was fought by the working and peasant class to their own advantage. In Italy precisely the contrary is taking place.

What decision must a general staff of big agrarians, under the chairmanship of the leader of fascism, inevitably arrive at? Could they come to the conclusion that the right method of obtaining more corn is to increase the area under cultivation, to improve the methods of cultivation, to provide the peasantry with more efficient agricultural stock and implements, to sell them fertilizers at possible prices, and to ease the heavy load of taxation—the methods taken by the government of the Soviet Union? Such a decision cannot be expected from such a body, for the big agrarians are only capable of drawing up a strategic plan defending their own interests and privileges, and thrusting the whole of the burdens of the struggle upon the working peasants.

Italy, as is well known does not produce sufficient corn for its consumption. It is obliged to buy considerable quantities abroad, and to pay for this in gold. On the other hand, the area in Italy which could be employed for partially covering the deficit is at present cultivated with sugar beets and tobacco. Land eminently adapted for growing corn, and for the production of raw materials required by the textile industry, and entirely unsuited to growing beets and tobacco, is still being used for this latter purpose. But what does that matter? The government has to support the sugar industry, and pays high premiums to the cultivators of sugar beets and tobacco. The big agrarians abandon all patriotism when their money bags are threatened!

Thus Mussolini will not take away from the big agrarians a hand's breadth of their land in order to force them to change the kind of crops they cultivate. He will continue to pay them high premiums, but has at the same time isued the order that the yield per hectare of land under corn cultivation has to be increased. The peasant may moisten the earth with the sweat of his brow; he may buy machines if he can; he may purchase fertilizer if the prices dictated by the trusts permit him to do so; the fascist government has a heart for the big agrarian only. The protective tariff has rendered the price of agricultural machinery unattainable for the majority, and where the peasants' co-operatives have contrived to buy a machine, the fascists have destroyed the co-operative by fire and sword. The taxes, made so easy for the big agrarians, have been increased again and again for the poor peasantry, until many of them have fled to France, where conditions are not quite so bad. Manures and fertilizers have become the property of a monopoly in the hands of the Society Montecatini, and this company sells them at prices almost equal to that of bread.

Briefly stated, Mussolini has lost his battle before he has begun to fight it at all. But perhaps it was merely a demagogic bluff. The big agrarians and the big industrialists of Italy paved the way for fascism, called it into existence, and now they are not likely to allow Mussolini to carry on a fight against them, even if he had ever had any intention of doing so.

The other battle, that of the lira, is closely bound up with the grain battle. The depreciation of the lira, now very serious (during the last few weeks the dollar has risen to 27-29 lire as compared with a pre-war par of slightly over five lire!) tho partially to be ascribed to the enormous debts owing by Italy to America and England (about 100 milliard lire!), is also greatly due to the adverse foreign trade balance consequent on the purchase of grain and other nidispensible raw materials and necessities of life, and on the general mistrust felt towards fascism, and spreading even in bourgeois circles.

The depreciation of the lira in July was such as the exchanges of Italy have never before experienced. The small investors and petty bourgeoisie, living on a few million lire invested in state bonds, have been seized with complete panic. The medium manufacturers are equally alarmed, Mussolini, and even more the notorious party secretary Farinacci, were at first of the opinion that the best means of alaying the panic was to attack it with a cudgel. But tho Farinacci regards historical events with no more comprehension than felt by a cow looking at a picture of Raphael's, in this case he has been obliged to see that he was on the wrong track.

A better means had to be sought. High finance has pointed this out. First of all it has demanded the head of the minister of finance, Stefani, as scapegoat, and has insisted on his being substituted by the confidential agent of high finance, Count Volpi.

The dismissed minister of finance and the exchequer, Stefani, is a university professor. He is in favor of theories harmless to bourgeois interests so long as they remain theories; but as soon as the interests of capitalism are endangered, the bourgeois industrial magnates lose their respect for even their university professors.

What crime did Stefani, a leading fascist, then commit? After having balanced the budget at the expense of the working class, reducing or abolishing the taxes paid by the owning classes and, discharging tens of thousands of officials, he was seized with the idea of increasing the value of the lira by restricting the bank notes in circulation. The ceremonies which he performed in the Banca d'Italia, where he caused millions in bank notes to be burned before a large number of spectators, verged on the ridiculous. The Italian banks, whose steel chambers contained tons of industrial papers bought at high prices, and accumulations of state bonds, found themselves obliged to throw quantities of these papers on the market in order to have necessary banknotes for their operations. This meant considerable losses to the banks.

The fall of the lira in July filled the cup to overflowing. In view of the rebellion on the part of high finance, Mussolini had to sacrifice his minister and to accept as confidential agent Count Volpi, one of the mightiest profiteers of Italian capitalism, a leading manager of the Banca Commerciale, and possessing interests of his own in all the great capitalist undertaking of Italy. The aid of the Banca Commerciale is a much mightier aid to Mussolini in his battle than the strokes of Farinacci's cudgel. The co-operation of the Banca Commerciale with the fascist regime signifies a strengthening of this regime, and the transition of Italian big finance to fascism. But the economic battles to be fought by fascism are much more difficult to win than its fraction struggles. There is no doubt whatever that the field of economic battle is more likely to witness Mussolini's defeat than the field of political battle.

Terrible Statistics as to German Class Justice

AT the first national congress of the International Red Aid in Germany, printed statistics were submitted giving the most detailed particulars for the period from October 1924 to April 1925 as to the number of trials, accusations, the sentences to fortress imprisonment, ordinary imprisonment and penal servitude, as well fines imposed. The total statistics regarding the class justice against the working class (January 1st 1924 to April 31st 1925) show that the German class judges accomplished a terrible work in these 16 months. The figures show a total of:

981 trials,

7,000 accused persons,

5,786 condemned persons,

959 years 8 months fortress imprisonment,

969 years 1 month imprisonment with hard labor,

2,255 years 4 months imprisonment,
233,261 marks fines.

From this it is to be seen that 5,786 workers have been sentenced to 4,184 years and one month imprisonment. These figures do not include the years spent under arrest while awaiting trial, the tortures and the enforced suicides, as well those persons who are still languishing behind walls from the time previous to the 1st of January 1924. Further, these figures do not include the terrible judgement of the "Tscheka trial": against 16 accused persons there have been pronounced three death sentences, 71 years and four months hard labor, 9 years 11 months imprisonment and 5,500 mark fines.

The number of those persons who are pinning behind republican prison walls on the charge of political "crimes," according to the statements of Dr. Seckel, a barrister, exceeds 8,000.

These statistics are supplemented by the enumeration of the cases in which the Juridical department of the Communist fractions of the Reichstag and the Prussian diet have rendered legal assistance. These latter amount to 19,349 cases from January 1924 to April 1925.

These frightful statistics must stimulate the proletarians of the world to join in the international campaign for the release of the political prisoners in all countries, and to come to the aid of the victims of the international class war by supporting with all means the International Red Aid.

DA Y WORKER IS FACING CRISIS

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

IN an address before the department of subversive movement of the National Civic Federation on July 18, last, Ralph M. Easly, executive head of the federation praised the socialists and the leaders of the American Federation of Labor, but laid the rod of chastisement vigorously to the unpatriotic hides of the Communists and the Industrial Workers of the World. Some superficial people, said Easley, saw no differenc except a technical one between the Communists and the socialists. Easley is right when he says the difference is fundamental.

THIS is how he clinches his point: "Any student of current socialist and Communist literature can well understand that, should it ever be necessary for our government to turn the machine guns on the Communists, the firing would be of the most deadly character if the socialists were permitted to man the guns." There is no doubt about this. The socialists of Europe have manned the guns of the capitalists against the Communists and thousands of good working class leaders were murdered by them. What they did in Europe they would do in America.

ANY organization that wins the approval of a capitalist stoolpigeon like Ralph M. Easley is naturally an enemy of the working class. The National Civic Federation was organized avowedly to block the progress of radicalism in the American labor movement. Sam Gompers was one of its leading lights. Gompers wined and dined with the enemies of labor and joined with them in preventing the trade union movement for making an effective fight against the capitalists. Green is now taking Gompers' place tho not officially on the National Civic Federation, perhaps owing to an old law passed by the miners' union, that no members of the union can be a member of the National Civic Federation.

EASLEY'S tirade against the Communists ends with: "All honor to American labor," and the concluding paragraph reads: "What would England not give if her labor movement were as solidly and loyally anti-Bolshevik as is ours! Think of a situation where proud Britain is afraid to resent in the slightest degree the diabolical plotting of the Communists against her in India and China for fear of a general strike which would not only paralyze her industries but would place in jeopardy the life of the empire as well."

ONE of our subscribers makes the charge that nine times out of ten we center our attack on the ku klux klan, tho in his opinion the Knights of Columbus is worse than the K. K. K. We agree that its intentions, as far as the progress of the working class movement is concerned, are no better than those of the K. K. K. We also state that the catholic church of which the K. of C. is the main political arm in America, comes in for caustic criticism in the DAILY WORKER just as often as the K. K. K.

THE K. of C. is less hysterical than its competitor and because it contains a smaller percentage of morons in its ranks than the bed sheet order, its derilictions make less of a splash in the public press. Of the two organizations, however, the K. of C. is more dangerous, because it acts more intelligently than its rival. Both are equally willing to serve the capitalist class. However, there are many members in both organizations whose sympathies are with the workers' struggle, but they have not brains enough to realize for what purpose they are being used.

IT is true, as our correspondent charges that there is a catholic church machine inside the unions and that in New York City many of the most prominent labor leaders are catholics. But they are not reactionary simply because they are catholics.

SWIFT AND GENEROUS SUPPORT OF ALL WORKERS IS NEEDED

TO ALL MILITANT WORKERS:

THE DAILY WORKER is facing a crisis. Beset from all sides with seemingly insurmountable difficulties THE DAILY WORKER has been able to carry on the most militant activity in the interests of the working class.

On the one hand there have been the forces which seek to destroy us. All the most powerful interests in America, from the capitalist government itself to its agents, the reactionary labor officials, have been doing their utmost to choke off the voice of THE DAILY WORKER which strikes at the heart of their privilege and power.

On the other hand there have been the class conscious workers, comparatively few in number and individually without power or influence, who have been giving their support to THE DAILY WORKER, who thru their sacrifice and efforts have kept their paper alive.

For twenty months the struggle has been going on and now the crisis has been reached with the life of THE DAILY WORKER hanging in the balance.

Now every worker who wants to fight against capitalism for the emancipation of labor must unite in a mighty effort to save for the struggle the most powerful and militant organ of the working class, THE DAILY WORKER.

Money Is Needed—Badly and at Once!

For almost two years THE DAILY WORKER has been the workers' organ of struggle. Never a battle of the working class against its exploiters, never a struggle large or small but what THE DAILY WORKER has been its champion. The militant workers have made this struggle possible. It is they who have kept THE DAILY WORKER going and at the same time enabled it to establish its own home and printing plant.

Now it is the fighting workers again who must carry on the struggle. At this time when THE DAILY WORKER is in danger those to whom THE DAILY WORKER is dear and precious must rally to its support. Those for whom THE DAILY WORKER speaks, those for whom THE DAILY WORKER struggles, those whom THE DAILY WORKER protects; these must unite to save THE DAILY WORKER.

THERE IS NO TIME TO LOSE.

The need is both great and urgent.

By delay or indifference we may lose.

With prompt response, with willing energy and sacrifice we can only win.

To SAVE THE DAILY WORKER, to keep it and with it to march on to new struggle and new victories we appeal to all militant workers to join in swift and generous support.

SIGMAN PLAN CONDEMNED BY HIS FOLLOWER

Kaufman of Local 9 Wants Square Deal

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 3.—Opposition to President Sigman's proposal for bringing peace in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union is developing within the ranks of his own followers, according to the joint committee of action, of Locals 2, 9 and 22.

A letter has been published in the Jewish "Day" from a member of Local 9 who was elected to the new executive board chosen to take the place of the expelled officers, and this communication voices a desire for a real peace plan and not such a one as has been presented by Sigman.

Commenting upon suggestions for peace which were made by The Day, Louis Kaufman, the writer, says:

Wants Fair Election

"I am in full accord with your proposal for a general election, where all members who have not been convicted for any offense in their shops, shall be allowed on the ballot—including those who were suspended during the present conflict. I am little concerned as to whom will be elected, if only the union be considered above any parties.

"The third point of your proposal the question of proportional representation to the joint board) is by no means an issue raised by the 'lefts.' This is one of the issues for which we have been fighting in our union for the past ten or twelve years, and which has been continuously postponed from one convention to another so that it might be studied. SYRIAN AND RIFF REVOLTS ALARM FRENCH PREMIER

Painleve Removes Gen. Sarrail and Lyautey

PARIS, France, Sept. 3.—That the Syrian and Moroccan revolts have caused an increasingly acute situation for the French government is seen in the removal of the French high commissioners of both countries by Painleve. Marshal Lyautey has been replaced as military dictator of French Morocco by Marshall Petain, and General Sarrail gives way to Gen. Gamelin in Syria.

While the Riffians were preventing a landing of Spaniards at Alhucemas Bay, the Druce rebels in Syria are successfully besieging the French garrisons. French airplanes have been unsuccessful in attempting to drive off the native besiegers, who are concentrated at Mount Hauran Suedia, near the frontier of Palestine.

The French imperialists fear that the Turkish troops sieze the section of the Bagdag railway running thru Aleppo, this being the only railway over which Mustapha Kemal Pasha, Turkish dictator, can send troops to the Mosul front.

Oil Field Claims Conflict

This is probably if the French support Britain's claim to Mosul which is being considered by the league of nations assembly at Geneva. Turkish and British claims to the oil fields conflict, and the Turks are watching closely the attitude of the Painleve government.

The Turkish government has more influence among the Arabs and Turks in Syria than have the French.

Workers Party Calls on Labor to Stand By the Anthracite Coal Miners

Stand by the Anthracite Miners! Join the Fight Against the Employers!

Manifesto of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party of America.

ONE hundred and fifty thousand hard coal miners have laid down their tools. They are striking against the attempt of the bosses to compel them to accept lower wages and worse working conditions.

The cost of living has gone up since the hard coal miners have made their last agreement in 1923. They are asking for a 10 per cent increase for contract men, and a dollar a day increase for day men to meet this increased cost of living. They demand a five-day week and full recognition of the union.

The bosses are trying to reduce wages and force the miners to accept worse working conditions. They are demanding that the hard coal miners accept a lower standard of life. They want to pay less to the workers and thus secure bigger profits for themselves.

Lower Wages—Worse Working Conditions.

THE attack of the bosses which has forced the hard coal miners to go on strike is part of the general campaign of the capitalist bosses to reduce wages and compel the workers to accept worse working conditions. They have succeeded in making wage cuts, lengthening hours, and compelling the workers to accept worse conditions in many industries, during the recent hard times, and now they are trying to force the hard coal miners to submit to the same thing.

The capitalist bosses grab every opportunity to reduce the workers' standard of living and to secure greater profits for themselves, at the workers' expense. The existence of hard times and unemployment gave them such an opportunity, and millions of workers have had to suffer as a consequence. Now it is to be the turn of the hard coal miners to suffer so the capitalists may secure greater profits.

Support the Hard Coal Miners.

THE hard coal miners have met the capitalist attack on their standard of living by a demand for higher wages and have closed down the mines to enforce their demand.

The soft coal miners broke the attack of the capitalists' bosses upon the workers thru their strike in 1922. The anthracite miners are fighting the battles of the working class generally in their struggle to stop the capitalist bosses from extending wage cuts and the creation of worse working conditions.

The resistance of the hard coal miners should be the signal for the whole working class to rally to their support. Every trade union, every workers' organization, should adopt resolutions pledging moral and financial support to the miners in their struggle. The workers should gather in mass meetings everywhere and help the miners in their fight

The capitalist bosses have slashed wages and enforced worse work-

SEE MONTHS OF STRUGGLE IN ANTHRACITE

Capitalist Press Uses Scab Propaganda

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Sept. 3.—The tie-up in the anthracite is 100 per cent effective. Both sides agree on that fact. The operators are not so far making any effort to import scabs, though they may try that and try to break the local miners' ranks when they think starvation has done its work and the miners' money is gone. Their first move on this policy is the cutting off of credit to strikers by the company "pluck me" stores.

Coal operators began today a survey of the actual stocks on hand. In advance of the completion of the inquiry, it was said that since April 1 about 30,000,000 tons of anthracite have been mined and that nearly all of this tonnage is in storage yards, wholesalers' or retilers' bins or in the cellars of consumers.

Miners Reckon Four-Months' Strike

Operator's sources were quoted as saying that this supply would last until the middle of January and that no great demand for bituminous and substitutes could be looked for until that time. They said the public need not worry.

Leaders of the miners declared that even if 30,000,000 tons of hard coal were mined since April 1, that left, according to their calculations, a deficit of 60,000,000 tons for the coal year, which is reckoned from April to April. Every week that the strike lasts anthracite consumers will lose the possibility of buying 1,750,000 tons. With a possible 30,000,000 tons out of the market as a result of a four months' strike, the mine workers' officials were of the opinion that suffering would result in the middle Atlantic states and New England.

Bunk to Break Strike

One of the biggest publicity efforts of the operators and their capitalist government propagandists, is being made to scare the anthracite miners into thiking that various substitutes for anthracite coal will displace it and leave them without a job if the strike is continued any length of time.

This, however, is pure buncombe as all available substitutes talked of could not supply the gap in the fuel supply left by the withdrawal of anthracite, and if they were available in quantity their use is doubtful as few anthracite users want to go to the enormous expense of changing all

GOVERNMENT CARES NOTHING FOR LIVES OF NAVY SHIP'S CREW

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 3.—The disaster to the naval dirigible Shenandoah which was wrecked in Ohio with the loss of 13 lives, causes little concern to the high officers of the navy, who never have to risk their lives in war maneuvers.

Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, head of the navy bureau of aeronautics, said that these maneuvers will not be affected by the disaster. "The accident to the Shenandoah will in no way effect the policy of the navy with regard to aviation," he said, "Those who were killed lost their lives in the interests of science."

ANTHRACITE STRIKE FINDS UNION FAKERS AND CAPITALIST STATE LINE UP WITH THE MINE OWNERS

By ALEX REID

(Secretary of the Progressive Miners' Committee.)

The mine workers of the anthracite region, are on a strike against one of the most powerful combinations of capital in the world. They are in a struggle for a few meager demands such as a 10 per cent increase in the contract wage and a $1.00 per day increase for day men; establishment of the check-off and a betterment of working conditions.

These demands, modest tho they be, are meeting with the bitterest opposition from the representatives of the anthracite monopoly.

The Strikebreakers of Government.

This trust, swollen with huge profits wrung from blood and bone, fights against giving the miners a few pennies which it robs them of millions. It is busily engaged in spreading lies about the miners' standard of living, its publicity agents and politicians are all ready to help defeat their interest and to join in with the operators in helping to crush the union, if necessary with troops, militarism and forceful oppression.

The governor of the state and the president of the United States are all ready to prevent a finish fight between us and our bosses, the owners of the anthracite mines and railroads—the anthracite trust.

Our leaders meet at Atlantic City with the representative of the trust, in a million dollar hotel swept by ocean breezes far from the face of the coal. They showed no inclination to lead us in a militant struggle against the powerful anthracite operators. Such a struggle would imply entirely different ideas and theories than those expressed by John L. Lewis at the recent Tri-District convention.

Lewis, in his speech, proves our contention that his views, of what is wrong with the industry, the industry that should be the workers'—are the same as those held by its present owners, Rockefeller and Morgan.

No Real Fight Probable.

How can Lewis really fight against the trust when he is a leading supporter of Coolidge and the republican party owned by the same Rockefeller and Morgan, who also own the democratic party?

Lewis does not want to fight the trust; he would rather fight the progressive miners. He wants to collaborate with the trust, accepting a bone from its heavily laden table that will keep us tied to its backbreaking labor, misery and suffering and in too many cases actual death.

At this moment when we are on strike in the anthracite, there are hundreds of thousands of our brother bituminous mine workers unemployed. Nor is this serious crisis confined to America. Across the Atlantic in England 250,000 miners are also on strike to retain a few of the hard-won concessions gained by them during the war period.

Worked Themselves Out of Work.

In Germany, too, the struggle is on. There the coal miners of the Ruhr who are being exploited under the infamous Dawes' plan, financed by American gold, have piled up 10,000,000 tons at the Ruhr pitheads. Both British and American capitalists are now looking at this reserve stock with greedy eyes, to use it in helping to crush the struggle of both the American and English workers.

The anthracite railroads own and control the seven biggest anthracite operating companies. Seventy per cent of the tonnage carried by these railroads is anthracite. As well as owning the coal lands and the mines, these anthracite railroads extract a tremendous profit from carrying at high rates the coal from the anthracite region.

Miners and R. R. Men Must Unite.

The closest bonds of solidarity must be established between the workers in the anthracite mines and the workers on the anthracite railroads—they work for the same bosses, Morgan and Rockefeller. Anthracite railroad workers refuse to haul scab anthracite.

The strike against the anthracite trust is of the most vital importance to all workers. This greedy monopoly must be defeated, all workers must lend their full support to the anthracite miners in this present struggle. The Progressive miners demand nationalization of the mines with workers' control.

PATENT RIGHTS OF OLD REGIME MUST BE RESUBMITTED TO U.S.S.R.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Sept. 3.—(Tass)—The Soviet government has notified foreign inventors and patentees that under the new patent law adopted last fall patents issued and registered in Russia under the old regime, or applied for prior to November 7, 1918, should be re-submitted to the inventions committee, Leningrad, for renewal. Foreign inventors must make their applications thru some representative residing in the Soviet Union. Applications for renewals may be made up to September 25.

T. U. E. L. and Freiheit Picnic to Attract Big Crowd on Labor Day

There is only one Labor Day picnic this year, for any one who wants to throw dull care to the bow wows and rollick with the youngsters. That will be the joint affair arranged by the Trade Union Educational League and the Freiheit for Monday at Stickney Park, Lyons, Illinois, a cool and shady retreat on the southwestern edge of Chicago.

The youngsters will be there in force, according to the junior director, Louise Morrison, and one of the finest stunts promised among a lot of other things is the Junior contests, a boys' and girls' baseball team contending, Junior foot races, Junior speeches and a regular Junior activization program. The older comrades will have to step around on Labor Day, if they expect to keep up with the parade.

Other games and contests are arranged for the grown ups, and there will be a pile of good eats and hot and cold drinks for the unwary palate. Take the 22nd street surface car to end of line, transfer to Berwyn-Lyons car, get off at Harlem and Ogden avenues and walk six blocks south.

STRIKERS LAUGH AT LETTERS OF GARMENT BOSSES

The strikers employed by the International Tailoring company have brot to their Amalgamated Clothing Workers' union headquarters at S. Halsted St., letters sent them by the garment manufacturers, beseeching them to return to work. The strikers, of course, are paying no attention to thees letters.

The International sent the letters out as part of their long, and unsuccessful campaign to break the solidarity of the strikers, who have now been out eleven weeks. The picket line is as large as ever. The busy season is on and a victory is looked for soon.

HORRIBLE DEATH FOR 13 OF NAVY AIRSHIP'S CREW

Survivors Are Muzzled, Los Angeles to Fly

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ZANESVILLE, Ohio, September 3—The survivors of the wreck of the naval dirigible Shenandoah, which broke in two near here, killing 13 and injuring twenty of the members of the crew, were ordered not to talk by Lieutenant Henley, who himself refused to make a statement.

Word was received here from Secretary of the Navy Wilbur at Washington that despite the terrible disaster, the plans of the navy department for the operation of the dirigible Los Angeles have not been changed.

The Shenandoah broke in two near Ava, Ohio, the front end falling to the ground, and the rear end floating until reaching a point near Sharon, about ten miles South of Ava, and then landing. All of the killed and injured were in the front end of the airship.

Front End Crashes.

The cabin of the front end of the Shenandoah fell to the ground, all the men in it meeting a horrible death, the engines falling on them. The wreckage of that part of the ship was scattered all over the field in which it landed. The bodies were almost beyond recognition as those of human beings. Blood and bones virtually covered the field.

About four miles south of this field the next piece of the ship came to earth. This piece of wreckage perched on top of a house. Farmers shot the gas bag full of holes, and it fell to the ground. Six of the passengers were taken from the wreckage, some of them in a serious condition.

Survivors Go East.

One of the men on the rear end, which fell near Sharon, dropped off the end of a long rope, near Belle Valley, and was taken to Caldwell with fractured ribs. Two members of the crew were reported missing.

Most of the survivors will reach Philadelphia tomorrow morning by train, it is announced. Forty-three men were abroad the ship, which was enroute to Scott Field, Illinois, as part of the navy's air maneuvers.

Morgan and Morones in Agreement There Is No Class Rule in Mexico

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, Luis N. Morones, Minister of Industry, Commerce and Labor in the Calles government of Mexico, is in town, visiting with local American Federation of Labor officials, and denying that there are classes in Mexico; denying that the Calles government is a class government.

Morones, who is a former president of the Mexican Federation of Labor, will no doubt draw applause from John Fitzpatrick, Edward N. Nockles, Oscar Nelson and other local labor officials, when he says that the present Mexican government does not favor one class over another. But this will not put truth into the declaration.

• • • •

When Morones says there is no class government in Mexico, that means that the capitalist class still rules, that the nation is still under the thumb of foreign imperialists and native industrialists and landlords. It means that the wages system still lives in Mexico, that the workers have not yet won over industry, that the land has not been restored to the tillers of the soil.

• • • •

Morones does not parade about as a "socialist" as strenuously as does Calles. President Calles is quite as proud of his job as "socialist" president of Mexico, in the interests of Wall Street, as Fritz Ebert was in his role of "socialist" president of Germany under the Morgan-Dawes plan. But Ebert helped pave the way for the seating of the monarchist Hindenburg, as president of the republic, and the Calles-Morones combination in Mexico helps fasten the American dollar still tighter about the throats of the whole Mexican people.

Morones confidently asserts that there is no class in Mexico today that is greater than the government. This is quite true.

The government that is in power is the class government of the capitalists. If the working class, the city and land workers, were greater than this capitalist government, that desperately struggles to maintain the capitalist social system, then the rule of capitalism would be destroyed.

• • • •

For a little while Fitzpatrick and Nockles, in Chicago, saw the gleam of the class struggle when they joined in the organization of the Farmer-Labor Party, seeking to break the workers of Chicago away from the two old parties of Wall Street. But that did not last long. They have now returned to the camp of labor's enemy.

So Morones claims that the present Mexican government is not a Labor Party government, because he wants to escape from the exacting demands of the class struggle on the side of labor.

• • • •

But Morones knows, just as well as Fitzpatrick and Nockles, that there are growing numbers of workers who believe in the class struggle, and fight their own battles. Morones showed this when he expelled Communists from the Mexican Federation of Labor, with the encouragement of the late Sam Gompers. So Fitzpatrick and Nockles war on the Communists in the Chicago Federation of Labor.

Insinuating that it has no chance at all, Morones claims that, "Bolshevism has the same chance in Mexico as it has in the United States."

But the facts, the growing strength of the Communist movement in both countries, is effective reply to this declaration. Increasing exploitation by foreign capitalism will drive the workers and formers of Mexico to renewed struggles, that will unseat both Morgan and Morones. Bolshevism has the same chance in Mexico as in the United States, to raise the red flag of Communism in Mexico City, as well as in Washington, D. C.

'ECONOMY' CAL ROBS DISABLED VETS OF DOLES

Told They Are Well, Thrust on Streets

That the Coolidge government is enacting its "economy" program at the expense of the disabled ex-soldiers is shown by letters which have come into the possession of the DAILY WORKER. The United States Veterans' Bureau, in order to keep within its restricted budget, is cutting thousands of soldiers off of the disabled list. The budget for war preparations was not in any way diminished.

A letter, sent to Giannantonio Pupi, 925 S. Hermitage Ave., by Charles B. Campbell, chief of the claims division, Chicago regional office, states, "This division has received notice that your vocational training pay will terminate on September 15, 1925."

"Please be advised that your disability at present is rated as being of a non-compensable degree, and therefore, you will not be entitled to compensation after your maintenance pay is discontinued."

Pupi answered as follows: "I have received your letter that my vocational training pay will terminate on September 15. Please be advised that my disability is incurable. Yet I know I bear a heavy cross on my shoulders. My hands and feet are crippled by rheumatism and my heart is out of order. It will not take very long for me to depart from this world. Yet you say you have rated me as non-compensable. Thank you. I got what I deserved.

"Yes, I gave my health to increase the United States bankers' wealth. It is not such bad luck for Mr. J. P. Morgan. He is going to collect billions of dollars from European countries. Now I am learning to be a good soldier and fight my own battles—G. Pupi."

their furnace arrangements to accomodate the use of a new fuel when they believe that anthracite will be available at the end of the strike.

Lewis Is Not a Bolshevik

Another amusing trick of the operators and the capitalist newspapers is to raise the bogey—to the capitalists—that the miners' union is seeking nationalization of the mines. The bosses are thus trying to represent John L. Lewis as a fire-eating Bolshevik, intent on "confiscation of the mines." Yet this is pure fiction, as Lewis in this matter as in others, has shown that he is an arch reactionary and has knifed the nationalization plan on every occasion he could.

The nationalization plan was, indeed, officially advanced by the U. M. W. of A. in 1922, and a committee chosen to draw up a plan and submit it to the convention of the international.

But at the last convention the whole Lewis reactionary machine was lined up against the plan to such a degree that it was never even presented. Ridiculous excuses were given, such as the illness of C. J. Golden, but Lewis was rather raw and open in his opposition. "Nationalization," he said, "it just a Greenwich Village dream."

Only Progressives Advocate Nationalization

Since that time the progressive miners' committee is the only group or influence in the miners' union that has advocated nationalization of the mines. The progressives are the only element in the present fight who are advocating nationalization in their program, and John L. Lewis is fighting these progressives with expulsions and every other weapon.

Sunday-like silence prevails in the cities and suburbs of the anthracite region. The familiar figure of the grimy coal digger coming from his shift is missing. Men gather on corners to discuss the strike or go vacationing in the hills, and the only "disorder" reported was the stampede of mine mules at Shamokin, where the pit mules escaped in a wild rush to the mountains.

The Ashley shops of the central railroad are closed, and at Hazelton some half time and some complete suspensions were ordered on the Lehigh Valley road. At least 2,200 railroaders are affected in these two places.

CONDOLENCE

We regret to announce the death of Mrs. Mary Ellen Murphy, mother of Angela Murphy, at 932 Swann St., Parkersburg, West Va. Angela Murphy is one of our best Worker Correspondents and writes frequently for the DAILY WORKER on the labor situation in West Virginia, that balliwick of capitalist reaction. The DAILY WORKER extends sympathy to Miss Murphy and her relatives in their bereavement.

Stand by the Anthracite Coal Strikers! Join the Big Fight Against the Employers!

ing conditions all along the line. It is time for the workers to call a halt. United support of the miners' strike must be the beginning of general resistance of the workers against the attack upon their standard of living.

The Situation in the Coal Industry.

THE workers in the coal mines have had to fight desperately ever since the end of the war to protect themselves against the attempts of the capitalist bosses to force unbearable conditions upon them. In 1919, the soft coal miners were compelled to strike against the attacks of the bosses. In 1922, they again laid down their tools. In 1923, the anthracite miners were out, and now again in 1925, the anthracite miners are forced to resort to a strike to protect themselves.

The heroic resistance of the miners' union against the open shop, against wage cuts, has been a stumbling block in the path of the capitalist bosses who want to reduce the workers of this country to the status of coolies. They are out to destroy the miners' union. In the anthracite they are attempting to carry thru their program by direct attack. In the bituminous they are trying to starve out the union by shifting operations to the non-union field. Two years ago 70 per cent of the bituminous coal was produced in union mines. Today only 30 per cent is produced in union mines.

The coal miners have not only had to meet these attacks of their bosses; they have also had to fight against the treachery of the reactionary Lewis machine, which stands in the way of the miners making a militant fight in their own interests.

The anthracite strike is the fight of all coal miners. There must be a united stand in the coal industry by all coal miners. The bituminous miners must stand behind their fellow workers in the anthracite. A GENERAL STRIKE OF ALL MINERS! NO SEPARATE AGREEMENT FOR ANTRACITE AND BITUMINOUS FIELDS! MUST BE THE SLOGAN OF THE MINERS.

Nationalize the Mines—Workers Control.

THE solution of the situation in the coal industry can only be realized thru a united struggle of all coal miners supported by the workers generally. NATIONALIZATION OF THE MINES! WORKERS' CONTROL THRU PARTICIPATION IN THE MANAGEMENT! A SIX HOUR DAY AND THIRTY-HOUR WEEK is the only program which will safeguard the miners against the suffering and misery which private operation for the profit of the capitalist coal bosses brings upon the workers.

NATIONALIZATION AND WORKERS' CONTROL can only be achieved thru a political struggle of the miners. It will help the miners only if at the same time they, together with other workers, organize a LABOR PARTY to carry on a struggle for a Workers' and Farmers' government.

Government Interference.

IN every coal strike the government has stepped in to help the bosses beat the workers.

President Wilson secured an injunction against the miners' union in 1919, to break the strike. Harding called upon the state governors to fill the mines with soldiers in 1923, so that the scabs could operate them. In the anthracite strike of 1923, the state and national government went to the aid of the coal operators. There is already talk of Coolidge using soldiers against the anthracite miners in the present strike.

The workers must exert their mass strength to prevent the government stepping into the strike to aid the coal bosses. NO GOVERNMENTAL INTERFERENCE TO AID THE COAL BOSSES must be the slogan of every mass meeting and of every trade union supporting the anthracite strike. GOVERNMENTAL INTERVENTION SHOULD BE ANSWERED BY A GENERAL STRIKE OF ALL COAL MINERS.

Workers! Resist the Attack of the Bosses.

The strike of the anthracite miners must have the support of the whole working class. Every workers' organization must rally to the support of the hard coal miners.

This general support of the workers must be the beginning of a general resistance to the attacks of the capitalists upon the workers.

NO GOVERNMENTAL INTERVENTION to help the bosses must be the demand of the whole working class.

Anthracite and Bituminous miners! Your slogans must be—A COMMON FIGHT AGAINST THE COAL OPERATORS; NO SEPARATE AGREEMENTS; GUARD AGAINST THE TREACHERY OF THE LEWIS MACHINE.

Increase in wages; full recognition of the union; better working conditions in the anthracite coal fields.

You Must Fight For:

A LABOR PARTY!
NATIONALIZATION OF THE MINES!
WORKERS' CONTROL!
A SIX-HOUR DAY AND FIVE-DAY WEEK!

Central Executive Committee,
Workers Party of America.

GERMAN WORKERS IN SOVIET RUSSIA SHOWN HOW AMSTERDAM FIGHTS TRADE UNION UNITY

(By International Press Correspondence)

MOSCOW, Aug. 19—(By Mail.)—All groups of the German workers' delegation have returned to Moscow where a meeting of the whole delegation with the Presidium of the General Council of the Soviet Unions under the chairmanship of Tomsky has taken place.

The delegates put many questions to which Tomsky and others returned exhaustive replies. To the question, what conditions did the Profintern lay down for amalgamation with the Amsterdam International, Tomsky replied that it would be more just to direct such a question to Amsterdam.

Despite all the attempts of the Soviet unions and the Profintern to bring about unity, the Amsterdam showed no desire to assist, it wanted and wants still to have nothing to do with the representatives of the Russian organizations. The delegations would be able to convince themselves of this thru the exchange of letters.

Pledge Aid to Soviet Unions

The Soviet unions and the Profintern do everything to bring about unity, the Amsterdam international the opposite. In conclusion Tomsky requested the assembled workers to tell the truth and nothing but the truth about Soviet Russia and assured them that the chief efforts of the workers of the Soviet Union were directed towards the establishment of the united front, that is, the estiblishment of a united trade union international. The chairman of the German delegation Freiberger, stressed the readiness of the German workers to struggle for the establishment of unity in the trade union movement and declared that in his opinion the responsibility for the lack of success of the attempts was with Amsterdam.

In the name of the whole delegation Freiberger promised that the delegation would fulfill its duties towards the Soviet Union.

Teachers Visit Lunacharsky

The delegation of foreign teachers today visited Lunacharsky who informed the delegates in detail upon the educational methods in the Soviet Union. The Russian teachers, who at first sabotaged the Soviet power, now work extremely loyally with the latter.

Lunacharsky attached a particular significance to the new youth which is carrying out a great work of education and enlightenment amongst the broad masses of the people.

Many teachers were now Communists and the children of the peasants and the bourgeois were now taken into the schools without any conditions. Dufour and Durant in the name of the French delegation, Waters in the name of the Belgian delegation, pointed to the colossal successes obtained thanks to the new methods in the schools of the Soviet Union and declared that in this respect the schools in all other countries in the world were behind the schools of the Soviet Republics.

PARENTS INSTRUCTED TO BRING BIRTH RECORDS OF CHILD STARTING SCHOOL

William J. Bogan, assistant superintendent of schools, has issued a warning to parents to bring birth certificates along on Tuesday morning when school opens for children who are to enter school for the first time.

The schools are so badly handicapped by the shortage of seats that it will be impossible to take care of all the children who will apply and those having certificates will be given first consideration.

Birth records can be obtained at room 707 in the city hall.

ANTHRACITE TIE UP PARALYZING OTHER BUSINESS

10,000 Railroad Men to Be Laid Off

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 3.—The anthracite region today began to feel the aftermath of the mine suspension which for twenty-four hours has padlocked its basic industry and demobilized an army of 148,000 miners.

The business paralysis which the ten anthracite companies face indefinitely began to creep down the rails of the roads carrying their coal. Outbound tonnage is practically cleaned up and on its way to market. Inevitable orders for shutdowns of shops and layoff of shopmen, car repairers and train crews on mine runs have begun to put in appearance.

10,000 Railmen to be Idle.

Predictions that at least 10,000 railroad men would follow the miners into idleness by the end of the week because of the suspension appeared justified in reports that Scranton, Pa., alone would produce half that many unemployed. The Delaware, Lackawanna & Western railroad expects to close down its Scranton and Keyser Valley shops on Friday, throwing out 4,200 men. The Delaware & Hudson announced prospective layoff of 1,200 trainmen and has pulled off fifty freight locomotives used on coal runs in anticipation of a protracted shut down of the mines. The Lehigh Valley and other heavy-tonnage roads are due with similar announcements soon.

Union leaders of the three districts are engaged in smoothing out difficulties developing in connection with the work of the 10,000 maintenance men remaining in the mines by agreement with the operators. Some question is arising as to what is "maintenance work."

Will Not Seek Scabs.

Mine owner continue their assurances that they do not contemplate importation of outside help in attempt to reopen the workings. Edward W. Parker, director of the anthracite bureau of information, said the state anthracite mine law provided even additional security on this score. A miner must first spend two years as a laborer and then pass an examination to become a full-fledged digger, according to the statute.

Rio Grande Flood Hits El Paso; Many Are Made Homeless

EL PASO, Tex., Sept. 3—Three hundred families have fled the lowlands, the parks of El Paso are refuge camps and $300,000 damage already has been done in El Paso alone as the Rio Grande broke its banks and today is flowing thru the city along the river front, a torrent seven blocks long.

Southern Pacific and Texas Pacific trains are being held at Ascarte, a suburb, where the levees have been dynamited.

Typhon Does Much Damage

SHANGHAI, Sept. 3.—Many lives were lost in a typhoon which sent scores of Chinese junks to the bottom and wrecked the Chinese steamer Shinyu of the San Peh Steam Navigation company, according to reports received here today.

Passengers of the Shinyu were saved, but the cargo of the vessel, which was enroute from Amoy to Shanghai, was lost.

Non-catholic labor leaders are just as reactionary. Both are corrupted by the capitalist system and the catholic church, the masonic order, the K. K. K., the K. of C. and the thousands of other organizations, religious and fraternal, exert a powerful influence on their working class membership, an influence that is inimical to their welfare, as a class.

THE capitalists have used the religious and racial difference that exist among the workers to keep them apart. The ku klux klan has done at least as much to accentuate this division as any other organization. Our policy is to unite the workers in the unions on the basis of their identity of interests as wage slaves. We want to unite them on the political field for the same reason. While continually exposing religion as "the opium of the poeple" and thrown the spotlight on the policy of the various churches, we know that eventually the catholic and protestant workers will learn that the churches are used against them and not for them.

OUR K. K. K. subscriber is evidently a well meaning fellow. But like many more of his kind, he seems to think that to be an anti-catholic is to be radical. Nothing of the sort. Some of the most bitter anti-catholics in the United States are also the most reactionary labor haters. The leaders of the K. K. K., when they are not tarring and feathering Negroes, burning them at a stake or lynching them, out on booze and raping forays or embezzling the funds of their organizations, are engaged in fighting radicalism to the best of the ability.

BETWEEN the K. K. K. and its catholic counterpart the workers have only a choice between two evils. The catholic church is the greater of the two evils because it is more powerful, more intelligent, better led and stands in better with big business. This does not say that the workers should chose the klan any more than a man who is offered a choice between hanging and a firing squad should pick either, if he had a chance to escape. The workers must steer clear of all those hokus pokus organizations, and work out their own salvation.

be, Henry Corbishley, Wm. Z. Foster, C. E. Ruthenberg and Duncan MacDonald.

Nation-wide Move.

Similar conferences and mass meetings are being held on "Labor Defense Day" in fifty cities thruout the country. The feature of the mass meetings is the present trial of 18 union miners in Zeigler, Ill., who are charged with "conspiracy to murder," growing out of a strike and the treachery of officials of Sub-District 9, District 12 of the United Mine Workers.

Henry Corbishley, who will be one of the speakers at Chicago's mass meeting, is the deposed president of Local 992, Zeigler, where the trouble started and is one of the defendants in the conspiracy trial. Corbishley will explain the details of the struggle in Zeigler—a struggle that is very likely to become a case of national importance.

Help Zeigler Miners.

In addition to setting up a permanent local organization of I. L. D. in Chicago, the Sept. 13 conference will consider the raising of funds and a campaign of protest for the miners on trial at Zeigler It will also make plans for the raising of special funds for relief of class-war prisoners and their families.

Credentials from labor organizations that will be represented at the conference include, the recently organized 45 I. L. D. branches, Machinists,' Painters' and Carpenters' unions, Workmen's Circle branches and German, Hungarian, Croatian, Slovak, Ukrainian, and Czech Workers' Benefit Societies. Credentials are still being received at the Chicago office of I. L. D.

For All Class-War Prisoners

International Labor Defense is a non-partisan workers' defense organization that extends legal, moral and material aid to all workers persecuted for their activities in the labor movement. The present conferences and mass meetings being held in all parts of the country under the direction of the National Executive Committee of I. L. D. aim to establish permanent local organizations in all cities. I. L. D. is organized on both individual and collective membership basis. The individual dues are 10c per month. Chicago has already turned over $130 in dues reecipts to the national office of I. L. D.

ZEIGLER FRAME UP POSTPONED TILL SEPT. 8TH

Defense Meetings on Sunday and Monday

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ZEIGLER, Ill. Sept. 3.—The preliminary hearing in the cases against twenty five members of the United Mine Workers Local 992, who are to be tried in the capitalists courts upon complaint of D. B. Cobb, sub-district official of the union for "conspiracy to murder" Cobb, has been postponed until Tuesday Sept. 8.

These charges are not only being pressed by the snake, Cobb, but are sanctioned by the whole Farrington machine of the union and backed by the Ku Klux Klan.

Part of Farrington Plot

The whole fight against the progressives at Zeigler, of which these charges are an outgrowth, is part of the plot by Farrington, district president of the miners' union, to rule or ruin the union.

A letter praising the ones who scabbed during the recent walkout at Zeigler was sent into the town by Farrington, and the new local officials were instructed to post the letter in a "conspicous place." It finally found such a place directly opposite the Bell and Zoller Coal company's office.

Progressives Speak for Defense

Sunday last, Freeman Thompson and John Watt, the deposed progressive officials of the Springfield subdistrict, who have also felt the edge of Farrington's axe, spoke at a mass meeting at Zeigler under the auspices of the Franklin county defense committee, which was organized to defend the victims of the Zeigler arrests.

Farrington was ably exposed by the speakers as a tool of the operators. Documentary evidence was produced to prove the charge. A liberal collection was taken up for the defense.

Two Meetings Ahead

Another defense meeting will be held in West Frankfort on Sunday, Sept. 6. The principal speaker will be Duncan MacDonald of Springfield. Other speakers will be Freeman Thompson, John Watt and Henry Corbishley, the illegally removed president of Local 992. These speakers will also address a mass meeting at Christopher on Labor Day.

A movement is being launched by the rank and file to impeach Lon Fox and D. B. Cobb, the treacherous subdistrict officials, for their dirty work at Zeigler.

No Blue Sky Convention Desired

"On the question of a special convention, I believe that with the present composition of our conventions, no problem can be settled to the satisfaction of the large locals because the system of representation is practically the same as that of the joint board. The majority of the delegates come from the small locals and they determine the policies for the large locals.

"It is immaterial to me whether the convention is attended by 500 delegates, but every delegate should vote according to the membership of the local he represents. I propose a general election to the joint board as well as to the paid offices. The general manager and sec'y.-treasurer should also go on the ballot, and the large membership of our union should decide who its representatives shall be. The joint board should also reconsider the question of the increase in dues from 35 to 50c. because the membership has never been consulted on this increase. We, the members of the large locals, were compelled to pay this increase forced upon us by the small locals.

Amnesty for Suspended Members

"The general eecutive board and the joint board should also declare amnesty for all members participating in the present conflict. Such action would surely result in reviving the present conflict. Such action would surely result in reviving the confidence of the membership in the union, and our ranks would be united for the impeding struggle with the employers.

"As an old executive board and joint board member under all administrations, who knews many members of our union, I am firmly of the opinion that the above propositions would at this present moment save our union."

CRAFT UNIONISM IS DRAWBACK IN WAITERS' STRIKE

Cooks Don't Leave Jobs Thus Helping Bosses

By TOM LEWIS.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Sept. 3—The position of the bosses is becoming more untenable as the strike of union waiters here is prolonged. The bosses some time ago encouraged the captains to ignore their unions. Some of them fell for it, because they gained some favors from the bosses, still the union, being strong enuf, was able to retain jurisdiction over them with the result that since the strike several of them have joined the strikers and are working faithfully for victory.

Flore in Confusion.

President Flore of the Cooks, Waiters and Bartenders International arrived in town a few days ago. He has already taken hold of the situation and doing the best he can under the circumstances. But like all labor leaders who believe in the craft form of unionism he is up against a bad predicament. The unions he represents are in the same International of which he is the president. The waiters are on strike, and all the others remain at work.

Previous to last spring the respective unions had an understanding in which no antagonistic agreements could be signed at different periods. But that was all changed last May when the cooks signed up with the bosses without considering the waiters, and all because the bosses made some promises to the cooks' officials in the way of bettering their conditions somewhat with the consequences they fell for it. Since then there has been more or less bad feeling engendered between the officials particularly of the waiters and cooks, which is now developing among the workers also. The virus of craftism is playing its game aided by the bosses and the weak kneed labor leaders.

The president, Mr. Flore is an advocate of automonous unions within the international, to say nothing about craftism. Now he is confronted with a condition in which he must about face, otherwise the waiters will positively lose out in the present controversy or struggle. He is striving to reconcile the forces, but the more he attempts the impossible the more foolish his whole view and action appears.

Amalgamation Necessary.

In the meantime the waiters are getting ready to hear the message of the amalgamationist, while at the same time they are waking up to the fact that there is no hope for the workers unless they amalgamate their forces with all crafts within the industry.

The message of Communism is not unwelcome either, proving that struggle makes the slaves amenable to listen to something more valuable than the old story of, in union there is strength, when the kind of unionism that is preached to them is a dead failure.

Tho the bosses at the present time are in a plight, yet eventually if the cooks do not stand by the waiters and come out on a sympathy strike, the fight in the end will terminate in their favor, so whatever losses or inconveniences the bosses suffer for the time being will prove to their interest.

Strikers Put Up Good Fight.

While on the other hand, if the waiters will have to fight it all alone, and the cooks continue to remain at work, the International president and the unions he represents will be placed in the position, you'll be damned if you do, and wou'll be damned if you don't, while obsolete craftism gets another severe jolt.

The spirit of the strikers is good, they are continually picketing at all hours night and day, whatever the outcome the waiters are to be congratulated for the fine fight they are putting up.

MOSCOW HEARS OF PROTESTS OF CHINESE LABOR

Seek Re-opening of the Trade Union Offices

MOSCOW, Aug. 19.—(By Mail)—According to messages from Pekin, all public organizations are arranging demonstrations of protest against the mass murders in Tientzin and Tschandu.

A resolution demands the release of the arrested workers, the re-opening of the sealed trade union headquarters and other public organizations, the strictest punishment for those responsible for the murders, compensation for the relatives of the killed and wounded, complete freedom of agitation and propaganda and governmental support for the strikers. A delegation presented these demands to the president of the republic Tchuan Tzi Tuan.

Soldiers Occupy Factory

In Tientzin 400 workers and students have been arrested and 12 strike leaders have been handed over to the field courts and the danger of the death sentence is imminent. All factories are occupied by the military.

In Pekin the strike of the workers employed by the British embassy continues. In Shanghai a strike of postal workers has commenced. The post office has been occupied by English sailors. Work in the Japanese textile factories has not yet been taken up as the town council refuses to supply electric current to the factories, as the employers have not yet fulfilled the conditions for the ending of the strike.

An appeal of the central committee of the Communist Party of China says: "The strike will be continued despite all the persecutions of the foreign powers and the Chinese militarists. The workers insist upon the fulfillment of their just economic and political demands. They demand that the Pekin and Canton governments carry out the latter. The strike of the workers in Shanghai and Hong Kong has released the movement for national freedom which has grown and widened, but which is still not sufficiently strong to draw the whole people into the struggle against foreign imperialism.

Will Continue the Struggle

"The workers must strike to develop and strengthen the movement for freedom. At the moment when the large and middle bourgeoisie are striving to end the strike and the boycott, the proletariat alone without the support of the other classes, cannot obtain the abolition of the unequal agreements.

"The workers will support the struggle of the Chinese people for their freedom, they demand that Pekin and Canton act together.

"The Communist Party and the Young Communist League and the masses organized in the trade unions together with the other democratic and revolutionary elements will continue the struggle for freedom to its victorious conclusion!"

Gagging of Teachers Continued This Term

Superintendent William McAndrew will continue his policy of gagging the teachers. This is made known in a letter replying to a petition signed by 1,400 high school teachers urging the restoration of teachers council meetings. Copies of this letter were sent to the members of the committee of rules to which the petition was referred by the board of education.

In his letter he definitely states that he will not permit teachers council meetings either for high school or elementary teachers.

LAWSON'S WILL SHOWS CONTROL OF CHURCHES BY BIG BUSINESS, LEFT A FORTUNE TO PREACHERS' BOSSES

By LELAND OLDS,
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

How great wealth rivets its control on the workers is revealed in the will of Victor F. Lawson, deceased owner of the Chicago Daily News. Lawson leaves a $1,300,000 share of his estate to the Chicago Congregational Missionary and Extension Society. Investigation discloses that this pious name conceals a holding-company exercising control over scores of churches thru its manipulation of the ecclesiastical feedbag.

Lawson's will further provides that the society devote the income from $300,000 of this $1,300,000 fund to the New England Congregational church of Chicago, but only "so long as, in the judgment of a majority of the trustees of said Chicago Congregational Missionary and Extension Society, such payments shall be a wise use of the money."

Fired For Radicalism.

Recently the minister of this church let some members of a radical labor organization use the premises. He is no longer its minister. Lawson has provided that if this church won't be good in the future, it will forfeit $15,000 income a year.

"The Chicago Congregational Missionary and Extension Society" is a conservative business organization whose affairs are directed by a group of substantial business and professional men of the Chicago area," the society proclaims in its 42nd annual report (1925). This conservative business body, which receives Lawson's largest legacy, extends its tentacles far beyond the single church designated in the will. Last year it gave cash to 43 churches. The power of the society's board of directors over such churches is described in its constitution as follows:

Big Business Gets Sole Power.

"Absolute power rests with it to grant or withhold aid in the case of any church or mission. It possesses power to advise churches as to problems of federation or union with other churches, their removal to other locations or the sale of their property. No church receiving aid from the society or intending to ask from the society shall take steps to secure a minister without the advice and consent of the board of directors."

In addition to subsidies, the society has hung $122,000 in mortgages round the necks of churches in their building programs. It holds title itself to 16 churches or parish houses.

The job of the officers and directors is "to convert the machinery and resources of the society into an active agency for the christianizing of the masses of this city." Working class sections get chief attention. And "the strongest and most impelling reason" for this work, according to the society's report, is because "the security and peace of individuals and the family, the safety and perpetuity of institutions cannot rest ultimately upon the protection of the police and the courts, nor upon education and business prosperity." The object of the society is evidently to save the existing social order.

No member of a church accepting the society's doles can sit on the board of directors. In other words, these kept churches have no civic status in the councils of their masters, just as their spiritual leaders are subject to the veto of the society's purse strings.

Scotland Yard Foiled.

LONDON, Sept. 3—The name of Prince Ahmed Seif Ed Din is mentioned in whispers at Scotland Yard for it is a delicate matter and one that the sleuths do not care to discuss, for Scotland Yard has been completely baffled by the disappearance of the prince.

Prince Ahmed, who is the brother of King Fuad of Egypt, disappeared from a recreation pier in Hastings, after having spent nearly a quarter of a century as inmate of an English asylum, after an affair in Egypt which led to charges against the prince for attempting to murder his brother, the present king. When Prince Ahmed disappeared there also disappeared with him an asylum attendant.

FRANCO-BELGIAN LABOR SHOWS APPRECIATION OF WORKERS' REPUBLIC

MOSCOW, Sept. 3.—(Tass)—The Franco-Belgium labor delegation addressed a letter to the Leningrad Soviet, once more extending their deep appreciation and thanks for the warm and cordial welcome accorded.

They greatly admired, the delegates wrote, the careful and loving manner in which the Russian workers managed to save objects of art and those valuable historically and preserve them for the working class. In conclusion, the authors also point out that they were the most favorably impressed by the homes of rest for workers and peasants.

INTERNATIONAL DAY OF YOUTH IN N. Y. SEP. 11

Hold Celebration at Webster Hall

NEW YORK, Sept. 3—The eleventh International Day of Youth will be celebrated by the working youth of New York with a powerful demonstration to be held Friday evening, Sept. 11, at Webster Hall, 119 East 11th St., New York City.

In its call to the working youth of New York the Young Workers League has pointed out the awful conditions under which the working youth and the working class as a whole must endure under capitalism, the dangers that are continually arising and facing the international proletariat, and has called upon them to arise in a mighty demonstration on this day devoted to the militant youth proletariat.

The program for this demonstration will be such as deserves the day. Prominent speakers will address the masses of young workers who will answer the call of the Y. W. L. There will also be a splendid musical program, recitations, tableaux, a play by the Juniors and so on. Not the least striking part of the affair will be the remarkable decoration of the hall as befits an occasion like International Youth Day.

Young workers! Demonstrate on International Youth Day! Show your solidarity with the young workers of the world and with the whole working class!!

Don't forget! Friday, Sept. 11, at Webster Hall, 119 East 11th St., New York City.

SYNOPSIS.—The official report of the British trade union delegation to Soviet Russia described the workings of foreign trade, transportation, industry, finance and agriculture in the Soviet Union. The trade union leaders concluded that foreign trade is increasing, and that in agriculture and industry the level of production is being raised. The finances have been placed on a sound basis, the report showed. Harm is being done to England by the absence of full diplomatic relations, the union leaders stated. Schools and universities, and literature, music and opera and the theatre were then discussed. Art collections, censorship, newspapers, wall newspapers, and freedom of the press were explained, with the conclusion that "the results of education are astounding." The report then took up hospitals, welfare work, sanitation, birth control, abortion, cleanliness and housing, rent regulations, family life, and prisons. "The Soviet government is achieving most remarkable results in respect to public health, housing, and the prison system," says the report. Regarding the trade unions and labor conditions, the report states, "The Delegation were much impressed by the position and activities of Trade Unions under the Soviet system." The report then described labor regulations, co-operatives, wages, and told of visits to various industrial works. The general conclusion on labor conditions reached by the commission was that, "The U. S. S. R. is a strong and stable state. The government is not only in every way better than anything Russia has ever yet had, but it has done and is doing work in which other older state systems have failed and are failing."

• • • •

Wherever possible the worker receives free quarters with heating, water, and light in the neighborhood of his work. In the event of quarters being unavailable, he receives rent money to the value of 10 per cent for a bachelor and 20 per cent for a family man of the wages paid. The industry and Trade Unions carry all the expenses entailed in the upkeep of the necessary schools, clubs, etc. These consist of the usual institutions and organizations found all over the industrial areas in Russia at the present time. In Baku, owing to the conditions and the class of worker employed, they are not at present quite up to the standard of those found in other large centers. The technical schools, however, at which the worker can learn the more advanced stages of his trade. are very well equipped, and a great deal of trouble has taken over them.

The usual regulations regarding childhood and motherhood welfare are enforced on the oilfields as elsewhere in Russia.

At the village of Mardakhan, about eight miles from the Balachani Fields, a sanatorium and rest house has been organized for the workers, as well as a similar institution in the refinery town at Baku.

Housing

Housing accomodation on the oilfields, where land is extremely valuable, has always been a very serious question, and in this respect the position of the workers was in many ways worse than in any other parts of Russia. Men were herded together in large barracks with very little accomodation and sanitary arrangements. This has been taken seriously in hand, but the improvement can only be gradual. A garden city, consisting of some 60 or 70 houses, has been built outside the Balachani fields. Twenty-five large buildings are in the process of erection on the hills surrounding the Bibi Eybat Field. A great many of the old barrack accomodation have been destroyed, and 3,000 houses have been repaired. The position, however, still leaves a great deal to be desired. At present, 22 per cent of the working population live in the town, 12.7 per cent at the refineries, 55 per cent on the oilfields, and the rest in their own native houses in villages round about Baku.

II.—A Visit to the Grosny Oilfields

While in the Caucasus the Delegation visited Grosny. It found that housing under the Soviet Government compared well with the dilapidated and insanitary housing of workers under private enterprise. Under the old system most of the workers had only one room to live and sleep in. Under the new system they have a living room, 15ft. by 15ft., a kitchen 12ft. by 10ft., bedroom 12ft. by 12ft., bathroom 6ft. by 5ft., and a separate water closet 6ft. by 3ft.; the height of the rooms is 11ft. 8ins. Such a dwelling accomodates a man and wife and three children. Its construction is of brick, with a tiled roof; these house are in blocks of four, standing in about ¼-acre of ground. Heating, electric light, and water are supplied free, and the workers on this oilfield pay no rent.

The scale of wages is the same as on the Baku oilfields, but the conditions of life are better, owing to the surroundings. Women are paid the same wage as adult male workers.

This field is of later origin than the Baku fields, and is situated some distance from the town and the railway. The roads are in a bad condition and transport difficult. However, the lay-out of the field under the new system has proved simpler than in Baku, as more free space is available.

The production from gushers has considerably decreased. With the systematic working of the fields, especially of the new area, however, the production received from pumping and baling has improved considerably as the effect of increased activity in drilling, and as the results of improvements in centralization which have been carried out during the last two years.

During the year 1923, 18,500 sajens were drilled, and 96½ millions of poods of oil received. The production for the year 1924 is 103 million, and 30,000 sajens have been drilled: the estimated production for next year is 120 million poods.

From this field a particularly high quality of benzine (petrol) is obtained, of which six million poods were produced in 1923 and ten million poods in 1924. The estimated production of this product from 1925 is 15 million poods.

The financial outlook of these fields is most satisfactory. The expenditure for 1924, which includes all capital expenditure on housing and reconstruction, was entirely covered by sales of oil during the year. The expenditure for 1925 is estimated at £4,500,000, and for 1926, £6,000,000; at the normal rate of increase in production and drilling activity, this should be fully covered. The facilities for exporting products both as regards their transport and freight charges will be very considerable when the construction of the pipe line to Novorossisk on the Black Sea has been completed. This work is already in hand.

III.—Visit to Baku Co-operatives

While at Baku the Delegation had the opportunity of visiting the miners' wholesale co-operative store. This store, which was only established a few years ago, is in the form of a long goods shed with a bank for delivery and despatch. It is divided into departments for grocery, drapery, etc. Everything was very simply arranged, and the warehousemen are able to take from the shelves goods required by the different branch stores.

There are three co-operative societies in Baku. The Central, the Miners' (already mentioned), and the "Azerbaijan," which supplies the outlying villages. Each society has a wholesale warehouse, and altogether there are 100 branch stores in the city.

The first co-operative formed in Baku was in 1914. At one branch store visited, 5,000 grocery customers are served daily and other customers proportionately. In the city of Baku there are altogether 150,000 members of the various co-operative societies. This rapidly-growing Co-operative Movement is easily accounted for by the very primitive condition of a very large number of small private shops. The private shops are very unclean, the goods displayed in a most disorderly fashion, and very dirty. Of the goods sold by all retail stores, 75 per cent, is procured through the wholesale co-operative society and 25 per cent is bought privately. It is claimed that these co-operative societies have kept down the prices, and are so able to compete with the private trader.

It was found to be one of the conditions of employment at co-operative stores was that the employe must be a member of the union. As none of the branch stores in Baku employ more than 50 employes, there are no shop committees. A delegate, however, is appointed whose duty it is to collect the contributions of the members. A general committee of the union carries on the work.

The impression made on the Delegation was that the co-operative societies are steadily ousting the private trader, and that the consequent benefit to the public both as regards price and cleanliness is undoubted.

VI.—Visit to Tiflis Co-operatives

At Tiflis a visit was paid to the office of the All-Russian Union of Soviet and Commercial Employes at the Palace of Labor. The Delegation saw one of the numerous clubs established for the recreation of the members, also a school for the children of the members of the Trade Union. The children from 14 to 18 years of age are boarded and lodged, and there were 200 scholars. There is a labor law that no children should be allowed to work till 14 years of age, and then only for four hours a day till they are 16. The Delegation was informed that unfortunately the law with respect to young children is not regularly enforced, and that many children are still employed from 7 to 8 years of age, though this, strictly speaking, is illegal. There is at present no general compulsory education, since the authorities have not the means to provide schools for teaching for all the children. It is this fact which makes the schools opened by the Trade Unions of such importance, since they are providing for the children of the members who otherwise would not be able to get these educational facilities. The Union also has a typewriting school, which was visited. Here, again, no fee is charged for teaching, and there are four relays of scholars during the day.

In the summer time boating and all kinds of sports are provided free to all members of the Union. Arrangements were made for a visit to a number of co-operative and private stores. The United Workers' Co-operative Society has over a hundred stores in Tiflis and a membership of 20,000. At one store visited over 3,000 customers are served daily. In addition to the United Workers' Co-operative Society there is a military co-operative store with 5,000 members; the Transport Workers Union also has a co-operative store with 11,519 members.

There are two large agricultural co-operative societies, one for purchasing machinery, seed, manures, and all the accessories for peasant farming; and the other for retail supply of all the domestic requirements. These societies have about 3,000 members. There is also a small general co-operative society with about 3,000 members.

A visit was paid to the Central Office of the United Workers' Co-operative Society. This society has a general committee of 15 members, three of whom are experts. From this body an executive committee of five is chosen, three ordinary members and two experts. By experts is meant in this case the heads of the banking and finance departments. The society was started in 1921 with a very small entrance fee. This has now been raised to 5 roubles; the membership has reached 20,000 and is rapidly increasing. In October, 1921, the turnover was only 37,000 roubles, but by the middle of 1924 had reached 800,000 roubles. The productive workers belong to their appropriate union, while the sales people and clerks are members of the All-Russian Union of Soviet and Commercial Employes. The number of clerks and administrators is greatly in excess of what would be considered necessary in England for the same sort of business. In these co-operative societies the grocery and provision departments have the largest turnover; the next in importance is the bakery and confectionery, and, thirdly, the drapery.

At Tiflis, as in Baku, the general untidiness of the small private shop was very noticeable, while the co-operative stores are very tidy and clean.

V.—Tiflis Electricity Scheme

Tiflis, like other towns in Russia, is to have a great electricity power station. Plant that will harness 36,000 horse power from the River Kura is now being erected. The stream curves round a bend under the ancient metropolis of Georgia, a city which, looked at from a distance, appears as a cluster of houses and roofs browned and grayed by the sun's rays.

The distance of the power station from the city is approximately twelve miles. It is reached by a road that has been traversed by the oldest tribes of men, who tramped for centuries to and from this cradle of the world, whose ancient history is still vividly coloring civilization. Along this road still travel, as in the many ages past, oxen, lumbering and slow, relentlessly eating up distance and time, goaded and cajoled by drivers who still beat and curse them, along this mud-rutted road, as did the drivers of a thousand years ago; while flocks of turkeys, droves of pigs, skinny and hump-backed, long-haired sheep, are driven in endless procession to the markets of Tiflis.

Now the miracle is happening. The powers of the river are to be gathered in a huge dam, their wild strength is to be controlled and utilized, and modern civilization has come to restrict these wild waters and turn their energy into a stream of useful industrial activity. The energies of nature captured by the Revolution will be conserved for industrial purposes, and Tiflis will grow into a modern city, with light for its surrounding villages and free power for its production.

Already the work has made such progress that the dam is nearing completion. It will form a huge basin, harnessing the surging waters, which will accumulate in prodigious numbers millions of gallons and tons of weight.

The formation of the dam is as of three fingers; the left avenue will be utilized for the purpose of constructing a huge canal dug out of the rock, faced with smooth cement, and having a drop of 25 meters, which will permit of a volume and velocity of water what will concentrate into 36,000 horse-power.

The machinery is already in position and a perfect plant has been gathered together. The undertaking has another twelve months to run before completion. Three busy shifts are employing approximately a thousand workers in each shift. The men are housed in the best dwelling accomodation obtainable for such undertakings.

A hospital is erected, where the latest and most efficient medical and surgical aid is obtainable.

Bathing is a great feature; some 400 men obtain their daily bath with an ample supply of water for cleansing purposes. These bath-houses are an object-lesson in sanitary equipment to even our most humane contractors.

The wages rise from a rouble a day to 4 roubles; the food is obtained on a co-operative basis and is cheap. Efforts are being made on a practical and effective scale for the entertainment, training, and even the education of the workers employed. The Delegation saw a most industrious and orderly set of men in full and willing co-operation.

The scheme is a part of that suggested by Lenin for the electrification of Russia in general and industrial centers in particular. The results of this electric power will be the saving of transport and the conservation of the timber supply. One can see the miracle of industrial improvement slowly evolving and adding to the civilization of Tiflis a great and lasting benefit to all concerned.

VI.—Visit to the Labor Palace, Tiflis

The premises occupied by the Trade Union Movement in Tiflis, a well appointed building situated in the main thoroughfare of the city, was formerly utilized as a hotel and restaurant. During the British occupation of the Caucasus, it was occupied by British soldiers for living purposes. It is now the headquarters of the Executive of local unions and also the Executive Council of the Georgian Trade Unions. It contains three floors, a large hall for meetings, the top floor being used for hotel purposes in which accomodation is provided for Trade Union delegates visiting Tiflis from other parts of Georgia.

In Georgia there are 105,000 members of Trade Unions out of a total population of 2¼ millions. There were 21 local unions in Tiflis with a membership of approximately 50 per cent of the total membership in Georgia, and 17,500 organized railwaymen, 7,000 of these being employed in railway shops. There are 600 textile workers, 13,600 members of unions representing teachers, clerks, and other non-industrial workers. Transport workers including porters at the station are also well organized.

The Trade Union organization is controlled by a Presidium consisting of 15 members—five members of the Presidium residing in Tiflis and ten engaged in the work of organization.

The membership of Trade Union organization consists of supporters both of the Menshevik and Bolshevik Parties, no pressure is excercised and no terrorism exists as between Bolshevik and Menshevik members of the Unions. Non-partisan workmen can also become members of Trade Unions, and if elected are allowed to hold official positions in the organizations.

In response to inquiries it appeared that many members of the unions have left the Menshevik Party and are now accepted in the Trade Union Movement as non-partisan members, also that officials of the unions formerly working under Menshevik rule are now working in the same capacity under Soviet rule.

There has been no system of dismissals of members of the Menshevik Party from Executive Councils under the Soviet regime, and leather workers, clothing workers, and clerks were still retaining in their membership Menshevik adherents. Under Menshevik rule in Georgia Bolshevik members of Trade Unions were excluded from the participating in the advantages of rest houses, sanatoria, etc. Rest houses are now thrown open and utilized freely by Menshevik members of the Trade Union organizations, and in many cases it was declared the toleration shown to the members of Trade Unions who had formerly been Menshevik adherents has been sufficient to influence them to join the Communist Party. FOREIGN TRADE MOUNTS HIGH AS COUNTRY ARMS

Hoover Talks 'Experts'; Quiet on War Chances

WASHINGGTON, Sept. 3.—With a gigantic world trade war in full swing, the foreign trade of United States in the next twelve months is expected to exceed $9,500,000,000, department of commerce officials estimated today.

Under the direction of Secretary of Commerce Hoover, the government is waging with increasing intensity its campaign to put the manufactured products of the U. S. in every market of the world.

The foreign trade in the year ending July 1, was $8,692,620,000, representing an increase of over $826,000,000 from 1923-1924. A similar increase this year will bring trade to nearly $10,000,000,000.

The United States is aiming her commercial conquest particularly at South America where this country has over $3,000,000,000 invested.

Government officials were not anxious to comment on the connection between the increase of foreign trade and the increase in military preparedness particularly in the Far East.

Graphite Deposits in Soviet Union Are Being Explored

MOSCOW, Sept. 3—(Tass)—Recently press dispatches appeared concerning the exploration of graphite deposits in the Turukhan region in Siberia. In this connection it is worth while calling attention to graphite deposits in the Northern Causasus, near Vladikavkas in conjunction with which operations for surveying and mining arsenious ores were carried on last year.

The layers of the pure graphite are from 5 to 19 centimeters thick. The best samples from one of the layers at a depth of 12 meters showed a graphite content of from 50 to 60 per cent. More generally, the graphite content runs from 10 to 50 per cent.

It is estimated that the deposits contain 7,000,000 poods of graphite. The graphite deposits are conveniently situated for exploitation only a small distance below the surface, and easily accessible, while climatic conditions in the locality are good.

Powerful Machine for Baku.

MOSCOW, Sept. 3—(Tass)—The state industrial board has instructed the powerful 17,500 kilowatt turbogenerator, recently purchased abroad by the "Azneft" (Azerbeidjan Oil Syndicate), to be fixed at the Baku works. This machine was ordered in France and is the most powerful of its kind in the U. S. S. R.; the turbine alone weighs 42 tons, while the aggregate weight to the machine is about 190 tons.

CAPPER PUBLICATIONS UNFAIR TO LABOR, TOPEKA COUNCIL STARTS DRIVE TO ORGANIZE UNSKILLED

By JESSE KEEBLE.
(Worker Correspondent)

TOPEKA, Kansas, Sept. 3.—At the last Industrial Council, the committee appointed to visit the churches to get permission for representatives of organized labor to speak in the churches labor Sunday and explain labor's viewpoint, gave their report as follows: Arrangements had been made for members to speak in 22 churches and two open air union meetings.

The Topeka Industrial Council.

One minister absolutely refused to let a speaker from labor into his church. Another queer thing about that minister is that he has been conducting a bible class at the chamber of commerce for all to attend regardless of creed and sent the industrial council a request for their members to attend there.

A member from the Painters' and Decorators' Union stated that the Capper publications were on the unfair list by their union as they were painting their building at the fair grounds by nonunion labor. The manager of the Capper publications, Mr. Marco Morrow, was interviewed by their business agent but refused to remove the nonunion man and allow union men to paint the building.

Mr. Marco Morrow stated he didn't have to remove him and wasn't going to and was very abusive.

The industrial council passed a motion to place the Capper publications on the unfair list and to withhold labor's notes from the labor column in the Sunday Capital until the Capper publications got right with the Painters' union.

A committee was appointed from the council to interview the manager of the Capper publications and see if the matter could be adjusted. ! was told this morning that the committee was successful, that the nonunion men were withdrawn and the work given to union man. The labor notes were not in today's Capital.

Speeches were made showing the necessity of organizing the common laborers. One member said he had got 65 common laborers to consent to become union men but they claimed they couldn't stand the initiation fee

A committee was appointed to confer with the hod carriers and common laborers' union to assist them in any way in organizing the common laborers and to request a reduction of fees for a short campaign period to make a drive for new members. I learned today that the hodcarriers and common laborers' union at their meeting reduced the initiation fee to $2.00 for the campaign.

Pulkov Observatory Gets Cooperation

MOSCOW, Sept. 3.—At the request of the chief Pulkov observatory (near Leningrad), the all-Union society for cultural ties with foreign countries had some time ago approached a number of foreign observatories with a view to renewing the exchange of scientific literature between them and Russian observatories.

The society has now received replies from many foreign institutions expressing their willingness and desire to endorse that proposal. Accordingly, the Pulkov observa[illegible] has despatched thirty-six packet[illegible]ientific literature to France, I[illegible] pain and other countries.

RAILROAD UNION MAKES COMPLAINT AGAINST THE ILLINOIS CENTRAL R. R.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. Sept. 3.—Complaint of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen by Richard Abram, chairman, against the Illinois Central railroad for failure to provide wash room and locker facilities in their terminal at Mattoon, Ills., was filed with the Illinois commerce commission today.

Coal Barons Suck Blood from 2500 Miners Every Year

NEW YORK, Sept. 3—The cost of coal in human lives, according to the U. S. bureau of mines, is over 21,000 miners killed in its production since 1916, over 34,000 since 1911 and nearly 50,000 since 1906. This means an average of almost 2,500 a year for 20 years.

The bureal report shows further that the gain in safety for the miner between 1906 and 1915 was not continued into the following decade.

Local 596 Butchers Still Work Sunday

In Wednesday's DAILY WORKER a short article on the wage demands won by Local 596 of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen in their new agreement contains two errors due to the imperfect information received. The men did not have to strike to get their wage demands as was reported, and Sunday work is five hours—and is not abolished. We are indebted to Brother Klein for the correction.

About Railroad Workers.

To the DAILY WORKER:—I agree with John M. Walker, whose letter appears in The DAILY WORKER of Sept. 1. You would do a world of good among the rank and file of the brotherhoods and shop crafts, if you would give out some of the facts concerning the fakers that stand in the way of progress among the railroad men, they are densely ignorant as to the meaning of unionism not having received any education along these lines while members of the so-called standard organizations.

Now that the miners are on strike the railroad employe will be "used" to defeat the miners, to protest against this state of affairs means to be expelled and have no voice.—H. C. W., Cicero, Ill.

MOBILIZE WORLD LABOR TO FREE BESSARABIANS

Five Hundred Clutched By White Terror

By RUTH FISCHER.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN—(By Mail)—With an insolence unheard of even from the standpoint of imperialist predatory morals; the Roumanian bourgeoisie has annexed Bessarabia. With unprecedented brutality this annexed country is held down. The Bessarabian workers and peasants are suffering a terrible martyrdom, which seems to be endless.

The result is that Bessarabia, once the most flourishing province of Russia is today deserted, impoverished and depopulated. The European bourgeoisie, which has told so many lies about the deterioration of "economy and culture" in Soviet Russia is covering the terrible conditions in Bessarabia with the mantle of christian forbearance.

Relief From Germany.

Continuous risings of the oppressed peasantry were inevitable. The Roumanian boyars drown them in blood. They have thrown thousands of workers and peasants into the ill-famed Roumanian prisons, where prisoners are tortured and tormented by medieval methods. At present a monster trial of 500 innocent Bessarabian peasants is taking place, the greatest political trial in the history of class struggles. The German proletariat has had bitter experiences with class justice. It knows what the relentless revenge of the bourgeoisie is like.

Therefore it has the warmest sympathy for these 500 Bessarabian peasants and will hasten to their relief. It is not only a question of fighting for the liberation of thousands of proletarian prisoners in Germany, it is rather a question of fighting against the international white terror in Bulgaria, Poland and Roumania.

Red Aid Takes Action.

The International Red Aid is an effective weapon of the proletariat in this struggle. By fulfilling its duty of solidarity with the victims of class justice in all countries, the international proletariat will deal a heavy blow to the bourgeoisie.

Altho the proletariat is not yet strong enuf to achieve a complete victory over the bourgeoisie, it is well able to ease the fate of political prisoners by means of common action. Therefore, it should also be possible to tear the 500 Bessarabian peasants from the hands of the Roumanian hangman. In all factories and trade unions the attention of the workers should be drawn to the Roumanian terror.

The A. D. G. B. and the Amsterdam Trade Union International must be compelled to take action in this matter. Demonstrations should be held in front of the Roumanian consulates. The cry for liberation and revenge should resound in the ears of the bourgeoisie. The influence of the International Red Aid among the masses should be strengthened and greater financial support should be given to it.

Liberate the 500 Bessarabian peasants!

AUSTRALIAN COMMUNIST PARTY UNMASKS POMP AND FEASTING DURING VISIT OF THE U. S. FLEET

By W. FRANCIS AHERN.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

SYDNEY, Austrial, Sept. 3.—On the arrival of the American naval fleet at Sydney and Melbourne on July 23, the Communist Party of Australia issued a manifesto urging the workers not to be misled by the orgy of extravagant pomp and feasting associated with the visit of the fleet, but to remember that under cover of the pomp and feasting, the preparations of a new war, of dreadful consequence to the working class, would proceed.

The Communist Party urged the labor councils and the trade union movement in these states to be visited by the fleet to invite all working class members of the fleet who still maintained their class consciousness and who would be the first to suffer in a new capitalist war to come to the trades hall to fraternize with their Australian fellow-workers and demonstrate their solidarity against the common enemy of the workers of every country—the imperialist, war mongering capitalist class.

During the fleet's stay in Australian waters, huge demonstrations are being arranged by the Communist Party and other militant organizations calling for the release of the class-war prisoners in U. S. jails.

Despite the fact that there is much unemployment and starvation in Australia, money has been voted by the various governments for the entertainment of the officers and men of the fleet. Fearing the boycott of the fleet by the workers, the big business press appealed to the girls to make the "gobs" and officers "feel at home" while in Australia.

Bar Immigrants from Australia.

SYDNEY, Australia —(FP)—With a view to checking the immigration of foreigners to Australia, the federal government has issued instructions can only be nominated by responsible persons who must sign a bond to be responsible for their welfare after their arrival. In future no foreign immigrant will be admitttd unless he produced $200 in cash, has a bona fide guarantee of employment, and can satisfy the immigration authorities that he is in a position to maintain himself after landing in Australia.

Italian Sub at Sea Bottom

LONDON, Sept. 3.—The Italian submarine, Sebatiano Veniro, missing since August 25, has been sighted on the sea bottom, at a depth of 300 feet, according to an exchange telegraph dispatch from Rome today.

The dispatch stated that the sunken submarine was located seven miles off Cape Passero, where she was last seen during the recent Italian naval maneuvers. The submersible carried a crew of 55 men and officers.

AUSTRALIAN TRADE UNIONS URGE END OF PIECE WORK SYSTEM

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SYDNEY, Australia, Sept. 3.—A conference of representatives of trade unions is asking the labor premier of New South Wales to abolish the piecework system in the government railroad shops. Piecework system leads to speeding-up, accidents and slipshod work. The system was introduced after the 1917 general strike.

BIG AMERICAN BANKER TO AID WHITE GUARD GOVERNMENT FINANCE

OSLO, Norway, Sept. 3—Further aid to white guards of the Baltics is seen in the coming visit of Charles Mitchell, president of the National City Bank of New York, to Helsingfors, Finland.

Mitchell is now arrived in Norway, where his private consultations with national leaders add to the suspicions of those who see an effort to use the vast financial power of American banks to force a new blockade or even war upon Soviet Russia.

Mitchell is reported as on the way to Finland to "attempt to stabilize the Finnish mark"—which is interpreted as putting the screws on Finland to take an even more hostile position toward the Soviet Union than before, in exchange for financial assistance.

Turkey Approves of Soviet Attitude on Oppressed Peoples

MOSCOW, Sept. 3.—(Tass.)—The local papers note with satisfaction the favorable response Chicherin's recent statements concerning the struggle of the oppressed Chinese people against the yoke of foreign imperialism met with on the part of the Turkish press.

Turkey, writes the Djumuriet, recognises that these statements of the People's Commissary of Foreign Affairs of the U. S. S. R. are a perfect expression of truth. "While the backward nations are being exploited and oppressed," declares the leading Turkish organ, "the salvation of oriental peoples lies in their entering upon the path of progress as well as opposition to European imperialists. Their best arm must be a nationally free and independent economic and cultural development of the east."

This Is Some Apology

The Federated Press is one of the most dignified and punctilious labor services in the United States. It very rarely indulges in levity or veiled sarcasm. But the following "apology" is such a delightful piece of work that it should not remain buried under a bushel but is entitled to the wider platform afforded by publication in the DAILY WORKER:

> APOLOGY: In exposing a former union labor official who is using his old position to exploit the labor movement in an oil-stock promotion scheme, The Federated Press mentioned Chester M. Wright, former publicity man for Samuel Gompers, who had also turned oil promoter and was using certain labor mailing lists for his game. The F. P. did not know at the time but hastens to add now that Wright is no longer engaged in the get-rich-quick promotion business, having returned the stock subscription money to such labor men as had responded to his circular letters. This course became advisable when he found it next to impossible to sell enuf stock to float his lease. The F. P. regrets having given the impression that Wright was still in the oil game. He is in Washington once more.

Poor old Chester hit the sawdust trail because the suckers would not bite. What beautiful literature he wrote about the big profits to be made from his oily oil wells! Chester never spread himself against the Communists as he did in painting the gushing glory of his gasoline El Dorado. He even forgot the Communists for a while. But alas, the dollars did not come and we hear of Chester again saving the country from Bolshevism.

Craft and Graft Unionism

The columns of the capitalist press frequently carry advertisements for strikebreakers. The copy is set up by union men, read by union proofreaders, made up by union compositors, cast by union stereotypers and printed by union pressmen.

This is not unionism or anything like it. Yet it is not the most obvious weakness of the craft union system and the lack of solidarity that prevails between the various crafts.

Yesterday the Chicago Tribune carried advertisements for clothing workers to take the places of the employes of a tailoring company who were on strike. The advertisements had the sanction of a union affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

In a New York paper an advertisement calls for pressmen to take the places of those who are on strike or locked out by a Chicago printing company. The advertisement comes from a well-known detective agency and is sanctioned by George L. Berry, head of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union. The men who are on strike are members of that union.

Those are only a few examples of the wrong kind of trade unionism. What is the rank and file going to do about it?

Amalgamation Or Annihilation

George L. Berry's agents are now going around among the pressrooms of Chicago urging the pressmen to leave No. 3 and come into an organization that will be formed by the president of the International Union. No. 3 has always been a thorn in the "majah's" side and he is now taking desperate measures to annihilate it.

Berry has also warned Franklin Union No. 4, the feeders' local, that if they hold any more joint meetings with the pressmen, their charter will be lifted. The president of the feeders' union is a friend of Berry's. The rank and file of the organisation are in opposition to the strikebreaker and are anxious tthat the two unions should amalgamate.

This is sound judgment. So long as they are divided Berry and his unscrupulous adventurers may be able to use one local against the other. Berry does not want amalgamation. He wants the annihilation of all those who oppose his crookeed schemes. But tho he has temporarily succeeded in retaining the power which he grabbed by a stratagem, his fall is certain.. The amalgamation of the two local unions in Chicago is a step in the right direction.

The Futile League

The league of nations assembly opens its sixth session in Geneva in a few days. Aristide Briand is scheduled to preside at the opening session. One of the principal subjects to come before the league will be the peace protocol which was adopted at the last meeting but which has since been practically repudiated by every nation that gave it formal approval.

The league of nations was ostensibly organized to promote peace. Nothing of the sort. In fact it was not intended as a peace instrument. Britain was the dominant factor in the league and desired to use it for her own schemes. France had similar ambitions. Due to the clashing interests of all nations affiliated with it, the league of nations was as helpless as an armless man in a scratching contest. The only thing it could do was to let the bad boys fight it out when they got into a scrap and hope that the best man would win.

The sixth convention of the league of nations will meet, indulge in some oratory, dine and wine and adjourn, just like a conference of labor fakers called to discuss the high cost of living.

Havelock Wilson, head of the British Seamen's Union was at a banquet with several shipping magnates when he heard that the rank and file refused to accept a wage cut of one pound a month. Just at that moment Lord Crawfish opened a champagne bottle and Wilson fainted. When he revived he inquired anxiously: "Am I badly shot?" "No" replied Lord Crawfish, "not even half enuf. Take another drink."

Al Smith received an autographed photograph from Benito Mussolini. This will insure Al the fascist votes in New York City in his battle with Hylan. Al is the fellow that Morris Hilquit said, would make a good governor.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., paid over six million dollars in income tax. But the socialists say that he has only one vote like the rest of us, therefore we are living under a democracy.

The World Imperialists and the Chinese Revolution

By KARL RADEK

The first wave of the Chinese revolution has shaken the ranks of world imperialism. It has revealed the existence of profound antagonistic interests among the imperialist powers. Of these we will only mention the most important. British and Japanese imperialism are defending the positions they have captured and the rights they have acquired. American imperialism, on the other hand, which before the world war had relatively insignificant interests in China, is now following an uninterrupted upward line of development. It is now beginning to penetrate economically into China and can therefore, far more than the English and Japanese, rely upon the growing force of its economic powers. The simple fact that Japanese goods cannot compete with American goods in quality and in price, the simple fact that the extent of the capital, which is decreasing with every year, that England can invest abroad, renders her incapable of successfully competing with the United States—these facts show how different is the situation of these two main groups of world imperialism.

As regard the other imperialist powers, as for instance France and Italy, they consider their positions in the Chinese struggle as objects of exchange in their European affairs. The Germans who by the Versailles Treaty have lost their extra-territorial rights, display a certain amount of malicious joy. They make a virtue of necessity and make use of the position forced upon them by the Versailles Treaty to extend the influence.

But even among those powers who have the greatest interest in maintaining the status quo—England and Japan—one cannot speak of unity of aims and unity of tactics. The English press, with the "Times" and the "Daily Telegraph" at the head, is attempting to pust Japan into the forefront as regards the defense of all the robber privileges which imperialism has wrung from China. The "Times" of July 6, published a long article under the title "Japan and China" which attempts to prove that here it is a question of life and death for Japan. In this article the whole Chinese revolution is represented as a Russian threat against Japan. "It is not the hostility of the Bolsheviki to England with which Japan must reckon but the growth of Russian influence in China."

In what manner does the growth of this influence threaten Japan?

First, it threatens Japan's military security; second, it threatens Japan's attempts to transplant her surplus population to China. Experience has shown that Manchuria and Korea are not capable of supporting this surplus population; third, Japan needs Chinese cotton, coal and iron. A third of Japan's exports go to China. The Chinese market is the most important one for Japan, as access to it is not made difficult thru customs duties.

These are the arguments of the "Times," which, in the opinion of this organ of English imperialism, must compel Japan to become the chief champion of the imperialist interests in China.

The "Daily Telegraph" which sings the same tune, even went so far as to claim that there existed a danger of war between Japan and America, should America support the Chinese demands. The Americans, when they read this article, probably laughed in their sleeves at the idea that honest John Bull is now attempting to compel Japan, whom only three years ago he betrayed in Washington at the first demand of the United States, to fetch the chestnuts out of the fire for England. Of course, at present a Japanese-American war is impossible for the simple reason, that Japan, who has been weakened by the earthquakes and is dependent upon American credits, is incapable of carrying on a war. But even regarded from the standpoint of future development we must ask: Has Japan any interest in being the champion of English interests in China?

We doubt very much whether the more or less farseeing Japanese politicians view the situation in China with the eyes of the "Times." As regards Japanese security, there exist not the least doubt that the Chinese revolution which has aroused the masses of the Chinese people and which has filled the Chinese troops with a new spirit, is decidedly changing the relations of power in the East. Japan must decide: With China or against China. Should Japan decide to go hand in hand with the European imperialists against China, then of course the endeavors of China would mean a great danger for Japan. But to go hand in hand with the imperialist powers of Europe and America against China means not only to risk the danger of a war with a great and awakening people, to lose popularity thruout all Asia, but to incur the decided danger of being on the losing side. Among the robbers who are preparing to plunder China, Japan would not be the strongest. Not only that, American capital will stake all its cards upon the uniting of China, upon the economic exploitation of the whole of this enormous country, and the Japanese policy of dividing up China could lead in the future to a conflict with America.

It is much more probable that Japan, after certain hesitations, will play the role of that power which would enable the Chinese bourgeoisie to organize a powerful state, that Japan will not play the role of the champion of the dividing up of China, but of the policy of co-operation with the Chinese bourgeoisie.

The economic arguments of the "Times" will not hold water. China is still less suited for the settlement of Japanese than Korea and Manchuria, as it is a very thickly populated country. Japanese emigration is tending towards the islands of the Pacific Ocean and not to China. It is true Japan needs China as a market for her manufactures. Should Japan however, take part in the fight against China, she will only render more difficult her situation in this country, owing to the lack of any possibility of a new division of China. Japan would be very severely hit by a Chinese boycott. On the other hand she has everything to gain by cooperation with the Chinese bourgeoisie, as she is best acquainted with the Chinese market and Chinese habits, and can in many respects promote the industrial organization of China.

There is no doubt that the Japanese government has not yet decided upon a sensible policy towards China. It has not yet quite realized that the time of the 21 demands is already past, it is still under the influence of those Japanese cliques which are immediately interested in the plundering of China. The further development will enlighten the Japanese bourgeoisie as to the growing strength of the Chinese revolution and will compel it to abandon its present policy. The Japanese franchise reform, which is bringing wide circles of the commercial bourgeoisie into contact with state power, will also contribute to this end. At present Japanese policy is vacillating, but the English will hardly succeed in completely harnessing Japan to their chariot.

With regard to the police of America, it would of course, be a great mistake to believe that the Americans would simply renounce the special foreign courts which secure a privileged position to the foreign capitalists. The majority of American capitalists think just as the English capitalists and are of the opinion that the holy work of the capitalists cannot be under the jurisdiction of a court of "Chinese barbarians." The Americans however, are less keen upon the outward form of foreign prestige in China and are ready to grant a number of concessions regarding small and minor questions which do not affect the American money bags, but which, to some extent, pacify Chinese public opinion. The Americans are making a great fuss over the fact that they are studying the question of extra-territorial rights, in order to show the Chinese the prospects of a way out of the present situation: "Introduce proper laws and then we will gladly meet your demands for the abolition of capitalist privileges in China."

As a matter of fact, however, the Americans are endeavoring to get two trumps into their hands; the first trump will consist in allowing the Chinese customs duties to be raised. This question is exceedingly important for the Chinese bourgeoisie and for the Chinese government. For the Chinese bourgeoisie, because the present low and uniform tariff has permitted the foreign bourgeoisie to overflood China with its goods. The raising of the customs duties, however, will render it possible for the Chinese bourgeoisie to build up its own industry. This, however, is not dangerous for America. By means of free competition America will be able to beat the capitalists of other countries. And as regards the growth of Chinese industry, the American bourgeoisie, which has sufficient capital for export at its disposal, is beginning to set up, at a rapid rate, industrial undertakings under the protection of the new Chinese customs duties.

The second American trump is the granting of loans to China. The present American ambassador in Pekin, MacMurray, former chief of the Far Eastern department in the American foreign ministry, shortly before his appointment, published in the April number of the American periodical "Foreign Affairs" an article on the problems of foreign capital in China. In this article he develops the idea of the creation of an international bankers' consortium which would provide China with the necessary funds for the purpose of constructing railways and for other economic undertakings. Such a consortium, declares MacMurray, would free China from the danger of separate actions on the part of the various capitalist groups, who combine the efforts to build railways in China with the effort to divide up China. As at present, however, there is no power apart from the United States which is capable of granting big loans to China, the international consortium would only constitute an indication of the growth of American property in China.

"As regards the abolition of the privileges of the foreigners, the opposition of the foreigners against this demand is based on the fact that the Pekin government is weak and that the anarchy which prevails in China renders the immediate abolition of these privileges impossible. It must not be assumed that they will be soon abolished. But the simple fact such a reform opens up to China the of the discussion of the possibility of prospect of attaining a speedy independence from foreign control.*)"

Thus wrote the "Journal of Commerce" an influential New York financial paper, on the 3rd of July.

American diplomacy is fighting for this program in the negotiations which it is conducting with English and Japanese diplomacy. For the time being all are agreed that the central problem for them consists in the setting up of a Chinese government which will be capable of fighting the growing national movement.

In the article from the "Times" of the 6th of July, which we have already quoted, the way is indicated which the great powers will in all probability follow. This article states that Japan does not think of the possibility of setting up a strong Chinese government by means of a national conference.

"Who is to take part in this conference? The military governors who have brot China into its present situation. Many of them are not even endeavoring to consolidate their own power. They only collect funds with which they then settle in the treaty ports. The Pekin politicians on the other hand only represent themselves and their wishes. They would very willingly sell themselves as well as China. The students understand neither the outer world nor China with her 400 million peasants. The officials, bankers, business people would give expression to patriotic views, but which they cannot realize*)."

Where then is the point of support to be found? Now such a point of support exists:

"Chang Tso Lin possesses certain qualities which win him respect. He governs Manchuria well, he is at present the strongest military governor of China. Should he succeed in arriving at an agreement with Wu Pei Fu, then he could break the influence of Feng Yu Hsiang and rule over Northern and Central China. As an open problem there would then remain the red government in Canton. It is true, one cannot solve all the Chinese problems at once. Should a Chinese government arise, possessing authority in Northern and Central China, this would mean a great step towards the stabalizing of China*)."

This program is put forward by the "Times" as the program of Japan. But in reality it is the program of England, and forces are already to be seen which are endeavoring to make it also the program of America.

The plan of the imperialists therefore, consists in opposing the Chinese revolutionary movement with a military government which is to be supported by the upper section of the Chinese bourgeoisie, which has been bought with loans and concessions, and whcih would be capable of suppressing the revolutionary movement.

CHINESE STUDENTS' ALLIANCE TO HOLD CONFERENCE AT SYRACUSE; "NATIONALISM AND CHINA" THEME

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 3.—The twenty-first annual conference of the Chinese Students' Alliance, Eastern Section, will begin here at 2 p. m., Friday, September 4, on the campus of the Syracuse University.

The numerous delegation is expected to arrive not later than Friday afternoon, as the big ceremony of the first day is the evening banquet. Great interest is aroused among the whole Chinese student body of the Eastern Section by the conference theme, which is to be "Nationalism and China."

Why Not Hear Communists?

All addresses, forums and literary efforts will bear upon this theme, and at the end it is hoped to embody all findings in one memorandum. Many prominent people have been invited to address the conference, but it is not divulged whether or not any American Communists have been asked to appear and present the Communist viewpoint upon "Nationalism and China."

The events in China have given the students cause for profound consideration of the problems of their people in relation to the development of capitalist imperialism, and while there is much of athletics, sports, fun and social affairs on the program of the conference, the students are due to be tested as to their variance from the insane rah-rah type of Goose Step scholasticism of American students.

"The conference," says the announcement sent out by the officials of the alliance, "is held at a peculiar time the national affairs at home are becoming graver every day. Because the intellectual class is taking a lead and directing the rising tide of nationalism, the prospect is becoming ever brighter."

No Ambiguity.

If this is to mean that the cause of national emancipation is to find the intellectual class as ready to do and to die as were the mill workers and house boys who shed their life blood on Nanking Road, then the Syracuse student conference will be steering its collective mind in the right direction.

But if the concept is fostered that the intellectual class has interests or can have interests opposed to those of the masses of workers and peasants of China, and that these masses are to be used for and not aided by the intellectual class, then the prospects, instead of becoming "brighter" are decidedly darker for those who see in the Chinese nationalist victory over foreign imperialism a forward step in the history of the whole human race.

Some indication of the way the subject of the conference is to be dealt with is given in the order of developing, printed in the announcement as being: "1. What is the background that aroused national consciousness in China? 2. What are the meaning and concepts of nationalism? 3. How to promote nationalism in China?"

Subjects Handled.

Under debates the following topics suggested to teams are also indicative of the trend of the students' mind in the alliance: "1. Resolved, that the nationalism shall be advocated as the educational policy in present China. 2. Resolved, that Chinese students shall participate in political affairs. 3. Resolved, that foreign capital shall be used in developing industries in China. 4. Resolved, that the federation system shall be adopted in China rather than the central government system."

An engaging part of the whole conference is that Chinese girl students are not only present in numbers but share in intellectual and athletic contests with the men. The conference will end Sept. 12.

AUSTRALIAN COMMUNISTS URGE ITALIAN IMMIGRANT WORKERS TO ASK SAME WAGE AS NATIVES

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BRISBANE, Australia, Sept. 3.—The Communist Party of Australia has issued a manifesto to Italian immigrant workers in the sugar plantations of Northern Queensland, asking them not to work for less than the ruling wage and working conditions, warning them that employers are seeking to exploit them because they are new to the country. The manifesto also calls on the Italians to organize with a view to defeating the employers' move to exploit them also with a view to making common cause with the Australian working class on all questions.

Execution of Comrade Naftali Botwin

(Communication received by the I. R. A. from Warsaw.)

It is five minutes past 12. As yet no reply from Warsaw, and so Comrade Botvin will be executed in ten minutes.

Elbowing my way thru the crowd at the prison gates I present my documents and enter the prison yard. A dark, narrow passage between two prison buildings against the window panes of which the prisoners faces are pressed. A turning and yet another turning—and I have before me a small yeard ending in a narrow outlet.

This is the place of execution.

All the preliminary arrangements are already made. Under a grey and dilapidated wall a palliasse is standing erect to prevent a rebound—in front of the mattress is a chair, and that is all the condemned person needs for his last journey.

The small area not more than 40 steps across is surrounded by a close semi-circle of policemen and prison guards.

Within the semi-circle is a platoon of soldiers of the 26th regiment and a small group of witnesses: The Public Prosecutor Tzibuliak, some members of the court, a few reporters and officials, police agents and officers.

It is ten past 12. The tension is growing. All eyes are turned on the empty place in front of the arm chair and are finally turned towards the immovable figures of the soldiers with rifles pointed at attention.

Next to me someone relates in a broken voice particulars about Comrade Botvin's frame of mind on his return from the court.

He was calm, he spoke soothingly to his mother. He refused the services of the rabbi, declaring that only servile creatures believe in religion.

He drank two glasses of wine. He told his counsel, Asker, who tried to give him courage, "not to waste his time."

It is 12 minutes past twelve.

I have a slight choking sensation in the throat. . . Death, certain death will come the next minute, it will come calmly and with relentless inevitability. Someone is nervously lighting a cigarette, someone else is wiping his glasses mechanically.

Suddenly from the passage thru which Botvin is to come a voice is heard singing the "Red Flag." Botvin appears in the yard surrounded by police.

Mechanically, like a marionette, he takes up his stand in front of the armchair, takes up an erect position and puts his arms down. He is a distance of 15 steps from me. He looks almost the same as on the day when I saw him in court.

Hatless and collarless he puts his crooked legs a little apart and looks with his small eyes at the muzzle of the rifles. He does not show any sign of nervousness. But close scrutiny shows that he is breathing heavily. From time to time he moves his pale lips as if he would like to say something. Then looking round the close semi-circle of bayonets he shakes his head.

He regains calm and lowers his head slowly as if extremely surprised at something.

The place of execution has a sinister aspect, squashed in between the high prison buildings.

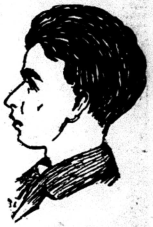
Judge Malinovsky reads the sentence of the court. When asked if he has a last request to make Botvin gives answer in the negative. A dead silence reigns such as is only possible in the face of death. I heard the heart beats of the people next to me. The muzzles of the rifles are slowly lowered.

Naftali Botwin



The 19-year-old member of the Young Communist League of Poland executed for the alleged assassination of the provocateur Cechnovski.

Then the glitter of the sword gives the signal and a stifled cry: "DOWN—DOWN WITH THE BOURGEOISIE LONG LIVE THE SOCIAL REVOLUTION."

A second later—the hollow sound of the rifles.

A blood red foam spurted out of the skull pierced by five bullets.

Without a groan, without a movement, Botvin fell heavily to the ground face downwards. The bullets had smashed the back of the skull, the brain splashed on the palliasse on the ground and armchair. Beside the corpse there was a pool of blood.

Attendants from among the prisoners entered the yard and placed the dead body into a box.

THE WORKERS PARTY MOBILIZES

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

THE August issue of the Locomotive Engineers' Journal is like the official organ of the National City Bank, in the sense that it deals with hardly anything else but banking. No other labor organization in the United States has so completely broken with the class struggle as the B. of L. E. At the present stage of capitalist development in this country, a stage which finds it on the top of the heap, there is little possibility that the membership of the engineers' union will repudiate business unionism, in the near future.

THE time will come, however, as it came in England, when capitalism will no longer be able to nourish a favored class of labor aristocrats at the expense of the great masses, particularly the unskilled and the colonial peoples. Recently, during the threatened coal strike in England, the railroad engineers were willing to cast their lot with the miners and the transport workers because their own standard of living, which hitherto was better than the average, was threatened in the general assault on the working class. British capitalism is no longer able to give more favored terms to the more highly skilled workers.

LORD ROBERT CECIL and James Ramsay MacDonald are the two favorite candidates for the Nobel peace prize. Cecil was one of the main props of the league of nations. He stands high with the liberal pacifists. He believes in peace between capitalist powers but has no objection to waging war on subject peoples, such as the Hindoos, Egyptians and Arabs. MacDonald believes in peace between capitalist powers but he favors war against Soviet Russia. When he was premier, British airplanes dropped bombs on Indian villages. Yes, both deserve the Nobel peace prize. By the way, Nobel made his money in explosives.

BABE RUTH went on a drunk and and his manager fined him $5,000 and suspended him. Babe made the front page and stayed there for a whole day. Ruth swings a vicious bat, but one of the American league magnates declares that he has the brains of a sixteen-year-old boy. Perhaps that accounts for his popularity. Coolidge should beware. If the fact becomes generally known, Babe would make a dangerous candidate for the G. O. P. nomination.

IT is reported that the Turks have taken to business and are turning their backs on the favorit outdoor sport of true followers of Mahomet. That used to be fighting. Of course, the Turks, like all races, that have been more or less subjected to the great imperialist powers, have suffered from the sneers and jibes of the "superior" nations. It served the interests of those powers to picture the Turk as bloodthirsty barbarians. As a matter of fact, they were and are much more humane than the average Christian. Americans traveling thru Turkey remarked with surprise that all the doors were neither locked nor bolted. "It is not necessary," said the guide. "There is not a Christian within one hundred miles of here."

THE French foreign office will reply to the Soviet offer to make a settlement on the debt question, by expressing its gratitude for the Soviet offer, but regretting its inability to loan any money owing to the deplorable state of its own finances. France is spending millions of francs daily in Morocco and in Syria and has little to spare for such a worthy purpose as helping to reconstruct Soviet industry. France has neither the will nor the way.

DANGER!

THESE ARE THE FIRST WEEK'S QUOTAS:

Branches of 10 members or less	at least $ 5.00
Branches of up to 25 members	at least $10.00

PRESSMEN TO CARRY ON FIGHT AT CUNEO PLANT

The walkout of the pressmen and feeders at the Cuneo Printing company plant still continues, with George L. Berry and his international board of directors doing their level best to supply scabs.

Feeling against Berry is mounting. It is safe to say that ninety-five per cent of the membership in Locals 3 and 4 are now against him.

One of the locked out pressmen who fought in the world war and participated in many of the most important battles in which the American army participated, stated yesterday to the DAILY WORKER that "Majah" Berry never handled a gun at the front but spent most of his time grafting while the war was on. While Berry was calling on the workers of the United States to participate in the 'war for democracy" he was fastening his iron rule on the Printing Pressmen's Union.

Pinchot's Labor Department Leaves Workers Unguarded

HARRISBURG, Pa., Sept. 4—The department of labor and industry of Pennsylvania has rescinded a ruling that belts and pulleys, except flanged pulleys, on hosiery machines need not be guarded.

The reversal is applauded by the National Association of Hosiery and Underwear Maunfacturers which had argued that these guards were not necessary and would involve costly changes in machinery. The guards were originally ordered as part of a safety program to prevent accidents.

Permanent Injury, Temporary Pay.

WATERTOWN, Conn., Sept. 4—Ninety per cent loss of his right hand, a permanent injury, maiming Charles Bender of Oakville for life, brings him compensation only for the limited period of 140.4 weeks at $12.87 a week, under a workmen's compensation award. The injury was sustained in the plant of the Watertown Manufacturing Co., an open shop concern.

MASS PICKETING AT CLOTH PLANT THIS TUESDAY

Amalgamated Increases Strike Benefits

The strike benefit paid to the employes of the International Tailoring company has been increased three dollars per week, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' officials announced at the strike meeting yesterday at Hod Ca[illegible]ers' Hall. The strikers decided to make, Tuesday morning, September 10, a day of mass picketing, in celebration of Labor Day, and to show the solidarity of the strikers. The strike meeting on that day will be shortened in order to allow all of the strikers to be on the picket line.

The Amalgamated officials declared they knew nothing of the shooting of two strikebreaking employes of the International Tailoring company yesterday at West Chicago Ave., and North Oakley Blvd., Louis J. Lyons, 2926 Pine Grove Ave., Emil Benson, North Leavitt St., and Joseph Dicosola were riding to work in an auto. Lyons the driver, was shot in the leg, and Dicosola was shot in the head. Both will recover.

Isadore Rothbart, business agent of the pantsmakers, and leader of the strike, pointed out to the DAILY WORKER, that in the Amalgamated strike here in 1910, the Lamm and Co. garment manufacturers hired stool pigeons to break their windows in order to have something to blame on the strikers. The stool pigeons confessed, and signed affidavits that they had been hired to create trouble, Rothbart said.

Another theory advanced by some of the strikers is that the small clothing companies, who find it difficult to compete with the International, have seized on the strike as an opportune time to make trouble for the larger concern.

Rothbart at the strike meeting replied to the challenge of the International to send reporters to New York to see whether the plant there is working with strikebreakers, declared it was significant that the International refused to send representatives of working class newspapers, but wished to accept the report of the bosses' sheets.

On Monday, the new strike benefit, $15.00 to married strikers and $11.00 to strikers without dependents, will be paid.

To Break Strike With Bituminous

BOSTON, Sept. 4.—Transportation facilities to effectively transport 2,000,000 tons of low volatile bituminous coal needed in Massachusetts during the next seven months if the anthracite strike continues was asked of the interstate commerce commission today by Gov. Alvan T. Fuller.

Practice of speculators swapping bills of lading on anthracite whenever there is a real or theoretical shortage was called to the attention of the commission by the governor.

AMALGAMATED STRIKER ARRESTED, WHEREABOUTS UNKNOWN, TO GET WRIT

John Bolicki, a striking member of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, was arrested on the picket line yesterday in front of the struck plant of the International Tailoring company.

The attorneys for the Amalgamated were unable to determine yesterday where the striker had been taken, or what charge has been placed against him. They declare that they are tired of having the police hold the strikers as long as they please without booking and then charge them with "disorderly conduct."

A writ of habeaes corpus will immediately be secured, the Amalgamated lawyers declared, to secure the release of the striker.

Full Communist Strength Is Mustered for Struggle

Today the mobilization call of the Central Executive Committee goes forth to the whole membership of the Workers (Communist) Party demanding that it rally its full strength for work in the class struggle in this country. The call reviews the situation in the party during the last ten months, points out the needs of the present hour and then maps out the work for the future.

"We must take up these tasks with energy and enthusiasm and our Party will quickly make great strides forward," declares the call which is in full as follows:

Our Party Must Now Mobilize for Work.

Statement to the Membership by the Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party.

THE period of controversy in our party is over. The party must now mobilize its full strength for work in the class struggle in this country.

The National Convention of the party and the Communist International have rendered their decisions laying down the policy and leadership for the party. These decisions are the basis for united work of the whole party membership for the upbuilding of the Communist movement and the Communist Party in this country.

The Struggle in the Party.

FOR a period of ten months the membership of the party has concentrated its attention upon the inner party situation. It has discussed in the party the correct line of policy and the question of leadership thru which our party could become the leader of the American working class.

Some comrades bemoan the fact that we have such a bitter struggle in the party. To these comrades we must say that it is part of the development of a Communist party to closely examine its policies and its leadership and in the fire of the controversy to hammer out correct policies and build up a competent leadership for the party.

Our party should be more capable for its work in the class struggle thru the lesson learned in the controversy which has just come to an end. Our party has gained an inner strength which should make it stronger and more ready for the accomplishment of its tasks.

The Controversy Is Closed.

WITH the registering of a decision however, the controversy and discussion must come to an end. The convention of our party and the Communist International have rendered such a decision.

The Communist International declared to the National Convention thru its representative, "It has finally become clear that the Ruthenberg group is more loyal to the decision of the Communist International and stands closer to its views." The convention accepted this statement and constituted the Central Executive Committee accordingly.

The National Convention, unanimously adopted the resolutions of the Parity Commission laying down the policy to be pursued by the party for the immediate future

Thus we have in the decision of the convention the basis for unifying our party. The convention has laid the foundation to again mobilize the party in the class struggle and to go forward with renewed energy, renewed vigor, renewed enthusiasm in building our party into a powerful mass Communist party, which will become the leader of the American working class.

No Discrimination—Every Party Worker Needed.

THE bitterness of the struggle we have had in the party may lead some comrades to fear that a policy of discrimination and persecution will be followed towards comrades who were in disagreement with the present party leadership. The Central Executive Committee declares categorically that every party worker is needed for the party work. It declares that it will seek to give opportunities to every party comrade to use his ability in the service of the party and that it will not tolerate a policy of persecution or discrimination because of past differences on the question of policy and leadership.

The task of the hour in our party is to unify all the Communist elements in the party in one solid block. The party must become such a monolithic party as is described by the Communist International in its thesis on the Bolshevization of the Communist parties. To build such a monolithic party, to unify its leadership, is the first great goal which the Central Executive Committee will endeavor to achieve.

Into the Class Struggle.

THE condition under which the unification of the party can be most quickly achieved is the mobilization of the membership in a common struggle against the common enemy. We must recover the ground we have lost in the past ten months because of erroneous policies and due

CHINESE BOYCOTT AGAINST THE BRITISH IS EFFECTIVE, TEXTILE BARONS ADMIT IN OWN JOURNAL

NEW YORK, Sept. 4.—That the boycott against British goods which is one of the weapons of the Chinese strikers is hitting its target is admitted by British textile owners quoted in New York textile journals. Before the trouble started British worsted and woolen manufacturers were finding an increasing market in China and this market is now badly shot.

The importance of the market now crippled by the Chinese resistance is shown in an interview with H. Sutcliffe Smith, member of the executive committee of the directors of the Bradford Dyers' Association. For the year ending December 31, 1924, he said, a total of 9,882,163 pounds sterling of woolen and worsted goods was shipped to China. "The dislocation of this business with China," he continued, "will be all the more keenly felt as trade generally in the British woolen and worsted industries is unsatisfactory."

LABOR DAY HOLIDAYS HIT THE DAILY WORKER; NEXT ISSUE WEDNESDAY

Due to usual holiday season incidental to Labor Day, no issue of the DAILY WORKER will be put out on Sunday and Monday, the issues dated Monday and Tuesday. The next issue of the DAILY WORKER, therefore, will be dated Wednesday. In the meantime all our readers should spend every spare moment collecting funds to help save their daily in the present crisis. LABOR FACES DREAD STATE AT SAN DIEGO

Overlords Lay Down Low Wage Law

By PRAPTIKA.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 4. — Suicide statistics, just issued, show San Diego still leading all other cities of the United States. Los Angeles is well to the fore and, if exaggeration of population claims could be gauged, would most probably rank first for suicides as to cities of similar size.

There is no question as to the standing of San Diego. For the number of suicides per 1,000 inhabitants the port of lost opportunity is far ahead of all other cities, large or small, in the United States.

Comments of Bunco Experts.

Commenting on the undesirable distinction, the San Diego Union, published by John D. Spreckels, multi-millionaire mandatory of the city, attributes the high rate of suicides to social derelicts who make their last stand for existence in the military port. The comfortably placed and handy chief of police of San Diego agrees with the Union and that ought to settle the question.

But it does not. There are those who insist that many suicides are due to horse race gambling at Tia Juana, 16 miles south of San Diego. Spreckels is behind the horse races. Others claim that Tia Juana alcohol kicks off many into graves of suicides. San Diego capitalists supply the alcohol.

Victims Lured.

The San Diego chamber of commerce operates the San Diego Club, where men and women are employed to write stories for Eastern publications. Identity of the club as a part of the chamber is kept secret. The purpose is to induce Easterners to come to San Diego where words, with artificial honey flavor, will be offered them in exchange for their money.

Thousands of workers are attracted by the disguised advertisements. These are victims, recruits for the ranks of the suicides.

Altho there are practically no prospects for employment, the toilers, seeking livelihoods in the strange city, are given most encouraging promises by San Diegans as long as they have a dollar to spend. No mechanic or laborer with savings is ever too poor

UNITED MINE WORKERS' UNION REPORTS SHOW LEWIS' FRAUD IN PACKING LAST CONVENTION

By ALEX REID

(Secretary of the Progressive Miners' Committee.)

Two very important reports are now published by the International office of the U. M. W. of A., which it is the duty of all members in the union to study deeply, as it exposes one of the ways that the Lewis machine has kept its power, defeats the will of the rank and file, and is destroying the union at a rapid rate, far more rapidly than the miners realize.

In the vote cast for the resolution to take from Lewis the appointive power at the International convention in Indianapolis, the report shows that the same forces which were against the appointive power of Lewis, were the forces that were lined up solidly with Alex Howat for reinstatement into the union of all the expelled progressives.

Illinois Solid for Progressives.

The convention report shows that Illinois, the strongest single unit in the miners' union and a one hundred per cent organised district, voted almost solidly against the appointive power of Lewis; and remember that Illinois is Lewis' home state, where the miners know him best. The vote from Illinois was 856 votes against Lewis and 97 votes in his favor.

A careful perusal of the votes cast from the districts where a one hundred per cent organization did not exist, in the report recently published, showing the local unions that are actually existing in these districts, will explain why the progressive forces were defeated by a few votes on important measures in the last international convention, and clearly proves that the convention was packed by delegates from these districts.—from blue sky or non-existing locals.

Fine Lot of Blue Sky Locals.

For instance, District No. 4, or the Collinsville coke region, was represented in the convention by ten locals, and in secretary Kennedy's report we find that only four local unions exist and that there are only twelve members in all four!

Under the law of the United Mine Workers, these ten local unions are existing illegally as there cannot be ten members in each local union. They most likely consist of nothing more than International officers and organisers. In District Nine, a comparison shows that only 92 local unions exist but that one hundred and two local unions were represented at the last International convention and few of these local unions cast less than four and five votes each.

Machining Up the Vote.

The votes in District Ten were cast by three men, two who were on the pay roll, the other a rank and file member represented one local union and voted against the machine, but Sam Caddy and Martin J. Flysik, pay roll officials, represented five local unions, and cast them solid for the machine.

What happened in Colorado? This district was represented at the convention by three who were on the pay roll and who cast 16 local union votes. The report further shows that there are 27 local unions with a total paid up membership of 224 in the entire state. This is not enuf to allow all of them to exist as it would require 270 members to allow that amount, even if the membership was evenly divided among the local unions, which they are not.

Not One Local, But 22 Votes.

District 16, Maryland, had 22 votes and they were voted by men on the pay roll. The last report of the Lewis fakers shows that not a local union exists in Maryland. They have wiped it out entirely. In District 17, W. Va., as I reported the other day in the DAILY WORKER, Lewis and his gang have practically destroyed the union entirely. The district has dropped in membership from 23,000 to 1,400.

A Big Difference.

District 19, West Virginia and Eastern Kentucky at the convention had 80 locals represented. Kennedy's report now shows 14 locals with 500 paid up members. A drop in membership from 3,900 to 507.

Alabama was represented at the convention by seven locals. Kennedy's report shows five locals, now existing with 14 members or not enuf for more than one local to exist under the laws of the miners' union. At the convention the Lewis gang reported there were 300 members, now they have completely destroyed it.

Oklahoma had 103 locals with a paid up membership of 7,000 at the convention, now it his 60 locals with a paid up membership of 3,000.

All thru the report we find the glaring fact that Lewis and his treacherous gang are destoying the union that was once the pride of the American labor movement. Our movement is being rent assunder by treason and class collaboration. The militant left wing is being exterminated, and war to a finish is raging thruout many of the districts.

KELLOGG SPEECH TIES STRING ON CHINA FREEDOM

Hints Obscurely at Secret Agreement

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 4.—Speaking before the American Bar Association, Secretary of State Kellogg last night put forth one more qualified pretension of friendship for China in her struggle for national independence.

He said that "the powers have all come to the conclusion that the tariff conference will have to be broadened beyond the strict letter of the Washington treaty." This is regarded as a subtle bid for Chinese favor, without shedding any light on what the discussions are which have been going on secretly between the imperialist powers.

Kellogg stated that the government of the United States would be willing to give up these extra-territorial rights. But he qualified the remark by saying that this would happen only when China "performs the obligations of a sovereign state in the protection of foreign citizens and their property."

This is recognized as the same sort of pressure put on Mexico by the American government, and the success of forcing Calles into complete surrender to American imperialism, is giving head to the effort to make the Chinese government suppress all effective nationalist forces, especially the Canton government, before according her "consideration." And then subjecting, after disarming, her.

However, political observers regard that China is a far different problem. The nationalist movement is crystallized and strong enuf to escape control in China, however much any Chinese Calles may wish to surrender to alien pressure in return for compromises and loans.

STRIKE CUTS ANGLO-FRENCH CHANNEL LINE

Majestic Sails Only by Supreme Effort

LONDON, Sept. 4.—The British seamen's strike, called against a wage cut of $5 a month, spread yesterday to the channel boats and tied up tourist traffic between England and the continent. Crews of steamers from Southampton to Havre and from Caen to the Channel Islands are completely tied up and tourists bound to France are unable to get across.

The ship owners have, in the case of the White Star liner Majestic, won a temporary victory. The boat sailed from Southampton on schedule, however, only as a result of heroic efforts to get scabs to man her. And these scabs got through the pickets only by not going to the docks at all, but being taken in two tugs to Cowes road, where the Majestic picked them up as she got away from the harbor.

Scabs Have Hot Job

But these scabs, who are furnished by the national employment association for ex-service men, a part of the British fascist movement similar in strike-breaking tactics to the American legion, are not expected to be over joyful at the job of shoveling coal in the belly of a great ocean liner, a place compared to which hell is a summer resort.

The Majestic sailing is being used as propaganda to spread the false report that the strike is broken. Yet the Majestic is only one of hundreds of ships in many ports, and all efforts had to be concentrated on her to get her out on schedule. Other ships are tied up, and news from Southampton tells of another great liner losing her crew.

The Sun Don't Set on This Strike

In other ports the strike is spreading and from all corners of the British empire news of its force is received. Australia, New Zealand and Africa all report serious tie-ups.

What Does Kellogg Mean?

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4.—Interpretation of the Detroit speech of Secretary Kellogg on China's chance of getting back her national sovereignty, by diplomats in Washington, is that he no longer feels that there is need of prompt action in line with the Chinese demands made in a note to the powers on June 26.

That note has not yet been answered by the joint conference of diplomats of the foreign powers in Pekin. It was a demand for restoration to China of the national rights gradually taken from her by armed force during the past hundred years.

Haney vs. Coolidge

WASHINGTON, —(FP)— Bert E. Haney of Oregon, member of the shipping board, refuses to resign at the demand of President Coolidge. He resents Coolidge's statement that he, Haney, is violating the terms of the federal shipping law in trying to get rid of Admiral Leigh Palmer, head of the emergency fleet corporation. Bert E. Haney has a recess appointment for his second term on the board, but he will either he summarily removed or will be replaced by a new selection when congress meets.

Poison Reports Unfounded.

LONDON, Sept. 4.—Reports of an attempt to poison King Boris of Bulgaria, published in Rome, were without confirmation here today, and officials of the Bulgarian legation were inclined to discredit the reports.

According to a Roman newspaper King Boris is under the care of court physicians, after it was discovered that a dish prepared for him contained typhoid germs.

Cholera in Jap Ports.

Tokio, Sept. 4.—Asiatic cholera which recently made its dread appearance in Japanese ports is increasing, sixteen cases having been reported in Yokahoma. More than 50,000 have been given anti-cholera injections and all precautions are being taken against an epidemic.

Foundry Plant Destroyed.

Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 3—Damage estimated at $50,000 was done by a fire that swept the Peerless Foundry company plant here early today. A section of the plant was destroyed before the flames finally were brot under control. Origin of the blaze was undetermined.

Civic Federation Head Has List of Favorites That Labor Must Fight

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, printed copies of the recent red-baiting speech of Ralph Montgomery Easley, chairman of the executive council of the class-collaborating National Civic Federation, are laid upon the desks of the officials of labor in Washington, D. C.

"Open Shop" Easley assures these officials, not only of the American Federation of Labor, but of the mine workers', carpenters', machinists' and ladies' garment workers' unions, to mention a few, that he has drawn both inspiration and encouragement for his attack on the Communists, from their war upon the militants in their respective organizations.

The agent of the great employers recognizes as his best aids in battling labor's progress the officials of the trade unions supposed to fight labor's cause against the exploiters.

But Easley will not be satisfied with inspiration from Green, Lewis, Johnston, Sigman and Hutcheson. Nor will he stop by merely accepting their applause. His printed speech is a clarion call to these traitor labor officials to support him in winning legislation from the next congress, that convenes in December, "for punishment of persons who utter or publish ideas favorable to a forcible change in our form of government."

That means an energetic attempt is to be made to get the legal sanction of congress, not only for the imprisonment of Communists and the censorship and suppression of Communist publications, but to make ruthless war against all militant trade unionists who recognize the class struggle and seek to develop the trade unions into organs to carry on this struggle. Co-operation of the reactionary and class-collaborating heads of the trade unions with the bosses in getting this legislation is the logical development of their militant-baiting policies.

• • • •

Easley raises the world situation as a nightmare with which to frighten timid labor spokesmen to his side. He says:

> "The cabled news from all parts of the globe might lead one almost to conclude that Moscow is beginning to make good its threat to produce world revolution."

Easley then cites developments in China, India, Persia, the Balkans, in England, France, fascist Italy, Japan, Morocco and Mèxico.

But none of these developments, growing out of the immediate struggles of the workers of these countries, should frighten American labor. If they put the white imprint of fear on the faces of Easley and his friends that is reason why they should flush red the faces of all labor with joy and happiness.

Every gain of subject nations and oppressed peoples is a help to struggling labor in the imperialist home countries. And all thinking workers everywhere felt the thrill of enthusiasm grow greater and greater as the British coal miners laid down the law of the class fight to the British coal barons.

Only the labor traitors can be won by such arguments as Easley advances. The favoritism of this bosses' agent must put the stamp of treason upon all who receive it.

The next congress will be used to pass legislation strengthening the capitalist state, wherever it has shown indications of weakness. This means a more successful war against the workers, if the plan succeeds. It is not too early to start the counter-drive of labor. Exception laws against the toiling masses, legislation against the foreign-born, the strengthening of the police power of the state, must be bitterly opposed. This means opposing and ridding the labor movement of all class-collaborating traitors, the Greens, the Berrys, the Johnstons, the Hutchesons, the Sigmans and the Lewises. Easley's mailing list of favorite labor leaders contains the names of those trade union officials that the workers must not only fear but fight.

CAL AND HOOVER TURN ALASKA OVER TO GUGGENHEIM AND SALMON TRUST

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4.— Congressman Free of California is going to demand the tearing up of the government's railroad in Alaska, built at a cost of nearly $60,000,000, it is learned.

A dozen years ago there appeared no reason why Alaska should not rapidly gain in population and wealth, and it was demonstrated that much of the interior would produce foodstuffs.

But the Guggenheims had the only steamship line running to Alaskan ports. The Guggenheims were charging extortionately high freight rates on all goods shipped into the territory from the United States. The Wilson administration did not establish the proposed government shipping line. The Harding administration did nothing. The Coolidge administration sat tight, while the Guggenheim freight rates slowly checked Alaska.

A majority of the population have returned to the states. Business is stagnant. Washington seems to have abandoned Alaska t othe Guggenheims and to the California fishing trust, which takes the salmon from the sea just off the mouths of the Alaska rivers.

The latest move has been an order from Secretary Hoover, closing the shallow fishing waters to the coast Indians' fishing boats, so that the Indians are starving.

Cappellini Faces Two Fights.

SCRANTON, Pa., Sept. 4.—Rinaldo Cappellini, president District No. 1, United Mine Workers, is not only conducting the anthracite strike in his district, but is defendant in a fraudulent election charge brot in the courts against him by W. J. Brennan, former president and defeated rival. Cappellini first was elected on an anti-Lewis platform, but has since co-operated closely with the international president of the miners.

Big Bakery Closed by Strike.

NEW YORK.—A hundred per cent strike and effective picketing is tying up the big Fleischman Vienna Model Baker plant. The firm declared open shop since control was purchased by the General Baking Co.

Senator of Rhode Island Ordered Textile Pay Cut

AUBURN, N. Y., Sept. 4.—(FP)—United States Senator Metcalf of Rhode Island gave the order for the 10 per cent cut of the employes of the Auburn Woolen Co., it was learned after the workers went out on strike. Superintendent Clark told a strikers' committee that he would put their demands up to Metcalf. The orders for the cut, he said, came from the Providence offices of the Metcalf interests the senator heads and which own the Auburn company.

Senator Metcalf is an old line union buster. In Rhode Island he is known as the father of the 2-loom system for it was under his leadership that the number of looms per weaver was doubled years ago.

On account of Labor Day the meeting of the Progressive Building Trades group scheduled is postponed. Members will be notified of the next meeting.

PEASANTS' TRIAL IN BESSARABIA AIMS AT SOVIET

Five Hundred Charged with Rebellion

BUCHAREST, Sept. 4.— The trial of the five hundred Bessarabian peasant revolutionaries has opened in Kishieev. The peasants are charged with participation in the revolt in Tartar-Bunar (South Bessarabia) in September, 1924. They have been confined in prisons under unimaginable conditions since that time.

The trial has been postponed time and again to allow for extensive "examinations" by the "Siguranza," the Roumanian secret police. These examinations have been exposed as a serious of vicious third degrees in which physical torture played a prominent part.

Long Trial Looked For.

The indictment consists of 600 pages of matter. It will take weeks before the peasants become acquainted with the charges against them since in addition to the lengthy documents, few of the peasants understand Roumanian, the official language. 800 witnesses will be called by the state and it is expected the trial will last two and one-half months.

The Tartar-Bunar insurrection was a revolt against the oppression of the Boyar landowners who came into power with the Roumanian occupation. Shortly after the war, Roumania, taking advantage of the civil war in Russia, occupied Bessarabia which had belonged to the latter country. The Bessarabians fought bitterly against the incursion and have repeatedly arisen against the occupants. Every movement so far, however, has been defeated by the superior armed forces of the Roumanians. The last revolt was that of the Tartar-Bunars and in addition to the arrests more than 1,000 peasants were killed in its suppression.

Anti-Soviet Campaign.

The present mass-trial of the Tartar-Bunars is not the first to be staged by the Roumanians in Bessarabia. There have been a series of such trials since the occupation, altho the present one is the largest thus far. The Bratianu government is bitterly anti-Soviet and the main basis of the case against the peasants consists in the charge that the Tartar-Bunar peasants formed an alliance with the Soviets to aid them in their insurrection. The yellow press is aiding the prosecution by carrying on a vindictive press campaign against Soviet Russia.

The main defendants in the case are the peasants Ninin and Sismon, who were at the head of the revolutionary committee that led the revolt last September. Feeling is running high among the workers and peasants of Bessarabia as the result of the trial and its attendant persecutions. It is only by means of the most brutal terror that the Roumanian government is able to keep the Bessarabians in leash. New arrests are always on the order of the day. It is thot in many quarters that the present trial is giving a powerful impetus to the already strong movement for Bessarabian independence from the domination of the Roumanian Boyars.

INJUNCTION SERVED ON JOINT ACTION COMMITTEE PICKETING; ATTACKS COMMUNIST DOCTRINES

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 4.—Notice was served at 6 o'clock yesterday evening upon Louis Hyman, Sascha Zimmerman and Julius Portnoy, that an injunction had been granted against them and five members of the union who are on strike from the Artman & Saltzman shop at 111 W. 27th Street, prohibiting them "from picketing the place of business of the plaintiffs in any manner whatsoever, and from congregating and standing in the street near the place of business of the plaintiffs."

This is a temporary injunction, granted by Justice Aaron J. Levy, of the New York state supreme court, and it comes up for hearing on the 4th of September at 10 a. m.

Communist Doctrines Enjoined.

The defendants are said, by the firm of Artman and Saltzman, to be part of a group of union members suspended by the officers of the International "on account of the dissemination of Communist doctrines in said locals which are contrary to the real interests and aims of labor unions and to the laws and constitution of the United States."

With the injunction were brot copies of depositions made by various members of the firm and employes in the shop telling how they had been interferred with on their way to work on various days since August 21.

A Pretty Lot.

Those who signed such statements for the firm were Michael Lipkowitz, a cutter; Benjamin Rothman a presser; Ruth Saltzman, a dress operator (and sister of a member of the firm); Irene Saltzman, dress operator, also a sister; Cisylin Bonitto, a finisher acting as a scab; Maisie Carew, a draper; and a final statement is made by Hyman Press, manager of the dress manufacturers' associations, in which he testifies that the strike called by the Joint Committee is not sanctioned by the union officials.

Four picketers arrested last Thursday, August 27, in front of the Siesser Dress Co. at 13-15 East 22nd street, appeared this morning for hearing in the 57th street police court on a charge of disorderly conduct.

Jennie Locker, Helen Horn and Frances Alasio were released on a suspended sentence. Rose Chester, who was not a member of the striking shop, was fined $10.

Arbitration Lure Ends Woolen Strike in Pittsfield Mills

BOSTON, —(FP)— The first big walkout against the 10 per cent cuts in the woolen and worsted mills ends with the return of the 3,000 strikers in the Pittsfield mills. The men are back under the cut with the promise of investigation and arbitration. Harold L. Goeway, a local attorney, is representing the men; the manufacturers will appoint a second member of the arbitration committee and these two will select a third arbitrator. No decision is expected for a month.

Smaller strikes start day by day in various woolen centres in Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York and Massachusetts. The last two are at Holyoke and Worchester. In Holyoke weavers quit the Holyoke Worsted Mills for a 5 per cent raise and the 48-hour week. They were recently cut 5 per cent and have been working 54 hours. In Worcester the weaving room of the Bell Co. was emptied when the workers went out for the 48-hour week. They had been working 54 hours.

STRIKES INVADE TEXTILE FIELD OF THE SOUTH

Workers Out Against Wage Cut Drive

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Sept. 4—Reports from Durham, N. C., tell of the winning of a strike there by the American Federation of Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers against the Marvin Carr Silk Mill. The strike was called to head off discharge of old timers in favor of younger workers they had trained and who were expected by the employers to work cheaper. Strikers return on the pledge that jobs would be protected.

At the same time comes word of a strike of card room workers at the White Oak Mills, Greensboro, N. C., largest denim plant in the world. The strike followed a cut reducing wages from $3.00 per day to $2.75 and $2.50. The shutting down of the card room forced other departments to close, affecting 1,600 workers in all.

Northern textile workers are keenly interested in such news as indicating that the southern workers, whose olow wages have been used to keep down wages in the north, are beginning to rebel.

Lasters in Open Shop Shoe Factories of Lynn May Strike

LYNN, Mass., —(FP)—Strikes may be called by union lasters in open shops in Lynn. The Lynn joint shoe council of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union indorsed the lasters' campaign for union wages in the open shops and approved plans for other crafts to make drives for union wages in their departments. The alternative to employers' refusal will be strikes, if General President Collis Lovely and General Secretary-Treasurer Charles L. Baine approve. Lasters are now striking against the Kenney Shoe Co.

LEWIS WILL NOT FIGHT OPERATORS DECLARES REID

Capitalist State Is Against Miners

By ALEX REID.

We are again face to face with a struggle for the bare necessaries of life. While our employers live in luxury, tour the high seas in their yachts, the highways in their limosines, we are underground struggling amidst innumerable dangers for a mere livelihood.

While we produce billions, we live in a state of semi-starvation in disgraceful shacks under the most wretched conditions. Today when we make an effort to have our meager earnings increased ten per cent, that we may be a little more able to live like human beings, we are ruthlessly denied and forced to strike to attain our demands.

Must Fight Capitalist Government.

Brothers, the combined organized capital of the capitalist class is fighting us. Every arm of the capitalist state will be used to crush us if necessary, in this industrial battle. The state troops, state police, injunctions, spies, courts, and the pulpit. The capitalist press is broadcasting lies thruout America about our standard of living, every effort is being made to discredit and defeat us. Every effort is being made to undermine us and break our morale, to have us lose confidence in our ability to win, to break our strike and defeat us in our meager demands.

To meet this organized force of capital we demand that our leaders take every step necessary to protect the coal diggers and carry the struggle to a successful conclusion. Our leaders met at Atlantic City with representatives of the coal trust in a million dollar hotel swept by ocean breezes far from the coal face.

At that meeting Lewis failed to make an agreement with the coal barons as we expected he would. The miners' demands were emphatically laid down at the Tri-District convention, and John L. Lewis knew that he could not betray them at the beginning of the struggle, in the face of the determination of the coal diggers to fight for our demands.

Lewis Will Not Fight.

Lewis' idea of struggle has been demonstrated to us in the past. We will not forget his betrayals of the miners thruout America, by his surrender to Judge Anderson, and his treachery to Nova Scotia and Alberta miners. Arbitration is again raised as a means of settlement, but the miners must spurn that treacherous policy and insist that no settlement can be made without approval of a special convention, of the Tri-District miners.

The progressive miners of the anthracite demand that a five-day week be fought for, yearly agreements, minimum wage, relief of the unemployed, and abolition of the conciliation board. The Progressive Miners' Committee calls upon all railroad workers to refuse to haul scab coal and to aid the miners in every way morally, financially, and actively. We demand that our leaders fight for workers' control. We stand for a labor party of the workers and farmers, nationalization of the mines, with workers' control.

Nationalization—Workers' Control.

The Progressive Miners' Committee appeals to all workers to come to the aid of the anthracite miners. Their fight is your fight, their victory is your victory, and if they are defeated, it will be your turn next. The mine workers of America are facing the greatest struggle in their history. The bituminous miners have been idle practically for the past two years, and now that the anthracite is facing a struggle, the bituminous miners are permitted to go back to work to produce coal to defeat the hard coal miners.

We demand that John L. Lewis bring out the bituminous miners with the hard coal miners and make it a national coal strike.

Our slogan is Nationalization and Workers' Control.

Union Drivers Win Raise.

NEW YORK.—The Union Provision Drivers' local of the Amalgamated Food Workers' Union won a $5-a-week increase in its new annual agreement. Minimum is now $35, with $40 for drivers selling more than $800 weekly.

LABOR FACES DREAD STATE AT SAN DIEGO

for San Diego business men to pass up as a gull to be jollied along until his money is gone.

Indices of Conditions.

An experienced locomotive engineer, union man of high standing, went to San Diego to seek employment. Under 35 years of age, strong, keen of sight, married and father of two children, sober and reliable, he naturally expected to go to work in a short time when the officials of the railroad, owned and operated by Spreckels, finished scrutinizing him and plying him with phrases of encouragement. But work did not come. Determined to stick it out, he waited until his savings were gone. He sought odd jobs. His wife did so, also. After working four years at the lowest wages in all sorts of pursuits, he finally secured a position with the Spreckels railroad as a locomotive engineer.

Usually, five years are spent by workers in San Diego on outside jobs before being employed in thier own trades. Often their only alternative seems to be suicide. If they yield to th temptation, the Spreckels organ, the Union, classes them as derelicts.

Wrecks and Barnacles.

The inventor of the derelict theory of San Diego suicides is James McMullin, fit managing editor of the capitalist Union sheet. He is 70 years of age and has long been attached to the Spreckels ship. Indeed, he is an inveterate barnacle on that spic-and-span craft. He has an aversion for social wrecks. As a 100 per cent success under the capitalist systm, derelicts irritate him. They also annoy the San Diego chief of police, another Spreckels barnacle, and they offend the sight of the police judges, similar barnacles.

When the worker goes broke and hungry the police seize him; the judge, with aristocratic indifference, sentences him to six months imprisonment as a vagrant and the Union is pleased to announce the news in a paragraph or two showing disdain for derelicts.

Barnacles and Their Pals.

Naturally, the cherished associates of the capitalist overlords of San Diego are the leaders of the aristocratic American Federation of Labor, whose organ is the Labor Leader. During the recent political diversion the aLbor Leader advocated LaFollette and the Union Coolidge. That little difference was laughed over for a time and is now forgotten, the Labor Lader showing friendly sentiments for the Spreckels crew by familiar references to Union editors as "Jimmy" McMullin, "Tom" Gwynne, etc., etc., with very complimentary paragraphs thrown in for full measure of praise.

The Union is just as union (A. F. of L.) as the Labor Leader. All its printers, pressmen, etc., hold union cards. So, the A. F. of L. is glad to extend to it the hand of friendship and feel that to be with Spreckles, who owns all the public utilities, most of the banks and the bulk of the real estate of San Diego, is gratifying.

Body Guard of Overlords.

San Diego's rulers know the advantage of having the A. F. of L. as their bodyguard. By paying the aristocrats of labor unionism the union wage they control (at least, for the time) the entire working class. They far more than make up for the high wages of union printers by the exploitation of the masses.

For instance, young San Diegans, 20 to 25 years of age, are employed at men's work for $20 a month. Because of the lack of employment such men are forced by parents to accept employment at this low wage. They work 10 hours a day driving automobiles, wagons, etc., clerking in stores, etc. The A. F. of L. takes care that the conditions may continue by paying no attention to it.

Elevator men of San Diego complained that their pay for 10 hours' work was only $50 a month and they dared not strike as other men were ready to take their places at even less pay. The complainants were married, 40 to 50 years of age, physically able. Their grievances were ignored by the A. F. of L.

For every man paid union wages there are 20 working on a starvation basis in San Diego. The A. F. of L. stands as a guard against improvement of the condition.

End of Trail.

When workers reach San Diego they are at the end of the trail. If they remain there they will be doomed to hopeless servitude and eventually many of them seek solace in the grave. That explains the high suicide rate. A Workers Party will reduce the rate from now on.

SOVIET UNION PUSHES PROGRAM FOR ELECTRIFICATION, FOREIGN CAPITAL AND EXPERTS TO BE USED

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Sept. 4.—A statement by the Soviet Union's chief concession committee reveals that extensive plans are to be pushed for the further electrification of the union by interesting foreign capital in the building of huge power stations. The statement, which bears the signature of Leon Trotsky, shows that the Soviet Union has already far exceeded the pre-war electrification. American technique will be introduced.

The statement follows:

"Tho in our electric manufacturing we have left the pre-war level far behind, we are far behind in development. The rapid growth of our rural economy and urban industry makes high demands and in electrification a broad road for co-operation by American engineers and capital is available.

Six Regional Stations.

"Next year about $50,000,000 will be appropriated by the government for electrification, according to present plans. Another $50,000,000 may be furnished from local and industrial sources.

"Our electrification budget contemplates the building of six large regional stations at points convenient to Leningrad. Moscow, Nishninovgorod, Kiev and other centers. When I say large I mean stations of from 25,000 to 30,000 kilowatts. At the new plant near Kiev it is proposed to use power from the Dnieper cataracts. Detailed plans are now in the hands of a special government committee.

"The next step proposed in the Dnieper project is to invite American hydroelectric engineers to act as experts. This project contemplates the generating of 600,000 kilowatts in two units of 300,000 kilowatts each. Included in the Dnieper project is the building of dams and locks for navigation and the reorganization of the mining, metallurgical and chemical industry in southern Russia. We have in mind, particularly, the erection of an immense aluminum factory.

Chance for Outside Capital.

"The cost of the entire project is estimated at $188,000,000 and the cost of developing one kilowatt of energy per hour is estimated at one-sixth of a cent, which is much below the cost at any station now in operation in Russia. Our program will be enlarged to correspond with the actual needs of the country and the investment of foreign capital.

"Foreign capital would find various ways for profitable investment in the field of our electric economy—in furnishing equipment for electric generating stations on long time credits, in organizing mixed associations with American private and Soviet state capital for building and exploiting electric generating stations and in organizing similar associations for erecting electric stations or for manufacturing equipment.

American Interests Invited.

"Our purpose in endeavoring to attract foreign capital into our electric industry is first, to accelerate our electrification and, second, to raise the standard of our technic by adopting American improvements and getting the benefit of the experience and skill of American engineers and builders.

"American capital by co-operation can profit as follows: First, the basic capital of the American electro industry will find the vast field for activity it needs; second, the dividends in the concessional undertakings, as well as in the mixed associations, are due to be considerably above the dividend rates in the United States because of the rapid development of our industry. The managers of our state electric trusts will soon begin negotiations with foreign firms and if I am not mistaken these negotiations will be with American firms first.

"It may be unnecessary to add that the chief concession committee on its part will do everything to facilitate the operations of American capital not only in our electrical economy but in other fields."

STRIKE OF TRANSFER MEN CRIPPLES N. Y. DEPOTS, YELLOW CABS SCAB

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Sept. 4.—The strike of New York transfer men against the Wescott and New York Transfer companies continues one hundred per cent so far as the regular baggage men are concerned but yellow taxicabs are carrying trunks. Service is crippled, however.

Police are persecuting strikers. A DAILY WORKER correspondent saw eight detectives jump out of three police cars at 45th street and Third Ave. where a group of 10 strikers were standing. The police frisked the strikers, finding nothing.

President Martin Lacey, of the transfer men's union declares he will protest to the police commission's office if there is a repitition of the occurrence. He said the strikers were keeping the transfer companies' 150 trucks tied up without resort to violence.

PAY TRIBUTE TO THE MEMORY OF HOORGIN, BUILT SOVIET TRADE

NEW YORK, —(FP)— The business relations now existing between American interests and the Russian government are due largely to the skillful leadership of Isaiah J. Hoorgin, late chairman of the board of directors of the Amtorg Trading corporation, Russian purchasing agent in America. So says a statement by Amtorg following Hoorgin's death by drowning. The loss of Hoorgin will be keenly felt, say his associates, but the work he engineered will go on successfully. The trade turnover between the United states and Russia during the last 15 months of Hoorgin's leadership amounted to $50,000,000. The ashes of Hoorgin and Efraim M. Sklansky, drowned with him, will be sent to relatives in Russia.

ITALIAN SEAMEN'S UNION SEIZED BY FASCIST GANGS

Fascist Federation in Union Wrecking Role

GENOA—(FP)—The struggle of the Italian seamen against the shipowners and their Fascist allies receives a severe setback in the handing over of the seamen's union headquarters in Genoa, the property of the union, to the local fascisti, who in joint action with the shipowners have formed what they call a Fascist Seamen's federation. The consequences will probably be that the old Italian Seamen's federation will shortly be dissolved and all its property, including the five steamers of the Garibaldi Cooperative, consigned to the Fascist leaders of the newly-formed company union, which means, practically speaking, into the hands of the shipowners.

This action of the government comes after a long struggle to subdue the stubborn resistance of the Italian seamen and to break their union. According to the press, the occupation of the seamen's headquarters recently by the police took place to prevent the fascisti from occupying it themselves. But the seamen's union was deprived of its headquarters in February, 1923, when their Cooperative Shipping society (Garibaldi) was also placed under the control of a government commissioner.

The government was never able to lay its hands on the funds of the seamen's union, so that the seamen, although dispossessed of their headquarters, were able still to resist the shipowners and the government commissioner, whose authority they never recognized. The third commissioner appointed by the government to tame the unruly seamen had to resign a few weeks previous to the police occupation of headquarters, admitting his failure.

History of I. L. G. W. Bears Out Claims

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 4.—The suspended locals of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union have been contending ever since the Sigman gang attempted to outlaw them, that the main complaint against them of being Communist, was only a smoke screen for the Sigman officialdom to fight against their demand for proportional representation in the New York Joint Board.

To support their claim they cite the official history of the I. L. G., written last year at the request of the union by Dr. Louis Levine of the Institute of Economics in Washington and published by B. W. Huebsch.

In describing the Joint Board, the local governing body, Dr. Levine points out that the representation is not proportional to the size of the locals, and he says on p. 454:

> This arrangement has been and still is the source of much friction in the International. The Operators' and Finishers' locals (with large memberships), especially Locals 1 and 9 of New York, have periodically risen in arms against this method of representation and have demanded some sort of proportional representation in the Joint Board.

These two locals, 1 (now 2) and 9, together with Local 22, point out that the passage in the Levine book bears special weight, because it appears in the union's own history, endorsed by the president and director, in a survey covering the development of the Garment Workers' Union from its beginning to the present time.

Labor Day

Annually, on the first Monday in September, the labor fakers trot out the union membership for no other reason than to show the capitalists that they can make trouble unless properly taken care of. They exhibit the trade unionists in the same manner and for the same reason that a ward heeler exhibits his followers at a picnic or a stag party. A successful picnic, demonstration or banquet given by the ward heeler in his own honor means a bigger slice of graft from the men higher up.

May Day is the international holiday of labor. It has revolutionary significance. On that day the workers of the world join together in emphasizing the world-wide struggle against capitalism. The American labor fakers have dropped May Day as the international holiday of the workers, even tho the motion for the first international celebration of May Day was made by representatives of the American trade union movement.

The first Monday in September is not intended to symbolize the class struggle. It is now a day set apart by the labor lieutenants of capitalism to give windy speeches on class collaboration and to tell the workers that the interests of capital and labor are identical. Until recently organizations on strike were given the leading positions in labor day parades. But reactionary labor leaders no longer take kindly to strikes. They savor too much of the class struggle.

So corrupt have the labor leaders become that even demonstrations on the first Monday in September are frowned on. Picnics are supplanting parades. Soon church services will supplant mass meetings.

The capitalists and their labor lackeys do not like to see the workers get together even in the fall of the year. It smacks too much of class division. They don't like trade unions, even tho now under the control of the reactionaries. They know that the radicals are working inside the unions, and they also know that the radicals will eventually be successful in infusing the spirit of the class struggle into the Labor Day celebrations.

On this Labor Day, the capitalists and the labor fakers will advocate class peace. Communists will advocate the class struggle. Today the victory is with the reactionaries, but just as sure as wage slavery exists, the day will come when the labor movement will repudiate the present reactionary leadership and embark on the road that will lead to revolution, to the overthrow of capitalism and the establishment of the rule of labor on its ruins.

Labor and Politics

James Duncan, vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, speaking before the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress, wraned the delegates against labor's participation in politics. "Don't be too gay about this third party stuff," said Duncan, "we have tried it in the States and it isn't worth it."

What Duncan was referring to was the half-hearted support given by the bureaucracy to the LaFollette campaign. When Duncan objects to labor's participation in politics he means that he is opposed to the workers having a political party of their own, which would establish a cleavage no matter how narrow, with the parties of capitalism.

This does not mean, however, that Duncan is opposed to participation in politics. No, indeed. The labor fakers have always participated in politics, to their own personal advantage. Their devotion to "non-partisan" political action simply means that they prefer the present arrangement, whereby they can barter their influence with the workers to whichever capitalist party has the fattest roll.

Duncan passed over the question of a political party of labor with a few flippant and inane observations. He was not so reticent on the liquor question. The American workers would fight to make the sale of beer legal, he said. They would be satisfied with 2.75 beer, but with nothing less. Having thus shown his deep interest in the class struggle Duncan finished his remarks and went out to slake his thirst.

The vice-president of the A. F. of L. made one statement during his speech which is worth recording. He stated that American labor secured advantageous legislation by keeping out of politics, but that in England the case was different. Labor there had some of the brainiest men in the world. Is lack of brains among the grand dukes of the A. F. of L. responsible for their objection to independent working class political action? The answer is an emphatic "No!" Tho not endowed with anything approaching genius, the American labor fakers are not opposed to a labor party because their think tanks are semi-vacant. They can barter the union vote at a better price under the present arrangement.

In striking contrast to the drooling of Duncan was the speech of a British fraternal delegate. The British leader talked about the class struggle and said that the British workers might declare a general strike if the capitalist government brought on another war.

This merely proves that British capitalism is nearer its Waterloo than American capitalism. The same forces that pushed the British labor leaders to the left are operating in the United States. Those forces are preparing the ground for a labor party, for the social revolution and for the political internment of the Duncans, Greens and the rest of the unholy crew that now fatten on the labor movement.

Another crisis for world imperialism has broken out in the Mosul oil fields of the Near East. It's just one gusher of woe after another for the capitalist nations, this time Great Britain.

The Danger Signal sent out by the DAILY WORKER should find a ready response from every one of its many readers.

Mobilize the party for action! That is also an invitation for all workers who believe in Communism to join the ranks.

Every effort will be made to wave the flag energetically enough over the remains of the Shenandoah dead to prevent any waning of pay-triotic interest in the militarist arm of the American capitalist government.

WANT VICTIM TO AGREE TO OWN FUNERAL

Imperialist Powers Send Note to China

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 4.—The cynical attitude of the imperialist powers toward China's demand for national liberation from infringements of its sovereignty by the swarm of foreign exploiters and their various governmental armed forces, is shown by the identical notes sent to China yesterday by every one of the nine nations signatory to the Washington conference of 1922.

Blaming China

After dilly-dallying for years over the conference agreements while China was growing more and more impatient for even these fake modifications of alien imperialist control, and while the rawest autocracy was inflicted upon the Chinese to such a degree that the natural result was the Shanghai explosion and a wave of anti-imperialist anger—while all these may be fully charged to the imperialist powers themselves, these nations in the note sent to China stating that delegates to a tariff conference were soon to be named, added the following:

"We desire to impress on the Chinese government the necessity of giving concrete evidence of its ability and willingness to enforce respect for safety of foreign lives and property and to suppress disorders and anti-foreign agitation which embitter feeling and tend to create conditions unfavorable for carrying on of negotiations."

Want Rebels' Blood

Going further the robber powers made it clear that what they want is armed suppression of militant nationalism, such as that expressed by the Canton government. Mere establishment of courts and enactment of laws would not be enough, they declared, to satisfy their desires that "disorders and anti-foreign agitation be suppressed."

In exchange for such counter-revolutionary suppression of the Chinese people by the Chinese government, the imperialist bandits are gracious enough to promise that when their commissioners meet, they will consider "what steps, if any, may be taken with a view to relinquishment of the extra-territorial privileges."

CHINESE SEAMEN SEEK AID FROM THE WORKERS OF ENGLAND

The following telegram protesting the shooting down of Chinese students by the British police in China was sent by the organized Chinese Seamen of Shanghai to the British labor members of the House of Commons:

Mr. Ramsay MacDonald:
House of Commons,
London.

Foreign municipal police cowardly fired on unarmed students, lecturing in Shanghai protesting arrest of follow-students who participated in memorial service of workers shot by Japanese in recent mill strike.

Seven killed instantly, thirty died afterwards, over hundred wounded.

Outrageous, indiscriminate shooting continued several days.

Whole nation indignant, resorting to peaceful striking, demands justice.

Your cooperation in securing punishment of guilty police and removing imperialistic foreign oppression earnestly requested.

P. S. The above telegram is most probably concealed by British censor at Shanghai.

to the fact that the party has been devoting the greater part of its attention to the inner party situation. We can recover that ground and at the same time create the conditions for the unification of the party by taking up the great task the party has before it with energy and enthusiasm, and using every ounce of strength our party possesses to successfully carry thru the work that lies before us.

The Central Executive Committee calls upon the party membership for such a mobilization for work. We must not only draw into the active work, those comrades who have carried on this work in the past but we must draw upon the large reserves of party members who have not actively engaged in the party work and draw them into our struggles. In place of carrying on our fight with 25 per cent of our resources in membership we must draw 100 per cent of the membership into active participation in the party work

The party convention has laid down a complete line of party policy. In this statement the Central Executive Committee calls attention to a few immediate, major tasks of the party.

The Anthracite Strike.

THE strike of the 150,000 anthracite coal miners, is the most important recent event in the labor movement of this country. During the depression in 1924 with unemployment in many industries, the capitalists have been pursuing a policy of wage reductions and enforcement of worse working conditions upon the workers. Millions of workers suffered reductions in their standard of life as a result of this campaign of the capitalist employers.

The fact that the 150,000 anthracite coal miners have gone on strike in resistance of a similar attempt in the anthracite coal fields is of great significance and indicates a stiffening of resistance of the workers against the insidious campaign of wage reductions, lengthening of hours, enforcement of worse working conditions. It is the task of our party in the anthracite situation to aid in stiffening the resistance of the working class as a whole against the attack of the capitalists, by rallying the working masses in support of the anthracite miners we must stir up general resistance among the workers.

Instructions have already been sent to all party units to actively take up this campaign by holding mass meetings, thru introducing and fighting to have resolutions adopted in the trade unions and other workers' organizations. The party is also taking the necessary steps for active participation in support of the anthracite strike, by work in the anthracite coal fields.

The aggression of the capitalists has created a big opportunity for the party, just at the moment when the party is ready to mobilize itself in such a struggle. We must take full advantage of the opportunity to build up the fighting spirit of the workers

The Trade Union Work.

THE last registration of the party showed 85 per cent of the party members registered as members of trade unions. This situation is a challenge to our party. We cannot fulfill our responsibilities as long as this condition exists.

The party will immediately begin a campaign to draw all party members into the trade unines and for active work along the lines of the party trade union program of these members who are in the union. The organizational steps will be sent to the party units at an early date and the work for full use of our strength must have an important place in the work of the party organization.

The Labor Party Campaign.

THE campaign for a labor party is again the major politcal campaign of the party. The convention resolution lays down the basis for systematic work in support of the formation of a labor party. Very little has been done by the party to renew the agitation "for a labor party" since the decision of the Communist International and every party unit must carefully study the instructions of the convention and begin actively to support this campaign.

The Reorganization of the Party.

THERE is no more important work before our party than that of carrying thru the reorganization plan adopted by the last Nation Convention. Until we achieve this reorganization our party will be unable to use its full strength in carrying out its work. Instructions on the method of procedure for th reorganization of the party are being worked out by the Organization Department created by the Central Executive Committee for this work and will be sent to the party units in a short time. The convention has set a limit of six months for the work of reorganization. The party must achieve the reorganization even before the expiration of this period.

The DAILY WORKER Campaign.

THE DAILY WORKER faces a serious emergency. Our party cannot risk the danger of the loss of its central daily organ. Such a loss would cripple the entire work of the party.

The DAILY WORKER has made an appeal to the party membership and sympathizers for immediate aid and will organize a systematic campaign to secure the necessary funds to enable it to continue its work for the movement. The immediate emergency call must have a prompt response by the membership and the organized campaign to raise the funds to secure the DAILY WORKER for next year must be given systematic support by the whole party organization.

International Labor Defense.

THE party has not yet sufficiently organized for support of the International Labor Defense. The International Labor Defense is uniting all working class organizations which are under attack by the capitalists for common struggle in support of the victims of the class struggle is filling a needed place. Our party should be the most loyal and energetic supporter of the International Labor Defense. Every party member must be a member of a branch of the International Labor Defense and bring as many non-party members as possible into the organization, must give it the utmost aid to make the International Labor Defense an organization of a hundred thousand workers at the earliest possible moment.

These and other tasks call for the full energies of our party. We must begin work immediately. We must take up these tasks with energy and enthusiasm and our party will quickly make great strides forward.

CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE
Workers (Communist) Party of America,
C. E. Ruthenberg, General Secretary.

COMMANDER OF WRECKED SHIP OPPOSED FLIGHT

Bodies of Crew Looted by Curious Crowds

LAKEHURST, N. J., Sept. 4.—Lieutenant Commander Zachary Lansdowne, commander of the naval dirigible Shenandoah, who met his death when the ship was wrecked near Cambride, Ohio, had opposed making the flight to Scott Field, Ill., from here, his widow said today. "Captain Lansdowne had opposed making the flight at this time," Mrs. Lansdowne said, "He knew the situation in the Ohio valley at this season, having been born in Greenville, Ohio. He asked the Washington officials to postpone the flight until a more favorable season. He was strenuously opposed to making the flight now."

It was later denied by naval officers that this statement had been made.

Twenty of the survivors who arrived here via Philadelphia, walked painfully with a limp. All were cut and bruised.

Bodies Are Mangled

CALDWELL, Ohio, September 4.—The log book of the dirigible Shenandoah is missing, and it is believed to have been taken by souvenir seekers, who are also accused of looting the bodies of the 14 dead members of the crew of the wrecked ship. The bodies are being prepared for shipment to their homes or to Washington from the undertaking rooms of C. A. Dye of Belle Valley.

Thirteen of the dead were killed in the fall of the control car. Twelve were killed outright. They were horribly mangled. The thirtheenth, machinists mate Calestino Mazzuco was found unconscious with an eye gouged out and a fractured skull. He died a few minutes later. The last body to be found was that of Lieutenant E. W. Sheppard, who fell out.

Officers Would Sacrifice Life

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 4.—Naval officers here are opposed to the abandonment of the naval air station at Lakehurst, or any change in the navy's aviation program, which has been suggested by those who deplore the loss of life when the Shenandoah was wrecked.

The naval officers declare that "it will never be possible for the navy to develop aerial activities unless it is understood that life will be lost."

No trace has been found of the seaplane which was forced down on a San Francisco to Hawaii flight. The flight of the PB-1 over the same route has been postponed by the navy.

Turn Out Diplomatic Cadets.

WASHINGTON — (FP) — Its first class of cadets has been graduated—17 strong—by the foreign service school of the state department. All but three, who are retained at headquarters, were assigned as vice-consuls abroad. A Negro who passed the entrance examinations last spring was immediately graduated and sent to an African post without being permitted to enter the class.

Teamsters Convene in Seattle, Sept. 14

SEATTLE—Two hundred fifty delegates are expected at the convention in Seattle of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs and Helpers, which opens Sept. 14.

The strike of the postal employes in Shanghai, China, has come to an end as the increase of wages and the recognition of the trade union demanded by the strikers have been obtained.

FALL SEASON OPENS AT WORKERS' HOUSE, SATURDAY, SEPT. 19

PRESSMEN MEET TO PLAN FIGHT ON MAJOR BERRY

Strikebreakers Plan to Organize Dual Local

Tho their charter is revoked the members of Local 3, International Printing Pressmen's & Assitants' Union, the Chicago local that has borne the brunt of the fight against George Berry the international president, are meeting Sept. 5 to discuss war plans.

The revocation of the charter by Berry will be followed by the reorganization of the local along Berry lines, according to International Vice-President Shuford Marks, a Berry lieutenant with headquarters in Chicago. The decision by the international is the climax to a dispute that broke out when the local refused to permit the Cuneo-Henneberry and the Cuneo Printing plants, among the largest job plants in Chicago, to cut the crews on the big presses from two skilled pressmen and 2 helpers to one pressman and two helpers, the first gun in an employer campaign to speed up the print shops. Berry wanted the men to go to work on the speed up basis while the union negotiated with the boss. The union thot it better to negotiate first and walked out unofficially when the employers started out to execute their program. Berry ordered the men back to work and when they did not go he called on other union pressmen to take the places of the strikers.

Formed United Front.

Another element of disagreement was added when Local 3, the pressmen, formed a fighting pact with Local 4, the assistants or feeders, sharing with the younger men its $100,000 war chest. Berry looked with disfavor on the move and also disapproved the tactics of the local unions when at a membership meeting they jeered and cursed two international vice-presidents, Marks and Wm. McHugh, off the platform.

A long history of antagonism to Berry whom the local accused of mishandling of thousands of dollars of international funds, lies behind the revocation of the charter. The Chicago revocation and proposed reorganization follows a similar coup by Berry in New York in 1923 when an unauthorized strike of newspaper pressmen compelled the big papers to appear in a single joint edition with their nameplates appearing one after the other on page one. Berry at that time advertised for union pressmen to break the strike and succeeded in beating his New York members.

The Geneva Conference on the Question of Commerce in Arms

By I. D. MARKOV (Moscow)

IN the month of June a conference on the question of the commerce in arms completed its work. Forty-three states had taken part in it; it was summoned at the suggestion of the League of Nations. States which do not belong to the League of Nations, also took part in the conference: Germany, the United States, Turkey, Egypt: the Soviet Union alone did not take part.

It is not difficult to guess why no representative of the Soviet Union was present at the conference. Those who promoted the conference knew very well, when they summoned it at Geneva that no Soviet representatives would put foot on the soil of Switzerland, where Comrade Vorovsky was murdered without expiation being made. And they were right. By refusing to accept the suggestion of the Soviet Union to hold the conference in some other country, the leaders of the confreence ensured themselves perfect freedom of action. A representative of the people, numbering 130 million of the worker and peasant state was lacking. As we shall see below, they made the best use of this circumstance.

The history of the conference is as follows: After the conclusion of the war with Germany, the allies had enormous stores of arms at their disposal. The constant conflicts of imperialist greed in the colonial and semi-colonial countries were decided with arms which had been bought from some allied state or other. Thus for instance, in the Greco-Turkish war, Greece, which was carrying out England's commands, received arms from the English stores. But the purchasers of arms might later on turn them against those who had sold them. This is why the convention of Saint Germain of Sept. 10, 1919, prohibits the sale of arms in a whole number of zones; England carefully protected her security in Persia, Africa, etc. Such a well-preserved and simple solution of the question was a hindrance to the United States, which refused to ratify the convention. Since then a commission of the League of Nations has worked for more than 4½ years at this question. The result of this work was the summoning of the conference at Geneva.

A DRAFT convention which had been worked out by the commission, was laid before the conference for discussion. According to one of the points of the draft, the convention is to come into force after its ratification by twelve states, among them the Soviet Union. The Soviet Union was not represented at the conference, but this difficulty did not trouble its members. The representatives of England proposed to substitute for the Soviet Union—Czecho-Slovakia, and this proposal was accepted.

In general the resolutions of the conference are to the effect that agreements as to the sale of arms and munitions should be concluded exclusively thru the governments, but publicly and on the responsibility of the latter. There is also a proviso that "Poland, Roumania, Esthonia, Finland and Latvia alone are not under the obligation of making known the quantity and nature of the arms and war material purchased."

Why just these countries? The conference assumes that, as they border on the Soviet Union, they are exposed to the danger of assault from the Bolsheviki. But what if, being equipped with arms, they attack the Soviet Union? What will the leaders of the Geneva conference say then? Have they forgotten that Pilsudski's army marched on Kiev with the object of conquering White Russia and the Ukraine? Have they forgotten the attacks of English, French, Japanese and other troops in Siberia, Archangel, Odessa and Transcaucasia? Or do they think that the Soviet Union was the attacking party in those cases?

WHY did the conference not grant the same privileges to Persia, Turkey, China, Afghanistan? They also border on the Soviet Union . . . The riddle is easily solved: Persia, Turkey, Afghanistan and China are countries into which English imperialism has already fixed its claws. They may not buy arms at all except under the control of England as this would endanger English imperialism in these countries. And what is the sense anyhow of allowing them to arm, since they wish to live in friendship with the Soviet Union?

We have learned the following details from sources closely connected with the League of Nations. At the Geneva conference, Lithuania asked that the exception made in favor of Poland, Roumania, Esthonia and other countries be extended to Lithuania. It was naturally asked for what reason it wanted this. Saunis, the representative of Lithuania, showed himself to be very naive when he reminded the conference of the strained relations between Lithuania and Poland, instead of "the Bolshevist danger." This resulted in obtaining a unanimous refusal for Lithuania.

It was quite another matter when the Polish delegate, General Sossnikoviski rose and, while being warmly supported by his Roumanian colleague, declared that "in view of the danger of an attack on the part of the Soviet Union" it was impossible to apply the restrictions concerning the purchase of arms to the countries bordering on Russia, and that altogether the question of traffic in arms could not be separated from the question of disarmament and that under present circumstances the latter could not be begun in the countries bordering on Russia.

EVEN the representative of France remarked that the fear of Russia felt by some states does not correspond with the peaceful intentions it professes. The representatives of China and Turkey remarked that the conference did not sufficiently appreciate the peace-loving exertions of the Soviet Union.

It was not without pressure from England, that a motion from the United States was rejected to the effect that there should be a special, international organization for the control of traffic in arms which should be independent and not subordinate to the League of Nations. The English delegate insisted that the purchase and sale of warship and naval equipment should not be restricted. Regardless of the opposite view held by many delegates, among them the French, the motion of the English delegate was accepted.

Let us contrast a few recent facts with this! The representative of Esthonia in London, Kallas, invited an English squadron into the Baltic to protect Esthonia (from whom?) Denmark has deepened the Drogden canal and opened the Baltic to English super-dreadnoughts. An English squadron has visited the Baltic ports with the exception of the ports of the Soviet Union.

IN connection with this, the Frankfurter Zeitung speaks of an English "military demonstration," of a "naval demonstration against the Soviet Union."

Further, rumors are abroad that Esthonia is handing over the islands of Oesel and Dago to England.

The above facts are fully sufficient to make the real object of the Geneva conference comprehensible. It is not surprising if the border states of the Soviet Union, instigated by European and especially English imperialism, contemplate drawing the natural conclusions. Should this be the case, we would remind them of the words of Comrade Frunze at the Third Soviet Congress: "Every attack against us will result not in a destruction of our house, but in the construction of new wings."

All our brothers...
All our comrades...

Heed, you despots—
Beware, you lackeys—
The fruit of their work lives on...
The spirit of their sacrifice
Forms a chain of comradership
In all lands—
The world over.

Your glorious deaths,
Noble comrades...

And when the day will come—
We shall remember...
And with the defiance and curses
Silenced by the hangman's nooze,
We shall march on to victory...

Our martyr dead...

Bryan's Place in History

By H. M. WICKS.

NOTE:—This article was submitted shortly after the death of Wm. Jennings Bryan, but it has been held up due to the great amount of material that had to be published in connection with the party discussion and the fourth annual convention of the party. Since this question continues to be of great interest, however, the article has lost none of its value.

THE death, at Dayton, Tenn., of William Jennings Bryan, removes from the American political arena the foremost champion of the petty bourgeoisie of this generation. The dominant note of the press comments upon his career is that politically he was a "champion of lost causes," a sentimentalist, an anti-imperialist and pacifist. Most writers express surprise that one can be so consistently a defender of principles doomed to failure as was Bryan. Denying the Marxian concept that prominent politicians are merely the spokesmen of economic classes the capitalist publicists are at a loss to explain the career of this "prince of peace" from Nebraska's shimmering plains.

Champion for Bourgeoisie.

Applying the Marxian interpretation of history to Bryan we perceive that his vagaries were those of the middle class of this nation. In politics he was the champion of the petty bouregoisie; in the sphere of religion he was their prophet. His career, from July 10, 1896, when with his famous "crown of thorns and cross of gold" speech he flamed like a meteor across the political horizon, capturing the democratic party nomination for the presidency of the United States, until his forlorn fiasco as defender of religious fundamentalism in the famous Dayton trial, parallels the decline of the petty bourgeoisie as a political factor before the rise to supremacy of the powerful combinations of finance and industrial capital.

FOR nearly two decades Bryan was the undisputed leader of the democratic party and for a third decade he had sufficient prestige to defeat any aspirant for the presidential nomination who incurred his enmity. These thirty years constitute an epoch in American political history.

Economic forces operating since the panic of 1873 prepared the soil for Bryanism. That crisis marked the beginning of the development of trusts. In that panic thousands of small industrialists and merchants were forced out of business. Those who survived grew more powerful and in given lines of industry combinations proceeded rapidly. These combinations were called trusts. The warfare of the trusts against the small capitalists raged with such intensity that in the latter eighties and early nineties a wave of anti-trust agitation swept the nation. Most states passed laws against these combinations. The state of New Jersey, however, was absolutely dominated by "the interests" of that day and passed a special law granting free reign to the trusts. With this state as a base of opreations the trusts grew unhampered.

Currency Reform Fallacy.

A middle class political movement arose during this period, known as the populist movement. A third political party grew out of this agitation that had as one of its main planks currency reform. Many small caliber politicians of that day supported the demands of the populist party while remaining in the old parties. Bryan was one of these. In 1880, when thirty years of age he was elected to congress from the first Nebraska district, formerly a republican stronghold. He first definitely formulated the political slogan that made him famous in a speech delivered in the house of congress on August 16, 1893, when he opposed the repeal of the silver purchase clause of the Sherman act, and advocated "free and unlimited coinage of silver, irrespective of international agreement, at the ratio of 16 to 1."

Currency reform had long been a favorite illusion of opposition movements in this country, starting with the greenback movement after the civil war. The advocacy of bi-metallism was an economic monstrosity, which in that particular case demanded the coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 silver dollars to every dollar in gold. As every Marxist knows it is impossible to arbitrarily set a price upon silver and gold for the simple reason that they do not exist in this ratio and the conditions of production constantly change in relation to both silver and gold. This economic absurdity, though, captured the minds of millions of voters in this country thru two presidential campaigns.

That Famous Speech.

At the democratic convention of 1896 in Chicago, at the close of a long debate on the question of bimetallism, Bryan, having been defeated for re-election to congress and having suffered defeat as candidate for United States senator from his state, arose and aroused an exhausted convention to the wildest enthusiasm with his speech in defense of money reform. He concluded with the words "You must not place a crown of thorns upon the brow of labor; you shall not crucify labor upon a cross of gold." His first nomination for the presidency followed this speech.

Having stolen the thunder of the populists who had built up a strong movement on the issue of currency reform by convincing the middle class that all their ills could be remedied if only the money moloch were crushed, the democratic party, thru the medium of Bryan, was able to swallow the populist party.

Trust Busting Gets Votes.

The working class of the United States was almost wholly unconscious of its separate class interests and threw its support to this middle class movement. During this period of the rise of the mighty trusts many a self-seeking demagogue in the political arena secured a position of power and affluence by attacking these combinations and the working class was deluded into believing that the road to its salvation lay in supporting the rapidly vanishing small capitalists against the trusts. In the ranks of the working class there was at that time but a very small group of students of history and economics that pointed to the fact that "trust busting" was an attempt to confine the highly developed capitalism of this country to the shell from which it emerged.

Bryan, in the 1896 campaign, polled a popular vote of 6,502,925 to 7,104,799, for his republican opponent, William McKinley.

Under the McKinley administration the government was the tool of the big industrial capitalists. In 1898 the government provoked the war against Spain in the interest of the Havemeyer sugar trust and the American Tobacco company. Bryan opposed this war, altho he entered the volunteer army, attaining the rank of colonel. At the close of the war he opposed the retention of the Philippine Islands.

Again, in 1900, he was the democratic nominee for president, opposing President McKinley, the flunkey of the trusts. The outstanding plank was still "free silver," but he waged his campaign on the slogan of "anti-imperialism."

The campaign of 1900 was obviously a clear-cut petty bouregoisie campaign. The theme of Bryan's speeches against the republican policy was that a continuation of McKinley in power would increase still further the burden of taxation already too heavy for the small capitalist and farm owners. This time he was again defeated, polling 6,358,133 to McKinley's 7,207,923.

"Commoner" Why?

Dubbed "the commoner" because of his alleged defense of the common man,. Bryan still remained after these defeats the foremost champion of the middle class. After his second defeat he started the paper, The Commoner, in Lincoln, Nebraska, where he continued to assail imperialism and the gold standard and began to advocate government ownership of railroads so that the farmer could market his produce without paying tribute to the railway magnates and the small business man could escape the excessive freight charges.

Economically this period was characterized by the colossal growth of trusts. During the single year, 1897, there were incorporated under the laws of the state of New Jersey 4,495 companies with a capital of $1,400,000,000. Practically all these companies were trusts, having as their object monopolies of products of a certain industry or control of public utilities. By 1904 the merciless inroads of the trusts were ravaging the middle class to such an extent that no politician dared defend them.

A Rival Trust Buster.

McKinley was removed from the scene by an assassin's bullet and the demagogic Roosevelt succeeded him as president. His forte from the first was trust busting; a direct bid for the support of the petty bourgeoisie, while remaining the political head of the republican party of industrial capitalism. Unable to prevent the renomination of the spectacular "Teddy," Wall Street endeavored to get control of the middle class democratic party and use it for its own purposes. At the 1904 convention Bryan resisted with all his power the efforts of Wall Street to name the standard bearer of the party that he had come to regard as his own. His efforts were unavailing and Judge Alton B. Parker was elected to run against Roosevelt and was overwhelmingly defeated.

After a trip thru Europe Bryan came back and began a strenuous campaign for world disarmament and intensified his advocacy of government ownership of railroads.

At the democratic convention of 1908 Bryan routed the agents of the House of Morgan who tried to control

The United States and World Shipping

By EARL R. BROWDER

THE strikes of seafarers now going on in Great Britain, the Scandinavian countries, Australasia, and the Far East, render it important that exact information be available about the position of the United States in world shipping, as a basis for the program of the militant seamen of America to participate in the world struggle of the toilers of the sea.

According to Lloyd's Register, 1924-25, the total tonnage of the world is 64,023,567; of this, 15,956,967 tons are of United States entry, or approximately 25 per cent. Great Britain is credited with 21,878,500 tons, or 34 per cent of the world tonnage. The remaining 41 per cent is divided almost entirely among 30 other countries, the largest of which is Japan. Japan has 3,843,707 tons, or 6 per cent the Scandinavian countries, Denmark, Norway and Sweden, have together 7 per cent; France has 3,498,233 tons, and Germany 2,953,671; the first something under 6 per cent and the latter over 4 per cent. Italy is slightly under Germany, with 2,832,212 tons. The Dutch shipping amounts to 4 per cent, and the Spanish to 2 per cent. Thus eleven nations control 92 per cent of the world's tonnage, of which 59 per cent is in the hands of Johnny Bull and Uncle Sam, leaving 33 per cent to the nine other principal countries.*

THE problem of world shipping is, in the light of these figures, largely a problem of Great Britain and the United States. Workers in America must understand this, and turn more attention to the organization of the seafarers, in which is involved the future of the whole labor movement. This is even more clear when the connection is understood between world shipping and imperialism.

All of this tonnage is not in use. There has been a world crisis in shipping for the past five years, with vast amounts of tonnage lying idle. The most acute result to the workers in this crisis, heretofore, has been in the ship-building industry. In America, the labor unions in the shipyards have been almost entirely destroyed. In Great Britain, the unions have suffered severe defeats and unemployment.

THE amount of idle tonnage in given in a U. S. government report* as 6,753,000 tons for the world, of which the United States has 4,253,000 tons, and Great Britain 1,130,000 tons. More important that the relative amount of idle tonnage, however, is the tendency of development. From Jan. 1 to July 1, 1925, the amount of idle tonnage in the United States increased by less than one per cent, while that of Great Britain increased nearly 60 per cent.

It is this sharp accentuation of the shipping crisis for Great Britain that has brought about the struggle now going on between ship owners and seafarers thruout the world. British shipping has lost tremendously thru the decline in British hegemony over the world market. Even in 1921, the figures of British imports showed a decline to 74.3 per cent of those of 1913, while exports had dropped to 49.8 of 1913; this decline has become even greater at the present time.

AT the same time that British shipping is in decay, the opposite is true of United States shipping. Less than nine per cent of the idle tonnage in the U. S. reflects any crisis in transportation itself, as distinct from ship building. The present tremendous U. S. merchant marine was produced during the war, by government funds, and is now being absorbed into the "normal" process of American imperialism, beginning with the sale of vast quantities of tonnage by the government to private interests, at a mere fraction of their value, the process is being carried thru along two main lines: (1) the tremendous increase of U. S. foreign trade, and (2) the capture of world shipping thru competition in rates.

The first of these lines of development is shown, for example, in the facts contained in an article by E. D. Durand (in Commerce Reports, Aug. 10, 1925, department of commerce), as follows:

"The value of exports in 1924-25 was a trifle less than two and one-fourth times, and that of imports a trifle over two and one-fourth times greater than in the average pre-war year... Altho prices now average decidedly higher than before the war, there has been a quantitative increase of somewhere between 30 and 40 per cent in the case of exports, and of somewhere between 50 and 70 per cent in the case of imports, export prices on whole increasing more than import prices."

THE second line of development is illustrated in the "almost utter collapse" of the shipping industry, described by A. R. Marsh, in an article in the Annalist, Aug. 28, previously cited, in 1920, when "ocean freight rates had fallen precipitately to a mere fraction of what they had been a few months before," and in the current rate decreases in 1925, as described by E. S. Gregg, in his article, "Shipping Depression Continues," in Commerce Reports, Aug. 24, 1925.

In the bitter struggle between British and American shipping interests for mastery of the world's shipping, the British owners are now trying to offset to some degree the advantage which the U. S. interests gained by the indirect but effective subsidy embodied in the sale of government ships to private interests for little or nothing; the latest move of British shipping interests being another drastic cut in wages, to make the seamen bear more of the burden of imperialist competition. The British wage-slashing campaign is, of course, and by the "necessity" of capitalism, immediately reflected in wage-slashes in the smaller shipping nations of the world.

BUT this latest offensive against the interests of the working class has aroused the most wide-spread and desperate resistance. To this struggle of the workers in Europe and Asia, the workers of America must react by mobilizing the utmost possible assistance, and by joining the struggle. Unless the British and other seamen, now struggling against wage cuts in the principal seaports of the world, are successful in their fight, the American seamen and the entire American working class eventually, will also feel the lash of their masters, driving them to pay still greater tribute for the imperialist rivalry for control of world commerce. It is thus of the most vital interest to the American seamen and to the whole American labor movement, to join in and to assist the struggle of the seamen of Europe and Asia.

The City Library

By JESSE A. KEEBLE.
Worker Correspondent.

At the city library one day I picked up a magazine entitled "Musical America." On page 24 was an article concerning orchestra leaders and to my surprise they gave as an example and model of the way an orchestra should be conducted, the orchestra of Leningrad, U. S. S. R. Here is a paragraph from the article.

"Leningrad has a Soviet orchestra which is never seen with a conductor at its head. Indeed, I even doubt that a conductor is present at the rehearsals and yet work of the most complicated modernistic tendencies are unhesitatingly and precisely played. If the musicians are really what their name applies, they do not need some one to tell them at what bar they come in it seems to me."

SYNOPSIS.—The official report of the British trade union delegation to Soviet Russia described the workings of foreign trade, transportation, industry, finance and agriculture in the Soviet Union. The trade union leaders concluded that foreign trade is increasing, and that in agriculture and industry the level of production is being raised. The finances have been placed on a sound basis, the report showed. Harm is being done to England by the absence of full diplomatic relations, the union leaders stated. Schools and universities, and literature, music and opera and the theatre were then discussed. Art collections, censorship, newspapers, wall newspapers, and freedom of the press were explained, with the conclusion that "the results of education are astounding." The report then took up hospitals, welfare work, sanitation, birth control, abortion, cleanliness and housing, rent regulations, family life, and prisons. "The Soviet government is achieving most remarkable results in respect to public health, housing, and the prison system," says the report. Regarding the trade unions and labor conditions, the report states, "The Delegation were much impressed by the position and activities of Trade Unions under the Soviet system." The report then described labor regulations, co-operatives, wages, and told of visits to various industrial works. The general conclusion on labor conditions reached by the commission was that, "The U. S. S. R. is a strong and stable state. The government is not only in every way better than anything Russia has ever yet had, but it has done and is doing work in which other older state systems have failed and are failing."

• • • •

Steps have been taken to increase the accommodation in rest houses and hospitals by the authorities, and hospitals providing 230 beds have been built out of Trade Union insurance funds, 300,000 gold roubles having been expended for the purpose. Steps have also been taken to improve the educational facilities for the workers, and students from workers' homes are being educated in special professions with an age limit of 18 to 35, which would provide education of four years in school and four years in the university. Special courses of university instruction are given for the purpose of providing technical training for those intended for administrative posts in industry, scholarships being provided by Trade Unions organizations for this purpose, with a obligation to spend some part of the time in workshops for special training.

Great efforts are being made to eliminate illiteracy in Tiflis, and 3,000 workers are at schools for this purpose.

Regarding enthusiasm for the Trade Union Movement in Georgia, the workers are not backward, but special Organization Boards are needed in order to maintain enthusiasm and to improve the administrative capacity. Georgia is a country of various nationalities; the villagers in the mountains have for many, many years lived a precarious life, and they give ready response to Communist propaganda. The same applies to peasant life generally. According to statistics 75 per cent of the peasants took part in the recent elections.

VII.—Visit to Chiaturi Manganese Mines

The Delegation visited the manganese mines at Chiaturi. It was necessary to travel ten hours by train and then on horseback to and from the mines, a distance of about 15 miles up mountain sides. There is a wonderful seam of manganese varying from 3 ft. 6 in. to 5 ft. Narrow ways are driven into the seam with about 12 ft. of cover. The timbering of the workings is very carefully carried out, and roof supports are set every 2 ft. 6 in., or oftener if required. The State mine visited was not selected by the local people, who knew nothing of the arrival of the Delegation. It is worked on the retreating system, which in itself is the safest method to adopt.

Great credit is due to the mining engineer for the way the mine has been laid out.

The hewer devotes all his time to producing the mineral. There is a separate staff for timbering the roadways and the working places, and separate persons employed for filling and tramming the minerals. The trams used carry about one ton and are of very good construction. The roadways are excellent.

The trammers receive 2 roubles per day, timberers 2½ roubles, but by a system which is called the artel he can earn from 3 to 3½ roubles a day.

The hours of labor are seven hours a day with five hours on Saturday, making 40 hours a week for the underground workers. Surface workers work eight hours a day with six hours on Saturday, making 46 hours per week.

The Delegation also visited a British mine which is not now producing.

Another British firm was visited; this firm employs 600 workers. Since the Soviet Government has taken control of the mines they have to work the same hours and receive the same wages as those paid in the State mines, which include the usual benefits.

We found that the transport of manganese from the mines to the railways was done by buffaloes and oxen on very bad roads. Two oxen were carrying just over two-thirds of a ton and buffaloes from one ton to one and a half tons, which was a very primitive method. The State has already commenced to build an electric power-house of 500 horse-power Diesel engines, ordered in 1919 but not supplied until 1924; this station will be in full working order by May 31st, and will do away with all the ancient and cruel method of transport of the materials from the mine to the railway.

The Delegation went underground to the place of the seam, a distance of 200 yards, and visited six different working places.

Housing

The housing conditions were better than the old type of house on the oilfields, but still far from satsifactory. The State has already commenced to build hostels for the workers of a considerably better type than those in existence.

Working Time

Underground workers work 20 days a month, but there is no objection to their working 24 days; the surface workers work 24 days a month.

The number of people employed are only about half the number that were usually employed owing to the depression in the steel industry. The State mines employ about 1,000 workers, or only half the quantity previously employed.

The production from State mines and private enterprise is about 32,000 tons per month.

Hospital

The Delegation visited the hospital which at present has accommodation for 36 patients. A further extension is being added which will provide for 80 patients when complete. The present staff consists of four doctors, four sisters, and six nurses. During the month of November, 141 patients were dealt with inside the hospital. The disease that they suffer from is inflammation of the lungs with a certain amount of silicosis and phthisis caused by the inhaling of manganese dust. The doctor stated that the average death rate in the hospital is about 3 per cent. The hospital deals with about 60 odd-out patient per day.

The operating rooms and X-ray departments were well equipped for the work they were called upon to do. These institutions are provided free to the workers, their wives and families. The patients included Russians, Georgians, Turks, Armenians, Chinese, Indians, and Germans. The Delegation was glad to find, although the visit was a surprise, that there was no distinction whatever made between the various nationalities, which in itself speaks well for the future.

Trades Union Congress General Council.

Report of the British Delegation to Russia on the Red International and the "Red Letter."

Statement by General Council.

The Trades Union Congress General Council having adopted unanimously the Report of their delegation to Russia on the affair of the "Red Letter" have decided to comply with the urgent representations of the Trade Union organizations that it should be published forthwith.

It is now six months since the "Red Letter" was officially acted on and published, and the refusal by the present Government of all requests for an official inquiry from those most concerned—the late Labor Government and the Russian Government—so far from hushing up the scandal have made it the source of suspicions that daily become more widespread and deeply rooted. These suspicious are quite possibly unfounded, and some are at present unfair. Thus the late Labor Government has become suspect of a reprehensible disrgard for its principles by risking a rupture with the largest State in Europe and the first Socalist Federaton, that would have been disastrous to the peace of the world and the unity of the world's workers, and this on the strength of an unattested and untested forgery. The present Government is suspect of a no less reprehensible disregard for its principles in having falsified a general election by a political plot, with results disastrous to the preservation of constitutional Government and the prestige of British public life. While the Foreign Office, by despatching a critical note to a great Power over the signature of a member of the staff, without express authority from the Foreign Secretary, by publishing that note without communication with the Power concerned or with the acting Cabinet, and that too in the criss of a general election, and by basing all these proceedings on a document even less authenticated than others that had previously proved to be forgeries has become suspect of a disregard for the first principles of its own routine, of the rules regulating international relations and of the great traditions of the Civil Service.

Such suspicious as these strike at the very roots of our political system and poison the very springs of our public life, and until they are removed the Labor Party is prejudiced in its task of uniting the workers of the world in the rebuilding of Europe, while the present Government is no less seriously prejudiced in the eyes of Europe as being held to owe its term of power to a secret service coup d'etat. Wherefore, the Trades Union Congress General Council, whose position gives it peculiar advantages for gauging the opinion of the electorates both in this country and on the continent, consider that it would be most regrettable if any considerations of party interest were to prevent Parliament and the two parties concerned from clearing the air by an official and public inquiry.

The Trades Union delegation in Moscow have investigated fully the authenticity of the "Red Letter" in so far as the Russians are concerned. But authenticity is really a minor matter compared to the question as to how this document came to get its authority. For, as the present Home Secretary pointed out to the House, it was the official action on and publication of the letter that made a crucial general election turn on this affair. This responsibility is shared between the Labor Party and the Foreign Office. The latter cannot demand a hearing in its own defence. This can only be done for it by the Labor Party.

The objections advanced against a public inquiry do not carry conviction. The safety of secret agents can be secured by their withdrawal, and has in any case been guaranteed by the Russian Government. If the Russian authorities can expose the officials and archives of the Foreign Office and Comintern to a foreign inspection, a refusal on our part to subject those of the Foreign Office and Scotland Yard to parliamentary investigation cannot but be held highly suspicious abroad. At home a persistence in opposing this public demand cannot but create growing contempt for and an ever decreasing confidence in Parliament and public life.

The General Council, therefore, urges that the Government permit representatives of the Labor Party to carry out an investigation on this point in association with officials of the Foregn Office and the Home Office.

Industrial Development of Soviet Russia

By MORRIS BACKALL.

Agricultural Growth and Peasant Life.

WHEN one visits Russia in 1925, he witnesses a very great development in industrial phases of Soviet Russia; nearly every department of the government and of the trade unions of the country are occupied with the problems of industry and commerce. The revolutionists of olden times as well as the new people that are working within the Soviets are planning how to make the factories and shops and the field yield more products.

I met comrades that were active in the underground movement of Russia, comrades that were deported from America, some of them were active trade union leaders here, some of them that went just to visit Russia and I found them all interested now in only one thing, that is, to bring Soviet Russia to the stage of a great and wealthy industrial productive country. Lenin, the great teacher of Communism, paid attention to all phases of industrial development and Trotsky in his book on Literature and Revolution says that only when the ovens in the houses are hot and the wheels of industry are revolving, we can speak of culture so Soviet Russia is working feverishly in the line of building up its industries.

THE new motto: "With the face to the village" means more or less an easier road to industrial building up of the peasant life as well as the country as a whole. We must bear in mind that five-sixths of the population of Soviet Russia are peasants. The village was not wholly destroyed by intervention and blockade as the industry in the city because agriculture decays slowly but is also building up itself slowly and if the village in Russia remains destroyed the industries of Russia will not find a market for its wares, therefore, the motto "Build the Village" and now the accomplishments are 78 per cent of the pre-war condition. The village is adjusting itself to the new conditions of the Soviet government; the peasant feels that he is an equal citizen and the economic improvement of the whole country is in his interest and therefore he is assisting the government of Soviet Russia in the industrial development of the country.

In 1923-1924 the export of agricultural products were in million rubles; grain products, 232,000,000 rubles, 82 per cent; products of technical growth and intensive culture a little over 35,000,000 rubles, which makes 13 per cent; cattle and poultry over 13,000,000 rubles, 5 per cent.

IN 1924-1925 the export of agricultural products were: prain products, 105,000,000 rubles, 41 per cent; products of technical growth and intensive culture, 71,000,000 rubles, 28 per cent; cattle and poultry, 76,000,000 ofer 29 per cent which shows that the village is adapting itself to the higher kind of export possibilities.

The Soviet government is taking into consideration that the export of live cattle and poultry and raw technical and intensive products are very costly in regard to transportation and competition in the foreign markets and therefore is working out a program of establishing cold storages, refrigerators, and an industry to enable the villages to produce bacon and ham and export these products to the foreign markets and receive a higher compensation. Also, to establish sugar factories near the villages that, at lesat half products in the form of brown sugar should be transported to the cities. In former times, the sugar factories were established only on the rich farms of the land owners; now, the Soviet government is bringing industry close to the villages. Also, the textile industries are brot closer to the peasant in the form of establishing factories in the country of textile and cotton.

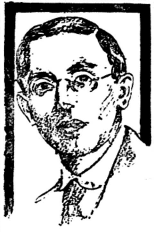
The peasant who is in Russia very much in the background of development will come to the front in productive capacity and will organize its life thru the assistance of the Soviet government in a semi-industrial co-operative fashion.

Electricity and Power.

THE question of electrifying Russia was a very serious one from the beginning when the workers took over the government. The Soviet leaders understand that if capitalism would not overcome the Communist state thru military intervention and blockade, they will try to effect it thru cheap products, so Lenin phrased the power of the worker state with these words: "Soviet form of government, dictatorship of the proletariat, plus electricity," and therefore it is no wonder that Lenin participated in every phase of electrical development of Russia. He brot this question to the eighth convention of the Soviets, December, 1920, and helped form the program for a speedy development of electricity in Russia, and Soviet Russia is fortunate in having great turf fields around Moscow and Leningrad that can be used for electrical power to serve the whole country. The program of Soviet Russia is for the next fifty years to establish thirty central stations. They are building now seven of these stations and three are already completed. Beyond Moscow they built the Kashirski and Shaturski stations, beyond Leningrad, the red October station. In 1926 will be completed the station Volochowski and the stations Nizegorodski and Shderovski, but together with the central stations, it is interesting to note the very rapid growth of the small electrical village stations.

In 1914 there were only 196 small electrical stations in Russia. In 1917, 217. In 1920, there were already 320. In 1923, 640. When we take into consideration the entire industry of Russia is depending upon cheap electric power then we can understand how great are the accomplishments thru this road in electricity.

COMRADE VOLODARSKY



Way back in 1905, a lad of 15 joined the revolutionary movement in the south of Russia. At first he was a member of the Bund (Jewish socialist organization) and later he joined the Spilka (Ukrainian socialist organization). He was soon expelled from the fifth class of high school for "political unreliability." In 1908, he got acquainted with the jail as a political prisoner. As soon as he was out, he became an underground party worker living "illegal." In 1911, he was again arrested and banished to Siberia for three years.

In those three years he completed his high school education studying privately. He passed examination for entrance to the university. He had no chance to enter a university on account of police persecutions.

He emigrated to the United States. In Philadelphia he learned the trade of a tailor, but did not stick to that trade very long. He moved to New York and joined the staff of the Russian Communist paper, the Novy Mir. Together with Bucharin and Chudnovski, and later on also with Trotsky, he participated in the paper until the revolution of 1917, called them all back to Russia.

As soon as he returned he became one of the most active comrades. After the Bolshevik uprising he was appointed commissar of the press propaganda and agitation. In June, 1918, he was assassinated by a band of counter-revolutionaries.

In July of this year, a monument was unveiled to him in Leningrad.

Textile Industry.

THE textile industry is the second one in the country. The entire population is in need of cloth and more so in Soviet Russia because the clothing fashion of the largest part of the population is depended upon its native color and native tradition. They use, for instance, shawls instead of hats in the villages among women and every district has its own native artistic design in regard to color and fashion. The clothing in the street is entirely depended upon the output of the textile industry and when in 1921 the government took over the textile industry, it found it nearly impossible to turn the wheels around, we must also take into consideration that a great deal of the textile industry of old Russia was located in districts of Poland, like Lodz and White Russia, Bialostok, which is now under Poland, so the textile industry was a very difficult problem to deal with. In October 1922-1923, 272,000 workers were occupied in the 24 textile trusts; in October, 1923-1924, 333,000 workers; in September, 1922-23, the textile industry of Soviet Russia occupied 296,000 workers; in September 1923-1924, 394,000 workers were occupied in the same industry. The average wage of a worker per day in October 1922-1923 waf 3 rubles a day; in October 1923-1924, 4 rubles a day.

But in order to understand the relative growth of the textile industry, we will take for an illustration the Komvolni trest, which is one of the 24 trust of the industry. Comrade Mendel Deich, who was once in America, is the chairman of this unit. He is a worker himself, very devoted to Soviet Russia and very able in his accomplishments and when he took over the leadership of this trest, the budget for the year was 36,000,000 rubles with eighteen factories. In 1924, the budget was already 92,000,000 rubles and the profit for the same year, seven million net.

The specialty of this trest is long, soft, very delicate wool and half wool weaving and shawl production. Of the 18 factories that are included in this trust, only 15 are working and 3 are in reserve and will be put in activity as soon as the necessity will arise. The 15 factories are representing a circle of finished production—that is in this here circle are included factories which are beginning with very raw material up to the coloring of it and finishing the complete product. The factories work in full speed, those that are preparing the raw material are even working three shiftts a day, and in order to complete the program of accomplishment the trust is compelled to buy raw material as raw wool in foreign countries, because Russia was never able to furnish its raw wool for its industries entirely. Now 29,000 weaver chairs and 72,000 brush machineries are working, 17,000 workers are occupied in this trust. The war and the civil war runined entirely these factories, but since the new industrial development it is making great headway. In 1922 the brush machines produced one-third of a million kilogram. In 1923, one million and one-sixth kilogram. In 1924, they produced already two million and two hundredths kilogram; parallel with the wool finishing developed the weaving side of the industry. In 1922 this trust produced eight million and nine hundredths of meter material. In 1923, 10,000,000 meter. In 1924, over 14 million. In 1925, twenty-one million meter will be produced. Comrade Deich explained to me that all of the directors, as well as the workers themselves, are doing all they can to improve the industry. Their ambition is to establish new factories with machinery of the latest accomplishment of the world. The products of this trust are sold in their own stores all over the Russian country, peasant women in Siberia as well as in Ukrainian are wearing dresses of the material made in these factories and the shawls produced in this trust.

Bryan's Place In History

the party and again became the presidential nominee; this time against Wm. H. Taft. For the third time he waged a campaign designed to appeal to the petty bouregoisie, and again he met defeat at the polls.

Finance capital, under the leadership of the House of Morgan, was growing more powerful and was far from satisfied with the policy of the Taft government that was defending with all its might the interests of the industrialist group around Standard Oil. Between 1908 and 1910 the House of Morgan made a drive for control of the democratic party and in the congressional elections of 1910 the democratic party, for the first time since the elections of 1892, secured a majority in the house of congress and increased by a substantial number its representatives of the United States senate. Thus the party that since the civil war had held aloft the banner of the middle class capitulated to the wiles of finance capital. Thru a period of nearly thirty years the influence of that party had declined in inverse ratio to the growth of the great combinations of capital. The class from which it derived its support, the petty bouregoisie, was being sapped of its vitality, it did not have sufficient power and cohesion to maintain an independent political existence. Those elements of this class that survived became more and more dependent upon the large industrialist and financial groups.

Tiger Eats Out of Morgan's Palm.

When the 1912 convention opened at Baltimore the democratic party was the private property of the House of Morgan. Champ Clark of Missouri, was the candidate for Morgan. Tammany Hall was represented by a full delegation determined to put thru the nomination of Clark. But this plan was frustrated by Bryan and his supporters who came from the middle and far west. In a terrific attack against control of the party by "the interests" he arraigned August Belmont and Thomas F. Ryan, both representatives of the House of Morgan and both delegates at that convention.

Bryan, thruout the long convention, opposed Clark, even after the Missourian had received a majority of the votes (two-thirds being required to nominate) and supported Woodrow Wilson, then governor of New Jersey. Bryan was victorious and Wilson nominated.

That same year saw a split in the republican party. Standard Oil insisted upon control of that party and the renomination of Taft, and the harvester, packing house and steel trusts concentrating upon Roosevelt. The tempestuous Teddy headed the Bull Moose ticket, endeavoring to capture the imagination of the moron middle class by having his supporters parade the Chicago Coliseum, where the "progressive" convention was held, singing "Onward Christian Soldiers," between gulps of strong liquor.

In this three cornered fight Woodrow Wilson was elected and when he announced the personnel of his cabinet, William Jennings Bryan headed the slate as secretary of state, as a reward for having nominated the president.

Morgan Pulls the Strings.

From the very day he occupied that office history played peculiar pranks with this champion of the middle class. His first act as secretary of state in the Wilson cabinet was in the interest of the House of Morgan altho the "peerless leader" fondly imagined he was striking a death blow at imperialism. The Wilson administration, as its first international maneuver, announced the withdrawal of the United States government from the "six power group" which had been trying to impose a loan upon China under most shameful conditions, which amounted to partitioning that nation between England, France, Germany , Japan, Russia and the United States.

All the petty bourgeois liberals in the country hailed this act as indicative of the benevolent character of the Wilson administration. Instead of the mailed fist, they saw extended by the government a helping hand. Bryan thought he had at last seen the triumph of his anti-imperialist plank of 1900; this vile conspiracy, the six power loan, was stifled by the valiant hand of the liberal Wilson government.

But then it came to light that the House of Morgan, representing the American syndicate, had objected in the first place to this country's participation in the loan, but the Standard Oil group in control of the Taft administration had urged them to accept.

Instead of analyzing the situation and recognizing the fact that the petty bourgeois leaders of the nation were being used as pawns of finance capital, the liberals and social-democrats indulged in veritable dithyrambics, hailing Wilson and his government as the saviors of the world.

Meanwhile Morgan and his associates sat back and smiled at the antics of these liberals, knowing that the first act of the Wilson government had made it possible for Morgan to challenge the rest of the world in China instead of sharing within a consortium of powers the resources of China.

Bryan is the Jumping Jack.

From that time to the approach of the declaration of war against Germany we had the inglorious spectacle of Bryan, champion of the middle class, unconsciously playing the game of the finance capitalists of Wall Street whom he so bitterly condemned when they tried to select their own candidate. Of course Wall Street had its preferences in the matter of candidates, but since it controlled the democratic party the figurehead was of secondary consideration.

It was not until the notes he was compelled to write Germany grew more bitter and the threat of entering the war more menacing that the petty bouregois soul of Bryan revolted and he quit the cabinet, realizing that his nominee, Wilson, was but the servile lackey of the House of Morgan, but not daring to publicly state his convictions because of the war hysteria.

At the San Francisco convention of 1920 Bryan played no role, but at last year's convention at Madison Square Garden, New York, he aided McAdoo defeat the aspirations of the Tammanyite, Governor Al. Smith. He also prevented the convention denouncing by name that instrument of a dying middle class, the ku klux klan. But he could not prevent the nomination of Mr. John W. Davis, the lawyer of the House of Morgan. The middle class support of other years had been swept into the LaFollette movement in the summer of 1924, to be later terrorized into support of Coolidge and the republican party.

Bryan's political sun had set. His place in history was that of champion of the middle class, and as its vitality ebbed so his political prestige declined.

Bryan and Religion.

As the middle class of this country turned to religion and mummery after its political failures, so Bryan turned his face in the same direction. Even in the sphere of religion the class conflict has its reflex. With the growth of imperialism religious concepts change. Since imperialism deals with people in all parts of the world and of various faiths the religion of imperialism must be cosmopolitan, not the provincialism of the middle class. Hence the rise of modernism in religion, preaching reconciliation of all the various beliefs. It is stubbornly resisted by the fundamentalists, the orthodox presbyterians, baptists, methodists and the lower strata of this sort of thing, the holy rollers, Nazarene's, etc.

Bryan, a political fizzle, became the foremost champion of the religion of the middle class of this country. Of all the fundamentalists, he had the audacity to assert that he not only accepted the bible as a guide to morality, but that he believed it from cover to cover; the fish story, the snake story, the rib story and all.

A follower of John Calvin, his religion was that of predestination, the religion of the petty bourgeoisie. Since members of this class cannot explain their financial failures in spite of the fact that they practice those capitalist virtues of industry, thrift and perseverance, they attribute it to the decree of some supreme being who had foreordained that they shall fail.

In this last fight of his career, Bryan stood forth as the personification of all the ignorance, the hatred and the bigotry of a petty capitalist class desperately fighting for life and losing its struggle. His antics at the evolutionist trial at Dayton, where he died, not merely revealed his own shallowness, his astounding ignorance of everything that passes for education among intelligent people, but at the same time revealed the low state of mentality of the obnoxious crew for which he had spoken for the past 30 years. His senseless, spread-eagle, flamboyant oratory could only receive favorable recognition among members of such a class. He was absurdly puritanical with all the viciousness of puritanism. In his seared heart there surely burned the fires of another inquisition, but his followers were not sufficiently numerous to start the thing.

The Last Ironic Joke.

But his god, the deity of the petty bourgeoisie, played its last ironic joke on this embattled crusader by snatching him from his followers, at a most inconvenient time and in a most conspicuous manner. Surely no one but a thoro fundamentalist can explain the caprice of a god that will remove from the scene his principal champion and permit the agents of the devil to live and gloat over their earthly triumph. About all that is left for the fundamentalist ministers of the gospel is to repeat the sombre litany of predestination and state that their god "works in mysterious ways his wonders to perform."

As for us revolutionists, who have disposed alike of gods and devils, we view the demise of Bryan as heralding the death of the indpendent political movement of the petty bourgeoisie whose champion he remained to the end, in spite of that fact that his most notable political achievement was that of the unconscious tool of the House of Morgan.

BUILDERS AT WORK

MOTHER BLOOR—MASTER BUILDER.

Inspiration for Our Youth.

THE spirit of Ella Reeve "Mother" Bloor is undaunted. To date, this Communist agitator has covered over 3,000 miles since leaving San Francisco on June 1, yet she continues now thru New York state, talking Communism, speaking for its standard bearer, the DAILY WORKER, fighting reaction at all points. With a ready smile and grim determination, covering all important cities enroute and speaking on schedule, this veteran Communist fighter of 62 years, has yet to pay a cent of railroad fare. This hitch-hiking tour for the DAILY WORKER is unequalled by any former agitational tours.

Hundreds of subscriptions come from every district visited. New Communist branches now flourish where before there was only a wish among local workers; new Junior groups have sprung into existence thanks to the energy of Mother Bloor—Master Builder—Communist agitator with but few equals.

Arriving in New York on Sept. 9, Mother Bloor at 62 years of age completes a cross-country tour under circumstances that make it an achievement for the inspiration of the Communist youth in our party.

If you are fortunate enough to live in nay of the following cities greet Mother Bloor, shake the hand of a comrade who adds further achievements to our party to build it:

"Uncle Sam" Sets His Foot in Africa

By B. BORISOFF.

Two significant news items were reported by the capitalist press in the course of the last few days. One comes from Berlin and reads as follows:

"One of the biggest financial deals since the war is being negotiated. It is the sale to an Anglo-American syndicate, the names of whose members are kept secret, of the gigantic interests of the Mannesmann brothers IN THE SPANISH ZONE IN MOROCCO AND THE RIFF TERRITORY. The property, vast in extent, includes harbor works at Alhucemas and other coastal ports, zinc, sulphur and other mines and large tracts of agricultural lands. The motive for the sale is said to be that THE MANNESMANNS SEE NO PROSPECT OF CARRYING ON ACTIVITIES IN MOROCCO WITHOUT POLITICAL COMPLICATIONS."

Imperialism Spreads Tentacles.

The other news is from Akron, Ohio, and brings the following information:

"News from Akron that the Firestone Tire and Rubber company has virtually concluded negotiations for the lease of 1,000,000 acres in Liberia, to be devoted to raising rubber, was the outstanding event in the business developments of the day.

"A rubber plantation of this size would be by far the largest one under single management in the world. The United States Rubber holdings in Sumatra and the Malay peninsula, amounting to 110,000 acres, are now said to be the largest.

"An Associated Press dispatch from Akron said that, while no official announcement could be obtained from the Firestone company, it was learned from authoritative sources that a $100,000,000 CORPORATION WILL BE FORMED SHORTLY TO OPERATE THE VAST PLANTATIONS."

Here indeed is a cause for great joy from the viewpoint of American capitalists. "Uncle Sam" is expanding his industry; "Uncle Sam" sets his foot in a new quarter of the world. "We" have scored again and "we" take what is due to "us" for "we" are the greatest, the richest, the most industrially developed nation in the world.

This is from the viewpoint of the American capitalists, of the American imperialists who always try to represent their gains, their grabs as an achievement of and a benefit to the "nation."

Carry Germs of War.

But shall the workers rejoice because of this news.

Do these developments promise them peace, prosperity, contentment, or do they carry the germs of war, suffering, death?

Let us examine the question.

What was the cause of the world war? The answer that it was a fight for "democracy" against "autocracy" does not satisfy any more. It is now clear to the broad masses of workers that this was a fight for world domination between two great imperialist powers—Germany and England. The struggle for the possession of Africa formed an important part of this world struggle. It was very bitter. German imperialism came late upon the scene.

Rivalry of Nations.

It found the African continent divided among other powers. Even little Belgium surpassed it in the number of its colonial population in Africa and almost equalled it in the area of its colonial possessions.

To this German imperialism could not reconcile itself. It was determined to establish itself on the Mediterranean coast of Africa, it was determined to get possession of the rich mineral resources of Morocco. The "Moroccan question" threatened several times to become the immediate cause of a world war, it was undoubtedly one of its main contributing factors.

German Plutes Give Up.

The world war crushed the hopes of German imperialism for the domination of the world. It has no power to defend its former claims in Morocco. The Mannesmann syndicate has to give up its rich concessions, for there is "no propect of carrying on activities in Morocco without political complications." Germany is powerless to meet such "complications."

U. S. Plays Game.

But who is the heir of German imperialist aspirations for world domination, who is the heir of German claims upon the mineral resources of Morocco?—It is "Uncle Sam," it is the American imperialism, the most powerful imperialism of the present epoch. It is powerful enough and it is ready to meet the "political complications" connected with the Moroccan concessions, but it is just as powerless to avoid them as Germany was.

American imperialism at present occupies the same relative position as German imperialism occupied on the eve of the world war. The division of the world is complete. It comes late upon the scene to present its claims upon the sources of raw materials, its territorial claims which are bound up inseparably with the former. These claims cannot be settled peacefully. The formation of an international syndicate is but a temporary makeshift, postponing the armed struggle, for the essence of imperialism is monopoly, the striving for world domination which can be settled only by force.

Fight for World Power.

"Uncle Sam," American imperialism in its aspiration for world domination is confronted with the same rival as Germany was—the English imperialism. Their interests are irreconcilable, and the two news items which we have quoted indicate but two new points of conflict between them in addition to many others already in existance.

We are witnessing a gigantic struggle between the two for the possession of the world resources of petroleum, of iron and other metal ores and finally of rubber. The news from Akron, Ohio, indicates "Uncle Sam's" determination to break "John Bull's" monopoly in this latter field.

Is it necessary to point out that "Uncle Sam's" claims in Africa are a great deal more dangerous to Great Britain than Germany's were? Is it not clear that here we have the development of a more gigantic struggle than that of the last world war?

Leads to World War.

The American workers have no cause to rejoice in this development. The rivalry between American and English imperialism will lead to the same inevitable end as in the recent past the struggle between England and Germany—to a world war.

The workers will again be called to the colors to defend—what? In the past it was "democracy"—they were told they were fighting for It will be the interests of the "nation" they will be called upon to fight for in the new conflict

Bankers Rule Country

Let them not be deceived. Let them understand and remember that draped in the bright colors of the national flag and covered by it are the interests of American bankers, of American steel kings, oil kings and rubber kings, of Morgan, Gary, Rockefeller, Firestone—a gang of thieves, robbers and murderers who rule the country at present This imperialist rule must be overthrown and in its place the rule of the workers and poor farmers must be established. This will abolish forever the source of imperialist wars. and will be the foundation of a free Communist society.

MOTION ON THE EXPULSION OF LORE FROM THE PARTY

Supplementary to Parity Commission Resolution Proposed Jointly by Comrades Bedacht and Bittelman.

SINCE the decision of the enlarged plenum of the C. I. on Loreism, Lore has been manifesting tendencies which have proven to the party that Lore does not intend to abide by the decision of the Comintern. In fact, the whole behavior of Lore is hostile and antagonistic to the C. I. and the party. His activities during the last few months can be construed as nothing else than the ideological and political preparation for a split from the party. This compels the convention to take clear and definite action on the matter of Lore.

The American Party contains opportunist elements as were stigmatized by the Communist International. In May, 1924, the question of Lore and Loreism was first taken up by the C. I. in April, 1925, due to the world situation and to the refusal of Lore to attend the Comintern sessions and to correct his mistakes, and to the growing militancy of the right wing in our party, the C. I. again took a stand on the same question. In the decision of April, 1925, based upon the activities and writings of Comrade Lore, the C. I. declared Lore is a social democratic opportunist, that he is unfit for membership in the C. E. C. of our party and that he must be removed as editor of the Volkszeitung. The C. I. thus pointed out the need of taking ideological and organizational measures against Lore.

HIS failure to accept the invitation of the C. I. to participate in the plenum and to explain his points of view is clear and definite proof that Lore refuses to come to terms with the C. I. and to accept its policies and leadership.

Since the C. I. decision, of April, 1925, Comrade Lore has continued to be in opposition to the policies of the Comintern and is conducting a policy that leads away from and against the Comintern. He has combatted the reorganization of the party on the basis of shop nuclei, raising doubts as to the efficacy of this form of organization as the basis of our party. Comrade Lore conceives as the main function of our party merely education and propaganda—a purely social-democratic point of view. Comrade Lore has manifested a social-democrtaic idea of imperialism—in recent articles on China, etc.

Owing to this attitude of Comrade Lore, the C. E. C. acting on the decision of the Communist International, decided to take certain steps against Lore and Loreism in our party. It conducted an ideological campaign exposing the nature of Loreism as a phase of international opportunism and educating the membership of our party and the workers generally as to its character and danger.

IT became necessary also to take organizational steps against Lore, in conformity with the instructions of the C. I. Comrade Lore was instructed to carry out the following measures:

1. To take steps to put the Volkszeitung under control of the party.
2. To line up the Loreite Bureau of the German Federation to carry out the decision of the C. I.
3. To educate the membership of the German Federation as to the nature of social-democratic opportunism in our party—which extends far beyond the German Federation into the Finnish, Jewish and other Federations.

WHAT has Comrade Lore done to carry out these instructions?

1. Comrade Lore has failed to take a single step to put the Volkszeitung under control of the party—even to the extent of refusing to furnish the party with a copy of the constitution and the by-laws of the Socialist Cooperative Publishing Association, which controls the paper.
2. Instead of lining up the German Bureau for executing the decision of the party, Lore has organized the Bureau gaainst the party. Lore has furthermore organized the membership of the Socialist Co-operative Publishing Association to resist the taking over of the Volkszeitung by the party.
3. Comrade Lore and the German Bureau have denied the branches of the German Federation the right and opportunity to discuss Trotskyism and Loreism, thus obstructing one of the primary steps in bolshevizing the workers in the German Federation.
4. Comrade Lore has refused to publish the articles written by Comrade Bedacht on instructions of the sub-committee of the C. E. C.—articles intended to make clear the position of the C. I. and the opportunist deviations of Comrade Lore.

The Parity Commission recently issued a resolution on the liquidation of Loreism in the Workers Party—a resolution which clearly reveals that nature of Loreism and demonstrates that Loreism and opportunism are ripe in many sections of our party. On August 5, this resolution was placed before Comrade Lore and the German Bureau by the sub-committee of the C. E. C. In the discussion which followed, Comrade Lore vigorously defended his opportunist position, declaring that his point of view had been "perverted, distorted and misrepresented in Moscow, where the leaders of the C. I. were given only exerpts and digests of his articles."

THIS is the usual excuse of all opportunists in Communist parties. Like Comrade Askeli, Comrade Lore defended the so-called Communism in his articles, thus proving that he is an incurable opportunist and therefore is dangerous to our party.

Comrade Schueler, an active member of the German Bureau, declared himself in opposition to the policies of the Communist International which he stated, to be only temporary. Other members of the Bureau expressed themselves as against the "despotism of Moscow." Against these statements, Comrade Lore did not say a word in defense of the C. I.

This attitude on the part of all the Loreite members of the German Bureau made it necessary for the party to take drastic steps. Upon their voting against the Parity resolution, they were immediately removed from the Bureau and the Bureau was reorganized.

Since the publication of the decision of the Parity Commission on Loreism, there appeared in the Volkszeiutng a series of editorials which not only take definite issues with this decison but also reaffirm the correctness of Lore's views which were denounced by the C. I. as non-Communist and opportunist.

LORE failed to come to the convention of the party altho he is a member of the Central Executive Committee and altho he knew that the question of Loreism and Lore will be the central point on the agenda of the convention. This failure to come to the party convention and defend before the party his position, again proves that Lore no longer considers himself bound by party opinion and party discipline.

Lore has been sabotaging in every possible way the carrying out of the Central Executive Committee's decision regarding the Volkszeitung.

Generally speaking, Lore has been treating the party as a whole and the New York district organization, of which he is a member, as an enemy showing complete disregard for the party's functions and activities.

These facts are proof sufficient for the party that Lore has embarked upon a course of open opposition and hostility to the party and the C. I. That Lore is preparing his ground for open, organized struggle against the party. In view of this situation, the cnovention decides:

1. That Lore's presence in the party has become a menace to its Communist integrity and to its organizational unity.
2. That the interests of Bolshevising our party, particularly its reorganization on the basis of shop nuclei, demand that the party free itself of the opportunistic influence and anti-Bolshevik tendencies of Lore.
3. That Lore is expelled forthwith from the Workers (Communist) Party of America.

GREEN SEEKS WAR ON COMMUNISTS

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

THE working class lamb lay down with the capitalist lion on Labor Day to the great joy of the labor fakers who had the honor of tickling the lion's stomach with a union card after the beast had swallowed the loyal wage slave. The interests of capital and labor were identical last Monday tho strange to say half a dozen strikes stuck up their heads on Tuesday, here there and everywhere, as if to confound the prophets.

LEARNED capitalist editors, after receiving orders from their publishers dwelt profoundly on the great change that has come over the working class movement in the United States since the days when it paraded on May Day and even on the cooler, first Monday in December. In those days the workers were mobilized as a protest against the capitalist system even tho many of the workers did not realize it. In the front of the line of march were the workers who happened to be on strike. Speeches were made, in which the employers were condemned and labor was urged to close its ranks and fight its enemy.

THANK the good lord, say the capitalist editors, and the labor fakers, those days are no more. Today, as Brisbane would say, the workers take out their limousines and lug their wives, children, housemaids, poodle dogs and parrots to some pretty country scene and enjoy the beauty of nature far away from the smoke and soot of the city. I have not read so far of a horny handed son of toil unhitching his airplane and flying to Alaska for a few days recreation. He could be back at his hammer, trowel or paint brush in time to draw down thirty of forty dollars for a day's work on Tuesday.

THIS is the kind of a life that raises Cain with the class struggle, we are informed. The workers are becoming capitalists and are realising that all this talk about the class struggle is nonsense. Bill Green chimes in with an "aye, aye, sir." Ditto for the other several thousand parasites who dumped their offal on the ether last Monday. Green says we must reprimand the "autocratic employers" but fight the Communists. The Communists tell the workers to fight all employers. There are no good ones any more than there are good bed bugs.

LABOR won a great victory in New York when it succeeded in getting Al Smith and John F. Hylan on the same platform without either gentleman hurling a stink bomb at the other. New York labor counts itself by millions but a bare three thousand gathered at Fort Hamilton to hear the capitalist comedians drool their inanities. Perhaps the rest of the working class population of New York was in Bermuda for the holidays.

IN Chicago, there was not a squawk out of the "bona fide labor movement." "Weeping" John H. Walker delivered a speech in Springfield in which he thanked Governor Small for the favors he conferred on the workers. There was nothing said about the favors the workers conferred on Small. The unemployed miners of Illinois would like to see the governor come across with some of those blessings, that the tearful John talked about. The thousands of other workers who work long hours for short pay are also curious. They are willing to be enlightened.

JAMES J. DAVIS, secretary of labor in strikebreaker Coolidge's cabinet comes out boldly for the trusts and favors laws that would prevent over development of industry. He said that some of the mines should be shut down and only enough to take care of the needs of industry be allowed to operate. Too many mines interfere with profits. How about the miners who would be thrown out of work by Davis's efficiency plan? What of them? They are only workers. So thinks Davis and so thinks John L. Lewis, president of the miners union. Those who interfere with the making of profit should step aside. A war would be a nice way to get rid of them, but unfortunately wars are costly financially and sometimes politically. If the Czar were alive he would testify to the truth of this assertion. Even the Kaiser would nod his head affirmatively.

ALL in all, Labor Day proved that the workers of the United States are rolling in luxury, that there is no class struggle, here, that everybody has enough to eat and drink and that the poor are just as well off as the

BRITISH TRADE UNION CONGRESS OPENS WITH PROMISE OF BATTLE BETWEEN LEFT AND RIGHT WING

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Sept. 8.—The British Trades Union Congress opened at Scarborough yesterday with a speech by President A. B. Swales, who took care to steer a middle course between the sharpening files of the right and left wings of British labor. But even Swales asserted that—"A militant and progressive policy, steadily pursued, is the only policy that will unify, consolidate and inspire our rank and file."

Swales warned capital that "a limit has been reached in the concessions the unions can be forced to make," and declared that if the British government had any regard for relieving the increasing unemployment, it should cultivate trade relations with

REVOLUTIONARY MINE WORKERS IN GREETING TO ANTHRACITE STRIKERS

THE DAILY WORKER has received the following cablegram: Moscow, Soviet Russia: September 8, 1925.

To the Coal Miners of the United States:

We send fraternal greetings and our warmest desire for the success of the striking miners in the anthracite region.

Stand firm!

Follow the lead of the Progressive Miners' Committee!

Organize the utmost support to the strikers among all miners, all workers! Demand that the bituminous miners strike in solidarity with their brothers in the anthracite! Call upon the railroad workers to ship no coal to be used to break the strike! Then victory will be yours.

The sympathy of the miners of the whole world is with you in this struggle against the greedy operators.

UNION MINERS ON TRIAL AT ZEIGLER, ILL.

Preliminary Hearing Remains Indecisive

ZEIGLER, Ill., Sept. 8.— The preliminary hearing in the cases which are the scandal of the Illinois Miners' Union, wherein D. B. Cobb, vice-president of Sub-District 9, of District 12, is prosecuting more than a score of the rank and file members of Local 992, in the capitalist courts, opened here this morning with an indecisive battle between contending forces.

There are two charges made by Cobb against the union miners, one of assault with intent to murder and one of conspiracy to murder. Hearing on the assault charge will be heard first.

GARY SHOP NUCLEUS IN PROMPT RESPONSE TO APPEAL FOR CASH

GARY, Ind., Sept. 8—It didn't need long to get the Gary shop nucleus into action for the DAILY WORKER drive. At its first meeting following the appeal for funds to aid our fighting labor daily, the nucleus of the party in the Illinois Steel mills gathered up $30 and rushed it in to lead the list of the Workers Pary units which are responding to the DAILY WORKER appeal.

The city organizer of the Workers Party says, moreover, that this is just a beginning, and that Gary may double this first contribution from the street nucleus. This is a mark of what nucleus work can do when it really sets about doing things.

War to Left Wing, Peace to Bosses, to be Policy

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 8.—Herald of an intensified drive against all progressives and militant workers in the American Federation of Labor, and prophetic of the policy the coming Atlantic City convention of the A. F. of L. next month is going to adopt toward all dissenting opinion, particularly the Communists, William Green, in a Labor Day speech here, hit Detroit employers with a silken glove merely as a prelude to announcing a policy of extermination and war against the left wing under a guise of "fighting Communists."

Covertly twisting facts to suit his argument, he resorted to the ridiculous charge that Communists are "responsible for discontent" because, as he said, they attempt to do away "with so-called capitalism and capitalistic government."

Attacks Filled With Distortions

"The Communist Party," he said "thru certain subsidiary organizations, is attempting to capture and control the organized labor movement of our land. The advocates of Communism preach a doctrine that is the very antithesis of that advocated by labor. Communism stands for autocracy whereas labor is for democracy.

"Communism preaches the overthrow of the existing order and the establishment of a dictatorship. Communism urges violence, direct action, uprisings—all having for their ultimate purpose the overthrow of so-called capitalism and capitalistic government.

"Organized labor believes in collective bargaining and wage agreements. The Communists are opposed to this and call it 'class collaboration.' The philosophy of Communism and the philosophy of organized labor cannot be harmonized. One is destructive. The other is constructive.

Declares War On Communists

"Organized labor, therefore, cannot and will not tolerate Communism or Communists. Members of organized labor are either trade unionists or Communists. They cannot be both.

WORKERS PARTY CAMPAIGN MAKES BIG HEADWAY IN ANTHRACITE STRIKE

The campaign of the Workers (Communist) Party in the anthracite coal strike is making big headway. The Central Executive Committee has decided to have special Lithuanian and Italian organizers in the strike field. The DAILY WORKER, the Lithuanian organ, Laisve, the Hungarian organ, Elore, and the Italian weekly, Il Lavoratore, are preparing special anthracite strike issues to be published shortly.

The Lithuanian Section Bureau has already responded to the call of the Central Executive Committee for active Communist participation in the anthracite strike by sending two special field organizers into the strike zone. These comrades are experienced organizers and have a special knowledge of the anthracite district. The special issue of the Laisve will contain among many other features, articles by striking miners, telling about the experiences of, and conditions prevailing among the striking miners.

STRIKERS SHOW SOLIDARITY BY MASS PICKETING

Garment Co. Increases Its Police Guard

A demonstration of mass picketing was successfully conducted by members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union yesterday before the struck plant of the International Tailoring compnay at 847 Jackson blvd. Over 50 striking employes were on the picket line. The International had heard of the plans for the mass picketing, and had called in several dozen extra city and private police and detectives.

Mike Grady's detective bureau squad was present, as well as several flivver loads of uniformed police and Cadillac squads of detectives. No arrests were made, however.

The situation in the New York plant of the same company, where 800 employes are also out on strike, is progresing favorably for the strikers, it was announced at the strike meeting yesterday in the Hod Carriers' Hall, 814 W. Harrison St. The strikebreakers have only turned out 175 suits during the strike there, and these were so poorly made that the company was forced to unload them for $3.50 a piece, it was learned.

The mass picking yesterday was carried out in order to show the garment bosses that the beginning of the busy season, which started Labor Day, finds the Amalgamated members with their forces intact and determined to win union conditions.

The pickets who appeared in room 1106, city hall, yesterday to answer to charges of "disorderly conduct" and assault," following their arrest during the past few weeks picketing, were told to come back September 10, their cases having been continued.

The Economic Background of the Anthracite Strike

By EARL R. BROWDER

WHAT are the economic facts surrunding the present strike of 150,000 anthracite miners? Knowledge of these facts, in their main outline, is essential for the worker who would judge the importance of the struggle and the degree of correctness of the policies being put into effect. In their details, these facts are available in many large printed volumes, beyond the access of most workers. But it is possible to secure, in brief outline, a picture of the economic position of anthracite, and the relation of forces in the struggle, which will be of value to the thinking worker.

The coal-mining industry in America clearly divides itself into two sections, anthracite and bituminous. The bituminous branch, employing some three-quarters of a million workers who produce close to 500 million tons annually, is widely scattered geographically, is still undeveloped technically, presents the widest variety of capitalist development, concentration of capital, etc., and is sharing to the full the world-crisis in the coal industry.

Anthracite, on the other hand, on account of its peculiar favored position, has not participated to the full in the world's coal crisis. Employing approximately 150,000 miners who produe 80 to 90 million tons annually, it is concentrated geographically in a small section of eastern Pennsylvania, and is practically a monopoly in the hands of a small, highly-integrated group of capitalists. Thus anthracite presents conditions quite dissimilar to bituminous. While the bituminous miners, for example, have been suffering unprecedented unemployment, the anthracite miners have been working quite steadily.

Concentration of Capital in Anthracite

Anthracite is in the hands of a small monopolist group, a combination of banks, railroad companies, and coal interests. This combination, dating back sixty years and a basic unit in the foundation of American capitalism, is a classic example of that process described by Lenin, in his epoch-making book "Imperialism," when he said:

"Thus on the one hand we have an ever more complete fusion, or as N. I. Bucharin aptly puts it, growing into each other of bank capital and industry, and on the other, the development of the banks into institutions really possessing an 'universal character'."*

The physical basis for the monopolistic character of the anthracite industry, can be seen in the report of the Geological Survey (1920) which shows that the anthracite field, eastern Pennsylvania, consists of 374 mines, under 174 producing organizations, of whom eight control more than 70 per cent of the entire output.

These eight monster monopolists of anthracite are organically connected with a combination of great railroads and banks. For example, the Lehigh Valley Coal Co., with $45,000,000 assets, is owned by the Lehigh Valley Railroad Co., the Lehigh and Wilkes-Barre Coal Co., with $53,000,000 assets is owned by the Central Railroad of N. J., the Reading and affiliated companies; etc. It is unnecessary to point out these railroads, and the New York Central, the Pennsylvania, etc., which have great bituminous holdings also, are in organic combination with the great financial institutions of Wall Street.

The great monopoly has long been the object of attack by the petty-bourgeois reformists, in and out of congress, and its nature very accurately described. As long ago as 1894, we find one of the great leaders of the middle-class declaring:

"Within the last 30 years, 95 per cent of the anthracite coal of America—practically the entire supply, it was reported by congress in 1893—has passed from the ownership of private citizens into the possession of the railroads.

"These railroads have been undergoing a similar process of consolidation, and are now the property of eight great corporations."*

CHINESE SHOT FOR STRIKING, FUNDS NEEDED

Strikers Face Prison and Foreign Bayonets

The American branch of the Workers International Relief located at 1553 W. Madison St., received a copy of the following telegram transmitted thru the Berlin headquarters:

Pekin, August 21, 1925

Workers International Relief:

Twenty thousand workers in Tientsin and Tsingtau have been striking for three weeks. Japanese imperialists use new tactics against the liberation movement by pushing forward instead of foreign troops those of chang Tso Lin, the imperialist instrument.

"In Tsingtau two were shot, among them the editor of the worker-sympathizing paper, Kungyengao. In Tsientsin five hundred workers, bound in ropes, were taken away. Thousands are besieged in workshops and the export of victuals is blocked. The necessity is pressing. Transmit urgent relief, ten thousand dollars—Chinese Committee, Kuamangyu."

The capitalist press is silent about these facts. The public is led to believe that all is well, where in reality all is hell. Bullets and bayonets are the answer given to a defenseless people who cry for bread and demand to be free from foreign invasion. Their blood flows from emaciated bodies. Bound hand and foot they are thrown into dungeons because they dare resist their oppressors.

Those who love liberty above all else must hasten to aid these Chinese workers. The International Workers' Aid, 1553 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill., will be glad to receive all contributions for their relief and support.

AS WE SEE IT

rich and perhaps better because they have less responsibility. But—on Tuesday morning, the day after Labor Day, an appeal reached our desk from the Chicago Kiwanis Club, with the following legend: "Wouldn't you like to go along with us in doing something practical? Right now in Chicago, there are thousands of weak undernourished babies whose widowed mothers are too poor to buy the necessary food—milk."

PERHAPS the former husbands of those widows are now pushing up the lilies on "Flanders Field," where they died to make this world a better place to live in—like hell. Perhaps they were killed directly or indirectly in some factory, mine or railroad. But not only widows have a hard time buying food for their children. The wives of the working class in general don't find the task easy.

THERE is no need to sermonise or curse over this condition. The bleating of the capitalists and the labor fakers has the right of way for the moment in this country. The labor-fakers are building cathedrals where supplies of religious opium will be manufactured for injection into the brains of the working class. They are organizing banks and insurance companies. But they can no more prevent the social revolution or eliminate the class struggle than King Canute could hold back the tide with a broom. Other Labor Days will come when the old militancy of labor will reappear guided by a new thought, a new program and new leaders.

How to Save the Daily Worker

By Moritz J. Loeb.

WITH the DAILY WORKER engaged in a bitter struggle for its very existence, the question which must be asked and answered by everyone who has the welfare of the working class at heart, is: "How can I help save the DAILY WORKER?"

This is no small or simple question. Ever since the day the DAILY WORKER was established it has had to wage a determined fight for its continuance. Now after twenty months of day after day combat the crisis is at hand. If the DAILY WORKER is to survive the efforts of every militant worker must be exerted without a moment's delay.

Can the DAILY WORKER Be Saved?

THERE are those who may ask, "Can the DAILY WORKER really survive? Or is it a mere matter of postponing the inevitable end?"

To such questions there can only be one answer and it must be made with thunderous emphasis. The DAILY WORKER will survive and will moreover grow in strength and power and influence so that it will no longer be a matter of saving the DAILY WORKER but one making its effectiveness increase. For the basis for the life and growth of our organ has been laid.

Methods Which Will Turn the Trick.

THERE are many ways in which help can be given to the DAILY WORKER. Some of these methods have been used by practically all of our readers during the past year and a half and this accounts for the rapid development of our press.

Now the DAILY WORKER is in a desperate crisis. To meet this emergency special means are necessary.

First of all, ALL OF US, every Communist, every militant worker, every militant organization will have to ACT—TOGETHER annd AT ONCE.

The need is for money, at least $5,000 within a week and an additional $5,000 before the next week is up.

There are several ways to get this money. The quickest is to send in donations. "As much as you can and as quick as you can."

Another way is to renew your subscriptions. Whether your sub is soon to expire or not you can send in your renewal now and add another term to your sub. That's a good way to make sure that the DAILY WORKER will continue and that you will continue to receive it.

Another way is to sell subscriptions to other workers. This method is a little slow to meet the present emergency but in the long run it's the greatest assurance to the life and growth of the DAILY WORKER.

All of us acting together—
All of us exerting every effort—
WE CAN— WE MUST— WE WILL Save THE DAILY WORKER!

GERMAN, FRENCH TEACHERS SEE SOVIET SCHOOLS

Astonished at High Cultural Level

MOSCOW—(By Mail)—The Franco-Belgian-German teachers' delegation visited the district comittee of the trade union of the educational workers' schools, youth homes, museums and the Moscow Trade Union Council. After the inspection the delegate Specht declared on behalf of the delegation: "Abroad it is said that culture in the Soviet Union is still in the 17th century.

"We have seen however, that in comparison with the other states it is in the 21st century. When we compare the technically backward Russia with the rich bourgeois countries, we cannot but express our astonishment at the cultural achievements of the Soviet Union. Western Europe is a dead museum, Soviet Russia is a living source of culture."

NATIONALIZATION PLAN IS DENIED BY JOHN LEWIS

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 8. — John L. Lewis seems deeply grieved that the administration and its head, President Coolidge, may ask the next congress to enact recommendations of the John Hays Hammond coal commission's report. Lewis says that this would mean that the republican party would "abandon its policy of non-interference in business for semi-regulation of the anthracite industry."

The anthracite miners, and the bituminous miners as well are unable to see how Lewis gets that way, since the republican party has always approved of interference in every strike they have had, and police, cossacks, jails, injunctions and troops have been the only medicine for strikes the republican party endorsed.

He Opposed Labor Party

Lewis' own experience with Judge Anderson's injunction ought to get him over being surprised at "interference." They remember that Lewis supported Coolidge in the election and opposed a labor party.

The strike is going peaceably on, with some small dispute over maintenance men. Railroads are rushing shipments to tidewater. It is expected that 10,000 railroad men will be laid off in a day or two.

Lewis Opposes Nationalization

Lewis, far from wishing to endorse any plan of nationalization, specifically disclaims it, and asserts that Hammond, by bringing up his commission's recommendations, is advancing nationalization, because the plan of Hammond 'mixes up" the bituminous with the anthracite fields.

Lewis would like to keep the two fields separate, apparently, although if miners in both fields went out on strike at the same time, their chances of victory would be immensely strengthened.

'MAJAH' BERRY BROKE STRIKE IN NEW YORK

Supported Publisher Against Union Men

NEW YORK, Sept. 8—As a member of Local Union No. 23 Newspaper Pressmen since 1915, I wish to show other union men the method by which "Majah" Berry, the International president, makes union men.

On the morning of Jan. 18, 1925, contrary to the contract we were working under the management of the New York Evening Journal attempted to cut down the number of apprentices, namely flyboys and carriers, on the different presses in the plant. The apprentices refused to work under these conditions and the plant was held up for about seven hours for the men refused to do the boys' work. The management then agreed to give them the regular number of boys.

But on the morning of March 2, the workers found the plant patroled by police and the men were instructed to go to work by the chairman of the shop. This chairman was appointed by the boss and not elected by the men. He was sanctioned by the union but the fact is the union is but an employment agency for the publishers' association and the appointee is never contested by the union. Eight of the boys who quit on Jan. 18 were singled out and knocked off for non-payment of dues. This was really a subterfuge as fully a majority of the men in the local are backward in dues and some of these boys who were singled out really had their dues paid up to date.

Berry Handed Out Cards.

At the same time the boss had assembled on the fifth floor of his plant a body of strikebreakers numbering about 200 who were waiting to take the jobs of those men who they knew would quit in sympathy with the boys who were fired. These strikebreakers were handed union cards by Berry's agent altho they had never made any application for these cards and never wanted them. They were paid double the wage that was prevailing in the shop. To keep within the law of the organization the remaining boys did not quit until the rats appeared in the pressroom prepared to take the place of the boys who were knocked off. Then all except one of the hundred and four boys employed in this plant immediately quit and for his "loyalty" the one who stayed was rewarded with a journeyman's card by Berry.

Union Men Quit.

A group of us pressmen then went up to the chairman and asked him if he was going to stand for such a raw deal and he said "What can we do they all have union cards and are union men" and he ordered us back to work. At this 53 of us quit rather than work with nonunion men. When the night crew came in all of the boys quit in sympathy. Thus about 250 men and boys quit and are now being reinstated one by one gradually. They have been indefinitely suspended. Only about 60 have received their cards back and that depends on how much political influence they have.

That is how "Majah" Berry MAKES union men.

FAMOUS RUSSIAN POET IN CHICAGO FRIDAY, OCT. 2ND

Mayakovski to Speak on Russian Poetry

Wladimir Wladimirovich Mayakovski, one of the most outstanding poets of the Russian revolution is coming to Chicago on Friday, Oct. 2. He will speak here at Temple Hall, cor. Van Buren and Marshfield, on the new Russian literature and poetry. Those who were deploring the "destruction of civilization" by the Bolsheviks will have a chance to take a look at the new civilization, the new culture that is being built by the revolution. A powerful poet and a powerful personality. Comrade Mayakovski will read some of his own poems and will talk in the name of the New Russia, the Russia of the Soviets. A tremendous welcome is being arranged for him by the local Russians and the literary world. It is expected that the Temple Hall will be crowded to capacity. Details will be announced later in the press.

60-YEAR-OLD WORKER, COTTON MILL TOILER SINCE NINE, SHOOTS THE FOREMAN WHO FIRES HIM

AUGUST, Me., Sept. 8— Morris Devine, 60, had worked off and on for the Edwards Manufacturing Co., a cotton concern, since he was 9. His 62-year-old wife worked in the same cotton mill, and had worked there since she was 8. But Morris Devine got too old for the speed the company demanded and his overseer, Oscar Johnson, fired him. In desperation Devine fired two bullets into his foreman's body and then blew his own brains out. The foreman may live.

Bolshevize Our Press, Is the Aim of International Press Day on Sept. 21st.

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, workers in every land are interesting themselves in International Press Day. Sept. 21, set apart by the Communist International and dedicated to the Bolshevization of the Communist press everywhere. The workers of the United States must also become deeply interested in this effort.

It is not enough that the editorial staff of the DAILY WORKER pledges itself to issue a model Communist daily newspaper on this day. The workers themselves must help make this issue, setting a standard to be followed in the days ahead.

• • • •

It is not enough that special articles are prepared and published on the Bolshevization of the press, on the role of the press in the class struggle, the character of the Communist press as the workers' press, and a multitude of other subjects.

For this day an army of worker correspondents must be mobilized, in every section of the nation, the first national mobilization of worker correspondents in this country. It is the duty of these correspondents to help make of this issue of the DAILY WORKER an interesting reflection of the life of the American working class, pulsating thru and thru with the American class struggle. This is the task of the worker correspondents. It is a task that they must carry out so splendidly, that it will set an example to be emulated for many months to come. It is thru this mobilization that the DAILY WORKER hopes to establish the basis of a permanent and growing organization of its worker correspondents.

Thus instead of an International Press Day this effort takes on the importance of a Worker Correspondents' Mobilization Day and must be so recognized by workers in the mills, mines and shops who must speak their grievances and give voice to their struggles thru the DAILY WORKER.

• • • •

The whole membership of the Workers (Communist) Party and all of our readers must be mobilized at once so that International Press Day will be devoted fittingly to the propagandizing of the whole working class to an intense interest in our press, and for the solicitation of subscriptions in the shops and in house-to-house canvasses. This machinery must also be set up with a view to future and greater service.

• • • •

One of the suggestions received from the Communist International for developing interest in International Press Day consists of a questionnaire to be answered by both party and non-party readers of the Communist press. Here are some of the questions:

Why do you read our Communist newspaper, the DAILY WORKER?

What shortcomings do you find in the DAILY WORKER, politically or otherwise?

What criticisms have you as to make-up, contents, etc.?

Can you act as a worker correspondent for our paper?

What experiences do you meet with in getting others to subscribe for and read the DAILY WORKER?

• • • •

Another feature of International Press Day will be mass meetings devoted entirely to the interests of the Communist press.

• • • •

Thus the Bolshevization of our press will proceed rapidly. The closest contact with and subordination of the press to the party organization will be achieved. Our press will be developed into a real mass press. Our worker correspondents' movement will be strengthened. The Communist press will stand out more than ever as the workers' press. Our Communist press, the DAILY WORKER, will stand forth as the only organ that supports the workers in their daily struggles and needs. This is the meaning of International Press Day, Sept. 21. Every worker must do his best to make it the success it ought to be.

MELLON'S PERSONAL INCOME TAX TAX OF $1,882,609 SHOWS POVERTY PLEA MADE TO MINERS UNFOUNDED

NEW YORK, Sept. 4.—The Andrew Mellon's personal income tax was listed as $1,882,609 for the last year the miners in his Pittsburgh Coal Co. are expected to believe that their boss is not making any money.

A copy of the personal contract that miners must sign before getting jobs at the Mellon pits, furnished the Federated Press office by Pennsylvania labor men, gives the company hard luck story as follows:

"I, being an employe of the Pittsburgh Coal Co.——— mine, realising that it is no longer possible to operate the mine under the Jacksonville scale, request that the company afford me employment at the November 1917 scale.

"It is my hope that the coal company will at once make every effort to procure sufficient business that will make possible my request, which I agree to abide by. It being understood that when a sufficient number of men at the mine have signed similar petitions so that work may be resumed, an opportunity will be afforded the representatives of the local union which we may form, to meet with the officials of the company for the purpose of negotiating wage and working conditions."

The local union referred to in this screed is the company union which the company has made a weak start in forming and it is in opposition to the United Mine Workers' Union. Mellon interests are taking the lead in the war to break the U. M. W. of A. which is gathering head in the long unionized Western Pennsylvania district and the offer of work at the starvation 1917 scale as an alternative to unemployement is the weapon used. So far the company union is practically a paper affair.

Mexico Going to Get Paper Money for the First Time Since 1920

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 8.—Beginning this month, Mexico is to have a central bank for the issuance of paper money with the backing of the federal government. Both Mexican and foreign circles here look for improved business conditions under the new plan.

It will be known as the Banco de Mexico S. H., or the Bank of Mexico, Inc. It will begin on a capitalization of 100,000,000 pesos, or nominally $49,-800,000. The government retains 51 per cent of the stock, offering the remainder for general subscription.

Perhaps a fortnight will elapse before new paper money is actively placed, in circulation. Bills are held in readiness for issue up to 10,000,000 pesos, in quantities yet to be decided, but the first issues probably will be small.

Mexico has had no paper money in general circulation since 1920 and little since 1916. Only gold and silver coins have been used.

MASS MEETING DOOMS SIGMAN'S PEACE PROGRAM

Brand Plan Fake to Fool Membership

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—The doom of President Sigman's plan for peace in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union was sealed at Wednesday night's meeting in Cooper Union, in the opinion of the Joint Committee of Action of Locals 2, 9 and 22.

At this meeting of shop representatives and followers of the Joint Board, President Sigman was constantly interrupted and booed in his presentation of his plan, and the meeting finally adjourned in disorder because the chairman refused to allow any speeches from the floor.

Peace Plan a Fake.

"Evidently these members, as well as those who have been supporting the Joint Committee of Action in its fight against the union officials, realize that Sigman's plan offers no real reform of the conditions in our union, but would only tend to sharpen the internal conflict," said Louis Hyman, in an interview today.

"Even at this meeting attended only by members of the union who had been given the O. K. of the Joint Board's business agents, there was strong opposition to Sigman himself as well as to his plan.

"If the officials of the union really want to know what the shop chairman think of this peace proposal, why not issue a call to all shop chairmen to attend a meeting, let an impartial committee see that only bona fide shop chairmen are admitted; let this committee conduct the meeting and have a chairman elected from the floor.

Want Peoportional Plan

"President Sigman will learn then, if he is still in doubt, exactly what the shop chairmen, as well as the majority of the workers think of a plan which, in place of reorganization of the Joint Board proposes to deprive 3 small locals of their votes, except on special occasions; which in place of proportional representation in the union immediately, offers a submission of the question to the convention which for 15 years has, by every corrupt device, managed to vote down this reform; and which denies the reinstatement of the expelled officers altho this demand has been voiced by workers in all parts of the country as well as by the majority in New York.

"There can be no further question now, that the mass of our membership is with the Joint Committee of Action in its fight for the driving out of our corrupt union machine, and for the establishment of a real union which represents the interests of the workers."

Seven Arrested.

The picketing of the 28 shops which have been called on strike by the Joint Committee of Action resulted this morning in the arrest of 7 people in front of the Liberty Cloak Co., 158 West 29th street; and one girl in front of P. Zimmerman Co., at 31 West 26th street.

All 8 picketers were arraigned in Jefferson Market Court on a charge of disorderly conduct and each worker was fined $5

Those arrested at the Liberty Cloak Co. were Isadore Wasserman, Adolph Hirsh, Sam Stanton, Yetta Sanly, Fay Novick, Rose Kirsch, Pearl Eissenschot; and at P. Zimmerman Co., the girl arrested was Sonia Chaikin.

Soviet Union Ships Coal.

MOSCOW, (Tass.)— The Russian Black Sea and Asov ports report they are actually despatching large shipments of coal to the Near East, Italy and France. Mariupol alone shipped over 3.5 million poods (about 58,000 tons) of Donetz coal in the month of July.

MILK WAGON DRIVERS MEET UTTER DEFEAT

Betrayed by Tricky Co-Operative Head

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn.—Local 471 of the Milk Wagon Drivers and Creamery Employes Union, has just completed its negotiations with the dealers, relative to a new wage and working agreement.

This union is the largest in Minneapolis, numbering 1,000 members. It suffered a defeat all down the line in its agreement with the bosses. It is a sorry fact to record; however, it is the truth.

Points Rejected by Bosses.

The following demands were the proposals which the dealers rejected:

(a) The closed shop.

(b) Eight-hour day.

(c) Straight pay with no soliciting.

(d) An increase in wages.

The union pulled out of the negotiations one thing: A week's vacation with pay. In all other respects, the old agreement holds, with an additional year added to its duration, making it a two-year agreement instead of one, as hitherto.

Elwell, the leader of the dealers, insisted on the additonal year, since as he stated: "I am in a better position to fight now, than later." As a matter of fact, this was pure bluff on his part. However, Elwell refused to pass up the opportunity that the disorganized front of the union presented, to get his full pound of flesh. And he got it.

The Bad Role of The Franklin.

The key to the success of the union in those negotiations, was found in the role that the Franklin Co-operative Creamery would play. This firm held the balance of power. Had the Franklin leaned toward the workers the demands of the workers would have been realized.

The Franklin Creamery was built by the working class, as a co-operative enterprise. The union was its organiser, back in 1919, after a strike that the milk wagon drivers lost. Today, it is one of the largest, if not the largest creamery in Minneapolis. The working class responded splendidly to the Franklin, regarding it as a bulwark in its struggle against capitalism.

Nordbye Speaks for Dealers.

At the first meeting between the dealers and the union, Mr. Harold Nordbye, the manager of the Franklin and a member of the union, flabbergasted the membership by acting as the official spokesman for the dealers. The workers confidently expected that Nordbye would be on their side, since the Franklin was a co-operative and Nordbye a member of their union. But they were disappointed.

Nordbye informed the union committee, speaking in the name of the dealers, that the proposed new agreement wha wholly unacceptable, altho the Franklin pays better wages than the rest.

While a few years ago, Nordbye was regarded as a red, his careful tutelage under the shrewd and wily Elwell, has made him a first class, class collaborationist. He simply could not resist the great honors heaped upon him by Elwell, such as presiding at dealers' meetings.

Elwell Plants Nordbye.

Elwell was fully conscious of the fact that to defeat the new agreement, the Franklin had to be split from the union. Otherwise, had the Franklin played the role of class struggle along with the union, all other dealers would be compelled to sign on the dotted line with the union.

This is true because an open fight on the part of the dealers, against the union, would throw most of their business to the Franklin. This was demonstrated when the union launched the building of the Franklin. That lesson is not yet forgotten by Elwell. Therefore, the urgent need to break the Franklin away from the union, if the union is to be licked. And this was precisely the strategy that Elwell used and won with.

The key to the whole situation was in the position that Nordbye would take; he chose class collaboration. He converted the power of a big co-operative into a battering ram to be used by Elwell against the working class.

A co-operative playing this kind of a game, is no different from any standard capitalist affair. When Nordbye pleaded in the interest of the stockholders, he did the very same thing that capitalists have been doing since the establishment of capitalism, and he knows it.

Geo. B. Leonard Also in Picture.

Elwell left no stone unturned to demoralize the milk wagon drivers and creamery workers. At the very outset of the negotiations, Geo. B. Leonard, a so-called "socialist" lawyer, was called as attorney for the Twin City Milk Producers' association, to duly impress the workers with the fact that their demands were unjust. He cited figures to show that the farmers were only getting $2.65 per hundred for their butter fat, when it was worth $3.40 per hundred pounds. While he did not say so openly, he insinuated that the formers would be glad to work under the conditions and for the wages that the workers got, that is to say scab in case of a strike.

This is the same Geo. B. Leonard, who, as Van Lear's lawyer, laid down the legal foundation for Van Lear's "star" steal. It was his "brains" that were back of that notorious steal.

It is claimed by those who know Leonard from Russia, that his original name is "Abramovich" and that he is a relative of the white guard one. At any rate he has got very rich recently, and the organ of the steel trust, the Journal, paid him a high compliment recently, for his brilliancy as a legal light.

What the Journal had in mind, of course, was the manner in which Leonard uses his legal ability to prostitute working class institutions in the interest of the Minneapolis chamber of commerce. This is cleverness, of a kind.

A Lesson for The Union.

A lesson of tremendous importance emerges out of this defeat for Local 471 of the milk wagon drivers. This union lacks an organized left wing, which could give intelligent direction to the interests of the workers. Had such a left wing existed, even the defection of the Franklin could not defeat the workers.

First of all, under an organized left wing, with a clear cut program and a courageous leadership Nordbye would not have dared to side in with the dealers. He would have been handled properly.

But above everything else, the union would possess a program of action based upon the interests of its membership. There would also exist suitable tactics and a plan of strategy to fight the bosses. And that is everything.

As it is, the dealers possessed all these things in a united front against the union. The dealers won. Let the workers now learn from the bosses and establish a real solidarity, by adopting class struggle tactics.

DECEMBER MEETING OF AMSTERDAM UNIONS TO DISCUSS UNITY PLANS

AMSTERDAM, Holland, Sept. 8—At the recent meeting of the executive of the International Federation of Trade Unions (Amsterdam) at which A. A. Purcell of Great Britain was chairman, it was unanimously decided after a short discussion to adopt the proposal of the British Trades Union General Council. and to postpone the next general council meeting, which was originally fixed for October, until December. One of the items on the agenda in December will be the Amsterdam-Moscow question.

PURCELL WRITES OF CAPITALISM'S WORLD OFFENSIVE

Famous British Union Leader Warns of War

By A. A. PURCELL.

(President, Amsterdam International)

That we are witnessing a genuine world-wide capitalist attack on the workers I do not think anyone can doubt for a moment. In our own country there is the onslaught of the coalowners on the already starvation standards of the miners—on which I cannot do better than refer readers to the miners and the attacks on the railwaymen, the engineers and the wool textile operatives.

Abroad we see everywhere the gravest crisis in the mining industry, with pits closing down, miners being dismissed wholesale, and threats of wage reductions: this is true of France, Belgium, Germany and America. In Belgium also there is a national strike in the metal industry, while over a hundred thousand German builders are either on strike or locked-out.

Turning to another side of the same picture, we note that in many countries the methods of murder and terror are still in full swing: in Poland, for instance, and in the Balkan countries, such as Roumania and Bulgaria, where the Zankov murder gang continue ruthlessly to send workers, including women, to their deaths.

The culminating point of this process is the development of the attack on Soviet Russia, led by the British government. Of this we have had a foretaste in the recent Anglo-Russian crisis, and tho things are now quieter it is only because our pastors and masters are not yet quite sure of their ground.

Much Depends On Unity.

If our general council's campaign for international trade union unity should not meet with the fullest possible support at the trades union congress, then the road will be clear for war against Soviet Russia.

It is the danger of war, together with that other great issue of which I wrote last month—the Eight-Hour Day—which literally force internationalism upon us. I know that some comrades in our movement are apt to decry the attention that is now being paid to international questions. But my recent experiences in the Forest of Dean have opened my eyes to the growing healthy demand among the workers themselves for information about the international movement and about our brothers in Russia in particular.

We are in no danger, I hope, of forgetting the events in China and the lesson that they teach. Can one think without horror of little children working for twelve and more hours a day, and striking to secure just one day's rest in a fortnight? If we wish to end these horrors, and to save ourselves from being dragged down to this level, then we cannot escape from internationalism.

No Class Collaboration.

Is it enough to rely, as some of our friends on the continent rely, on the international labor office—based on the co-operation of employers, workers and governments? Surely the answer to this is provided by the spectacle of members of the British government, pledged as it is to the I. L. O. and the Washington convention, continually urging the necessity of longer hours and lower wages.

There is only one solution to the problem of war, just as there is only one way to secure a universal eight-hour day, to say nothing of the six-hour day that may be possible when industry is controlled by the workers. That way is the positive militant international unity of the organized working class, consciously directed to the overthrow of capitalism. In that way alone can we defend ourselves against capitalism's present world offensive.

UPHOLSTERERS GO ON STRIKE IN METROPOLIS

(By A WORKER CORRESPONDENT)

NEW YORK. (By Mail)—A general strike of workers in the upholstering industry is on. The strike call was issued by Upholsterers' International Union, Local 76, A. F. of L.

Yesterday was the first day of the strike and workers in over twenty shops responded to the call and many more are rallying to the union call. Many shops where committees did not visit also joined in. Eight shops have settled with the union and negotiations are under way in many more. In many of the shops the bosses are resorting to bribery. Big and extra wages are offered to those workers who will refuse to join the union and go out on strike.

150 COAL DIGGERS DIE IN MINE BLAST AT HEIJO KOREA, IN JAPAN

BRITISH MINE UNION PRESIDENT CALLS MINERS OF WORLD TO AID IN INTERNATIONAL UNION UNITY

By HERBERT SMITH,

(President of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain.)

The miners' struggle results from a complete opposition of interest between the British coal owners and the British miners. The British coal owners say that they cannot make a profit unless they starve the miners. The miners reply that whatever happens we cannot accept lower wages and we will not accept longer hours.

But the causes of this struggle lie in certain economic developments of capitalism. These developments are two fold. In the first place there is a world crisis of capitalist production resulting from the war. In the second place Britain, the center of the British empire, is harder hit by this crisis than, say, America or France.

This crisis affects the coal industry above all, both on a world scale and on the national scale. At this moment, tho world population, in spite of the carnage of the war, has greatly increased since 1913, the consumption of coal is less than in 1913; in Europe it is much less. Thus it is not a question of foreign competition, or British coal being cut out by German coal in the ordinary sense. It is a crisis of world under-consumption.

Dawes' Plan a Factor.

Above and beyond this, the special reasons for the decline of British coal trade are to be sought in the effects of the Dawes plan and reparations, the growth of new countries supplying themselves (in Africa and Asia), the loss of the Russian market thru the policy of the Baldwin government, the obsolete and inefficient organization of coal capitalism in Britain.

Since it is a world crisis it ought also to be a world struggle of the coal miners and their allies against the coal capitalists and their allies. Unfortunately, tho the conditions are ripe for this the organization of the workers is not yet ready.

Nevertheless, it is true to say that the Miners' International may be expected to do more this time than it has ever done before. But its strength would be doubled if the Miners' International Federation included all sections of miners, not only the Russians, Chinese, Indians and other national sections now outside, but also those unions in every European country that are not yet within the general organization.

Miners Must Lead.

One of the chief tasks in the move towards international trade union unity must be this uniting of all miners' organizations. In some countries this is not yet sufficiently understood It is a significant fact that Germany is the country where many trade union leaders and executives are still slow to recognize the value of unity above other more petty considerations.

It is significant because at the moment perhaps the weakest link in the chain of the Miners' International is the German miners' orgazination However, we do not despair. We think that the German unions will do the best within the limits they have set themselves; and if they more and more march in line with the other miners their thoughts, too, will march in the direction of international unity.

We expect now that the Belgian and French miners will definitely take action along with us if we are locked out; and we in turn shall not go back until their claims have been equally met. From the Russians, too, we hope for whatever support is feasible for them to give: We know their support is that of a thoroly militant trade unionism.

Particularly the "Etc., Etc."

The Americans are in a more difficult case. Their conditions, forms of organization, etc., etc., differ from that in European coal fields. But we look to them to see that not a ton of coal leaves Virginia, Pennsylvania, and Illinois to help to break our struggle.

So much for international unity. Unity at home is equally essential. Our struggle is part of the struggle of the whole movement. If the working class does not help the miners up, it will go down with the miners; let there be no mistake about that. In 1921 we bore the brunt of the burden of the employers' attack; we bore it alone, and from that moment till now the British working class have suffered because we were isolated and attacked alone.

Now in 1925, there comes a renewal of the attack, and an attack on a heavier scale. Again we miners have to bear the brunt of the struggle. If this time we are left alone unsupported it would be a suicidal policy for the whole working class.

Learned a Lesson.

But fortunately the movement appears to have learnt the lesson of 1921. We have had remarkable expressions of solidarity in the Workers' Alliance—which is going forward rather too slowly for my liking, still, so long as it be sure I do not mind its being slow. We have had also an attitude of cordiality and a generous support voiced by the general council.

From the Transport Workers' Conference held in the latter part of July we have had the encouraging statements of Bevin, and the brave cheering words of Harry Gosling. I am sure these chaps all mean what they say, and I hope nothing will prevent them putting their words into action.

This year there is a real spirit of unity, but it is not the sort of spirit that comes from fine speeches in National Conferences moving pious resolutions; it is a spirit of unity that springs from material need. The fact is we cannot afford not to have unity.

CUTTERS OF N, Y. GIVE CHALLENGE TO SIGMANITES

Demand for Debate Is Ignored

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 8.—The following letter was sent to Manager Dubinsky and the executive of Local 10, International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union on August 19, but has never been given a reply. This challenge, flung down to the Sigmanites in Local 10, goes straight to the point, as follows:

Dear Brothers:— In view of the fact that the present gigantic struggle which the dress and cloakmakers are carrying on against the officials of the Joint Board is of the greatest importance to each and every member of the International; in view of the fact that the cutters also cannot be and are not remaining impartial in this struggle because they are seriously involved in it, I want to propose to Brother Dubinsky the following:

Brother Dubinsky, on various occasions, at meetings and in statements for instance, has endeavored to prove that the cutters are wholeheartedly supporting the action of the Joint Board. I claim that any vote taken at membership meetings in support of the action of the Joint Board does not register the opinions and convictions of the cutters.

Proposes Discussion.

The fact is that, at all meetings only about one-third of the members present participate in the vote. Therefore, I propose that a general membership meeting be called in Cooper Union or in some other large hall and that we have a thoro discussion on this subject.

The discussion should be carried on in the following manner: Brother Dubinsky or any other member of Local 10 whom he may choose, who is supporting the Joint Board, shall present his point of view, and I, speaking against the present action of the Joint Board, will present my point of view.

However, if Dubinsky desires, I will agree that the discussion should not be limited to one speaker of each side. There may be more; but both sides must be equally represented in time and speakers. After the discussion, a vote should be taken by secret ballot.

A Fair Offer.

If the result of the secret ballot proves that the membership of Local 10 approves the action of the Joint Board, I herewith pledge to stop immediately all agitation and propaganda against the Joint Board. Furthermore, I will use all my influence to persuade and convince all other members of Local 10, who are carrying on any agitation against the Joint Board, to act likewise.

I feel that this proposal would be called by any impartial, sober-minded man, a fair and logical one.

Therefore, there is no reason whatsoever, for your not accepting this proposal, Brother Dubinsky, and members of the Executive Board. However, if this proposal is refused, then this act by itself will conclusively prove that you, Dubinsky, and members of the Executive Board, know very well and are thoroly convinced that the membership of Local 10 is against the action and administration of the Joint Board.

In conclusion, I want to state that if my proposal is ignored, I reserve the right to bring the same before the entire membership of Local 10, by whatever means I can best reach them. Fraternally, Max Bernstein, Ledger No. 3753.

Carpenters Will Join Conference Sept. 22 at Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON—(FP)—Among the building trades unions which will be officially represented at the conference in Washington on Sept. 22 called by the National Board of Jurisdictional Awards will be the Carpenters who for some years past have not been affiliated with the building trades department of the American Federation of Labor and have not accepted the awards made by this board.

While the most conspicuous dispute changed in by the Carpenters regarding jurisdiction is that with the Sheet Metal Workers, they have trouble also with the Lathers and a number of other building trades. The present conference has been summoned in the hope of making a start toward settling these differences.

It is considered likely that the jurisdictional war between the Bricklayers and the Operative Plasterers will be taken up at the same session.

OFFICIALS OF RAILWAY CONDUCTORS UNION ARE TRAITORS TO MEMBERS

By H. A. BECK,

(Worker Correspondent.)

John M. Walker's letter in The DAILY WORKER of Sept. 1, more than pleases me in that he knows "there is something wrong in Denmark."

What he said about the Order of Railroad Conductors, the same can be said of the rest of the so-called 16 standard organizations. while it is true the rank and file can elect some delegates to go to conventions, this does not mean anything to the members except more and higher assessments. Before the delegates get to the convention they are reached and swung in with the the "machine" that controls the organization. They soon forget the needs of these that toil and pay the bills, but are quick to see the needs of the official family.

The increase of salary that the officers gave themselves out of the pockets of the workers and the salaries of the new officers that were created and the money that they spent for these conventions in the past 20 years, has more than doubled in real figures compared to what the entire rank and file of the railroad industry has received in the past 20 years.

Yes, I agree with John M. Walker's write up the fakers, it is seldom that one has the courage to write his opinion in regard to the rottenness of their organizational leaders.

FIRED WITHOUT TRIAL OR RIGHT OF ANY APPEAL

Rule or Ruin Policy of Labor Fakers

ZEIGLER, Ill., Sept. 8.—The discharge and blacklist of active members of the United Mine Workers' Union continues at Zeigler. And the union officials do nothing to prevent it. In fact, they aid it. Company unionism would be considered radical beside the kind of "unionism" Lon Fox and D. B. Cobb, reactionary officials of Sub-district 9, District 12, are instituting.

These scoundrels have shown what they are since the murder of the militant miner, Mike Sarovich, whose death at the hands of ku klux klan supporters of Cobb, is enough proof of the reaction ruling the miners' union. In handling the Zeigler situation, Cobb and Fox have gone the Bell and Zoller Coal company one better in the effort to rid Zeigler of all staunch union men and crush the U. M. W. of A. into ruin.

Take Company Side

When the miners first walked out, Cobb, sub-district vice-president, immediately stepped in on the side of the company and without right or reason deposed the local union officers of Local 992, stabbing the miners in the back who wished to maintain union conditions and get fair weights on their coal.

When asked by a miner if he (Cobb) would be willing to reopen the case if the company would, Cobb's answer was, 'Hell, no!" So the dirty work that even the operators don't wish to do, Cobb and Fox are for performing. That is their policy.

Now, since the mine reopened, many of the best fighters of Local 992 have been fired. In this the company has been ably assisted by Fox and Cobb.

To Exterminate Militants.

The latest victim is Matt Cernovich, who was discharged after working more than a week since the strike. Instead of allowing the case to be handled by the pit committee, and the local union president as provided for in the agreement, Cobb stepped in and took charge of the frame-up himself Six K. K. K. witnesses were produced by the mine management, all giving testimony that Cernovich was on the picket line during the strike Four of these witnesses are absolute strangers to Cernovich, he having never seen them before. The morning in question, he was at home in bed. Three witnesses with competent knowledge proved this to be the case, but Cobb took the side of the company and the K. K. K. and agreed to discharge Cernovich.

No Appeal is Permitted.

This means that Cernovich has no appeal, as a case is considered closed when the mine company and the union officials agree. Yet there is not a single line in the agreement which covers such cases as that charged against Cernovich, yet he and a number of other miners are today out of work.

Cernovich is secretary of Local 992 and has always fought for the progressive movement in the U. M. W. of A. That, and not the charge made by the K. K. K. is the reason for his blacklisting. Some of the other victims were discharged without their cases being handled in their presence, which is contrary to the working agreement, the union constitution and every law of decency. But all is sanctioned, and even insisted on—by Fox and Cobb, the sub-district officials of the union.

HOTEL WORKERS DISORGANIZED BY WEAK UNIONS

Amalgamation Seen as Necessity

In a recent number of the "Mixer and Server," the official journal of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes' Union, the press secretary wrote that the Waiters' Union Local No. 7 is going along as best it can, which he admitted was not very good.

But he did not attempt to tell the workers what is wrong nor did he offer any remedy for the difficulties under which the union is struggling at this time, and for the past three years or more.

Difficulties.

It is remarkable how well the union is going along, as it is suffering from all the ailments that a local union is heir to, and has lost most all the elements which makes for union strength.

The organizations supposed to represent the workers in the catering industry have gone out of the labor movement, and have become a concession outfit, with no thought of the welfare of the workers.

No Unity.

The fact of there being some 18 locals in the city all doing dual work with no pretense of a united front, and no organization activities going on in an industry about two per cent organized locally.

The dual situation here is very bad for the workers, as one group is put against the other by the employer who tells the particular group from which he books his men that they are more efficient workmen and cleaner cut men than those furnished from the other headquarters.

Workers Divided.

So in this and other ways the workers are kept divided continually to cut each others' throats in the mad rush for the job, which is controlled by the concessionaire, who expects patronage in return for the job given. The men in our branch of the business have become second hand boot leggers for the outlaw joint in which they work.

No Wages—Must Live on Tips.

These conditions are generally known both to the membership and officials of the many locals, but owing to the fact that they are in the same illicit traffic as the placers, they would be compelled to attack, they find themselves in no position to make a stand in behalf of the men who work on the job.

Bunk About Wages.

The report has been made that these men do not want pay, but it is hard to believe that men are willing to work as these men do without pay from the house.

However there will be an immediate investigation made in behalf of these workers, and the report will be published in the DAILY WORKER which is always on the side of the workers, in every controversy, they enter for better conditions and more pay.

FITTERS DEMAND AMALGAMATION WITHOUT DELAY

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—In June a conference was held in New York of delegates and officials from the Shoe Workers' Protective Union and the American Shoe Workers' Protective Union, Inc. At this conference a proposition was unanimously agreed upon a basis for amalgamation, the American union delegates agreeing to place as such before their next joint council meeting.

At this meeting ,however, it was postponed to the next and at the next it was postponed to July 24th. At the meeting of that date the proposition for amalgamation with the Shoe Workers' Protective Union was voted down twenty to nineteen. As a result, active members in the different locals who believe that one organization on a national scale must be established in the shoe and leather industry started a campaign among the membership for amalgamation with the Shoe Workers' Protective Union.

Tuesday night, Aug. 25, a meeting of the entire membership of the Fitters' local of the American union was held and voted against accepting the decision of their joint council on July 24 by three to one. They also voted unanimously to put the entire question of amalgamation to a referendum of the membership.

It is understood that other locals in the American union will take similar action and despite the desire of those who seek to keep the workers from being a part of one national industrial organization, amalgamation will be accomplished.

Communist Member Is Coming.

WASHINGTON—(FP)—S. Saklatvala, Communist Hindu member of the British house of commons, is listed among the British delegates to the 22d conference of the Inter Parliamentary Union, in Washington, Oct. 1-7, in the official organ of the American group of the organization. Mrs. Saklatvala will accompany him.

SYNOPSIS.—The official report of the British trade union delegation to Soviet Russia described the workings of foreign trade, transportation, industry, finance and agriculture in the Soviet Union. The trade union leaders concluded that foreign trade is increasing, and that in agriculture and industry the level of production is being raised. The finances have been placed on a sound basis, the report showed. Harm is being done to England by the absence of full diplomatic relations, the union leaders stated. Schools and universities, and literature, music and opera and the theatre were then discussed. Art collections, censorship, newspapers, wall newspapers, and freedom of the press were explained, with the conclusion that "the results of education are astounding." The report then took up hospitals, welfare work, sanitation, birth control, abortion, cleanliness and housing, rent regulations, family life, and prisons. "The Soviet government is achieving most remarkable results in respect to public health, housing, and the prison system," says the report. Regarding the trade unions and labor conditions, the report states, "The Delegation were much impressed by the position and activities of Trade Unions under the Soviet system." The report then described labor regulations, co-operatives, wages, and told of visits to various industrial works. The general conclusion on labor conditions reached by the commission was that, "The U. S. S. R. is a strong and stable state. The government is not only in every way better than anything Russia has ever yet had, but it has done and is doing work in which other older state systems have failed and are failing."

Report of Delegation.

The Comintern (Red International).

In view of the recent attempts to re-organize the united front against Russian Communism—the risk that this will eventually lead to another "Sanitary Cordon" against Russia and to another armed intervention—and of the results of this new policy in reaction and repression in the minor States bordering on Russia, the Delegation think it advisable to give in the first place a summary of the results of their investigation into activities of the Comintern (Third International) in connection with their inquiry into the authenticty of the "Red Letter."

Their inquiries have convinced the Delegation that this organization is not of such a character that its activities should be allowed to affect the relations between two World Powers such as the British Empire and the U. S. S. R. The Comintern, like other Internationals, is a co-ordinating and controlling authority—not a world-wide conspiracy. It enables a central Communist organization to discuss and direct a common policy with national organizations; which on the whole, tends rather to prevent local extremists from disturbing the peace in futile intrigues and insurrections. Further, they have good evidence that the influence of the Comintern in respect of England is at present excersised for moderation and for action on constitutional lines. They are satisfied that the Commissariat for Foreign Affairs has both a position and a policy that would prevent any action by the Comintern in breach of Treaty engagements; and that the Comintern has not committed or even contemplated any such breach. Finally, that the Comintern so far as Great Britain is concerned is not the formidable affair that both its opponents and officials might like it to be thought.

These views have been formed partly as the result of the report of the deputation that inspected the archives of the Communist International. Permission was obtained in the course of a conversation with M. Zinoviev, and no previous notice was given of the inspection. The deputation consisted of Messrs. Tillett, Grenfell and Young, of whom one had a good knowledge of Russian and another of both Russian and German—the secret records being found to be mostly kept in German.

The deputation first asked to be shown the file of correspondence with the British Communist Party. This was produced from a locked press and was a loose file of typewritten duplicates in English. It was read through and leave was asked to take a copy of one confidential document. The deputation then inquired as to the procedure for drafting, registration, etc., in respect of important confidential documents. Full information on this point was given in the form of about 30 typewritten pages of instructions containing the internal organization of the office and its methods of procedure. This was read through and copies of certain paragraphs were obtained. In the light of this document the deputation then asked for the daily register of all out-going correspondence. A large ledger was produced from another locked press and was carefully examined as from June 1st. There were many hundred entries in Russian and German and wherever an entry could either directly or indirectly concern England the communication was asked for and produced from its proper place in the archives. It was impossible that this record, a large volume in many different handwriting bearing every evidence of having been daily written up could have been tampered with. Finally, as the departmental regulations showed that all communications of any importance such as the "Red Letter" could only have been drafted on the basis of a discussion in the Executive, the deputation asked to see the minutes of the Executive meetings. After a good deal of consultation and telephoning, the last volume of minutes was produced from a safe in the same room. Some 50 pages were read through and several documents were examined. This gave a very complete knowledge of the whole recent activities of the Comintern—between June and October, 1924. It is enough to say in regard to these activities that there was good evidence that in respect of England they conformed to the international agreement as to propaganda and the main operations of the Comintern have of late been given a very different objective. A copy of a very confidential document was obtained, the result of an Executive discussion concerning England, which showed conclusively what the real policy of the organization is in respect of Great Britain.

Before leaving the deputation satisfied themselves that there was no other channel in the Comintern departments by which a letter signed by M. Zinoviev would have been either discussed, drafted or issued.

Finally, the whole attitude of the officials and the atmosphere in which the inquiry was conducted was such that the deputation, which had among its members men accustomed to foreign investigation and "intelligence" work, were entirely satisfied that they had penetrated to the most secret archives of the Communist International. Indeed one of their difficulties is to deal with the matter in hand without divulging more than would be fair.

This inspection convinced them, so far as a negative can be proved, that no "Red Letter" ever left the Comintern.

And this conclusion that there never was a "Red Letter" is corroborated by the little that has been divulged in London as to its origins. Thus Mr. Chamberlain in the House (December 15th) in reply to Mr. MacDonald admitted that the foreign Office had never an original and that it was "wholly immaterial whether the signature of Mr. McManus was put by him or not." While Mr. MacDonald stated: "I never had a particle of evidence." On the other hand Mr. Chamberlain positively maintains the authencity of the document as a result of his Cabinet inquiry, while Mr. MacDonald considers it "not proven" as a result of his. So that the inference drawn by those who still believe in a Comintern conspiracy is that while the "Red Letter" may not have been a formal signed despatch yet that its contents were communicated in some form or other. And the explanation generally accepted by such believers is that the substance of it was contained in a speech of which a summary was sent to the British Communist Party.

The delegation has, therefore, to deal with the further question as to whether M. Zinoviev could have said anything like the substance of the letter in his periodic addresses to the Comintern, which had subsequently been sent to England. They found that it was a procedure of the Comintern to circulate information to Committees abroad in the form of summaries of speeches made by M. Zinoviev to the Central Committee. But that instructions such as the "Red Letter" purports to be were never sent in this form (as in Annexe II.) but always in signed despatches (as in Annexe III.) Further that under date of September 12th, summaries of a speech of M. Zinoviev to the Central Committee were sent to the British Communist Party in covers marked secret, and sgined by Mr. McManus. The substance of this speech was quite unobjectionable and dealt mainly with matters on the Continent. Full notes were made of it during the inspection and a copy obtained of the covering despatches. One of these is appended (Annexe II.). The original was destroyed after receipt by the Communist Party Office as instructed in the second coverer. It is worth noting that Mr. Chamberlain told the House that the original of the "Red Letter" could not be produced for that reason.

The opening phrases of the "Letter" read like a speech badly translated and clumsily garbled. It will be observed that the most offensive passages are clearly interpolations in defiance of sense and syntax (see Annexe Ib). Moreover in the latter part of the letter the style and substance change. From general and impersonal assertions and advice the letter becomes detailed instructions as to the formation of a "Red Staff," with the British as "you" and the Russians as "we." The advice in the first part is adapted to the political situation, and there seems no sense in tacking these later instructions as to insurrection on to the earlier advice as to constitutional action. Moreover the source of the forgers' material for this second part has probably also been found in one of the popular text-books on militant Communism, while the long paragraph about China in the middle is very much like a passage found in propaganda for the "anti-war week."

To those who like the delegation have had evidence of what is the real policy of the Comintern in respect of England, this latter part of the letter is an absurdity. The Comintern officials indeed bitterly resented being ascribed the authorship of anything so futile and foolish. But it is these instructions to tamper with our army and navy that affected British public opinion, and turned the election. In order, therefore, to give some evidence of what the real policy of the Comintern is in respect to the British forces, leave has been obtained to publish a secret despach on the subject, a copy of which was got in the course of the inspection. It seems improbable, if not impossible, that instructions based on this policy could have been followed in a few days by those in the "Red Letter."

The delegation, therefore, claims to have produced evidence that should satisfy all open-minded opinion that the "Red Letter" was a forgery. It further claims to have exposed the probable sources used by the forger. And finally, that enough of the information in its possession has been published to convince any reader open to conviction, that if a similar investigation were undertaken in London it would certainly expose who the forger was.

BRITISH PUTTING INTO EFFECT AMERICAN ANTI-LABOR SCHEME

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4.—London news dispatches tell of the exposure by the Daily Herald (labor) of secret orders by the British war office, for the recruiting of a new constabulary force, to be made up exclusively of non-members of trade unions, and to be under control of the army. Its obvious purpose is the crushing of the power of the British labor movement next May, when the crisis between the coal miners, railway and transport workers and their allies, and the big employers, is due.

This strikebreaking army scheme was suggested some years ago, in debate in the senate, by Senator Wadsworth of New York, now chairman of the senate committee on military affairs. One of the opposition had asked why Wadsworth was advocating a larger army in time of peace. His reply was that a substantial military force under federal control was always needed. For instance, it was needed for times of strike and "riot."

BOTVIN DIED AS HERO, SONG OF REVOLT ON LIPS

Hordes of People at Killing of Communist

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WARSAW, Poland (I. R. A.)—Some weeks ago the young Communist Botvin killed in Lemburg the "famous" provocateur Cechnovsky.

The Polish terror government placed the young revenger before a court martial and on August 6 he was sentenced to be hanged.

In the Polish bourgeois press we find the following description of the execution of the death sentence against Botvin and his last moments. This description characterizes on the one hand the furious terror of the Polish bourgeoisie against the suppressed labor movement and particularly against its advance guard, the Communist Party, and on the other hand the revolutionary determination, devotion and militant spirit with which the best sons of the working class, the members of the Communist Party and the Young Communist League in Poland are carrying on their work.

Police Fear Crowds.

In the streets leading to the court house immense crowds of workers gathered. Hundreds of thousands of people streamed together in order to see Botvin for the last time. The street leading to the Brigittki prison was locked up by strong police forces. Lemburg looked like a town under a state of war. As there was no hangman, the court changed its sentence into death thru being shot.

Before the execution of the sentence Botvin was allowed to say farewell to his family. He remained completely calm towards his family. He consoled his mother and sisters. When the sisters began to cry, Botvin asked them to follow the example of the mother, who remained calm and composed.

Rejects Rabbi.

When his family had left, a rabbi entered Botvin's cell. Botvin rejected him and declared with sharp pronunciation: "I am an atheist and do not recognize confession. Only those people are pious who are not enlightened." He demanded that the rabbi should leave his cell immediately.

Then Botvin met his mother once more who urged him to die as a pious Jew. She asked the rabbi to go and see her son again. When the rabbi entered the cell, however, he was actually turned out by Botvin.

Then Botvin's lawyer, D. Osker, arrived and informed Botvin with a trembling voice that the death sentence had been confirmed by the president of the republic. The news does not make the least impression on Botvin. With complete clamness he listens to the words of the lawyer and says: "It was quite superfluous to ask the president to abolish the sentence. Why waste words?"

Botvin asks for something to eat and for cigarettes. After having eaten and lit a cigarette, he sits down calmly and waits for the appearance of the executors.

Political Prisoners Sing.

When he is led into the courtyard, he starts to sing the revolutionary song, "Praise and honor, for your tyrants." The political prisoners come to the windows of their cells opposite to the pole where the execution will take place, and join the singing with powerful voices.

At the sight of the pole they shout with fury. Botvin is led to the pole by one officer and eight soldiers. They try to put a bandage round his eyes, but he rejects this energetically.

When the officer gives the command, "fire," Botvin calls out clearly, "Long live the social revolution!"

Shots came from eight rifles and Botvin's life was ended. During the execution all surrounding streets and the windows of the houses were black with people.

FREEDOM THEIR GREAT GAIN SAY RUSSIAN WORKERS

"Give Us Time and We Will Beat America"

By CARL BRANNIN.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROSTOV-ON-DON, Russia—(FP)—There are plenty of people (all too many) in Russia who have little understanding of the new order working out under the Soviet government. Down the Volga and on the trains one hears complaints, mostly from the peasants—high taxes last year and before (this year reduced 40 per cent), incompetent, autocratic officials, etc. Complaints come usually from relics of the old system with the background of centuries of ignorance and individual selfishness. To make proper allowance for the wreckage of the czarist order, the havoc of the civil war, the capitalist blockade, the famine and the scarcity of trained workers is beyond their powers of imagination. They live in their own petty circle.

Hearing such a wail from a couple of peasants, a poorly clad miner spoke up: "Yes, it is too bad that progress is not made more swiftly, but after all remember that we who have come up through the old order are to blame. We are all more or less crooked. It is the new generation, the children, who will make the new Russia. It is too bad that we old ones can't be lined up and shot, or herded off to ourselves where we can quietly die without contaminating the youth and interfering with their work."

However, there are humble men and women gray with years and struggle who see what is taking place and can, for this reason, forget something of the hardship. Waiting in line to buy a railway ticket here one day, we found ourselves in conversation with a non-Communist old stone mason. He found that we were from America.

"Yes, you have in America many things which we need here. We envy you your machinery, your technical development. Many of your workers are better off. But that is not all to life. We have enough bread; we have clothing; there is shelter. But above all we have freedom." He smote his breast with a gesture more expressive than words.

"I am past 70 and have known the oppression of the czars. That is past and now we are building. Two or three good harvests like this year will work wonders. We have established the true basis that labor produces all and should have all. Russia has every resource of natural wealth—coal, oil, timber, rich soil and land enough for all. This and our hands and the spirit to build is enough. Give us time and freedom from outside attack and we will have all that the most highly developed land has produced. And it will be ours—the workers'. That is more than the producers of America can say."

HOW TO GET A JOB AS MINER IN THE ILLINOIS COAL FIELDS, AS TOLD BY PROGRESSIVE UNIONIST

By JACK WATT.

IN traveling practically in every district in Illinois, the writer has been informed how some men are able to secure work in the mines, and proof shows up the class-collaboration policy that exists between the miners' officials and the coal operators. Some of the ways of securing a job are herein stated and show the disintegration of the miners' union, and brings to naught the fine words of the miners' officials in the daily press such as "No backward step," "No reductions in wages," "No modification of the contract" and "No losses of conditions."

No Grey Hairs

The first thing a miner does when he is out of a job is to go to a mine that is working and wait for the superintendent or mine manager and ask for a job. James Melish of Thayer, Illinois, took this procedure to get a job and applied to the mine management at Auburn, a Peabody mine. The management looked at Jim out of the corner of his eyes and said, "You have too many grey hairs in your head to get a job here."

Of course, Jim was done and that condition is working in nearly every mine in Illinois and it is commonly heard, the mines like the railroads, are refusing to hire men who are over 45 years of age.

At Dowell, Illinois, and other places, the miners and applicants are presented with an application blank to fill out in which they must fill in their name, address, where they worked last, how old are they, how many children they have, and are they American citizens. Have you collected compensation under the laws of the state, have you ever been injured, etc., and in some corporations like what exists at the mines of the Madison Coal Corporation, and at Benton, where an employment agency, so-called, exists, for the Orient Mine, you fill in a blank enumerating all of the above things, but state in addition thereto, "Where did you work last?"

Farrington Approves Blacklist

Then they write back to your former employer and ask him. "Was he a trouble maker or an agitator?" and "Would you think him to be a desirable employe at this time?" Frank Farrington had the guts to write to the miners at Dowell, so they told me, that he could see no harm in answering and filling out such questionaires. At Belleville one miner had been promised work at a certain mine for months and finally the boss at the mine had to tell him. "I cannot hire you," the man knew why, because he had always been a progressive miner, but the boss said further to him, "Do you know Walter Nesbit?" The miner said yes. Then the boss said, "Go to Walter Nesbit and get a note from him and bring it back and you will get a job." This miner was not exactly on good terms with Walter Nesbit as Walter is Farrington's secretary, so therefore, could not go to Walter, nor did he wish to stoop that low to get a job, but he did make the above statement to myself, Freeman Thompson and others. He is a most reliable man.

The Yellow Dog Pledge

At Dowell, the "Yellow dog" as they call it, was put into effect and some 17 men were discharged for refusing to fill out this yellow dog. At Benton there is the "Employment Agency" so-called, and readers of the DAILY WORKER will remember how just prior to the last miners' election where Brother Schroeder of West Frankfort, secured money from the sub-district and bought a job, and had the ones they bought the job from, arrested. A loud cry went up from the machine, the election took place, and after it was over, it was discovered that it was not the bosses who had been selling jobs, but "an employment agency" and therefore, nothing could be done. The miners around West Frankfort had a feeling all the while, (that the Farrington machinery, which is represented by Lon Fox who is now in a hospital as a result of his treason to the rank and file), that once Fox got a hold of that case it would be squashed, and it was squashed.

The latest developments in this remarkable proven case of job selling, is that the man who caught that company red-handed with the goods, has been discharged from the mine on what appears to be a frame-up similar to the Joe Loda case at Peabody Six, and the frame-up against Henry Corbishley at Zeigler. At Harrisburg and at Collinsville the writer was informed that all it took to secure a job in these two cities was to "Have a good looking wife for the boss to come and see." In Collinsville a miner there told Freeman Thompson and myself before several witnesses that such could be proven in Collinsville.

Pretty Wives Get Jobs

In Harrisburg I spoke from the court house steps, in the presence of a large group of miners, an ex-United States senator and a coal operators' commissioner and the sheriff's son were in the crowd and being previously informed of the immoral transactions that was necessary to secure work at Harrisburg, I mentioned that fact in my talk, and it was promptly concurred with by exclamations and remarks verifying my statement. At Eldorado, one way to secure a job is to go the "Fathers" and secure a note from him. So even we see religion playing its class collaboration policy along with the miners' officials. Much talk is on the streets of Eldorado of how jobs are being bought for money. In fact, it is a general subject all over Illinois, but in Springfield is the place to work the different wires to secure a job. You know that is where the Len Small machinery holds sway, it is the "steal hall" as Duncan McDonald so ably quotes it. So one way that has been used to a large extent is to go to the "Steal hall," (state house) and go up to see Martin Bolt, the diractor of mines and minerals (who just recently passed away, and made room for John L. Lewis' brother) and notes are dished out to certain kinds of individuals to go to the mines to secure jobs.

Failing that of course, there stands the "Miners' Building," so-called, and look up Frank or Walter or Harry, and if they are not in, look up Joker Young, the board member and get a note similar to this original signed one of his that I have in my possession with his name signed thereto in his own handwriting which cannot be disputed, it reads as follows:

Mr. Harry Snodgrass, Mine Manager, Citizens' Mine, Springfield, Ill.

If it is possible at all, please give Mr. Armstrong a place digging. (Signed) John Young.

Fakers and Bosses United.

Can you imagine a more treacherous kind of leadership than this note proves this scoundrel to be? How could a boss give a friend of mine a job if I was fighting him, as I should be fighting him for the interests of the men I was to serve? And does it not prove that there is a close relationship between the officers of the miners' union and themselves when the coal company such scraps of paper? Is a better proof of class-collaboration needed to awaken the sleeping miners out of the lethargy they are in.

Could I as an officer of the miners' union, fight the common enemy, the coal operators, while I on the other hand was expecting him to give my friends' jobs at my written request to him. Mine workers, awake and unload these collaborators.

FIGHT OVER THE COMMUNISTS IN LABOR PARTY

Executive Clashes in With Local Unions

LONDON — (FP) — Relations with the Communist party will bulk large at the 25th annual conference of the British Labor party, which meets in Liverpool Sept. 29, with C. T. Cramp in the chair. One-hundred local Labor parties and a number of trade unions are supporting resolutions to admit the Communist party. The executive committee, on the other hand, are recommending that all Communists who are individual members of the Labor party be expelled, and that trade unions be recommended not to send Communists as delegates to local or national Labor bodies.

The program of the conference includes resolutions prepared by the executive committee, dealing with foreign affairs, inter-dominion relations, finance, agricultural policy, housing, municipal powers, national health and electoral reform. Their moderation has called forth considerable criticism. Even the New Leader, official organ of the I. L. P., says, "Labor, indeed, seems to be 'putting itself right' with the middle-class voter," and to deplore that the capital levy "is silently dropped" and that there is not one word about nationalization of the mines or the railways. "The executive," it says, "assures us that its policy is 'imaginative' and 'fundamental.' We doubt if the party will agree with it." The Workers Weekly, Communist organ, labels the draft resolutions as "the liberal revival."

Three resolutions against the Communists were passed at the last Labor party conference. The first two rejected the affiliation of the Communist party and declared that no Communist should be eligible for endorsement as Labor candidate for parliament or any local body while the third, which was passed by a very narrow majority, declared against the eligibility of any Communist for membership in the Labor party. The last resolution has never become effective as it has been left to the discretion of local Labor parties, most of which have not expelled the Communists who belong to them. Nearly all Communists are trade unionists, and even if they were expelled as individual members they would still retain membership in the Labor party by virtue of trade union membership. Many Communists retain positions of local importance in the Labor party as delegates from their unions, and are nominated for parliamentary and other candidatures, in spite of the resolutions.

COAL OUTPUT IN KUSBAS WILL BE DOUBLED IN 1926

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK—Further industrial progress in the Kemerovo district of Siberia over which the Kusbas Autonomous Industrial Colony has juriadiction is reported by the New York office of that enetreprise. The mining program for the new year calls for 41,000,000 poods of coal or about 700,000 tons, an increase of 60 per cent over the production of the present year. Coal is now produced at 10.14 kopeks per pood or $3.00 per ton.

For the improvement of workers' accommodations and conditions the sum of 1,500,000 rubles will be spent in 1926 of which one million will be used in developing an American city at Kemerovo, the center of the enterprises. The work of underwriting the erection of a steel bridge across the River Tom at Kemerovo and extensive additions to the chemical plant for the production of by-products has been undertaken by the Sibervkom or Siberian revolutionary committee, which has apportioned 100,000 gold rubles as a first installment for these works.

FABULOUS INCREASE IN WEALTH OF STANDARD OIL CO. OWNERS

By LELAND OLDS.

(Federated Press Service)

The mushroom growth in the fortunes of Standard Oil multi-millionaires, without effort on their part, is shown in a study of the financial development of this combine, prepared by Carl H. Pforzheimer & Co., specialists in Standard Oil securities. Between Jan. 2, 1912, and Jan. 2, 1925, the aggregate capitalization of the 34 separate Standard Oil units grew from $296,432,457 to $2,084,442,820, an increase of over 600 per cent with practically no additional investment by the stockholders.

This growth, according to the New York Times, is "one of the marvels of industrial expansion in the United States during the past few decades." The Times notes that it "represents largely the distribution of stock dividends against accumulated earnings."

Increase in Capitalizatino.

These stock dividends, according to Pforzheimer, were possible as a capitalization of profits from the enormous increase in the consumption of crude oil products. Production in the United States rose from 222,000,000 barrels in 1912 to 720,000,000 in 1924, while the value of production rose from $396,261,000 to $1,793,700,000, an increase of 350 per cent. The increase in capitalization was nearly twice as great proportionally as the increase in production.

The records of the 13 largest Standard companies follow:

Standard Oil Capital stocks	1912	1925	Aggregate Stock Dividends
Of New Jersey	$98,338,382	$707,474,675	400 Pct.
Of New York	15,000,000	227,525,300	600
Of California	25,000,000	235,228,447	181
Of Indiana	1,000,000	223,756,258	3150
Of Ohio	3,500,000	21,000,000	200
Vacuum Oil	2,500,000	61,919,950	300
Atlantic Refining	5,000,000	70,000,000	900
Prairie Oil	18,000,000	60,000,000	350
Ohio Oil	15,000,000	60,000,000	433
Continental Oil	300,000	30,208,500	1100
Union Tank	12,000,000	30,115,000	50
South Penn Oil	2,500,000	20,000,000	200
Anglo-American	5,000,000	15,000,000	100

Also Cash Dividends.

These figures cover instances where the owners' wealth was doubled overnight. In the case of Standard Oil of Indiana the wealth of stockholders was increased over 30-fold (3150 per cent in stock dividends) without effort on their part. Such an increase in wealth measures nothing more than power to exploit workers and consumers thru a stranglehold on essential natural resources.

In addition to the stock dividends shown in the table Prairie Oil has declared dividends in Prairie Pipe Line stock equivalent to an additional 450 per cent. Similarly Ohio Oil has declared dividends in Illinois Pipe Line stock equivalent to 133 per cent. Nine of the companies have also given their stockholders special subscription rights valued as high as 500 per cent.

These stock dividends are in addition to $1,417,260,197 distributed in cash dividends. A large part of this was also reinvested, still further increasing the owners' income.

Moroccan War Prelude to World War

By J. JACOB.)

(A. N. L. C.)

Since 1918, there have been serious threats of war on several occasions. Now, France has rushed headlong into a war in Morocco. The pacifists of the left bloc are bringing home civilization to the Riffs by means of gun fire and aerial bombardment. The Moroccan adventure in 1907 which was resisted by Jaures was the prelude to the world war. In 1911, the Algerian affair almost started a war between France and Germany.

At the present moment, the fear of the national revolution becoming extended outweighs the international complications which might arise from a Franco-Moroccan conflict. Great Britain casts an unfriendly glance towards France in view of Gibraltar being on the Mediterranean coast. The Moroccan war has resuscitated Italian designs on Tunis.

Imperialists Tremble.

As a matter of fact, the present conflict which confronts French imperialism, with the Riffs fighting for independence, is a disturbing influence to capitalists of all countries. The national revolution started by Abd-el-Krim has aroused the enthusiasm of the whole of Islam; it started in Morocco, and if it is victorious, it would extend to Algeria, Tunis, Sudan, Senegal, Indochina, Egypt and India and all the colonial or semi-colonial countries.

The loss of the colonies would be a terrible blow for France and Great Britain and would shake their entire regime. Therefore, this must be prevented at all cost, they say.

Painleve Controlled by Bankers.

Realizing the danger, the entire press including both the right and left, is shouting for a war to the finish. Herriot and Painleve are mere playthings in the hands of the directors of the Bank of Paris and are playing their role admirably. They continue to talk about peace and to proclaim the pacifist intentions of Paris in order to pacify the disturbed public opinion, while at the same time they continue the war.

In any case, a world war might break out. If Abd-el-Krim is beaten, the various designs of the imperialist powers will become clear. French, Spanish and British imperialists will commence quarreling over the domination of Morocco.

Green's Green Goods

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, read the Communists out of the trade union movement in a speech delivered in Detroit last Monday. This has been done before, therefore it is not novel. Driving the Communists out of the unions is a more profitable and less hazardous occupation for the labor fakers than bringing the unorganized workers into them. They will earn the gratitude, and we dare say the dollars of the master class without drawing on their reserves of energy. They will rob the labor movement of its brain and backbone, provided they are successful. We do not believe they will be successful. In fact we can guarantee they will not.

Hitched up with the Green tirade against the Communists was an extension of the olive leaf to the capitalist class. Green spurned the idea that there was any conflict between capital and labor. He even hinted that the capitalist system was a myth. Perhaps the strike of 158,000 anthracite miners is only a picnic. Green had nothing to say about that. Labor Day should be the last day in the world to mention anything that would bring disharmony into the love feast between the two Siamese Twins, the capital and labor brothers fathered by Green and company.

Green ordered all Communists out of the trade union movement. It can't be done, Bill, not by all the labor fakers and stoolpigeons on the payroll of the capitalist class and the capitalist government. If Green's drawing account from the United States Chamber of Commerce and the department of justice depends on his ability to expel the Communists from the labor movement, he had better put a few more irons in the fire.

The Communists are in the unions and they are in to stay. If they are kicked out the front door, they will come in the back. They are in the unions to build them up, not to tear them down. Green and his pirate crew have done that only too well. It is because the Communists are active in the unions, with a constructive program, because they want to build up the organizations of labor for the struggle against the bosses, because they want to organize the unorganised, because they want to give the members of organized labor the message of independent class political action and the message of emancipation from wage slavery—these are the reasons why Green received his orders from Big Business to make war on the Communists.

General Sherman of civil war fame once said that "war is hell." Mr. Green will agree with Sherman before he gets thru with his campaign against the Communists.

Self-Determination and Oil

England is on the edge of war with Turkey over the Mosul oil fields. Of course England does not put the case in this crude (oil) fashion. She never does. What England says is that the Mosulians deserve better than to be saddled with the rule of such a lot of barbarians as the Turks. It's all in the interest of civilization.

If Mosul had nothing of greater value in the ground than limestone or granite, it is hardly likely that England would worry how the downtrodden natives would get along. But five billion barrels of oil are worth fighting for.

The fight is not between the English capitalists and the Turks. The real battle is between the English oil kings and American oil magnates. Admiral Chester, the agent of the American oil interests made this quite clear when he stated a few days ago that the natives of Mosul "enjoyed an advanced civilization long before the Angles and Saxons." This is talking like a real diplomat. The admiral is learning from "'our English cousins."

The admiral says the Turkish government is willing to settle the question on the basis of one of Woodrow Wilson's "fourteen points." the only one left in anything like good condition. So is the admiral, and the retired sea dog is president of the Ottoman American Development company, which holds concessions for industrial projects in Turkey including the Mosul oil fields. The admiral declares that the people of Mosul have confidence in the good intentions and the honor of the United States, and he hastens to state that they will not be disappointed. Not as long as they have a barrel of oil in their native land or until Chester and his associates succeed in selling their concession for a worthy consideration. They have already been offered over $100,000,000.

For the sake of peace the Chester concessionaires are willing to let the British oil men share in the spoils. If the British oil men agree there will be no war to save civilization in Mosul. The United States will not intervene to protect the principle of self-determination.

This is the tale unadorned. Let our readers point the moral.

When a War Is Not a War

Premier Painleve of France opened the sixth session of the League of Nations with an exhortation against war. He warned the delegates of a new war, unless immediate steps were taken to sidetrack the menace. Evidently the philosophical Painleve forgot all about his own Moroccan adventure where his government has 200,000 troops, several warships, armored cars, tanks and airplanes engaged in the "peaceful" task of robbing the tribesmen of their country.

Perhaps Mr. Painleve does not consider a war of extermination against small nationalities a "menace to civilization." The only people who are reasonably safe from civilization nowadays are those who are strong enough to protect themselves or those who have nothing worth stealing.

The bandit powers are not worrying about punitive expeditions against subject peoples who refuse to remain subject. This is one of the visible means of support of the imperialist powers. Such adventures are universally agreeable unless the pirates begin to encroach on each other's preserves. What the rascals are really afraid of is a big whopper of a war between the imperialist brigands, a war that is sure to send the whole robber bund into discard, aided by a stiff kick from the revolutionary working class.

The coal commission, headed by John Hays Hammond, reporting to congress in 1923, declared frankly that the industry is completely under the control of "a double-headed railroad and coal combination," which levies monopolistic tribute.

The 174 anthracite producers are capitalized for the sum of $430,000,000, as compared with bituminous capitalization of $1,900,000,000. More then two-thirds of this amount is in the hands of the eight railroad coal companies. When the 174 producers of anthracite are compared with the 6,000 producers of bituminous, one gets a graphic illustration of the extent of concentration of capital in anthracite.

Monopolistic Profits in Anthracite

Profits for the capitalists, always large in anthracite, have become fabulous within the pest ten years. Most of the increase of profits can be traced directly to monopoly-prices of anthracite, the retail price increasing from $6 per ton in 1913, to $14 in 1921. During that same period, the yearly net income of the railroad coal companies rose from $13,000,000 to $31,000,000. In 1921, the Pennsylvania Coal Co. paid cash dividends of 137 per cent, and in 1922 cash dividends of 168 per cent, which amounted to $1.30 and $2.76 per ton of coal mined in the two years. The Hillside Coal and Iron Co., in 1921, handed to its stockholders a dividend of 205 per cent; while in the same year the Lehigh & Wilkes-Barre Coal Co. declared a dividend of 227 per cent.

In addition to the direct profits of the coal corporations, the railroad companies profits richly on the freight rates of the coal which they themselves control, thus taking profit twice. It is notorious that the railroads which control the anthracite fields yield tremendously increased profits over others not so situated.

There are two more lines of systematic profit-takers in the anthracite system, namely, the wholesalers and retailers. During the years 1915 to 1922, according to the congressional report, profits of wholesalers, who handle two-thirds of the entire anthracite production, ranged from 20 to 42 per cent. Retail profits were in the usual proportion to wholesale trade.

All of which is not to mention that most of the anthracite fields are operated by leasehold, not by the owners, and that the leases average a royalty to the owners of from $1 to $1.50 per ton.

It is little wonder, therefore, that even the capitalistic coal commission, should be made uneasy by this monstrous monopoly, and should comment in the following words:

"Because of the large increase in operator's margins per ton, since the strike of 1922, and the possibility of further increase in prices as a result of the recent settlement (1925), we believe that such current publicity as to costs, margins, and profits, should begin at once. Unless the public is protected by publicity of accounts, we are apprehensive that the concentrated control of the industry may take indefensible profits."

Conditions of the Workers

Simultaneously with the tremendous growth in the wealth of the anthracite industry, conditions of the workers have grown continuously worse for the past 25 years. In spite of the tremendous struggles, beginning in 1900 when the United Mine Workers first organized the masses of anthracite miners, thru the great strike of 1903 which lasted five months and caused the appointment of the first anthracite commission by Roosevelt, down to the struggle of 1922 which Lewis compromised with the small wage increases of 1900, 1903, 1916, 1917, 1918, and 1920, yet the rise in wages has lagged always behind the rise in the cost of living.

The annual income of the anthracite miners now runs from $600 to $1300 as compared with 25 years ago from $500 to $600. More than two-thirds of the miners earn less than $1300 per year. The average working year is 248 days, which reflects the more stable conditions of anthracite as compared with bituminous, where unemployment has ravaged the ranks of the miners with terrible effect.

Conditions for organization, aside from the existence of the more highly organized and militant employing class, are rather more favorable than in the bituminous fields. The anthracite miners do not live in isolated coal camps, "company towns," as do the bituminous miners. Almost all of them live in towns of 2500 population or more, in which they comprise about half of the population. Something more than one-half of them are foreign-born, mostly Poles, Russians, Italians, and Lithuanians. the larger part of whom, however, have been in America for many years. More than 90 per cent are organized into the United Mine Workers of America, altho in the anthracite the union has not succeeded in establishing the check-off system of collecting dues, which is one of its most trusted weapons in the bituminous fields.

The basic evil from which the anthracite miners suffer has not yet been attacked effectively by the union, and is not being attacked effectively in the present strike. This evil is the absence of a standard. basic rate of wages. All the wage advances won by the anthracite miners have been based upon the chaotic 'scales' in effect at the time of the formation of the union in 1900, with such changes in the hundred and one classifications as the employers desire or feel strong enough to put into effect. This has left open the door for the must systematic juggling of wages by the companies to the detriment of the miners, an opportunity which the capitalists have taken full advantage. In every section of the anthracite district, the miners have an enormous accumulation of grievances from this cause, which will not be remedied even if the present strike is successful, and which will remain a running sore in the anthracite industry, until the union has established that minimum for the beginning of some sort of workers' control over their own working conditions. a basic rate of wages.

HILLQUIT AND SCAB CREW GREETED WITH CHEERS FOR SOVIET

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—Jeers and ribald shouts from 200 members of the I. W. W. and Communists greeted the arrival today of a strikebreaking crew of non-union seamen who manned the liner Majestic after dodging pickets at Southhampton.

"Scabs!" "Scissor bills!" they shouted.

Mounted policemen rushed the "wobblies" and Communists from the pier.

The workers were waiting for the arrival of Morris Hillquit, former socialist candidate for mayor, and one of the passengers.

Their anger was apportioned between Hillquit and the non-union seamen, 152 in number. Their banners read:

"Hillquit and a scab crew," and "Uphold Soviet Russia."

Union Miners Are Put on Trial at Zeigler, Illinois

The other charge, in the opinion of observers, may be postponed indefinitely, or delayed at least until the assault charge is disposed of.

Upon motion of the prosecution that sixteen of the defendants be held and ten others be discharged, the court announced that it would rule later on this motion.

Defendants Charged With Yelling.

The prosecution today made a poor showing with their witnesses, the chief "crime" testified to by them as attributable to the union miners was the grave offense of yelling "Shut the door!" when the ku klux klan began shooting in the Zeigler union hall.

Cobb, who has gained about a thoro a dislike among the miners of this vicinity as any man could well accumulate, has shown the most poison malice toward the members of his union. He has not depended on the state's attorney to do his prosecution of the union miners, but has actually hired a special attorney from Marion, Illinois, to help the prosecutor and see that no union miner gets away, if he can help it, from a term at Joliet prison.

Cobb has no sense of what his reputation as a union leader, is going to suffer by this disgraceful affair. He and four others were on the stand for the prosecution today, all trying to see that members of the U. M. W. of A. go to prison regardless of evidence. The defense attorney cross-examined them, but did not use any witnesses of its own.

Many Schools Must Use Two Shift Plan as Fall Term Opens

With the opening of school yesterday ninety grammar school buildings have been placed on the shift system, two sets of pupils getting 5 hours a day. Many have also been placed in portable buildings put up in the playgrounds, to help meet the big seating shortage.

The enrollment desk in each school building was kept working at high speed while long lines of mothers with their children crowded the corridors. Only one of the new buildings comprising the board of education's extensive building program of which so much has been heard within the last few months, is ready for occupancy. The others are still under construction and no promises of completion are held forth for months to come.

There are 210 school buildings, 11,000 teachers and approximately 465,000 school children in the Chicago public school system as the 1925 fall term begins.

When that argument begins at lunch time in your shop tomorrow—show them what the DAILY WORKER says about it.

SIGNIFICANCE OF LABOR DAY PICNIC THEME

Two Kinds of Holiday Shown by Foster

A regular good time was the verdict of the Chicago workers who attended the big picnic given by the Trade Union Educational League and the Jewish Daily Freiheit at Stickney Park on Labor Day.

The threatening clouds probably kept many from coming early in the day, but the nice afternoon drew a sizeable crowd which rollicked all over the big grounds and enjoyed every minute with one or more of the many games and entertainments. The Juniors were much in evidence everywhere and gave life to the sports under the guidance of Louise Morrison.

Negro Speakers Calls for Class Solidarity

In the big dance pavillion, Otto Hall of the Negro Labor Congress briefly spoke of the aims of the congress which is to be held in Chicago during October, and set forth the need of working class solidarity of all workers regardless of race in the struggle for a better life for the workers.

William Z. Foster, the main speaker of the day, received an ovation when he appeared on the rostrum to speak upon the significance of Labor Day. He pointed out the difference between the International Labor Day on May the First, and the sort of Labor Day observed by American labor in September. Wherever May First is celebrated by the workers, it signifies a day on which the workers rally for class struggle. In this country, so backward are the American unions under reactionary leaders, that the only day they celebrate is used as a symbol of class collaboration.

May Day Means Class Struggle

In Europe, said Foster, when May Day comes around, the bosses prepare for conflict with the masses of workers. Hundreds of thousands are mobilized and take part in tremendous demonstrations the whole meaning of which is that labor asserts its consciousness of class, its determination finally to overthrow its exploiters and establish its own political power.

But in America we have the sickening spectacle of so-called "labor leaders" using this September Labor Day to hobnob with the enemies of labor, to obscure class lines, and to lead the workers into the swamps of class peace and class collaboration.

"Labor" Day Means Class Peace in United States

Foster pointed out how even Coolidge, the generalissimo of government strike breakers, was also celebrating "Labor Day." All over the country bankers and bosses were speaking, at the invitation of reactionary union officials, to gatherings of workers, preaching the alleged "indentity of interests" between labor and capital.

Such traitorous labor leaders were guilty of poisoning the minds of the workers by this sort of propaganda, and the signal of labor's awakening would be when the masses of workers, who have little or no voice in such bodies as the A. F. of L. convention soon to convene at Atlentic City, would begin to celebrate May Day as Labor Day and not the occasion for class collaboration in September.

Freiheit Has Been in Vanguard

The speaker spoke of the difference between European labor and American unionism and told of the great movement for world trade union unity which has scarcely yet touched the labor movement of the United States. He accented the aims of the Trade Union Educational League, urging all radical workers to build up the unions and to join the T. U. E. L. and take part in its work. The Freiheit had done splendid work in the needle trades, he asserted.

Big Battle Promised As British Trade Union Congress Opens

Soviet Russia.

MacDonald Right Wing Hated.

Over 4,000,000 British unionists are represented by the 700 delegates at the congress, and a strong feeling is rising among the labor unionists at the reactionary behavior of the right wing elements, particularly Ramsay MacDonald and Frank Hodges. MacDonald gave a slight hint of his scorn for the "base degrees by which he did ascend," by failing to attend the opening session of the congress and, instead, spending the week end as the guest of King George the Fifth, and Queen Mary, at Balmoral Castle.

Fight on Centralization.

The trades union congress today discussed a resolution proposed by one of the more extreme sections, seeking to give more centralized power to the general council of the organization, but eventually shelved it for the council's consideration.

Several speakers, including J. R. Clynes, lord privy seal under the McDonald government, urged "caution." J. H. Thomas, general secretary of the National Union of Railway Men, said nothing could be more fatal than to give power to the council "by the people who had no authority to do so."

Cook Clashes with Thomas.

A reference by Mr. Thomas to the miners brot A. J. Cook, secretary of the miners' federation, to his feet, amidst an uproar. The president ordered Mr. Cook down and order was restored.

The resolution eventually was shelved by acceptance of a proposal that the whole question be referred to the general council.

German Union Congress Reactionary.

BERLIN, Sept. 8.—The congress of the German trade unions which is now ending at Breslau, has been completely controlled by the reactionary social-democratic leaders.

Under the control of the socialists with their policy of class collaboration, the unions have suffered terrible defeats and unprecedented loss of membership.

In spite of this, the social democrats cling to their policy of fighting against any unity of the workers, such as the united front upon particular issues as proposed by the Communists. The officialdom continue to carry out expulsions of Communists and disruptions of all efforts of the rank and file to unite upon a policy of class struggle.

The Breslau congress has been, therefore, devoid of all contructive activity. It was a jubilee of anti-Soviet Russia, anti-Communist, anti-united front socialist officials. This policy is continued, in spite of the fact that the German trade union movement is so weakened and powerless in contrast to its old position, that the Berlin capitalist papers have even ignored this Breslau congress as being unimportant.

Riffians Cut Road

LONDON, Sept. 8.—The Tangier-Tetuan road has been closed by the Riffians attacks. Native couriers arriving in Tangier still bring word of the hot battle for Beni Karrich, Tangier dispatches said today.

The Riffians, supported by Anjera tribesmen, have succeeded in stopping passenger traffic on the Ceuta-Tetuan railway. The Jeballas were massing for an attack on Regaia today, the dispatches said.

Cloud Burst Hits Iowa

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa, Sept. 8.—A cloud burst struck this city turning the streets into rivers flooding the basements and sewers. More than an inch of rain fell in an hour breaking a heat wave that has gripped this section for the last eight days, during which the temperature reached 105 degrees, shattering all records for September. The rain is general throuout this section of the state and will save late crops and pastures.

Save the Daily Worker! Appeal Brings Militants' Cash

$516.90 Sent in by Speediest Workers.

WITH the danger call echoing thruout the ranks of the American Communist movement, spurring thousands to activity to save the DAILY WORKER, results secured up until now have fallen far short of overcoming the emergency situation. Up until Tuesday noon a total of $516.90 had been received from 52 militant fighters for the working class. These donations, while they indicate the spirit of the Workers Paryt branches and of DAILY WORKER readers and while they relieve to some extent the difficult situation, are inadequate in the extreme to meet the DAILY WORKER emergency needs.

The minimum requirements during the ensuing two weeks is $10,000 of which $5,000 must be secured before the end of this week. Failure in this effort may mean temporary suspension of the DAILY WORKER or even worse than that, it may mean the loss of the DAILY WORKER entirely.

Workers Party branches or individual Communists who can contemplate this catastrophe with composure and inactivity will stand aside and allow others to make the efforts and the sacrifices. Others, however, who know that the DAILY WORKER is the most valuable possession of the American Communist movement, will allow themselves no rest until their name is on the list of honor.

Delays Are Dangerous.

Excuses Are Fatal.

ACTION ONLY WILL COUNT.

REPLY TO ATTACK ON COMMUNISTS

AS WE [illegible]

By T. J. O'F[illegible]

IF there are going to be any more disarmament conferences they will be called in the United States. This is the attitude of Calvin Coolidge, if reporters rightly interpret the little silence at Swampscott. Paul Painleve French premier expressed a desire to call a disarmament conference. France might start in right now with the Riffian tribesmen and do a little disarming in Morocco. Perhaps France wants to get rid of the reputation of being the leading militarist nation in Europe, by calling fake peace meetings.

WHEN we say that capitalist peace conferences are war parleys in disguise we are not playing with words. The latest one held in Washington decided to scrap a lot of old warships. This suited every government in the world that was a serious sea power. They got rid of a lot of junk and the boats that were left are up to date. The most important feature of that Washington peace conference was the compromise between England and the United States thru which the former ditched the Anglo-Japanese pact in return for naval concessions made by the United States.

"THE Shenandoah tragedy is one of the acts of God one cannot forsee" declared a flying chieftain, in commenting on the wreck of the giant air ship. Funny how Christians are so fond of blaming god for their own blunders. Another opinion is that the disaster was caused thru the policy of economy followed by the navy department in its effort to save helium gas. This policy cost many lives, but human life is cheap under capitalism.

WILLIAM GREEN, speaking in New York said that dscontent has always been the basis of human endeavour. In Detroit the same Mr. Green said that the Communists were the cause of all discontent and should be crushed for creating it. Is this a case of "Philip drunk and Philip sober?" If discontent is the basis of human endeavour, it seems to us that Green should urge the Communists to produce plenty of it. Needless to say, the discontent which Green does not like is caused, not by Communists but by the capitalist system.

THERE was a time when a labor leader was looked upon with hate and scorn by the American capitalist class. Some leaders are still out of favor, but only those who have not knelt down and worshipped the golden calf. When William Green, arrived in Detroit he was shown a copy of the Detroit Labor News, the official organ of the Detroit Federation of Labor, which is edited by Dennis Batt, formerly one of the three leaders and one tenth of the membership of the Proletarian Party. In the paper was a full page ad paid for by the Detroit Cleaners and Dyers' Association welcoming Green as a representative of American workers. If Green feels happy over this he is welcome to the thrill. The workers whom he claims to represent will think it strange that a man should receive compliments from those he is expected to fight.

THE American type of reactionary labor leader is a queer fish, but Britain's specimens take the cake. When the great British Trade Union Congress was opening in Scarborough, James Ramsay MacDonald. was spending a short vacation with the king at Balmoral Castle in Scotland. MacDonald is a socialist. It is possible that MacDonald may soon find himself outside of the Labor Party. He is frequently mentioned as a leader for what is left of the liberal party.

• • •

WRITING of the recent "regional convention" of the socialist party, the national office press agent, refers to "our great and strange fellowship" which still hangs on to the old decrepid hulk. Strange indeed if not great. Those regional conventions that the socialist party is putting on, are nothing more or less than gloryfied picnics. It's rather pathetic tho not lamentable to see a party that once carried the banner of the class struggle, degenerate into a collection of ballyhoo artists.

British Schooner Bootlegs.

WASHINGTON, Sept. [illegible].—The British schooner Dawn, with 800 cases of liquor aboard, was seized in Narragansett Bay by coast guard patrol boat No. 129. The crew, after beaching the schooner, swam ashore and escaped. Legal proceedings will be started against the vessel at Providence, R. I.

SIMONS WINS FIGHT AGAINST MAJOR BERRY

Brings Suit for Lost Time Compensation

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK—David Simons, who was president of New York Web Pressmen's Union No. 25, which Berry killed after breaking the 1923 strike, has thru a court of appeals decision won his suit for reinstatement in the international union.

The supreme court gave a verdict for Simons in the first round of the fight, but was reversed by the appelate division. The court of appeals decision says:

"Plaintiff was a member in good standing of the defendant's union, an unincorporated association, and subject to expulsion only upon written charges, and after a hearing upon notice. No charges have been made against him, and no hearing has been given. None the less, the defendant's officers have notified the other members to refuse to work with him on the ground that he has ceased to be a member, and in so doing have made it impossible for him to find employment in his trade. The charge in brief is that he has ben denied the privileges of membership tho never legally expelled.

"A cause for action is here stated for equitable relief. So far as the complaint shows, there is no provision in the constitution or the by-laws whereby plaintiff has a remedy by appeal to any organ within the association. Equity will enjoin the denial to a member of the privilege of membership where the denial, if continued, will work irreparable injury.

"The judgment of the appelant division should be reversed and the order of the special term affirmed, with costs in the appelate division and in this court."

Simons has brot another suit in the state supreme court for payment for the time lost since he was expelled by Berry. The suit will determine responsibility for the 1923 strike.

Daily Worker Savers Must Hurry or Be Too Late ✔ ✔

Receipts Fall Far Short of Minimum Requirements.

SITUATION DESPERATELY CRITICAL

IT will take plenty of money and plenty of haste to save THE DAILY WORKER. Let no militant worker be in doubt about this.

Yet of the thousands of DAILY WORKER readers support in this crisis has been received from less than one hundred up to today.

Of the fifteen hundred Workers Party branches only a score have so far been heard from.

Of the $5,000 needed by THE DAILY WORKER this week less than $700 has as yet been received.

That the necessary money can be raised there is no question.

There can be no doubt of the ability and the willingness of American class conscious workers to raise it.

But the money has not been received and THE DAILY WORKER is in desperate and imminent danger.

The Answer Is—RUSH!

The answer is—"All possible funds in all possible haste TO SAVE THE DAILY WORKER."

Andy Young, of O'Fallon, Ill., knew the answer. Consider the answer he made:

> "I happen to be one of the victimized coal miners not able to get a job anywhere. I have been out of work for 18 months. But I made a pledge to the DAILY WORKER that the first five dollars I made I would give to save our press. Having been elected to the State Federation of Labor convention, I was advanced expense money to make the trip and I am taking this opportunity of making good my pledge.
> "I only hope I will be able to do more in the near future.
>
> "Yours in comradship and for the success of the DAILY WORKER,
> "ANDREW YOUNG."

If there are any readers of THE DAILY WORKER or any members of the Workers Party who are less able than Comrade Young to help save THE DAILY WORKER, they may stand exempt from duty in this task. But if Andy Young can take his place among the first hundred in the ranks of THE DAILY WORKER savers there are twenty-five thousand others who must take their place besides him.

NEGRO LYNCHED FOR FIGHTING COW THIEF, NOT ASSAULT ON GIRL

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 9—Walter R. Mitchell, a Negro, was lynched at Excelsior Springs Missouri, not for assaulting a white girl but because he quarreled with a cattle stealing ring, the Kansas City Call a Negro paper, charges.

The Call asserts that Mitchell had quarreled with the girl's escort about some money he said was due him, and whipped him, merely thrusting the girl aside when she attempted to interfere.

FIFTEEN MINERS OF ZEIGLER, ILL., FACING PRISON

Labor Fakers Try to Railroad Unionists

ZEIGLER, Ill., Sept. 9.—Fifteen of the union coal miners who appeared at the preliminary hearing before Justice of the Peace Moore yesterday, were held to the grand jury on a charge of assault with intent to kill, preferred by D. B. Cobb, vice president of Sub-District 9 of District 12, United Mine Workers of America. The other defendants were discharged.

Attorney Nealy of Marion, Ill., appeared as special prosecutor in behalf of Cobb against the members of the Zeigler Local Union No. 922. Cobb had sworn out warrants originally against 26 miners. Roy Martin, the regular district attorney was also present at the hearing. Among the twenty witnesses who appeared along with Cobb and Lon Fox, sub-district president, were many known members of the ku klux klan.

Center on Assault to Kill

The prosecution stated there were two charges, assault with intent to kill D. B. Cobb, and conspiracy to murder D. B. Cobb, but they were willing to let the latter charge go for the time being if the defense would agree to a hearing on the first charge. This was agreed to.

The prosecution said it would prove that there was an assault made on Cobb with intent to kill and that all defendants either took part in it or aided and abetted it.

Cobb was the first witness on the stand. He was planly nervous, as he has a reason to be for trying to railroad members of his own union to the penitentiary. He had a hang dog look and made a poor witness. Although he swore out all the 26 warrants, he was able to remember only seventeen of the names of those whom he had accused.

Filmsy Evidence

He stated that one defendant hit him over the head with a chair, an-

REVOLT AGAINST SIGMAN GANG IN CHICAGO I. L. G. W.

Slugging Started by Organizer Dolnik

Not being able to carry out the Sigman rule, Dolnik, organizer of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, attempted to slug Brother Harry Seff at the meeting of Local 5, I. L. G. W. U., the largest International local in Chicago. Brother Seff is one of the oldest members of the union and served a turn in jail in 1923 for his union activities. Prior to that time he was business agent for a number of years.

Seff was a delegate to the last Boston conventon where he stated on the floor of the convention that there were some officers who had been guilty of scabbing. For this charges were brought against him in spite of the fact that he proved his accusations. He was further charged for slandering the officers.

All his appeals to the International have not even been considered, hence the membership demands an answer from the G. E. B. to which demand organizer Dolnik at this meeting objected and when the membership stated that they were going to carry out their wishes against this ruling, he attempted to slug Brother Seff.

A special meeting, it is reported, of Local 5 is being called to recall organizer Dolnik.

BRITISH LABOR LEADERS FIGHT RIGHT WING EXCLUSION OF THE COMMUNISTS FROM LABOR PARTY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Sept. 9.—The effort of the reactionary element in the British labor movement to suppress or oust the Communists and the left wing minority group—an effort made in suspicious coincidence with the sudden propaganda attack of the capitalist government and capitalist press on the Communists—is not likely to get very far in spite of the influential position of the reactionaries.

This is foreseen from the issuance of a declaration signed by a large number of prominent labor leaders on the eve of the Trades Union Congress now meeting at Scarborough, condemning any attempt to exclude the Communists from earned leadership in the trade unions or the Labor Party, whose conference is to be held in the near future.

This declaration in the form of an appeal to the labor movement to repeal last year's resolution excluding Communists from the Labor Party, is given below, and added signers are expected before the Labor Party conference. It says:

No Exclusion of Communists.

"The critical times we are passing thru demand the closest solidarity of all the forces engaged in the struggle against capitalism, with its policy of piling up profits at the expense of the workers' wages. Anything that makes for division in the ranks must be avoided.

"A campaign against any section of the workers because of their "extreme" views will only make for distrust, dissension and disruption. The long list of local labor parties, that appears in the preliminary agenda of the labor party conference, makes it clear that the attempt to exclude the Communists has not met with the approval of large and important sections of our rank and file, and that a continuation of this policy will lead to very bad results in the unions.

Repeal Exclusion Clause.

"We, the undersigned, therefore, desire to make an appeal to the whole movement to give unanimous support to the resolution placed on the agenda of the Labor Party conference by

Green Cannot Mislead the American Workers

Declaring the attack of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, against the left-wing and the Communists is nothing more nor less than an attempt to weaken labor in its fight against capital, the Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party has issued a reply to the Detroit speech of the A. F. of L. head as follows:

• • • •

Statement of Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party on the attacks of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, against the Communists.

MONDAY, Sept. 6, the American workers celebrated Labor Day.

Labor Day of the European workers is May 1.

May 1 is the day of labor. It was established by labor. It is a monument erected by the creatures of all wealth, by labor, to the creators of all wealth, labor

American labor day is an empty, worthless bribe paid to American labor by the capitalists to pacify labor's militant spirit.

May 1 is a symbol of the strength of the labor movement of Europe. Labor Day is a symbol of the weakness of the American labor movement.

May 1 is the symbol of militancy of European labor.

Labor Day is the symbol of reaction in the American labor movement.

May Day is the symbol of the victories of European labor.

Labor Day is the symbol of the defeat and disgrace of American labor.

WILLIAM GREEN, president of the American Federation of Labor, used the occasion of Labor Day to voice the aspirations of organized labor in America in a Labor Day address, delivered in Detroit.

But did he really do that?

By no means.

Over 150,000 workers are out on strike in the anthracite coal fields. Their struggle is a hard one. They need solidarity of action for them and with them by all of organized labor in America.

DOES William Green raise the cry of danger? Does he attempt to mobilize organized labor's full strength behind the fighting anthracite miners?

No. By no means. Not one syllable does he utter on behalf of the striking 158,000 miners, members of his own union.

The coal operators thruout the land have carried on an intensive offensive against the standard of living and working conditions of the miners and incidentally against the miners' union. This offensive is now centered against the anthracite miners. This is the forerunner and accompaniment of a like offensive of American capital against the whole of organized labor in America.

WHAT is the position of the president of the American Federation of Labor in this situation?

The capitalists use all the forces at their disposal in this offensive.

Capitalist judges proceed with inudgments against labor.

Capitalist supreme courts war with pjudgments against labor.

Capitalist presidents operate with coal and other commissions against labor.

Capitalist police and militia fight with clubs and machine guns against labor.

Capitalist legislatures maneuver with laws against labor.

Capitalist prosecutors carry on persecution against labor.

MR. GREEN does not even with one syllable mention these problems. He knows why. Labor can hope to wrestle successfully with these problems only thru independent political action, thru a labor party. Mr. Green is opposed to a labor party because a labor party would be dangerous to capitalism in the same degree as it would be beneficial to labor.

In the face of such solidarity of capital with its government the labor movement of all other countries increased its militancy. English labor forces its reactionary leaders into the background. While Ramsay MacDonald dines with the king the solidarity of English labor forces the conservative government into a compromise with the mine workers.

WHILE MacDonald demonstrates his solidarity with capitalism as a guest at the king's tables English labor, in league with labor of Soviet Russia, raises the slogan of international unity of labor against united capitalism.

But the president of the American Federation of Labor is untouched by the needs of American labor. While the unions fought for their existence against reaction, delegate Wm. Green to the democratic convention in New York, passed his vote for the arch-reactionary, Davis, as presidential can-

CALL GENERAL STRIKE OF N. Y. BARBERS, ASK MORE PAY, LESS HOURS

(From a Worker Correspondent)

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—All hair cutting will stop in the Rialto district next week if the call issued for a general strike is carried out. 250 barbers in the district have been out on strike since last Wednesday.

The general strike call was sent out by James Benotti, local organizer for the Journeymen Barbers' International Union, 4,000 barbers will walk out.

The workers demand a ten hour day, a minimum salary of $30 per week and half of the intake of the shop over $42

LABOR DEFENSE DAY MEETINGS IN MANY CITIES

Delegates Also to Confer on Sept. 13

The national office of International Labor Defense is being kept busy finding speakers to fill the requirements of the mass meetings and conferences being held thruout the country on "Labor Defense Day," Sunday, Sept. 13. This day, the first of its kind in the history of the American labor movement, will witness demonstrations in more that fifty of the largest cities of the country.

At the mass meetings to be held on Sunday evening, speakers will present the case of the more than one hundred class war prisoners in American jails. They will ask support for International Labor Defense which seeks to defend all workers attacked for performing their part in the class-struggle or for expressing their opinions. The feature of the meetings will be the case of the 18 Zeigler, Ill., coal miners who are being tried for "Conspiracy to murder," in connection with a mine strike in which their own union officials betrayed them. I. L. D. is making a nationwide issue of this flagrant alliance of union bureucrats and mine owners in an attempt to railroad a group of progressive, class conscious miners.

Held Local Conferences.

The evening demonstrations will be preceded in the afternoon by local conferences. In these conferences will sit representatives from all manner of working class bodies, trade unions, benefit societies, co-operatives, etc. In addition, there will be present delegates from permanent individual branches of International Labor Defense.

These latter are being formed at a rapid rate thruout the country. New York, for example has already close to sixty and Chicago forty-five. Permanent local central organizations of I. L. D. will be set up at the conference and will be composed of branches of individual members and collective affiliations from other workers' organizations.

The local units thus set up will work under the supervision of the National Executive Committee of International Labor Defense which was established at the national conference held last June. The work of the locals will consist in agitating for the release of all class war prisoners, conducting special campaigns in behalf of special cases of labor persecution, raising funds for prisoner relief and for the care of class war prisoners' families and resisting generally all attacks on workers regardless of their affiliations or views.

Handles Many Cases.

At the present time, International Labor Defense is confronted with many cases. Attempts to deport radical workers of foreign birth, free-speech in Pennsylvania, trials in Michigan and West Virginia, the attempted railroading in Zeigler, and persecution of members of the I. W. W. in defense of whom I. L. D. seeks to be of assistance, are some of the present duties of International Labor Defense. Scarcely a week goes by that dees not add to the already long list of labor cases before the courts of the country.

The organization resulting from the conferences on "Labor Defense Day" will make it possible for International Labor Defense to handle all these cases and many more, beside conducting the necessary work of caring for the present class war prisoners and their families.

Prominent Speakers.

In Chicago more than 100 credentials have already been received from workers' organizations wishing to be represented at its defense conference. The Chicago mass meeting will be addressed by Henry Corbishley, the leading figure in the Zeigler trial, Duncan McDonald of Springfield, Wm. Z. Foster and C. E. Ruthenberg, the latter two defendants in the Michigan trials. The New York meeting will have as speakers, James P. Cannon, secretary of I. L. D. and prominent local labor leaders.

San Francisco, Minneapolis, Cincinnati, Boston, Detroit, Cleveland, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Seattle and many other smaller centers will stage these mass meetings and conferences on "Labor Defense Day."

MYSTERIOUS MAN LEAVES EUROPE IN HASTE ON SCAB LINER FROM SOUTHAMPTON TO NEW YORK CITY

By HARRISON GEORGE.

The strike of the British seamen against a wage cut of $5 a month was of no concern to at least one passenger who sailed from Southampton Sept. 2 on the Majestic of the White Star line, which successfully avoided the mass of pickets on the Southampton docks with a tugboat load of scabs.

When the London office of the White Star line was packed with frantic Americans fearful lest the Majestic would not be able to get scabs, there was one American, who remained calm and assured, along with the company officials, that the company would win and the strikers would be thwarted.

One Man Not Excited

When the boat trains left London packed with passengers for the Majestic, there was plenty of skepticism among Americans who feared that the strikers might prevent the boat from sailing. But one American was unperturbed.

This one American, known to every reader of the DAILY WORKER, passed with the other Americans, bankers, stock brokers, actresses, capitalist newspaper owners, thru the grim faced mass of Southampton's striking seamen lining the docks in a solid mass. Many of these pickets were members of the Majestic's crew who had left the ship. A few minutes before this famous American was escorted thru the picket line ,another group of the Majestic's men ran down the gang plank carrying their dunnage bags.

"She can't get away," they told their buddies on the picket line, "she hasn't got enough crew." The famous American, who had reached the ship and now stood at the rail with his wife, smiled cynically. Despite the fact that the ship was 129 men short she was clearing away from the dock before the eyes of the strike pickets only two minutes late.

Poker Faced Man of Mystery

But the mystery was soon cleared up, as the famous American knew it would be. He was schooled in keeping a poker face in such matters as strikes and labor troubles. He was not surprised when the huge ship, as it breasted the waters of Southampton Roads, was approached by a little tugboat which puffed suddenly from shore, packed to the rim with rough men in rougher clothes.

The expectation of the famous American was fully confirmed when he learned that they were scabs signed on by an ex-service men's employment association in London, taken secretly to Southampton and kept hidden until the time came to rush them aboard the great White Star Liner.

One Sort of Worker To Admired

The famous American rarely had been accustomed to greeting workingmen with any enthusiasm, but now he was very near cheering with the rest of the bourgeois Americans who yelled like mad as they hung over the rail welcoming these scores of tattered scabs taken from England's unemployment heroes, as they climbed up the side and were rushed to the fireroom by the ship's officers.

The famous American cheerfully made his way to the cabin as the Majestic, jeering the strikers on the docks with a deep toot of her whistle, headed for open water on the road to New York.

To those who have been persistent enough to read this far, it should be said that the famous American was Morris Hillquit, member of the executive board of the socialist party of America, who was just returning from the International Socialist Congress at Versailles, France, where the chief business was condemnation of Soviet Russia and praise of the League of Nations.

On Urgent Business Bent

Mister Hillquit—we cannot call him comrade—was on his way back to America on a scab ship. He had urgent business in America. The garment manufacturers in New York are having trouble with the left wing membership, which seems to have escaped from Sigman's shackles and gags. And beside these political matters, there is a little personal matter Mr. Hillquit is concerned over.

The anthracite coal strike had just been declared and Mr. Hillquit had only that morning received a cable from the Burns Brothers Coal Co., of New York, in which he owns great blocks of stock, that they were raising the price of anthracite 25 cents a ton, and Morris Hillquit, leader of the socialist Second International, was anxious to get back in order to see that the coal companies would hold out against the striking miners long enuf to beat them but not so long that the Burns Brothers would run out of coal and lose that 25 cents gouge on every ton.

The famous socialist millionaire of America, attorney at law and dealer in coal and perverted Marxism, was sailing on a scab ship back to America to look after his dividends and the American socialist party.

Fifteen Coal Miners of Zeigler, Illinois, Are Facing Prison

other had said something in the hall which he could not understand, after which everybody started grabbing chairs. His statements against the other fifteen of the seventeen consisted merely of such things as that "So and so yelled, 'Shut the door,' 'He should be killed,' " etc.

Four other witnesses put on by the prosecution made an even poorer showing. All, including Cobb, were frequently contradictory in their testimony. No witnesses were called by the defense. After Justice Moore held fifteen of the defendants to the grand jury, in spite of the flimsy evidence, $2,000 bail was set for each defendant and was immediately filed by friends of the union miners.

Judge White of Marion and Attorney Morgan of Christopher conducted the defense end of the hearing.

K. K. K. and Labor Fakers in Plot

An idea of the evil forces behind this persecution of the militant miners of Zeigler can be had in view of the facts disclosed by an investigation committee of six miners elected by the Valier, Ill., local of the U. M. W. of A., who called upon Sub-District President Lon Fox and Vice President D. B. Cobb to get at the facts.

Fox stated in the presence of these six miner witnesses that he (Fox) had furnished bail to release Alex Hargis, the K. K. K. who murdered Mike Sarovich in the Zeigler union hall. Hargis had been armed and brought Fox and Cobb to the meeting, and had begun the fight by going to the door and then firing his revolver into the crowd of miners from that point

Kluxer Stole Election For Fox

Hargis is the man who refused to sign the return sheet in the local union election (Local 992), thus allowing Lon Fox to get himself elected and preventing Henry Corbishley, the Zeigler progressive from winning the sub district presidency against Fox by a large majority.

At a big open air meeting here Sunday, addressed by John Watt and Freeman Thompson of Springfield and Henry Corbishley of Zeigler, Thompson showed that this plot to send the union leaders of Zeigler to prison did not originate in Zeigler but is being backed by Frank Farrington, detested president of the Illinois district of the U. M. W. of A.

Farrington Just Like Bosses

Documentary evidence was shown proving how Farrington works with the coal operators. Farrington's statement praising the scabs who "stood loyally by" the company during the recent strike, was read along with another statement put out by a coal company after the Verdun, Ill., riot way back in 1898 when the U. M. W. of A. was fighting for organization. Word for word the two statements were almost the same.

Boat Burns, Then Sinks.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Sept. 9.—Trapped in a fire on a small boat off Catalina Island, members of the crew fo a fishing craft were believed to have lost their lives today.

The identity of the burned vessel had not been established and the only bit of wreckage recovered was a gasoline tank.

Trying to Hoodwink the Workers As to Benefits Under Monopoly Control

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the growth of greater trusts dims the Sherman anti-trust law. Instead of standing as a rock against the advance of greater monopolies, as it was intended by the petty bourgeois statesmen at Washington, the Sherman law has become as a tombstone to mark the grave of departed competition in American capitalist industry.

So enthusiastic have the great capitalists become, over the practical passing of the Sherman anti-trust law altho it is still on the statute books of the nation, that they herald the tremendous benefits its going will bring to the workers. To read the Labor Day speeches of the capitalist politicians, quickly followed by applauding editorials in the kept press, one is led to believe that capitalism has turned benefactor, and that the greater industrial combines are being brot into existence to help lift the burden of toil from the backs of the laboring multitudes, with the profiteers expecting absolutely nothing for themselves.

• • • •

Secretary of Labor Davis, the Pittsburgh multi-millionaire, chose this theme as the burden of his Labor Day address at Mooseheart, Illinois, center of institutions established there by the Loyal Order of Moose, of which Davis is a high potentate. Coolidge's labor secretary forgot all about his attacks on the foreign-born workers as he pleaded that the American workingman is the victim of wasteful conditions in industry, declaring that all laws which prevent industrial combinations, "which might eliminate some of the wastes, should be repealed in the interests of labor."

Davis then looked about for the welcome ovation before he proceeded with the declaration that one-seventh of the shoe factories of the nation, if they operated 300 days during the year, could supply all the shoes that can be sold.

Since he was speaking in Illinois, Davis had to cite an example from this state. But he chose poorly when he referred to the mining industry, claiming that a fourth of the strip mines in Illinois, if operated 300 days a year, could produce more coal than all the strip mines in the state raised last year.

• • • •

There has been a growing centralization of control in the Illinois mine fields, just as there has been elsewhere thruout capitalist industry. But this elimination of waste has brot no benefits to the coal miners. Instead of the shortened work day, providing jobs for all the miners, the mine owners have waged a relentless war on every attempt to decrease the hours of labor. The great army of unemployed mine workers, that endlessly marks time thruout the coal fields of the state is testimony to the success of the coal barons in hogging all the benefits for themselves. It was at the Herrin strip mine that the mine owners sought an opening thru which to attack and crush the Miners' Union.

All the benefits of monopoly control are going to the dollars invested in industry, not to the workers toiling in industry. This is true of the shoe industry, with its great masses of unorganized and underpaid workers, as well as of every other industry.

It is, of course, necessary to hoodwink the workers into believing that they will be the gainers, by the passing of the Sherman law, that came into existence during an era of middle class trust busting. The propaganda of the bosses will fool some workers, no matter how crude and transparent it may be.

But the actual struggle of the workers with these growing monopolies will prove to them how foolish they are not only to believe these lies, but to place any faith whatever in any of the pretenses of the capitalist class. The ceaseless growth of the ever-enlarging industrial combines will open the eyes of new masses of workers to the real nature of the class struggle. It will teach the workers not only to fight for the immediate necessities, but for complete control over all industry. Labor will not benefit from the elimination of wastes in industry until it has seized all industry and made itself master over it, thru the overthrow of capitalist rule and the victory of the proletarian dictatorship.

RIFFS WIPE OUT SPANISH FORCE AT ALHUCEMAS

Landing Force Flees, Leaving Dead Behind

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, France, Sept. 9.—The Spanish troops under dictator Primo de Rivera suffered another disaster when they failed in an attempt to land at Alhucemas Bay, near Adjir. The Riffian shore batteries wiped out one-forth of the Spanish forces, who hastily fled, leaving 500 dead on the shores of the bay.

The Riffians are concentrating for an attack on Tetuan, and fighting is going on two miles from that Spanish controlled city.

Spanish Workers Protest.

The attempt of the Spaniards to land troops near Krim's capitol was preceded by a heavy bombardment of French airplanes. American fliers also took part in the murderous air attack.

But the Riffians, with a withering fire withheld until the landing parties reached shore, mowed down the Spanish forces. They immediately took to their boats, leaving their dead, and fled back to Pennon Island, under a cross fire of machine guns and 75's.

In spite of this disaster, and the wave of disapproval which has swept the workers of Spain, it was announced that another attempt to land will be made soon.

Tangier Line Smashed.

Another French-Spanish fleet has been bombarding the hills at the mouth of the Lau river for many hours, but has not dared attempt a landing.

The Spanish attack on the Melilla and Larache fronts was repelled by the Riffians, the Spaniards losing heavily.

The break made by the Moroccans in the Spanish front at the Tangier zone has not been repaired by the Spanish invaders.

The Spanish dictator has clamped a strict censorship on the dispatches of correspondents.

Ku Klux Klan in Germany, Now Is Report of Police

BERLIN, Sept. 9.—A German ku klux klan, under the alleged leadership of three Americans, have been uncovered by the German criminal police.

Many arrests have been made it is reported.

The German ku klux klan, according to the police, has been operating under the name, "Knights of the Fiery Cross." Members, the police alleged, have been recruited chiefly from the ranks of the Hitlerites and monarchist and nationalist groups.

Revolt Spreads in Syria.

PARIS, France, Sept. 9—The Syrian revolt is spreading, and the French garrison at Suedia, which has held out against the besieging natives for 48 days, is in a desperate condition. The Druse natives are in possession of the entire city, and are pressing the garrison of 950 soldiers hard.

Green Cannot Mislead the Working Class

didate.

While American capital persecutes the Communists as the most militant of American labor, William Green joins the capitalists against militant labor.

"COMMUNISM is destructive," declares Mr. Green.

Yes! Communism is destructive. It is destructive of all the forces of capitalism that make life an almost unberable burden for the toilers. All the constructive aims of the workers, the establishment of a universal republic of labor, are impossible of attainment without the destruction of capitalism enslaving labor.

"We stand for democracy" says Mr. Green, "While the Communists stand for dictatorship."

Yes, indeed! Mr. Green stands for the democracy. He stands for the democracy of Rockefeller who fights labor with fire and guns as he did in Ludlow. Mr. Green is for the democracy of Mr. Morgan who appoints either his lawyer, Davis, or his office boy, Coolidge, as president of the United States. Mr. Green is for the democracy that fights the organizers of his own union with militia, injunctions and persecution, as is the case in West Virginia. Mr. Green is for the democracy of big capital which dictates for the workers all the laws and their execution; which directs police and soldiery against the workers; which fattens at the expense of the health of the workers and their families.

BUT Mr. Green is opposed to dictatorship. The Union of Soviet Republics is governed by the kind of dictatorship Mr. Green hates. In Soviet Russia it is not capital that dictates to labor but it is labor that dictates to capital.

Such a dictatorship is impossible in the eyes of Mr. Green. Mr. Green is unalterably opposed to a form of government under which the capitalists are not permitted any injunctions against labor. He is against a form of government which suppresses the capitalist, instead of suppressing the workers. Mr. Green cannot stand for a dictatorship such as exists in Soviet Russia, under which the labor unions were able to grow from the weakest and smallest to the largest and strongest in the world.

Mr. Green cannot tolerate a dictatorship which made it possible for the labor unions in Soviet Russia to become the determining factor in the fixing of wages, hours and working conditions.

MR. GREEN voices his unequivocal enmity to a dictatorship which, as is the case in Soviet Russia, makes it possible for the labor unions to supervise the enforcement of all pro-labor laws and which, with the whole state power to back them up, enforce all contracts made by them with whatever private capitalists are permitted to operate.

No! Such dictatorships are unacceptable for the president of the American Federation—because he loves his capitalists and is opposed to the rule of labor.

Mr. Green's love is not with labor, it is with capital. He attacks the Communists as enemies of capital, and thus demonstrates his own friendship for it.

AS against the international unity of labor, against capital, propagated by British and Russian labor, William Green supports actively the international unity of capital against labor.

As against the solidarity of labor against capital, Mr. Green practices solidarity with American capital, with imperialism

As against the organization of the political forces of labor against the capitalist government machinery, Wm. Green propogates and practices a support of the capitalist government machinery against labor by supporting the capitalist parties and their candidates.

The capitalists are fortifying themselves in their attack against American labor by persecuting its most militant section. This section is the left wing under the leadership of the Communists.

THE left wing clearly sees that the only salvation for American labor is uncompromising struggle against capital. Decent wages and bearable working conditions can only be achieved in successful fights against the bosses. The bosses' power in this fight can be weakened only by a mobilization of all the political forces of labor thru a labor party.

Mr. Green does not propose such a struggle. On the contrary he fears it. He abhors an alliance with or even a recognition of proletarian Russia. He prefers an alliance and cooperation with the government of strikebreaker Coolidge and open shopper Dawes. Instead of fighting the capitalists with and in behalf of labor, Mr. Green prefers to fight the left wing of the labor movement and the Communists with and in behalf of the capitalists.

THIS attack of William Green against the left wing and the Communists is nothing more nor less than an attempt to weaken labor in its fight against capital.

The American workers will recognize it as such and will refuse to be misled.

Labor's enemy stands in the camp of capital; sometimes in the guise of labor leaders of the type of Mr. Green.

Labor's salvation lies in the

of its forces, nationally and internationally, in the fields of trade unions as well as in the field of politics.

Labor for itself!

JOINT BOARD SLUGGERS AND COPS UNITED

Raid Shops and Picket Line in I. L. G. W. War

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 9.—A gang of about 15 men entered the cloak manufacturing shop of Shulman Bros., 26 West 20th Street and demanded that the 30 workers in the shop go to the office of the New York Joint Board of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union to attend a shop meeting.

When the workers refused, the intruders turned off the electric power which stopped all machines, and started an attack with chairs and blackjacks. In the struggle which followed, Sam Saballofsky of 218 East 12th Street, a member of Local 9 and a worker in the shop, was hit with a blackjack and sustained a severe scalp wound. He was taken to St. Vincent's Hospital where several stitches were taken in his head and he was sent home in the care of a private physician. Several other workers, including Rubin Rabinovitz of 2865 West 32nd Street. Coney Island, suffered bruises and was beaten about the head and shoulders. The girls working in the shop escaped without injury.

Three Gangsters of Sigman Caught

One of the attackers was caught in the shop, and two others were arrested by traffic policement on Fifth Ave., between 20th and 21st Streets as they attempted to make their escape in a taxicab. The three were taken to the 30th Street police station and released on bail.

The shop was left in wild disorder by the attackers and much damage was done to the materials and garments there. The members of the shop report that each day this week, representatives of the Joint Board have come to order the workers to attend a shop meeting. They have refused because they no longer recognize the authority of this body but are following the leadership of the Joint Committee of Action of Locals 2, 9 and 22, whose officers were expelled by the union, and who have for the past two months been conducting a fight against the Sigman gang.

Cops Harras Left Wing Pickets

There were six arrests on the picket line Friday. In front of the Principal Cloak Co., 32 West 18th Street Ruth Sametefsky, Fannie Lifshitz, Esther Liftshitz, L. Dorner and Saide Elkes were arrested on charges of to Jefferson Market Court and the disorderly conduct. They were taken first two were fined $5; the other $10 each.

In the afternoon, Anna Flint who was picketing the Roth Costumes Inc. at 550 7th Avenue was arrested and taken to the 30th Street police station where she was released on bail until tomorrow.

Hearing on the injunction against picketing granted to Artman & Saltzman of 111 West 27th Street was postponed until Wednesday, September 9th in N. Y. State Supreme Court.

Reader Wants to Know

To the Daily Worker:—Engdahl's suggestion that Russia will eventually demand union made goods only is very commendable. Of course, it would disprove Gomper's accusation and open the half closed eyes of American workers.

Incidentally would like to know if the various banks owned by the trade unions employ in their offices union help or was Stone running them with scab labor same as he did in his mines? Thanks for the information you with pleasure supply thru the Worker.

WEAVERS OF UTICA GET LOW AVERAGE PAY, TOWN BECOMES SORDID

By ELLA REEVE BLOOR.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

UTICA, N. Y., Sept. 9.—In Utica there are nearly 9,000 weavers in the cotton mills. The average wage is less than $25.00 per week, including the so-called skilled weavers.

One weaver said that many receive less than $18.00 and of course, many work but three or four days per week, which would bring the average wage much lower.

The town is becoming gloomy and sordid like the average mill town of New England.

ZINOVIEV URGES UNITY OF SOCIAL DEMOCRATIC MASSES AND COMMUNISTS IN TALK TO GERMAN DELEGATION

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, (Inprecor.)—The German delegation has visited Comrade Zinoviev and had a discussion lasting three hours with him chiefly upon the questions of the establishment of a united front between the social democratic and Communist workers. The social democratic delegates, Thon, Meilli, Benevitz took part in the discussion. They stressed that the chief difference was that the social democracy strove to achieve socialism on the way of democracy and the Communists by means of the dictatorship.

Thon declared that the tactless attitude of individual Communists hindered unity. Benevitz pointed out that the German Communists were not able to distinguish between the social democratic leaders and the social democratic working masses, and this hindered the establishment of comradely relations between the social democratic and Communist workers.

The non-party delegate Lange declared his complete solidarity with the Communists and said that the social democratic leaders prevented unity. Zinoviev explained that altho in the past the Communists had made mistakes they had never concealed those mistakes from the masses. The failures of the Communist Parties are negligible compared with the tremendous mistakes of the social democracy which in 1914 drove the workers into the slaughter house.

A new war is before us and we are convinced that the social democracy will once again drive the workers to the slaughter in defense of the bourgeois fatherland. In 1918, the social democracy disbanded the workers and soldiers' councils and gave the power back into the hands of the bourgeoisie.

BROOKWOOD TOOL OF GREEN, DREAM OF A. J. MUSTE

Supports Right Wing Among Students

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—That Brookwood Labor College at Katonah, New York, has discriminated against Communists for the purpose of currying favor with president, William Green, and other reactionary American Federation of Labor officials, is charged in statements sent the DAILY WORKER by students and former students of the "labor" school.

"A. J. Muste, head of the college," writes one students, "had never intervened in any of the student controversies, but when the 'rights' protested an election won by the Communist elements, Muste's partiality was not hidden. Muste declared the reactionaries had been cheated.

"Several girls had supported the two Communists who were elected to the board of directors, and Muste asked them as respectable girls not to side with the Communists."

"Unquestionably Muste is permeated with the A. F. of L. officialdom psychology," writes another student. "In the entire history of the school it has never been the task of the faculty to settle the student affairs, But there is a purpose and a motive behind the intervention of Mr. Muste in this special event.

"It is generally known that the finances of the school are alarmingly low. It has been the dream of Muste to see the school recognized by the A. F. of L. officialdom. Brookwood, thru the instigations of Muste, wishes to become a tool of the A. F. of L. bureaucracy."

NEGRO WITH BUNDLE OF DAILY WORKERS GETS ARRESTED IN PITTSBURGH

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 9.—Earnest Careathers, an active member of the Pittsburgh American Negro Labor Congress was arrested on the corner of Rose and Dinwiddie streets, because he had in his hands a bundle of the DAILY WORKER.

At the station house every one present questioned him why he joined such a movement. They tried to tell Careathers, who is a Negro, that the Negro masses facing lynching bees, being jimcrowed in every section of the country, being slapped in the face on every side by discrimination and disfranchisement had to be told by Moscow that everything isn't beautiful for the Negro in this country.

CHINESE AGAIN SHOT DOWN BY FOREIGN POLICE

U. S. Builds Gunboats to Aid Imperialists

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SHANGHAI, China, Sept. 9.—When a parade of 5,000 workers marched through the international settlement yesterday, the British police attacked them on the street near the municipal building and an unequal battle ensued in which the police used their firearms while the Chinese workers could retaliate only with chance bricks and bamboo poles. Three workers were seriously wounded.

The parade was to attract attention to the demands of China for abolition of the treaties of violence which give the foreign imperialists more authority in China than the Chinese themselves. C. C. Elrod, an American who works for the municipal council, and a Britisher were also slightly wounded in the conflicts.

The Chinese strikers are refusing to yield to the British blandishments. They want something more than promises and the compromise offer to Chinese business men of representation in the municipal council and the mixed court.

An example of the serene gall of foreign imperialists is seen in the arrival here tomorrow of a construction corps of the U. S. Navy to begin building on Chinese soil a fleet of six gunboats for patrolling the upper Yangtze river to suppress the efforts of Chinese to gain possession of China. These six gunboats to be built here were authorized by congress at its recent session and will cost $6,000..000.

CHARGE WRECK OF AIRSHIP DUE TO NEGLECT BRINGS ACTION AGAINST OFFICER; DISCRIMINATE IN BURIAL

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 9.—While the fourteen victims of the wreck of the naval dirigible Shenandoah, were being buried today, it was announced at the war department that "investigation" had been ordered of the charges of Col. William Mitchell that the navy was responsible for the disaster, as a preliminary to the disciplining of the aviator. Four of the dead officers of the Shenandoah were buried with honors in Arlington cemetery, the rest of the crew who were killed in the accident in Ohio, being buried without pomp by their families.

It was given out in the war department that there is little doubt but what Mitchell will be court martialed. Ma. Gen. Hines, chief of staff, formally called upon Maj. Eli Helmick to probe Mitchell's charges.

Mitchell said that the destruction of the dirigible Shenandoah was the result of criminal neglect and almost treasonable administration of military aeronautics by the war and navy department. He said that the Shenandoah was sent out for propaganda purposes to cover up the disaster to the navy seaplane which was lost attempting a San Francisco to Hawaii flight.

ANTHRACITE STRIKE SHOWS NO WEAKNESS; OPERATORS MEETING

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 9.—Reprtsentatives of the striking anthracite miners and the operators will meet at Hazleton this afternoon to iron out differences that have arisen over the agreement for maintaining maintenance forces in the mines, it was announced here today.

"Everything is quiet," was the way John L. Lewis, president of the mine workers' union summed up the strike situation. "After we adjust the little differences that have arisen over maintenance men I imagine everything will be quiet and serene."

The operators, it has been learned, are holding secret conferences here almost daily. No word is allowed to leak out as to what plans are being discussed. One prominent operator declared the mine owners will stick to their proposal for arbitration. "The operators believe they are adhering to the gospel of President Coolidge," he declared.

ILLINOIS LABOR FEDERATION TO MEET ON MONDAY

Pres. Walker Can Show Nothing But Failures

(Special to the DAILY WORKER.)

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Sept. 9.— The forty-third annual convention of the Illinois State Federation of Labor convenes here in the gym annex, University of Illinois, Sept. 14, facing the grave problems of increased unemployment, accompanied by "open shop" and wage cutting drives.

The report will completely dodge the solution to these vital problems and will instead, be consumed with prattle as to the best way to nominate judges and similar subjects.

Pays Debt to Small.

Walker's report, according to advance information, will make big capital of the Cuthbertson anti-injunction law passed by the last session of the legislature, and not yet declared unconstitutional by the courts.

In return for Governor Small's support in passing this law, which allows "peaceful picketing," Walker takes up the cudgels in his report for Small's plan of "nominating and electing judges by direct vote of the people."

Walker directs attention to the law forced thru the last legislature by Small which provides for the nomination of the 48 circuit and superior judges of Chicago by direct primary. This law took the election of judges from the hands of the political machine of Cook county opposed to Small, thus giving the governor control of more judgeships. Walker advocates in his report the extension of this law to include the circuit and supreme court judges of the state.

Did Nothing Against Child Labor.

Walker apologizes for the fact that the State Federation of Labor did nothing during the past year to abolish child labor in the state, for ex., his failure to bring the proposed child labor amendment to the federal constitution before the state legislature. It was decided to wait, Walker declares, because the time was "inopportune."

Backed Lies of Wise.

Walker also admits that he and Victor Olander, secretary of the federation, backed the false statements sent out by Joseph A. Wise, over the A. F. of L. news service, attacking the Communists and militant workers. Walker will say to the convention, "Wise was in constant touch with Secretary Olander and myself. His stories sent to Washington and from there to the labor press thruout the entire nation, strengthened very much your representatives in their work."

It was Wise, who at a recent meeting of the Chicago Federation of Labor, supported the strikebreaking activities of the United Garment Workers against the striking members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers in Chicago.

Offers No Solution.

Walker in his report admits that unemployment is greatly increasing, and paints a dark outlook of the situation of the workers of Illinois. Only the flat janitors and milk wagon drivers, and the building tradesmen "have successfully fought off any encroachment upon their wage rates and are more prosperous," Walker will tell the convention. "That, however, states all there is to be found on the bright side."

Walker then gives figures to show that unemployment, especially in the coal mines, has greatly increased during the past year. However, Walker does not tell how the wage cut drives and unemployment shall be combatted. He does not favor organization of the unemployed and the unorganized. Nor does he favor amalgamation, or a labor party as a means of combatting the assult of the employers on the trade unions of the state.

SOVIET RUSSIA SETS ASIDE 405,000 ACRES FOR AMERICAN FARMERS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—Opportunities for homesteading in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics are now offered to American farmers. The Union of Socialist Soviet Republics has allotted 405,000 acres of land in the Northrn Caucasia and Volga regions for immigrants from abroad, who desire to settle on land. Each family will be granted from 15 to 50 dessiatins of land on a 12-year lease renewable if the homesteader proves himself competent.

The capital necessary for the cultivation of land should be figured approximately at about $30 per dessiatin. Only competent farmers are desired.

All information in regard to the immigration to the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics can be obtained from the Central Bureau, 799 Broadway, Room 402, New York City.

SUB-MANUFACTURERS' STRIKE IN NEW YORK GARMENT MARKET WILL GET NO AID FROM THE WORKERS

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—It is reported that a new complication is impending in the ladies' garment industry in this city. The sub-manufacturers in the industry are preparing to call a strike against the jobbers in order to force a system of limitation of contractors, which was one of the union's demands made a year and a half ago and submitted to the governor's commission for consideration.

In a statement issued today in behalf of the Joint Committee of Action, of Locals 2, 9 and 22 of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, Louis Hyman, the chairman, said:

"We have been informed that the sub-manufacturers are planning a strike against the jobbers on Wednesday, Sept. 9. Their aim is to force the jobbers to accept partial limitation of contractors.

Only the Union Can Win Strikes.

"We are not ready to say that the sub-manufacturers are not justified in their grievances, but we are in doubt as to whether the American Association is in a position to win its demands. This is not the first time that the sub-manufacturers have talked of a strike, and have attempted to carry thru such a strike. But heretofore nothing has come of this talk except the loss of a few weeks' wages for the workers. Only the union is in a position to carry thru a successful strike, and establish standards in the industry.

"This proposed strike is rather amusing to us. We doubted the ability of the governor's commisison to solve our problems and to do away with the present chotic conditions in the cloak and dress industry. This was one of the real reasons for which we were expelled.

Workers Will Fight for Themselves.

"Now the sub-manufacturers are about to ignore the commission and the machinery which has been established for the purpose of adjusting disputes, and are resorting to the direct method of a strike. Whether their strike is successful or not, the workers who have already gone thru a long dull season will remain unemployed.

"The stoppage plan of the sub-manufacturers proves most effectively what a sad plight the workers are reduced to at the present time, thanks to the policies of the union. After a long slack season on the eve of the holidays, the workers are being thrown out on the street. However the sub-manufacturers must not be under the impression that, the workers will strike in their interests. If a strike takes place, we will see to it that the workers derive some benefits from it too.

FASCIST ATTACK ON WORKERS IS AIDED BY HICKS

Baldwin Government Provokes Violence

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, England, Sept. 9.—The Baldwin government is lending support to the fascist activity against militant trade unionists and Communists. Fascists are increasing their violent actions against organized workers under the protection of the government.

Communists who had gathered at the Rotherham town square where princess Mary was to open a hospital, were attacked by fascist rowdies and a fight ensued. The Communists carried placards announcing they would meet as the royal party passed and deliver speeches on the subject, "Does Royalty Matter? — Workers Think."

Threaten Immediate Action.

The press and the government take the side of the fascist sluggers. The Daily Mail says Sir Archibald Bodkin, director of public prosecutions, has decided to "take immediate action against Communsits spreading propaganda among troops."

A noticeable sentiment in favor of the Communists is spreading among the soldiers, especially those stationed at Aldershot, and the police have been given authority to arrest any one who induces a soldier to think for himself.

Clashes in South Islington.

During the street meetings in the South Islington district Communists and fascists have clashed in street fighting. Sir William Joynson-Hicks, home secretary, the chief enemy of labor in the government, has authorized the secret recruiting of a "volunteer constabulary" to fight the Communists and left wing trade unionists, it is reported. Joynson-Hicks thus places his stamp of approval on the fascist attacks on meetings of workers.

(Concluded from Yesterday's Daily Worker)

SYNOPSIS.—The official report of the British Trade Union Delegation to Soviet Russia, described the workings of foreign trade, transportation, industry, finance and agriculture in the Soviet Union. The delegation concluded that in industry and agriculture the level of production, as well as foreign trade, is increasing. Finances are on a sound basis, and England is doing itself harm by not according Soviet Russia full diplomatic relations. "The results of education are astounding," the report states, after discussing the schools in the Union. "The Soviet government is achieving the most remarkable results in respect to public health, housing and the prison system," says the report. The report states of trade unions and the labor conditions, "The delegations were much impressed by the position and the activities of Trade Unions under the Soviet system." The general conclusion on labor conditions was, "The U. S. S. R. is a strong and stable state. The government is not only in every way better than anything Russia has ever yet had, but it has done and is doing work in which other older states have failed and are failing." The report then tells of visits to factories thruout the union, and describes conditions in Trans-Caucasia. The delegation declares that Soviet Georgia and the other autonomous republics are greatly benefited by being members of the U. S. S. R. The delegation then tells of investigation of the "Red Letter" and concludes it a forgery.

ANNEXE I. (a).

COPY OF FOREIGN OFFICE COMMUNIQUE OF THE "RED LETTER" AND THE OFFICIAL NOTE, WITH CRITICAL FOOTNOTES.

For Publication in Morning Papers of October 25th.

The following letter to the Charge d'Affairs of the Soviet Union was issued by the Foreign Office last night:—

Foreign Office,
October 24th, 1924.

Sir,—

I have the honor to invite your attention to the enclosed copy of a letter* which has been received by the Central Committee of the British Communist Party from the Presidium of the Executive Committee of the Communist International, over the signature of Monsieur Zinoviev, its President, dated September 15th. The letter contains instructions to British subjects to work for the violent overhrow of existing institutions in this country, and for the subversion of His Majesty's armed forces as a means to that end.

* No original or communicated copy can be produced, and it is now alleged that the "Letter" was notes take of a speech.

2. It is my duty to inform you that His Majesty's Government cannot allow this propaganda and must regard it as a direct interference from outside with the British domestic affairs.

3. No one who understands the constitution and the relationships of the Communist International will doubt its intimate connection and contact with the Soviet Government. No Government will ever tolerate an arrangement with a foreign Government by which the latter is in formal diplomatic relations of a correct kind with it, whilst at the same time a propagandist body organically* connected with that foreign Government encourages and even orders subjects of the former to plot and plan revolutions for its overthrow. Such conduct is not only a grave departure from the rules of international comity, but a violation of specific and solemn undertakings repeatedly given to His Majesty's Government.

4. So recently as June 4th of last year the Soviet Government made the following solemn agreement with His Majesty's Government:—

> "The Soviet Government undertakes not to support with funds or in any other form persons or bodies or agencies or institutions whose aim is to spread discontent or to foment rebellion in any part of the British Empire . . . . . . and to impress upon its officers and officials the full and continuous observance of these conditions.

5. Moreover, in the Treaty which His Majesty's Government recently concluded with your Government, still further provision was made for the faithful execution of an analogous undertaking which is essential to the existence of good and friendly relations between the two countries. His Majesty's Government means that these undertakings shall be carried out both in the letter and in the spirit, and it cannot accept the contention that whilst the Soviet Government undertakes obligations, a political body, as powerful as itself* is to be allowed to conduct a propaganda and support it with money, which is in direct violation of the official agreement. The Soviet Government either has or has not the power to make such agreements. If it has the power it is its duty to carry them out and see that the other parties are not deceived. If it has not this power and if responsibilities which belong to the State in other countries are in Russia in the keeping of private and irresponsible bodies the Soviet Government ought not to make agreements which it knows it cannot carry out.

6. I should be obliged if you would be good enough to let me have the observations of your Government on this subject without delay.

I have the honor to be,
With high consideration,
Sir,
Your obedient servant,
(In the absence of the Secretary of State),
(Signed) J. D. GREGORY.

Executive Committee,
Third Communist International.

Very Secret

To the Central Committee,
British Communist Party.

Presidium.
September 15th, 1924.
Moscow.

Dear Comrades,—

The time is approaching for the Parliament of England to consider the Treaty concluded between the Governments of Great Britain and the S.S.S.R. for the purpose of ratification. The fierce campaign raised by the British bourgeoisie around the question shows that the majority of the same, together with reactionary circles, are against the Treaty for the purpose of breaking off an agreement consolidating the ties between the proletarians of the two countries leading to the restoration of normal relations between England and the S.S.S.R.

The proletariat of Great Britain, which pronounced its weighty word when danger threatened of a break-off of the past negotiations, and compelled the Government of MacDonald to conclude the Treaty, must show the greatest possible energy in the further struggle for ratification and against the endeavors of British capitalists to compel Parliament to annul it.

It is indispensable to stir up the masses of the British proletariat (to bring into movement the army of unemployed proletarians)* whose position can be improved only after a loan has been granted to the S.S.S.R. for the restoration of her economics and when business collaboration between the British and Russian Proletariats has been put in order. It is imperative that the group in the Labor Party sympathising with the Treaty should bring increased pressure to bear upon the Government and Parliamentary circles in favor of the ratification of the Treaty.

Keep close observation over the leaders of the Labor Party, because these may easily be found in the leading strings of the bourgeoisie. The foreign policy of the Labor Party as it is already represents an inferior copy of the policy of the Curzon Government. Organize a campaign of disclosure of the foreign policy of MacDonald.

*The I K K I (Executive Committee, Third [Communist] International) will willingly place at your disposal the wide material in its possession regarding the activities of British imperialism in the middle and Far East. In the meanwhile, however, strain every nerve in the struggle for the ratification of the Treaty, in favor of a continuation of negotiations regarding the regulation of relations between the S. S. S. R. and England. A settlement of relations between the two countries will assist in the revolutionizing of the international and British proletariat (no less than a successful rising in any of the working districts of England) as the establishments of close contact between the British and Russian proletariat, the exchange of delegations and workers, etc., will make it possible for us to extend and develop the propaganda of ideas of Leninism in England and the Colonies. Armed warfare must be preceded by a struggle against the inclinations to compromise which are embedded among the majority of British workmen, against the ideas of evolution and peaceful extermination of capitalism. Only then will it be possible to count upon complete success of an armed insurrection. In Ireland and the Colonies the case is different; there is a national question, and this represents too great a factor for success for us to waste time on a prolonged preparation of the working class.

But even in England, as other countries, where the workers are politically developed, events themselves may more rapidly revolutionize the working masses than propaganda. For instance, a strike movement, repressions by the Government, etc.

From your* last report it is evident that agitation-propaganda work in the army is weak, in the navy a very little better. Your explanation that the quality of the members attracted justifies the quantity is right in principle, nevertheless it would be desirable to have cells in all the units of the troops, particularly among those quartered in the large centers of the country, and also among factories working on munitions and at military store depots. We request that the most particular attention be paid to these latter.

In the event of danger of war, with the aid of the latter and in contact with the transport workers, it is possible to paralyse all the military preparations of the bourgeoisie and make a start in turning an imperialist war into a class war. Now more than ever we should be on our guard*. Attempts at intervention in China show that world imperialism is still full of vigor and is once more making endeavors to restore its shaken position and cause a new war, which as its objective is to bring about the break-up of the Russian Proletariat and the suppression of the budding world revolution, and further would lead to the ensalvement of the colonial peoples. "Danger of War"; "The Bourgeoisie seek War, Capital fresh markets"—these are the slogans which you must familiarize the masses with, with which you must go to work into the mass of the proletariat. These slogans will open to you the doors of comprehension of the masses, will help you to capture them and march under the banner of Communism.

The Military Section* of the British Communist Party, so far as we are aware, further suffers from a lack of specialists, the future directors of the British Red Army.

It is time you thought of forming such a group, which together with the leaders, might be in the event of an outbreak of active strife, the brain of the military organization of the Party.

Go attentively through the lists of the military "cells" detailing from them the more energetic and capable men, turn attention to the more talented military specialists who have for one reason or another, left the Service and hold socialist views. Attract them into the ranks of the Communist Party if they desire honestly to serve the proletariat and desire in the future to direct not the blind mechanical forces in the service of the bourgeoisie, but a national* army.

Form a directing operative head of the Military Section.

Do not put this off to a future moment, which may be pregnant with events and catch you unprepared.

Desiring you all success, both in organization and in your struggle.

With Communist greetings,*
President of the Presidium of the I.K.K.I.,
ZINOVIEV.

Member of the Presidium: McMANUS.
Secretary: KUUSINEN.

To the Central Committee of the British Party.

Dear Comrades,—Herewith I am enclosing a copy of the the speech of Comrade Zinoviev delivered to the Enlarged Plenum of the Central Committee of the Russian Communist Party.

Its contents are strictly confidential and it is only to be read by members of your Central Committee.

The Secretary is charged to attend to this matter and to report confirming the strict attention to these instructions.

With Communist greetings,
For the Secretariat,
MacManus.

* No one with any knowledge of the Soviet State would make this blunder. The Comintern is an influential body but no more "organically" connected with the U.S.S.R. than is, say, the Federation of British Industries with the British Government.

* The Soviet administration is a very powerful Government. The Comintern has no governmental power at all.

 If the Comintern were, as said above, "organically" connected, it would not be "private and irresponsible body."

* An interpolation as is obvious from sense and syntax.

 NOTE.—Not the Communist secret organization. It is obviously constitutional agitation that is contemplated.

* This could obviously find no place in a speech to the Executive and an explanation here of IKKI (which would in a real letter have been E.C.C.I.) is of course absurd.

 Another interpolation which makes the sentence almost nonsense.

 Another interpolation interrupting the argument which makes nonsense and shows tampering.

* Here the style and character of contents changes to secret, instructions to a Communist conspiracy.

* The rest of this paragraph is taken from the anti-war propaganda.

 "Seeks" omitted—showing hasty preparation of the document.

* An absurdity.

* Should be "People's Army." This mistranslation of "narodnay" would be impossible to any Communist. "National" is "nationalny," and makes nonsense here.

* These signatures are of course, incorrect in many respects.

 Note the Signature MacManus which is the form used by him in Russia, not McManus as in the "Red Letter."

ANNEXE III.

Moscow, 27-8-1924.

CIRCULAR LETTER No. 8.

To the Central Committee of the Communist Parties.

Dear Comrades:—On the basis of materials which are as yet incomplete, we may conclude that the "anti-war week" has provided some of our sections a considerable field for agitation against imperialist wars. The week of agitation against imperialist war should be made the starting point of permanent anti-war propaganda. It was our intention in the "anti-war week," by means of agitational slogans, to draw the attention of the masses to the inevitability of new imperialist wars, and to the new betrayal by the Second International which finds its expression in its "anti-war policy." Nevertheless the war policy of the imperialists is far too complex a problem to be disposed of by purely agitational means, by merely pointing out to the masses the need for our revolutionary anti-war policy as distinguished from that of the pacifist elements of the bourgeoisie and of the Second International. It is therefore necessary to continue systematically to deal with all the popular issues that were [illegible] during the anti-war week on the subject of imperialism and imperialist war.

It seems to us that the most efficacious means for this purpose would be to make use of the party press. We suggest to our sections to inaugurate regular anti-war propaganda pages in their newspapers.

The anti-war pages should comprise the following features:

1. Constant unmasking of the pacifism of the bourgecisie and of the Second International. We recommend starting a small section in the newspapers, under the title, "Ten Years Ago," in which the betrayals of social democrats should be constantly recorded.

2. Systematic reports on war preparations, imperialist conflicts, inflammable materials of future wars; unmasking the economic-imperialist nature of such wars.

3. Reports on technical preparations for war, on new inventions, army organization, etc.

KUOMINTANG DELEGATES SEE SOVIET MILLS

MOSCOW—(Tass)—A delegation of the Kuomintang, headed by Mr. Tsio Nao, member of the executive committee of the Kuomintang, now in Moscow, visited a series of mills and factories, labor clubs and workers' resting homes.

Interviewed by press representatives, the delegates declared that there were strongly impressed by the Soviet system, under which the working masses were the masters of the destinies of their own country and could control the national industry.

They further expressed their rfim belief that the workers of the U. S. S. R. would lend a helping hand to the Kuomintang in its struggle for the national emancipation of China from the yoke of foreign imperialism.

Radios Widely Used in Middle Western Corn Belt Region

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 8—More than 550,000 farms in the United States are now equipped with radio, the department of agriculture estimates, following a nation-wide survey thru county agricultural agents. A similar survey last year showed 365,000 farms on which there are radio sets, and in 1923 only 145,000 farms.

This rapid increase in the use of radio by farmers is due, department officials declare, to the need for prompt market information in merchandising farm products, to the educational value of radio, and to its entertainment features. Many county agents reported that farmers have installed radio sets primarily to receive weather and market reports.

The department's estimate of 550,000 sets is based upon reports from 1056 county agents. Illinois leads the list in number of sets on farms, the estimate for that state being 46,000 sets; New York is next with 39,000 sets on farms; Iowa farmers have 39,000 sets; Missouri 37,000; Kansas 35,000; Nebraska 34,000; Ohio 27,000; and Minnesota 26,000. California has 22,000 sets on farms; Michigan 19,000; Texas 18,000; and Indiana 17,000.

The smallest number of sets is in Delaware, for which the estimate is 200 sets on farms; Florida farms have 300; New Mexico 500; and Nevada 600. The corn belt states show the greatest development in the use of radio on farms. The reason given for the slow development in the use of radio in the South is natural conditions which hamper clear broadcasting and reception.

JUDGE ASKS LAW PROBE SLUGGING OF LEFT WINGER

But Lets Gangsters Off With $50 Fine

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Sept. 9—The district attorney has been asked by Judge Henry Goodman to make three investigations of the continued assaults which are being made upon members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union who have joined with the Joint Committee of Action of Locals 2, 9 and 22 in their fight upon the corrupt union officials.

In Jefferson Market court three gangsters came up for hearing on a charge of disorderly conduct following the raid made yesterday upon the cloak shop of Shulman Bros., at 26 West 30th street.

Gangsters Plead Guilty.

The men pleaded guilty, and after the employer had testified that these intruders came up into his shop, turned off the power, damaged his goods and started a fight with the workers; and after the workers had identified the gangsters and accused them of hitting them with chairs, Abraham Goodman, attorney for the Joint Committee, introduced the affidavit of a physician who stated that Sam Sabalefsky of 318 East 122nd, who had been hit just behind the ear, with a blackjack, was too badly injured to appear in court. The presiding judge, Henry Goodman, after hearing all this testimony fined each man $50.

Protest Light Fine.

Attorney Abraham Goodman then argued on the injustice of such a decision in view of the flagrant violation all law which these gangsters had shown, and especially when just last week girls who had been peacefully picketing a striking shop had been fined $50 in this same court.

Hyman Bushnell, attorney for the Joint Board who appeared for the defendants, began making statements to the effect that these workers in the shop were just a bunch of Bolsheviks, a lot of foreigners; that the Joint Board agents had a perfect right to go up into the shop and throw these people out. Judge Goodman reprimanded him and stated he was running this investigation and he was convinced a more thoro investigation of the whole situation was necessary.

Will Press the Case.

When Lawyer Goodman asked that the men be re-arrested on a charge of felinous assault, the judge announced that he would turn the whole matter over to the district attorney. The three gangsters were paroled in the custody of their lawyer Rushnell, to appear at the district attorney's office on Tuesday, Sept. 8.

The Joint Commitee of Action is determined to press the case to the fullest extent and make this the beginning of an energetic campaign against the Joint Board gangsters and their terrorist methods.

Military Prisoners Escape

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Sept. 9.—The five military prisoners who escaped by sawing their way thru bars of the prison at Fort Hays, have not been apprehended. Three were seen to board an eastbound freight train but trace of them was lost.

CLOAK AND DRESS MAKERS STILL MILITANT THRU LONG FIGHT TO DEFEAT SIGMAN BETRAYALS

By a Rank and Filer.

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 9.—The struggle in the cloak and dressmakers commenced so long ago, that some of us hardly remember when it first started. And to some it seems almost endless!

We have been fighting for months and months—almost for years—against the Sigmans, the Feinbergs, and the whole gang of "yellow" jobholders, whose only interest is not the union, but to further intrench themselves in well paid jobs—with fat salaries coming from the sweat and blood of hard working dues paying members, most of them with families and dependents to support and long months of slackness and enforced idleness to look forward to during the year.

Well, the fight is on—it is a fight to the finish—and the morale of our members has not been broken yet—not with ousters and expulsions, with suspensions of our most active members, of our duly elected executive boards, not with hired gansters and thugs hired by our venerable leaders—Feinberg and company, to beat us up, not with their tactics of ordering firms to discharge members of Locals. 2, 9 and 22 and promising to send scabs to take their places; not with helping bosses to obtain injunctions against us in shops where we have been compelled to declare strikes because of the wholesale discharge of our most active workers; not with using the most brutal and dirty tactics have they been able to break the morale of our members.

Morale Splendid.

And the morale is splendid—worth the eulogy of a better pen than mine. Every day, day in and day out, our members walk up and down the streets doing picket duty, then come to the headquarters of Local 22 to guard them against the hired gangsters of Sigman and company who are diligently watching for an opportunity to take this home, built with so many years of toil and effort of the members of our union, away from us; or going out with newspapers and literature, spreading the truth about our struggle against the machine, our corrupt leaders and their paid hirelings, and dissipating the lies being spread by the same corrupt officials in their leaflets and bought press.

"Come, Join the Fight."

If you are a worker, a member of a union, and believe in action—in fighting against corrupt officialdom, join us in this struggle. Come down on the picket line, or come down to Local 22 and watch us in action. You will become enthused with the untiring courage and ceaseless enthusiasm of our members.

If you are a revolutionist, you will want to pitch in and help us—physically, financially, morally, in our fight. Your interests are identical with our interests.

Our fight is your fight. If we win, you too win. The left wing elements in all other unions will take heart and carry on the struggle against their corrupt officialdom more vigorously and aggressively, encouraged by our victory.

Take an Interest.

Fellow workers. Take an interest in what is going on in Locals 2, 9 and 22. Read our literature, spread the news about our fight, come down to the picket line and the fighting line, watch us on guard duty, come down to Local 22 and see us daily and nightly rally in defense of our home—follow our struggle, acquaint yourself and your fellow workers with it, and take heart and enthusiasm of our members, to carry on your own fights in your own unions.

Give us your support. We need it. Physically and financially, if possible; morally, if you can do neither of the foregoing.

RUSSIAN INVENTED STEAM ENGINE, NOT WATT, IS REPORT

MOSCOW, Sept. 9.—The central committee of the Soviet Russian trade union of metal workers has passed a resolution declaring that Ivan Ivanovitch Polzounov was the the first to make the steam engine work, and not James Watt.

Polzounov, the son of a soldier submitted complete plans of his machine, with a model, to Catherine the Great, in the year 1763, according to the report submitted to the committee by Comrade Ryske. James Watt took out patents on his patents on his engine in 1769, six years later.

STRIKEBREAKER BERRY ATTACKS REDS IN KANSAS

Daily Worker Expose Got His Dander Up

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 9.—"Majah" George L. Berry, president of the International Printing Pressmen's and Assistants' Union was the principal speaker at a Labor Day celebration here yesterday. He divided his harangue on a fifty-fifty basis between praising God and American capitalism and denouncing the Communists.

What got Berry's goat was a story of his crooked career that appeared in The DAILY WORKER, which was distrbuted among the audence. The papers were grabbed by the pressmen and printers in the audience and hundreds more could have been disposed of.

Attack Was a Dud.

Berry's attack on the Communists did not create a ripple. He charged the reds with trying to make people equal. He said the American worker was a one hundred per cent patriot and would never be touched by Communism. Despite this apparent immunity, the strike-breaker used up a lot of froth and fury on the Communists.

Cuneo Strike On.

The strike against the open shop system which the Cuneo Printing company tried to put over on the pressmen and feeders with the aid of George L. Berry, and his strikebreakers, Marks, Orr, Brophy and McHugh, is still on.

The cost of this strike to the company can be gauged by the fact that on one day last week, the company paid $500 in taxi bills for hauling strikebreakers to the shops. Many of these who were brot to the plant quit as soon as they learned there was a strike on. Most of the employes are in sympathy with the strikers. Craft autonomy prevents other members of the printing trades from walking out in sympathy with the pressmen and feeders.

Standard Oil Feels Sting in Turkey of Soviet Competition

MOSCOW, —(Tass)— News has been received here that in view of increased import in Turkey of Soviet oil, the price of petroleum in Constantinople has lately fallen from 265 to 240 piastres, and the price of benzine from 338 to 296, a further fall being expected

It is further learned that under pressure of Soviet competition, the Standard Oil company has cut the cost of its products, while other firms have even ceased the sale of petroleum at Constantinople in view of the impossibility to compete with Soviet products.

SHOE UNION IN OPEN LETTER TO THE UNORGANIZED

Points Out Struggle Ahead for Workers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—The following has been issued as an open letter to the shoe workers of New York and Brooklyn:

"There are two reasons why you should organize—to help yourself get better conditions and to help your fellow worker get the same. The manufacturers believe in organization, for themselves, but not for you therefore, it is your duty to believe in it for yourself.

"Concentrated capital must be met by concentrated labor. We must organize nationally and internationally. Individually you cannot bargain with the boss—and win—that is why you must organize. Today the shoe trust is rapidly developing and you must be in a position to deal with it. How? Organize!

Manufacturers Combine—Imports Increase.

"Of the total shoe manufacturing concerns in this country 14½ per cent actually produce 65½ per cent of the total shoes produced and are capable of producing and are fully equipped to produce all the shoes that the American and foreign market can consume. Imports of leather footwear increased 48 per cent in 1924 over 1923 and we exported 1,077,879 pairs less during the same year.

"What does this mean? It means that unless you organize to protect yourselves cheaper European labor will compete so successfully with the shoe workers of this country that you will be forced to accept the lowest possible wage and work longer hours. How can you fight this? By organizing!

Get Into the Union.

"Greater New York is one of the biggest shoe centers in this country and one of the poorest organized, therefore, it will be one of the first hit by decreased exportation and cheap European labor. What should you do? What must you do? Get in touch at once with the Shoe Workers' Protective Union, the only national industrial organization of its kind in the country. Join the local to which you should belong. Ask the organizer to come to your shop. Interest your fellow workers and be organized.

"The Shoe Workers' Protective Union has a campaign on for organization and now is your time.

"Headquarters, Room 22, 325 Washington St., Brooklyn, near Borough Hall, Telephone Main 4923... Unite for Power!"

Child Marriage in India.

Statistics given by a writer in the Times of India, published in Bombay, show the extent of child marriage in India. The figures are from the 1921 census report from the Bombay presidency. They show that in 1921 there were in Bombay, in round numbers, 49,000 married girls under the age of five years, of whom more than 2,000 were widows; 261,000 between the ages of five and ten years, 13,000 of whom were widows; 643,000 between the ages of ten and fifteen, of whom 34,000 were widows. The infant death rate in Bombay in 1924 was 411 per thousand live births, compared with the United States rate (1923) of 77.

"LABOR" BANK USING NON-UNION OFFICE WORKERS WHILE LEADERS OF UNION DISRUPT ORGANIZATION

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 9.—The past few meetings of the bookkeepers, stenographers and accountants, Local 12,646, American Federation of Labor, have been taken up with charges, trial committees' reports, and expulsions. Such is the recent "activity" of the union.

At one meeting, Primoff was expelled because he pointed out to the membership that the paid officials of the union were not on the job organizing. Innumerable organizable offices were listed. But the union leadership pursued a policy of hesitancy and discrimination on the question of organizing the unorganized.

"Labor" Bank is Scab Shop.

Leniency with the International Bank, which "union" bank refuses to be organized, and is gradually being placed on the "unfair" list; leniency with other International offices; leniency with the socialist party lawyers' offices is the policy pursued. Month after month, the cut and dried reports of the officials state "progress," with no new offices organized. Paper progress describes their reports.

One set of charges, at another meeting, were insufficient. So two sets were brot in. One set of charges was brot of "conduct unbecoming members of this union" against Chernow, and Cooper for bringing in a minority report, and against Kitzes for supporting the report of the minority exonerating Primoff. To speak in favor of anything which the union leaders do not agree with is a crime in the B. S. & A. U. punishable with expulsion.

Instantly, there followed another set of charges of "scabbing" against Nagin and Meyers. They were charged with having worked for Local 22, I. L. G. W. while a fake strike was on, immediately after the internal struggle in the I. L. G. W. Locals 2, 9, 22 began In both cases the false, illogical reasoning was proven by the fact that the B. S. & A. U. leadership could not distinguish between one separate and distinct organization and another. They considered the Joint Action Committee and Local 22 as synonymous. And they are wrong.

It is known thruout the labor movement that since the internal fight began in the I. L. G. W., the separate locals ceased functioning as such. No dues, assessments, etc., were collected. Only that a new, separate and distinct organization representing the three left locals was organized in the shape of the Joint Action Committee, and it needed the help of only a few office employes in the recording of the defense money collected and the distribution thereof.

Heavy Penalties.

Reasoning very little, and that from the false premise that the Joint Action Committee and Local 22 were the same (which they are not) the conclusion arrived at was obviously and inevitably false. That the charged were guilty; Nagin was to pay $75.00 fine and leave his job; Myers $50.00 fine and leave her job, or both were to be considered expelled from the union if they did not so abide by the stupid decision.

In the discussion of the latter cases, it was clearly pointed out that:

1. The Joint Action Committee was a body distinct from either of the three locals of the International that it represented.
2. Local 22 has not been functioning as a local since June 15; and that it was not performing its regular duties as a local.
3. The B. S. & A. U. officials were taking sides in a controversial matter of another union.
4. The B. S. & A. U. officials were taking orders from the I. L. G. W. (mis)-leaders Feinberg and Baroff in declaring a strike, as a partisan tactic; in calling it off, on their orders; and in calling a strike again, of the office employes.
5. The president of the B. S. & A. U. blamed the secretary for the latter's mistaken ideas in calling a strike and ordering them to return, only to call them again. The secretary was asked to explain his position, or tell whether the president was merely passing the buck, but the secretary merely grew red in the face with a shameful red blush, and said "Why should I explain?"
6. The S. P. members of the union, showed their "short sightedness" in defending all the mistakes made by the union leaders in the above-mentioned cases.

Having satisfied themselves with the finings of the mentioned members, one should think that they had enuf for a time. But no.

"Activity."

And up went the professional charge-bringer, and therewith a new charge against another member, Alstein. Charges from the right; charges from the rear; charges from the front—but the office workers remain unorganized.

To cover their inactivity, their inability to organize the thousands of unorganized office workers, the B. S. & A. U., 12646 A. F. L. leadership has raised the smoke screen issue of charges. Such they call the "activity" of the union.

Why Not?

Why don't the leaders of the B. S. & A. U. rather build the union than just be satisfied with keeping its membership at a mere few hundred? Why not organize and do constructive work of the union? The membership must all get in on the work, and see to it that we rather increase our membership thru organization—than to decrease it thru expulsions. Let the membership take the bookkeepers, stenographers, and accountants' union more seriously, and force the leaders of the union to organize the unorganized.

Another Red Letter

Coincident with the convening of the British Trade Union Congress, another "Zinoviev letter" similar to the one sprung on the British public during the last general election made its appearance.

The object of this fabrication is the same as the one that helped to defeat the labor party. Its aim is to enable reaction, which is on the defensive in the labor movement to gain a footing and defeat the progressive movement by creating a wave of hysteria among the masses, that will enable the right wing leaders to bring the less class conscious workers under their influence.

The first fake letter spurred the petty bourgeois voters into activity and filled the aristocrats with a holy fear of the menace of Bolshevism. It had the same effect on the reactionary workers in England that the predictions of industrial disaster made by the republican party strategists here in case of LaFollette's election, had on millions of American workers.

The British labor party towards the end of its life in office, despite the best efforts of MacDonald and company, was being forced into taking action contrary to the interests of the ruling classes. It agreed to granting a loan to Soviet Russia; and it called off the indictment against the Communist editor J. R. Campbell, who was charged with inciting mutiny in the navy. When those things happened the ruling class decided that the labor party was no longer a safe and useful tool in its hands.

When the labor party went out of office the trade unions dominated the labor movement, and the stars of Ramsay MacDonald, Snowden and Clynes began to decline. Those of Purcell, Cook and Swales rose. The trade unions began to go to the left and the united front between them and the Russian unions together with the report of the British trade union delegation to Russia were the outstanding events of this period in the world labor movement.

The fight for a unified international trade union movement based on the class struggle received a tremendous impetus and the victory of the British miners backed by the other large trade unions over the government, faced the British ruling class with the fact that they were face to a face with a condition that threatened their very existence.

Desperate situations demand desperate remedies. The British ruling class hoped that its tried and trusted right wing leaders would hold their power. The sweep of sentiment among the masses, however, has been towards the left. For this tendency the disintegration of British capitalism is mainly responsible. The Communist propaganda which has been making such headway among the trade unions lately, would not have made such progress if British imperialism were in as healthy a condition as American capitalism.

The aim of the latest fake "Zinoviev letter," launched by the Daily Mail, the same paper that perpetrated the first one, is to frighten the masses away from the leadership of Cook, Purcell and Hicks, who are branded by the ruling class as "agents of Moscow," tho neither are Communists. The capitalists hope thru means of this device to give the leadership back into the hands of Thomas, MacDonald and Snowden, the socialist king lovers.

This dodge may have some effect for the moment. It is part of the experience of the working class on its march towards freedom. But any momentary gain for the ruling class of Britain thru such methods will be counterbalanced by the reaction among the masses that will inevitably follow.

Supping with the Devil Has Nothing on This

The Associated Press recently signed a contract with the Soviet government, providing for the interchange of news with Tass, formerly Rosta, official news agency of the Soviet government.

Nothing succeeds like success. The Associated Press has been the principal fountain of anti-Soviet lies in the United States—since the czar and his government were toppled over into the historical abyss. But lies are poor weapons in the long run and a cause that depends on lies is leaning on a brokne reed. The mighty revolution that humbled one of the oldest of dynasties in the world and erazed it from the political map, plowed its way to victory thru a sea of falsehood and thru the bullets, bombs and bayonets of its myriad foes.

The Associated Press recognized an accomplished fact. It did not like to do it, but business is business and it cannot ignore one-sixth of the earth's surface if it wants to continue its existence as a news agency.

The same logic that forced the Associated Press to shake hands with the Bolshevik devil will compel the United States government to recognize the Soviet regime.

Slipping It Over

The Kalamazoo convention of the International Typographical Union rescinded the action of the Quebec convention in 1[illegible] favoring "the amalgamation of the various printing trades unions to the end that there be but one union in the printing industry." The action was taken without debate and the motion to rescind passed unanimously.

This move was engineered by President James M. Lynch, the ultra-reactionary who returned to power in the I. T. U. in the last election. The convention was entirely under his control and there was not even a peep out of the so-called progressives.

Lynch, at one time was in favor of industrialism as opposed to craft unionsim, according to the Industrialist, organ of the Printers' Industrial League of New York. Those who supported Lynch in the election which brought him to power, under the impression that he was a better choice than Howard who ran on the progressive ticket, probably now realize that Lynch's smooth way of working for reaction is much more efficient and hence much more dangerous than the stupid and bull-in-a-China-shop methods of fakers like Major L. Berry.

"Willy" Hearst and "Al" Smith are taking the lid off stinking capitalist politics in New York City. Let the workers get their fill of the smell and turn away from the old parties of capitalism forever.

Madrid dispatches claim the Spanish military machine is getting the best of the Riffians. But the news straight from Africa has a very different tune.

KRIM DEMANDS INDEPENDENCE FOR RIFFIANS

No Peace Until This Is Secured, He Says

PARIS, Sept. 9.—The complete independence of the Riff has been demanded as a preliminary to negotiations with the French by the brother of Abd-el-Krim, and with Krim's secretary, Ben Hadj Hatmi, who sopke for the Moroccan leader.

The interview was obtained at Tazrout, Krim's headquarters near Chechouan. Speaking of the fact that France had forced the war upon the Riffians, Hatmi said: "We wrote many letters to Paris and Rabat, seeking ground for an agreement. All these letters remained unanswered.

Riffians Sought Peace.

"Abd-el-Krim's brother and I went to Paris. Alas, we could not see M. Poincare nor his colleagues. We even went to the doors of the ministers without being received. During our stay in Paris we saw French commercial personalities, but without result.

"It was in Paris that we learned from our government that French troops were ready to cross the Ouergha river. We advised the French representative of Moroccan affairs not to advance the troops and once more asked him to come to an agreement with us. He replied that was a matter for Marshal Lyautey."

Spain's Claim Impossible.

Hatmi declared that the arming of the Beni Zerouls by the French and the advance north of the Ourrgha forced the Riffians to begin defensive action.

The Spanish note was ignored, Hatmi said, because Spain not only refused to consider Riffian independence, but claimed more territory than ever before.

BUFFALO POLICE TRY TO PREVENT BLOOR MEETING

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 9.—The Ella Reeves "Mother" Bloor meeting in open air in Shelton Square was interrupted by the police who demanded that she speak only on religion.

As a banner was displayed on the stand in bold letters announcing the meeting was being held by the Workers Party it seemed rather incongruous to suddenly start a "religious" meeting. However in order that she be allowed to continue Mother Bloor immediately took for her "religious" text "He that doth not work neither shall he eat" and told the story of the great land where that text was being practiced as well as preached.

"It was then easy to switch off into the contrasts of America, England and Germany and the original subject of her lecture "The World Labor Movement." The crowd appreciated the clever turn given to the lecture by Mother Bloor with laughter and applause and a generous response with subscriptions for the DAILY WORKER.

In the meantime the police disappeared after remaning long enough to hear Comrade Bloor's references to Jesus and were not present when she made tre transition to Lenin.

Utica Press Announces Mother Bloor's Arrival.

UTICA, N. Y. (By Mail).—Mother Bloor arrived here this morning on her coast-to-coast tour for the DAILY WORKER. The Utica Daily News, remembering her as the leader of the picket line in the Savage Arms plant strike during the world war, announced her arrival on her spectacular cross country trip for the DAILY WORKER in a boxed story advising its readers where the meeting was to be held.

"It doesn't matter if the police are also present" Mother Bloor announced. "I'm used to seeing them in every town I go and I know all 57 varieties of them. Despite interference the workers in this town are going to hear about Communism and the DAILY WORKER, and that's that."

She concluded saying: "I am too busy making Communists and getting subs for the DAILY WORKER to worry about anything else."

The Workers Party in Action

JEWISH CONVENTION OF WORKERS PARTY UNANIMOUSLY SUPPORTS THE NATIONAL CONVENTION'S DECISIONS

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 6.—(By Mail.)—The national convention of the Jewish Section of the Workers Party, which opened here yesterday, got down to work today with the acceptance of the report of the credentials committee seating 96 delegates.

The right of fifteen delegates to seats in the convention had been contested, but on recommendation of C. E. Ruthenberg, representative of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party at the convention, all delegates were seated and the question of contests referred to the Central executive Committee for final settlement.

The convention elected A. Wiener, of Detroit, as chairman by vote of 55 for Wiener and 40 for Ben Gifschitz of New York City.

The first order of business taken up was the report of the Central Executive Committee. Comrade Ruthenberg presented an analysis of the struggle within the party culminating in the national convention. He outlined the basis of the decision of the Communist International supporting the Ruthenberg group and then reviewed the work of the national convention, declaring "The fourth national convention will mark a new period in the development of our party, the period of the beginning of the Worker Party becoming a really Bolshevik party." The speaker than outlined the tasks of the Jewish section, laying particular strees on the liquidation of Loreism in that section.

A discussion lasting four hours followed, in which the principle issue was the attitude of the former Loreist group consisting of Comrades Salzman, Siegel, London and Wiener. All of these comrades took the floor, acknowledge their errors and pledged themselves to follow the line of the party and the Communist International hereafter.

Dealing with these declaration Comrade Ruthenberg said: "Words are not sufficient to clear these comrades of their past errors. They must show by their deeds, by their work in the party, that they have really recognized their errors and can follow a clear Communist line."

The following resolution was presented by the representation of the Central Executive Committee:

Resolution on the Fourth National Convention of the Workers Party

HAVING considered the resolutions and decisions of the fourth national convention of the party, we, the convention of the Jewish section, declare:

1. That the resolutions of the parity committee, unanimously adopted by the convention, lay down a correct line of Communist policy for our party. These resolutions provide the basis for work of the party members among the masses, thru which alone our party can grow into a mass Communist Party. We declare our wholehearted support on the resolution on the Immediate Tasks of the Party, on Trade Union Work, the Labor Party Campaign, Imperialism, Work Among Women, Agricultural Work, and other major campaigns of the party.

2. We welcome the action taken by the convention for the liquidation of Loreism in our party. Our party has reached the point of development where opportunistic deviations by leading members of the party cannot longer be tolerated. In the expulsion of Lore from the party and the removal of Comrade Askeli from the editorial board of the Tyomies, the convention indicated that the fight against opportunism will be intensified in our party in the future. We pledge our support to this campaign. The conference declares that the activities of the Loreistic group in the Jewish section represented by Saltzman, London, Siegel, Wiener, etc., have been an obstacle to the growth of the Communist movement among the Jewish speaking workers, and to the Bolshevization of the Jewish section. The conference therefore declares that a determined campaign must be carried on in the Jewish section against Loreism and that the first prerequisite for the success of such a campaign is that none of those who have been leading Loreites in the Jewish section shall be elected into the Bureau of the Jewish section. These comrades and all others who have been prominent leaders and supporters of Loreism must show by their activities in the party in the future that they have recognized their errors and that they understand the line of the Comintern and are ready to give loyal, undeviating support to it.

3. The resolution on the Bolshevization of our party marks a new step forward for the American Communist Party. The reorganization of the party on the basis of shop nuclei and international branches and a centralized apparatus with the language sections reorganized as language fractions, marks a necessary step in centralization of our party, and lays the basis for its carrying on real Communist work. We pledge ourselves to energetically take up the campaign for reorganization and to give every aid possible in effecting this reorganization at the earliest possible date.

4. The cable of the Communist International to its representative declaring that "It has finally become clear that the Ruthenberg group is more loyal to decisions of the Communist International and stands closer to its views" lays the basis for the future development of the leadership of our party and the unification of its leadership. We declare our acceptance of the decision of the Communist International and that we will loyally support the Central Executive Committee elected on the basis of that decision in carrying on the work of the party. The conference is of the opinion that the majority in the party convention accepted the decision of the Communist International and carried it out in a responsible Communist manner worthy of loyal followers of the Comintern. The Conference declares that the best interests of the party and the solution of the party crisis require harmonious cooperation between the former majority and minority and a united fight by them against the right wing.

This resolution was unanimously adopted, the comrades named in it, who were delegates the convention, voting for it.

A resolution endorsing the appeal of the former majority of the Central Executive Committee of the party against the decision of the Communist International was ruled out of order by Ruthenberg who declared "The comrades have a right to appeal to the Communist International for revision of its attitude toward them, but this appeal cannot be made an issue in the party and the Central Executive Committee will not permit it to come before the units of the party for action."

PHILADELPHIA TO HAVE ROUSING MASS MEETING SEPT. 13

Cleveland Y. W. L. Will Give Anti-Religious Meeting; Also Dance

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 9—Meeting Tuesday eve. Sept. 27—Yom-kipur evening, the holiest evening on the Jewish calendar, when the Jewish petty-bourgeoisie of all degrees and even some workers—who are yet unaware of their position in society—assemble in the synagogues to beg forgiveness for all sins committed during the year, will be an eventful evening for the young workers of Cleveland. A meeting to demonstrate against religion is arranged for that evening, at the Freiheit Hall, 5311 Wodland Ave., where religion will be discussed and analyzed from the Marxian viewpoint. It will be exposed as an opium that dopes the minds of the workers and helps to keep them as a subjugated class. Comrades Gleisser and Duchan will be the speakers. All workers are invited to come.

Dance Monday Eve, Sept. 28.

All who have attended previous affairs of the Young Workers League will not stay away from the Yom-kipur night dance, Sept. 28, at the Carpenter's Hall, 2226 E. 55th.

You will help the Communist movement and at the same time spend an eventful evening with the red youth. Remember the date: Sept. 28 at 2226 E. 55th.

Scientists for Sunlight.

Studies by physicians and scientists in England reported at the Congress of the Royal Institute of Public Health, held at Brighton in May, indicate that sunlight, "either natural or artificial, when properly administered, may have a definitely beneficial effect on mental activity." It was found that children handicapped in school work by illness, when cured with the aid of sunlight, caught up with or outdistanced their classmates.

WORKERS PARTY REPEATS CALL FOR UNITED LABOR TICKET IN NEW YORK CITY MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS

By BERTRAM D. WOLFE.

In nominating Benjamin Gitlow for mayor, William Weinstone for comptroller and Charles Krumbein for president of the board of aldermen, the Workers Party has again repeated in its municipal platform the call for a united labor ticket and has unequivocally declared "That it stands ready up to the very last moment to withdraw its candidates in favor of a united front against the capitalist parties."

The question of a united labor ticket was discussed at the nominating convention held in August and was embodied in the platform of the party by unanimous vote of the entire convention. The position of the convention was expressed by Comrade Weinstone speaking for the platform committee when he said, "The issue of the united labor ticket and the demand made upon the socialist party brings up in a concrete manner the entire question of independent working class action and the menace of non-partisanship which has had such a disastrous effect upon the local labor movement. The socialist party says it stands for a labor party. In the past its position has been a platonic one. It has avoided every issue which might bring it into conflict with the local bureaucrats and would initiate a move against their support of the capitalist politicians. Last year it supported LaFollette but still declared it was for a labor party. This year it left out of its program any specific mention of a labor party and ignored the call of the Workers Party and the labor delegates at the so- called 'Fusion onvention' fo ra united labor ticket in the coming election campaign.

"Again we call upon the socialist party to declare whether they stand for united political action of the working class against the powerful and united capitalist enemy or whether they will continue to break the front of labor on the political field as they have consistently done in the economic field."

In addition to the demand for the united labor ticket, the platform calls for municipal ownership and workers' control of all municipal utilities; the maintenance of the five cent fare; a municipal housing program assuring better housing for the workers at rents commensurate to wages; the abolition of injunctions and police interference in labor disputes; the establishment of city markets to sell food and other necessities at cost; the encouragement of workers' co-operatives thru credits, loans, and other means, in order to combat the high cost of living; the construction of sufficient schools and the full maintenance of all workers' children attending school up to the age of sixteen; the abolition of all child labor under the age of sixteen; and work or wages for the unemployed.

These are only some of the demands made by the Workers Party in its platform to combat the ever-growing misery and poverty of the millions of toilers of the city. The platform points out the limitations of such demands within the frame work of the capitalist system and calls for the complete overthrow of capitalism and the establishment of a workers' and farmers' government.

The campaign to put the Workers Party candidates on the ticket has already begun. The branches of the district are called upon to mobilize immediately for the signature campaign.

UNIONS SEND DELEGATES TO DEFENSE MEET

Mass Meeting in N. Y. on Sept. 13

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—"Labor Defense Day", Sunday Sept. 13th will be observed in New York City by the holiday by a great evening mass meeting in Webster Hall, 119 E. 11th St. and a conference of workers organizations convening in the afternoon at the Labor Temple, 243 E. 84th St.

Speakers at the mass meeting will be James P. Cannon, National Secretary of International Labor Defense, Benj. Gitlow, recently remanded to Sing Sing Prison by a decision of the U. S. Supreme Court, Dick Brazier, former I. W. W. prisoner at Leavenworth and now under deportation charges, Robt. W. Dunn of the American Civil Liberties Union and J. R. Brodsky, prominent labor lawyer of New York City.

Unions at Conference

The conference will be called to order at 1 P. M. and will seat representatives of trades union, workers' benefit societies, co-operatives, etc. and delegates from the fifty or more permanent branches of International Labor Defense established in New York City in the past several months. Twelve trade unions and ten workmen's circle branches have sent in credentials to date and many more are expected to appear at the conference.

The purpose of the conference will be to set up a permanent local New York organization of International Labor Defense. This will be composed of individual membership branches of I. L. D. and collective affiliations from other workers' organizations. The work of this local organization will be to agitate for the release of all class-war prisoners in America and all other capitalist countries, to provide relief to class-war prisoners and their families and to carry on campaigns of opposition to all attempts to persecute members of the labor movement for working class activities.

Zeigler Frame-Up Featured

The feature of the meeting, as with dozens of similar demonstrations being held thruout the country on the same day, will be the "Zeigler Frame-up." The story of the frame-up of eighteen Zeigler coal miners on a charge of conspiracy to murder following a strike in which the union officials combined with the coal operators will be told by the speakers.

The aims of International Labor Defense, founde. at a national conference last June, will occupy much of the discussion in Webster Hall. I. L. D. is a non-partisan workers' defense body that seeks to afford protection to all workers, regardless of their affiliations or views, who are attacked for sharing in the struggles of the organized workers or for expressing their opinions. There are more than 100 workers in prison for the crime of labor activiy. As many more await trial for the same offense and face prison or deportation.

Struggle in Other Lands

The story of the struggle of workers in other lands will be told. The white terror of the Baltic and Balkan States will be delineated by the speakers. At the present time three great trials are in progress in Europe. The second trial of Stanislav Lanzutsky in Warsaw, the trial of the Executive Committee of the Bulgarian Communist Party and the process of the five hundred Bessarabian peasants now under way at Kishinev.

Some fifty other large centers in the country will have mass meetings and conferences on "Labor Defense Day". Bishop William Montgomery Brown will be the main speaker at Cincinatti. A. T. McNamara at Pittsburgh, Wm. F. Dunne at Milwaukee, Earl R. Browder at Cleveland, Ella Reeve Bloor at Boston, Foster and Ruthenberg at Chicago.

WA[illegible] ON COMMUNISTS AID TO BOSSES

T. U. E. L. THIRD NATIONAL CONFERENCE WILL MEET IN CHICAGO NOVEMBER 14-15

William Z. Foster, secretary of the Trade Union Educational League, announced today that the league's third national conference will be held in Chicago on November 14 and 15.

"Since our latest conference, in 1923," said Foster, "the T. U. E. L, has gone thru a most terrific struggle against the combined opposition of the reactionary officials of the trade unions and the capitalists, including the capitalist courts. It must be admitted that the broad sweep of our movement at the end of 1923, when we had 2,000,000 union men supporting our slogans of Amalgamation and a Labor Party, has been narrowed down by the bitter struggle. But what we have lost in breath, we have more than offset by the deep roots which the T. U. E. L. has struck in the daily struggles of the workers, in the tightly-knit bands of real fighters who have been tempered in the struggle and who have established themselves firmly as the leaders of the struggle for working class interests. One needs only to mention the great vote of the left-wing ticket in the miner's union, the mass struggles in the needle trades, the developing left wing in the Machinist and Carpenters unions, to recognize the coming Third National Conference of the T. .U E. L. will be the most important and history making gathering of its kind so far seen in America."

The official call for the conference will be published in a few days.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

FORMER Gov. McCray of Indiana, once a big cog in the G. O. P. machine is down in Atlanta, Georgia, federal penitentiary doing penance for a piece of financing which did not happen to square with the bankers' idea of how things should be done. What riled the the bankers was McCray's strange mistake of robbing them. "How come?" they muttered angrily, "when did the laity get it into their heads that they could horn in on our game. If there is any robbing to be done—and there is—we are going to do it." So they sent McCray to the can after he collected a couple of millions from the bankers.

THE governor is doing well in Atlanta, which shows that you cannot keep a good man down. Brains will tell even in prison. McCray gave himself the job of teaching the other prisoners how to go straight. "He ought to 'know'" say the other prison guests, "any man who could steal a couple of millions of dollars from the bankers, must have a lot of brains." The reporter who sent out the story about McCray's pedagogical activities does not say whether the governor has started a bank to take care of the prisoners' money.

THERE is an election campaign on in New York and a right sloppy one it is. The main prize is the mayoralty. Hylan and Hearst versus Walker and Smith. That is the line up in the democratic camp. All the candidates agree that they are all crooks, and the general, public has no evidence to the contrary. The republicans have a few puppets competing for the nomination in the primaries. The socialist party is running an ex-preacher by the name of Thomas. The socialists condemn the non-partisan policy of the local labor movement which is divided between Hylan and Walker, the anti-Tammany and Tammany democrats.

LABOR leaders who are on Hylan's payroll are naturally for Hylan. Those who are not, favor his opponent, in the hope that Santa Claus might visit them in case their candidate is successful at the polls. This is the basis for the support of labor leaders. They can see a pie card farther than a cormorant can see a herring. This is the main reason why the fakers fight the radicals. They know the radicals are death on payroll bandits. But, to get back to the socialists and their babble about non-partisan political action.

THE Communists are also opposed to non-partisan political action. They not only oppose it in words but with deeds. In the last national election, the socialists supported the petty bourgeoisie candidate LaFollette, who was as non-partisan as anybody could wish, tho he succeeded in fooling a good many workers into the belief that he was a labor candidate. When the socialists emerged from the ordeal with nothing left to cover their political nakeness, they retired into the charitable obscurity of their socialist

SOCIALISTS IN PARLEY AGAINST SOVIET RUSSIA

Small Nations Barred from Conference

(Special to The Daily Worker)

GENEVA, Sept. 10.—The Polish and Czecho-Slovakian governments will not be allowed to send representatives to the conference of foreign ministers to discuss the proposed "security" pact, which in reality is an attempt to form a united bloc against Soviet Russia.

Those who will atend are Stresemann of Germany, Chamberlain of England, Briand and Painleve of France, and probably Premier Mussolini of Italy. The socialist foreign minister of Belgium, Vandervelde, is also to take part in the anti-Soviet parley.

The United States government is being constantly informed as to the progress of negotiations, it is learned, the allied governments realizing that continued credits from America depend on that government's approval of groupings and re-groupings of the European powers.

The "security" pact, which aims to force Germany to break the Rapollo treaty with the Soviet Union, and to gain a tighter hold on the smaller Balkan countries, was inspired by the English and United States government officials.

Abandon "Peace" Protocol

GENEVA, Sept. 10.—The League of Nations has abandoned its "security arbitration and disarmament protocol," broached last year, because of the refusal of Great Britain to accept it.

The meeting of foreign ministers to discuss the "security" pact will attempt to force the entrance of Germany into the League of Nations, as a means of controlling that country's foreign policy.

Forward! Anthracite Miners

THE struggle of 150,000 miners now striking in the anthracite coal fields is lent added significance by the issuance today of the following call to the strikers, and to all other workers, by the Progressive Miners' Committee:

• • • •

FORWARD! ANTHRACITE MINERS.

By Progressive Miners' Committee of the United Mine Workers of America.

The anthracite miners in Pennsylvania, 150,000 strong, have declared a strike against the hard coal barons to defend themselves against an attempted cut in wages and worsening of working conditions, against an effort to rob them of concessions won thru many years of bitter struggle and sacrifice. As against the employers' attack upon their living standards, the hard coal miners are demanding an increase of 10 per cent in contract wages, $1,00 per day for day labor, full recognition of the union, and a betterment in working conditions.

During the past 10 years the cost of living has almost doubled, and wages have trailed far behind. In view of the heavy unemployment, it is impossible for miners to live upon the scanty wages we receive. The increase demanded is imperatively necessary. The miners must fight until it is won, and the attacks of the operators are repelled. In the name of the 500 men killed and the 25,000 injured each year in the anthracite region, we, the Progressive Miners' Committee of the U.

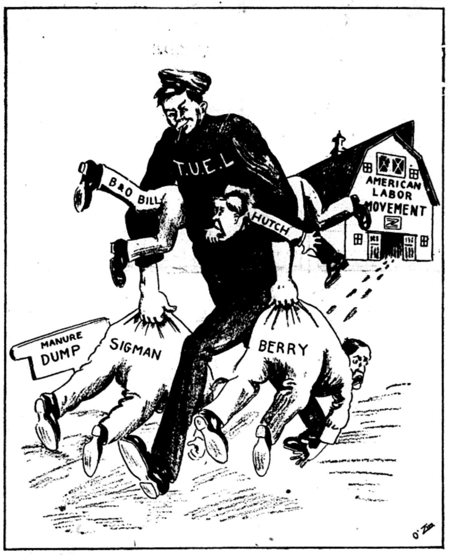
CLEANING OUT THE MUCK



SECRETARY OF COMMUNIST PARTY OF CUBA ARRESTED BY GOVERNMENT

By JULIO ANTONIO MELLA

(Secretary Agitrop Department, C. P. of Cuba)

HAVANA, Cuba, Sept. 10.—Cuba has its newly formed Communist Party The government and the capitalists are so afraid that they have started their attacks on the Communists, and all other workers. We are now living in a tropical fascism. Machado is a miniature Mussolini.

Our secretary, Jose Miguel Perez, was arrested only because he is a Communist. And the police claimed they found in his pockets "papers and plans and other things that prove he was going to blow up the National Bank and the cable office at the corner of Obispo and Cuba streets." They have framed him up.

We are a young party but we work hard. The government threatens to arrest many others, and to deport all alien Communists. Well, we'll see if they can.

RAIN BRINGS RELIEF TO SOUTHERN ILLINOIS COAL MINING TOWNS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WEST FRANKFORT, Ill., Sept. 10.—West Frankfort, in the heart of the southern Illinois coal fields, has water today for the first time since last Saturday, when the city reservoir was completely exhausted. With last night's abundant downpour a situation which was hourly becoming more serious was relieved and the longest drought in the memory of residents of this section was broken.

The possibility of suspending schools and a serious fire menace had threatened West Frankfort for weeks. For several days before water-exhausted citizens had been denied its use for any purpose other than fire protection. General rain baought relief to all southern Illinois.

NEGRO'S HOME MOBBED, 1 DEAD; JAIL VICTIMS

Detroit Police Side with Attackers

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 10—One man was killed another was seriously wounded when a crowd of whites attacked the home of Ossian H. Sweet, a Negro physician. The Negro occupants of the house defended themselves against the white mob, and the casualties followed. The police took the side of the mob, arresting 20 Negroes, most of them occupants of the house. Assitant Prosecutor Edward H. Kennedy was preparing to lodge murder charges against the Negroes.

The dead man is Leon Breiner. Eric Hogberg was seriously wounded. The mob was attampting to force the doctor to move from the neighborhood. He had refused, and his house was stoned. The mob which gathered again stoned the house and menaced the occupants before the Negroes fired.

MEXICAN RAILROAD MEN WON STRIKE IN HOUR; NEWS WAS SUPPRESSED

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 10—How well the capitalist news agencies can smother news of working class victories is seen by the fact that the following item, telling of a striking incident of the Mexican labor movement first appears in a report of the U. S. department of labor. It says:

"Because of unpaid wages, railroad employes of the National Railway Lines of Mexico in the city of Chihuahua declared a strike at three o'clock, p. m., Aug. 7, 1925.. At four o'clock on the same afternoon their wages were paid and the strike terminated."

STIR RED SCARE IN BRITAIN TO AID RIGHT WING

Reaction United from Scotland Yard Down

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Sept. 10.—While the British Trades Union Congress continues at Scarborough, a regular "American style" campaign of "red scares" is being suddenly released by the government and the capitalist press.

Much of the propaganda is directed toward supposed Communist efforts to "capture the army and navy for Communism," especially the 50,000 troops assembled for summer practice maneuvers on Salisbury Plain.

The Sunday Worker, organ of progressive labor opinion, has the following to say about this campaign of incitement against the Communists which is suspiciously timed to aid the MacDonald, Thomas and Clynes reactionary element at the Trades Union Congress:

Where the Red Scare Came From.

"The whole of this press scream is hung on the peg of a letter from the Communist Party executive to that of the labor party suggesting that it is the imperative duty of the labor movement, to take steps to prevent such a catastrophe befalling the workers as that the soldiers and sailors should in ignorance be used as unwitting tools for the destruction of their fathers, brothers and fellow workers."

The Sunday Worker continues in comment, saying, "If a mere suggestion that the rank and file of the armed forces should be enlightened as to, the true nature of the social issue in dispute raises this amount of clamor—all these shrieks of sedition—what would any real organization to defend the workers from subversion produce?"

British Fascists Active.

Scotland Yard and the capitalist press are doing their best to incite reaction. Monday night British fascists clashed with workers at Islington, a section of London, and the fascists are known to be recruiting openly for violence against the workers, even organizing a nursing staff for first aid to their shock troops wounded in street battles. English "democracy" seems slipping.

In the meantime, at Scarborough the Trades Union Congress is a battle ground between the right and left wing. The greatest success of the left wing is the adoption by the congress of definite action to form shop committees thruout the nation, the right wing's chief victory being a vote to refer a proposal granting general strike power authority to the general council back to the general for further report.

Only a Temporary Set Back.

The power of the left wing movement defeated the effort to kill the proposal outright, and the forces were near enough to an equal division that the reactionaries could only win temporarily by getting the proposal referred to the general council.

Thomas led the reactionaries and A. J. Cook, leader of the Miners' Federation, led the left wing in the fight on the floor. It was plain that the larger and more important unions in the basic industries were inclined to favor the measure.

A. B. Swales, president of the congress, while being careful not to offend the right wing by criticism, nevertheless, indicated his left position by describing the days when the miners, combined with the railway and

International Labor Defense Fights Against the Zeigler Frame-up

The statement of the International Labor Defense on the Zeigler frame-up is as follows:

FIFTEEN union coal miners of Zeigler, Ill. face prison. These workers are victims of a vicious frame-up that is made all the more insidious by reason of their own union officials playing the treacherous role of prosecutor. They are being proceeded against with the object of railroading them to prison because they have been loyal fighters for their class, because they have stood as staunch opponents to corruption and class-collaboration in the United Mine Workers of America and have maintained an uncompromising stand in the struggles with the coal operators.

These fifteen miners are on trial before the capitalist courts. But in fact, it is their prosecutors who are on trial. It is their own sub-district officials and the District 12 machine of the U. M. W. of A. who are in the docket before the labor movement of this country.

D. B. Cobb is the vice-president of sub-district 9, District 12 of the United Mine Workers of America. At the behest of the owners of the Zeigler mine, Cobb removed the officials of Local Union 992, Zeigler. His only excuse was that Local 992 was on strike against the Bell and Zoller Coal Co. He completely ignored the fact that the coal company was not properly weighing the miners' coal. The strike was not called by the officials of Local 992. The men voluntarily walked out when they found that their coal was not being weighed. And yet Henry Corbishley the president and his associate officers were arbitrarily removed from office by Cobb. At a union meeting Cobb demanded that the men elect new officers and return to work. The men flatly refused. Cobb made wild threats and did his level best to incite the members of the union.

A free for all fight developed after the meeting. This fight was directly precipitated by supporters of the sub-district machine who are at the same time members of the ku klux klan. One of them, Alec Hargis, a known klansmen and a former officer of the union who was completely discredited due to his open perpetration of an election fraud, murdered Mike Sarovich, a supporter of Henry Corbishley and the progressives of Local 992. In the melee Cobb was injured as were many others. The only weapons used in the fight were the gun that killed Sarovich and a black-jack that Cobb pulled from his pocket.

In the face of these circumstances Cobb supported by the sub-district president Lon Fox, had the temerity to prefer charges of "conspiracy to murder" him against Henry Corbishley and twenty-five other members of Local 992. This action called forth the almost unanimous derision and protest of the miners of Sub-District 9. Local union after local union passed resolutions of protest and at the present time there is an overwhelming demand for a sub-district convention to put an end to this betrayal of the miners. Yet, notwithstanding this and the facts surrounding the case, Frank Farrington has put himself and his district machine behind the traitorous procedure of Cobb and has said that he will aid in the prosecution.

Last Wednesday at the preliminary hearing in Benton, the county seat of Franklin county, Cobb appeared with some twenty witnesses and a special prosecutor to press the charges. The testimony was of the flimsiest character, so much so that the prosecution was forced to change the charge of one of assault with intent to kill. With but few exceptions, all of the witnesses placed on the stand were identified as members of the ku klux klan and enemies of the union. The majority of the accused miners, 15 were bound over to the grand jury.

The International Labor Defense brands this procedure as a conspiracy striking at the very heart of the labor movement. Every one of the miners on trial are old members of the United Mine Workers of America, who, without exception, have distinguished themselves in the struggles of the miners against the operators. The treachery of the corrupt officialdom in attempting to remove these healthy and necessary fighters from not only the ranks of the union, but completely from the scene by confining them in a capitalist penitentiary, deserves the condemnation of the whole working class and lays these traitors open to the charge of the worst kind of scabbery against their own organization.

International Labor Defense feels that these workers merit the support of every honest element in the labor movement. It will go the limit in saving these men from prison. Competent attorneys have already been secured and are setting themselves for a long court fight against the combined resources of the mine operators and the discredited Farrington machine.

International Labor Defense calls upon all workers and organizations of workers to rally to the support of the Zeigler miners, to put a stop to this treacherous betrayal and save these fighting and honest members of the working class from confinement in prison. A national defense fund of large proportions will be required to accomplish this purpose and International Labor Defense feels confident that workers in all parts of the country will come forward in defense of the Zeigler miners and answer the traitors who have performed one of the most cowardly and dastardly deeds in the annals of the working class movement in America in terms of active and material support to the men on trial. RIFFS BESIEGE TETUAN; SPANISH ARMY IN PERIL

Severe Fighting on Entire Front

PARIS, France, Sept. 10.—The Riffian troops have surrounded the Spanish capital in Morocco, Tetuan, and have already captured the strategic point of Ben Harrik, overlooking the Spanish stronghold. From this position, the Riffians are severely bombarding the city, causing panic among the civil population.

Fierce fighting is reported along the entire front in Morocco, the Spanish-French forces having begun a general offensive, in which 112 warships are taking part, bombarding the coast in Alhucemas bay.

In the Fondak sector the Spanish losses are reported as 250 dead out of 1,000 taking part.

Riffians Cut Army to Pieces

The Spanish forces are attempting to take Adjir, Abd-el-Krim's stronghold, but the offensive of the Riffians against Tetuan has dealt a blow to this plan.

Around Beni Hozmar a battle is raging with heavy losses to the Spaniards.

The French war office announces that an offensive has been begun by their invading forces along the front from Quezzan to the Moulaia river.

Primo de Rivera, Spanish dictator, has hurried to Tetuan in an effort to stave off defeat there.

The Riffians have cut the western front in Morocco near Arzila for the second time, and the fighting is now going on at the gates of Tetuan, which is in grave danger of capture. All available troops on the Melilla front have been withdrawn to Tetuan.

Fear Reaction of Workers

Rivera has sent an urgent appeal to Marshal Petain, commander of the French forces in Morocco, to commence the French offensive in the Quezzan sector to relieve the pressure on Tetuan.

The Riffians have cut the Spanish army under Gen. Riquelme, on the Tetuan-Larache front into three pieces, and Spanish re-inforcements sent toward Tetuan from Ceuta have been unable to fight their way thru.

Rivera, has also appealed to the Spanish directorate to send an additional forty thousand troops if Tetuan is to be saved. The directorate fear if this is done, the Spanish workers will revolt.

Krim Exposes False Propaganda

LONDON, England, Sept. 10.—Abd-el-Krim, in a letter to a newspaper correspondent at Tangier, denies he has received peace offers from the Spanish or French governments, and exposes the propaganda declaring peace had been offered as a move to prejudice the French and Spanish workers against the Riffians.

"Up to the present," writes Krim, "We have not been formally informed of the conditions which are proposed, and therefore I can neither accept nor refuse them. I have not received anything in spite of what has been published in the newspapers."

"I am aware this is a political move, in order to prejudice public opinion and deceive the French and Spanish people by leading them astray and thus bringing them to calamity and war."

GAG RESOLUTION OF KAUFMAN TO GET OPPOSITION

Furriers' Executive Act Not Popular

Following the defeat of Morris Kaufman, reactionary head of the Furriers' International in a debate with Benjamin Gold of the left wing New York joint board, held before the membership of the Chicago Local 49, as told in recent issues of the DAILY WORKER, Kaufman has been smarting sore.

He remained in Chicago for more than a week, bringing all pressure possible to bear on the executive committee of the Chicago local, and finally succeeding in pushing thru a resolution in the executive board to forbid representatives of the New York joint board from speaking to the membership unless they get permission from the Kaufman gang in the International.

Tonight the resolution is due to come before the local membership in the executive board's report and the membership is expected to resent the action taken, which practically gags the New York membership from answering the slanders of Kaufman in the official journal and in speaking tours. Kaufman wants to gag the New York joint board because their story of Kaufman's corrupt gangster rule in New York, when told in truthful detail, exposes Kaufman's gang as the worst disrupters of the union and unworthy to be allowed to occupy office in any part of the labor movement.

SUPPORTERS OF DAILY WORKER SHOW SPIRIT AND METHOD THAT MEANS VICTORY

Fund to Save the DAILY WORKER Reaches $1,500 Mark

SIXTY-SEVEN wide awake and militant party branches and individuals gave a mighty boost to the "Save the DAILY WORKER Fund" yesterday. They added almost $900 to the amounts previously received making the total $1571.43 or almost a third of the fund necessary by the end of the week.

The campaign to keep the DAILY WORKER has thus entered into a new phase. The desperate efforts and anxious striving have yielded results which prove that Communists have not only the spirit and the willingness to save their paper but also the ability. Not that the crisis is over; by no means. The $10,000 set as the minimum amount necessary to meet the immediate emergency still stands and the need for at least half of this amount by Monday, September 14, has not abated.

But the returns thus far indicate with what temper the class conscious working class has received the DAILY WORKER'S call for help and seem to assure us that the emergency will be overcome.

Above all it is important that no individual and no organized unit refrain from participation in the passive and dangerous attitude that others have stepped forward to do the work. In this crisis it is particularly essential that every militant individual and every organization assume full responsibility.

By Universal Vigilance—By United Effort We Can Turn the Threat of a Crushing Defeat Into a Glorious Communist Victory.

STIR RED SCARE IN BRITAIN TO AID RIGHT WING

transport workers, forced the Baldwin government and the mine owners to revoke the wage cut orders, as a "glorious week."

He showed his favor for Cook's proposal of strike powers to the general council by urging the creation of a unified control whereby the general council of the unions can in the future be a central controlling and directing body on all large issues.

Tomsky at Scarborough.

Swales accused the British tory government of showing real hatred toward Soviet Russia, and he advocated pressure on the government to provide trade relations, praising the leadership of the British unions for so far compelling the government to hold the door open for negotiations with the Soviet Union.

The congress has as fraternal delegates, two leaders of the Soviet trade unions, headed by Tomsky.

Smith Complains of Interference.

The difference between the right and left wing was brot out indirectly by Herbert Smith of the Miners' Federation, who complained that when the Miners' Federation contemplated strike action, the right wing element led by Thomas and MacDonald of the Labor Party, interfered and tried to undo all the union was fighting for. Specific denial, however, of any intention of the left wing to split, was made by Smith and Fred Bramley, secretary of the congress. The left wing intends to stick solidly and fight for its policies in the movement as a whole.

Palmerizing Great Britain.

Comments are being heard on all sides about the "coincidence" of MacDonald coming to the congress after a week end as guest of the king and queen at Balmoral to attack the Communists, and the propaganda campaign against the Communists launched by Scotland Yard, which on the first day of the Trade Union Congress issued "red scare" stories warning of "sedition and window smashing by Communists." The government claims that Communists are distributing literature among the 50,000 troops concentrated at Andover, for maneuvers.

Left Wing Wins Shop Committees.

Earlier, a proposal advanced by Jack Jones and Ben Tillett, which called for a form of mass unionism much similar to the moribund O. B. U. of Canada, was rejected by 500,000 card votes. Capitalist reporters chuckled over this supposed "defeat" of the Communists, but the Communists were not behind the proposal, being opposed to it and favoring, instead of mass unionism, as the hodge-podge may be called, industrial unionism by the amalgamation of craft unions into one union for each industry. Jones and Tillett represented only a small section of confused workers who want greater solidarity without knowing how to get it.

cellar and began to boast about their compulsory purity.

IN the New York elections the socialists condemn non-partisan political action, as espoused by the A. F. of L. But what is their alternative? Vote the socialist ticket! "Nothing doing" should be the reply of the workers to this call. The socialist leaders are as inseparable from the bourgeois parties as the Siamese twins are from each other. When the connection is cut there is a death in the family or perhaps two. Thousands of workers still believe that socialism 's a rallying cry against capitalism.

THE Workers (Communist) Party has a candidate in the New York elections. He is not an ex-preacher but a worker. The Workers Party is opposed to non-partisan political action on the part of the workers. It is committed to the policy that the workers must be broken away politically from the parties of capitalism and that this can be done thru the medium of a labor party. It therefore calls for a united front between all working class organizations in New York City, so that they may fight the elections as workers, on the ticket. It includes the socialist party in the invitations. Will the socialist party accept? Not very likely.

THE leaders of the socialist party are afraid of any contact with a party that stands for the social revolution. They have repudiated the class struggle. They are deceiving the workers when they say they are opposed to the capitalist system. Their devotion to working class political action is not sincere. If it were they would gladly welcome a united front with the organizations that favor such a policy. The Communists in New York City will spread the Communist message during the election and by their offer of co-operation with other working class groups to put up a united ticket against the capitalist parties they will have given further proof to the workers that their policy is not one of disunity in the labor movement, but one of unity, not merely for the sake of unity, but because united action on the part of the workers in any struggle against the capitalists brings them a step nearer to fighting for the complete overthrow of the robber system.

Wages Going Up Under Soviet Rule But Falling Under Rule of Capitalism

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, one of our readers sends in a clipping from the Newark, N. J., Ledger showing that this capitalist sheet, published in the heart of an open shop industrial district, is busy spreading propaganda attacking the wages received by Russian workers under Soviet rule. The sympathy of workers in New Jersey for the Workers' Republic must be growing. Else why this carefully prepared poison?

• • • •

The big fact for America's workers to know is that everywhere thruout the capitalist world wage cuts are the order of the day. In the territory of the Soviet Republics, on the other hand, wage increases are everywhere going into effect.

This is the big reply that can be made to every capitalist attack on Soviet wage standards that have now passed the pre-war wage under czarism and continue mounting to new heights.

• • • •

The Newark, N. J., Ledger tries to minimize the fact that Soviet agricultural production has reached 89 per cent of what it was in 1913; that industrial production has gone to 98 per cent of what it was in pre-war days, by questioning these figures that have been accepted by its neighbor across the Hudson River, the New York Times. But in order to build a case it turns from this encouraging showing and makes the bald statement that wages in Soviet Russia, even with a $4 per month increase, would "still be 25 per cent lower than the pre-war wage."

The facts are set forth in data compiled by the All-Russian Central Council of Trade Unions, revealing the following wage rates prevailing in various industries in the Soviet Union during the first quarter of the current fiscal year:

	Monthly Wages in Pre-War Rubles	Percentage of Monthly Wages in 1913
Average for entire industry	24.01	76.0
Metal working	27.89	64.5
Textile	19.69	96.1
Mining	22.07	52.8
Chemical	24.4	99.4
Leather	34.18	112.8
Printing and allied	37.71	106
Paper	25	100
Food	30.61	140
Including:
Industries in Moscow	32.45	119.7

Let American workers remember that when they consider their increases in wages, compared to their pre-war wage, that their dollar today is only worth about 50 cents of the pre-war dollar, with the cost of living still going up, meaning that the value of the dollar is still decreasing. The Soviet wage of today is measured in terms of the pre-war rouble, the purchasing capacity of which was considerably higher than that of the gold rouble at present, altho it is expected this will soon be overcome by the continued reduction in the cost of living thru the reduction of the prices of goods. From October 1923, to March 1925, for instance, there has been a total decline of 28.1 per cent in the prices of industrial merchandise as a whole in Russia.

These facts should be remembered in studying the above table, which does not show the many special allowances made to workers under Soviet Rule. But they do show, and the Newark, N. J., Ledger, will not publish this fact, that wages have not only attained the pre-war level in the principal branches of light industry, but have even far surpassed them. The light industries include all except mining, metal, electrical and building industries, that have been slower to recuperate, but are now rapidly on the upgrade.

• • • •

Increasing productivity is making it possible to raise wages in the Soviet Union.

An increase of 10 per cent has been sanctioned in the textile industry, boosting the payroll 25,000,000 roubles. Compare this to the wage reductions in both the American and British textile industries.

The Soviet Southern Steel Trust has authorized a wage increase of 19 per cent. Similar increases are being put into force by other Soviet industrial branches. Wage increases have been effected in the oil industry and are impending in the mining industry, which should give some food for thought to the miners of both the United States and Great Britain. They may well envy the wage increases made in the three most backward industrial branches in the Soviet Union—mining, metal and textile.

• • • •

And this is only the beginning. Greater wage increases are ahead. These will be accompanied by the inevitable increases in real wages for the workers in all branches of industry as a result of reductions in the prices of industrial goods and agricultural goods.

These facts the Newark, N. J., Ledger, in common with the whole capitalist press, will try to keep from its working class readers, fearing that they may not only develop sympathy for and solidarity with the workers of the Soviet Union, but strive to build a Soviet Republic of their own.

But those facts will, nevertheless, in time, become known and understood by America's workers as well as those of all other lands. That is a threat to world capitalism.

GIRL STRIKERS FACE RE-ARREST IN COURTROOM

Police tried to arrest two girl strikers as they were leaving room 1106, city hall, yesterday, following continuance of the cases of 84 strikers until October 5, but the girls, Rose Cicola and Mary DeSpenza, were released aftre protest by officials of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

"The captain at the Des Plaines St. station wants to see you, come along," said a police officer to the two pickets. The strikers were appearing to answer to charges of "disorderly conduct" and "assault" growing out of the strike of the Amalgamated against members against the International Tailoring company.

After the other strikers present had protested, the policeman finally walked away. "I'll get you later, anyhow," he said.

All these strikers were taken from the picket line at 847 W. Jackson Blvd., during the course of the last eleven weeks of the strike.

These decisions have been approved by the secretariat of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party.

The representatives of both groups of the Young Workers League call upon all members of the Young Workers League for unity and unified Communist work.

(Signed) John Williamson, Max Shachtman, Herbert Zam and Nat Kaplan.

COMMUNISTS AND I. W. W. SEAMEN PICKET SCAB LINER; HILLQUIT MEETS A STORMY UNITED FRONT

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK.—(By Mail.)—Five hundred workers representing the Workers Party of America, District 2, and the Marine Transport Workers' Union No. 510 of the I. W. W., staged a fine demonstration upon the arrival of the steamer Majestic carrying Morris Hillquit and a scab crew, on Tuesday morning.

Morris Hillquit, returning from the congress of the Second International at Marseilles, the congress of the yellow socialists, Cahan, Adler, Panken, Vandervelde, Henderson et al, chose to sail on the liner manned by a scab crew of 140 oilers and wipers. No more open act of contempt for the workers could be possible than this most flagrant violation of the principles of labor solidarity, by a representative of an organization supposed to represent the working class.

All Rebels Unite in Action.

The Communists, several hundred strong, marched side by side with the members of the Marine Transport Workers No. 510 I. W. W., carrying the following banners: "Down with scabs," "Down with yellow socialists," "Long live international trade union unity," "Scabs bring Hillquit home." "Don't scab on your fellow seamen," "Down with the socialist scab international," "Long live the Third Communist International," "Long live Soviet Russia," and many others.

The wobblies carried the following slogans: "We condemn the scabs on the steamship Majestic," "Down with scabbery," "An injury to one is an injury to all," "Passengers don't ride on scab manned ships. It is unsafe," "Help make the British seamen's strike victorious."

Attracts Attention—and Police

Before the ship docked the parade started on West street in single file around the docks of the White Star line. It attracted widespread attention among the workers on the waterfront until it grew to such proportions that it was disrupted by the police.

Meanwhile detectives had warned Hillquit of the reception which he was about to receive from American workers as soon as he landed. He therefore slipped warily out thru a side entrance to escape the aroused workers who were waiting for him outside of the dock.

The demonstration staged on Tuesday morning is but the first step in the campaign of the Workers Party and the I. W. W. seamen for working class unity. From how on until she leaves port the Marine Transport Workers will picket the Majestic in an effort to get the crew of the vessel to cooperate with their striking brothers in England.

Asks Aid to Feed Pickets.

The I. W. W. Marine Transport Workers are determined to carry this fight forward with vigor. They ask for volunteers to help picket the ship and also that those who wish to contribute financial aid to them in their fight against the shipping barons send contributions to the secretary of the Marine Transport Workers, No. 510 I. W. W., 105 Broad street, N. Y. C. The Workers Party will give its full cooperation in this campaign.

REACTIONARY LEADERS OF SEAMEN UNITE

M. T. W. Expected to Be American Opposition

A united front of reactionary leaders of the conservative Seamen's Unions of America and Great Britain is seen in the action of the executive board of the International Seamen's Union meeting at Chicago, in appointing one of the leading labor fakers of Illinois, Victor A. Olander, to confer with J. Havelock Wilson, head of the conservative National Sailors' and Firemen's Union of Great Britain to "expose the Communists."

Havelock Wilson, hated by all revolutionary and progressive seamen as one of the worst of Britain's misleaders of labor, landed recently in Canada and is expected to visit American cities. His first words when interviewed after landing, was a diatribe against the Communists, to whom he lays the present "outlaw" strike of British seamen.

"The Old Man of the Sea."

The same executive meeting of the I. S. U. instructed the "Old Man of the Sea," Andy Furuseth, who has ridden on the backs of American seamen for decades, to no advantage or benefit of the seamen, to confer with representatives of the conservative German Seamen's Union. These Germans are expected to arrive in America in the near future.

The effort of the American reactionary marine union officials is taken in an effort to offset the sweep of revolt among the world's seafarers against policies of narrow isolation and collaboration with the shipping companies and government agencies, such as the U. S. shipping board.

I. S. U. Loses as I. W. W. Gains

The I. S. U., because of its narrow and reactionary policies and insistence upon a patriotic plan of working at low wages "to keep the American flag on the high seas," has lost membership wholesale and now stands where it did about 30 years ago. A report made by Furuseth in the recent past said that the I. S. U. has only about 1,800 members.

While the I. S. U. has been declining, the Marine Transport Workers Industrial Union of the I W. W, has been growing steadily, particularly since it began to make common cause with other marine unions in such issues as strikes, and now is reckoned as the strongest seamen's organization in the American field, not only because it has three or four times the members of the I. S. U. but in addition it has a fighting policy to attract the discontented workers who have suffered terribly from post war depression, and the open shop campaigns.

It is expected that the I. W. W. seamen will find it not only natural but very much to their interest to join hands with the rebellious British and German seamen and "outlaw" strikers to combat the reactionary leaders of both European and American marine unions, and to build up a fighting front which, if not joined in the same unions, will be able to act in close co-operation in the struggle for better conditions.

GOVERNOR PINCHOT TO MAKE A NOISE LIKE A STRIKE NEGOTIATOR

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Sept. 9.—Gov. Gifford Pinchot, Pennsylvania, mediator in previous controversies between miners and operators, today took his first official action in connection with the strike of 158,000 miners in the anthracite coal fields.

He ordered an investigation of employment conditions in the hard coal districts, according to Richard H. Landsberg, state secretary of labor. This investigation will deal with industries other than mining, but which are affected by the strike.

The governor is prepared to offer a plan of settlement of the strike after he obtains this data, it was said in circles believed to be well-informed. K. M. Colbaugh, superintendent of the Pennsylvania employment office department, has been ordered to make the investigation.

NOTE OF POWERS TO CHINA MAKES NO PROMISES

Nine Nations Still Would Enslave Orient

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10—Text of the identical note sent to China's temporary government at Pekin by the nine powers that took part in the Washington conference of 1922, shows that nothing is promised China except a discussion of her demands made on June 24. Each power is "willing, either at that (forthcoming, in October) conference or at a subsequent time, to consider and discuss any reasonable proposal that may be made by the Chinese government for a revision of the treaties on the subject of the tariff."

Also, the conference to discuss the possibility of some time recognizing the right of Chinese courts to deal with foreign offenders in China may be held at the same time as the tariff conference.

The whole tone of the note is one of reluctant retreat from a bullying position, and a moralistic warning to China that she is not honest enuf to govern herself.

Coolidge Pie-Cards Get Fat Jobs from the Big Employers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10—L. V. Nicholas, president of the National Petroleum Marketers' Assn., calls attention to the fact that Standard Oil of Indiana has employed Geo. V. Martinek, former special agent of the anti-trust division of the department of justice, as head of its (Standard's) statistical department. Martinek, when on the federal pob, spent some time investigating the independent oil companies. That information he can now summon from his memory and his private notes, for the benefit of Standard.

Tax lawyers are a veritable army in Washington this year. Their fees are won by securing reductions in the federal income taxes of corporations and individuals. Most of these lawyers formerly worked in the internal revenue bureau or in some other branch of the treasury.

From the job of private secretary to the secretary of the interior, Joseph Cotter stepped to a $10,000 job with Doheny's oil companies, and last year paid an income tax of $4,000. He has many imitators in that department, tho perhaps none has prospered so conspicuously. Retired members of the interstate commerce commission, turning lawyer before the tribunal of their late associates, become railroad spokesmen. Mark Potter is the latest of these.

ISOLATE CROUCH IN ALCATRAZ ARMY PRISON

Daily Worker Barred from Penitentiary

HAYS, North Carolina, Sept. 10—I. M. Crouch, father of Paul Crouch, has received a letter from his Communist soldier son, confine in the Alcatraz military prison, Alcatraz, California, which shows that stringent means are being taken by the government to keep Crouch and his fellow prisoner, Walter Trumbull, isolated from the outside world.

Crouch, who is serving a term of three years for declaring himself a Communist while stationed at Schofield barracks, Hawaii, writes his father, "I can use but one sheet of paper for each letter. Please send newspaper clippings dealing with my case as I am not allowed to receive the DAILY WORKER or any 'radical' newspaper.

"I can write only about personal matters and business and cannot speak of happenings in this 'institution.' Only conservative newspapers and magazines and books of fiction can be sent us.

"If any one wishes to visit us they should write us for visiting cards. Because of the regulations I can take care of but a small part of my correspondence. I can write only two 'letters' per week.

"My health is rather poor now. Weight is only 140 pounds. My eyes are being treated."

PROBE CHARGES NAVY CAUSE OF AIRSHIP WRECK

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—An independent investigation of the Shenandoah disaster will be made by the house naval affairs committee, Rep. Thomas S. Butler of Pennsylvania, the committee chairman, announced today.

Among the questions to be investigated, Butler said, would be the charges (1) of Mrs. Lansdowne, widow of the commander of the Shenandoah, that he was ordered to take the ship out despite a protest to Secretary of the Navy Wilbur; (2) of Capt. Anton Heinen, former navy department dirigible expert, that the number of gas outlets on the Shenandoah were reduced to such an extent that helium could not be discharged with sufficient rapidity, and (3) of Col. William Mitchell that officials of the navy department were chiefly responsible for the wrecking of the ship.

The probe will not affect further air craft experiments, Butler admitted.

Bricklayers Claim Victory.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10—Members of the Bricklayers' Union in Newark, N. J., who have returned to work on buildings tied up by their jurisdictional strike against the Operative Plasterers' Union, did so after the contractors had signed an agreement to employ plasterers belonging to the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers' international, according to John J. Gleason, general secretary. These Newark contractors had attempted to carry out an agreement with the Operative Plasterers which, the Bricklayers claimed, violated their own agreement with the Bricklayers.

GERMAN DELEGATION TO SOVIET RUSSIA PLEDGES FIGHT ON THE WHITE TERROR; SUPPORTS RED AID

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW.—(Inprecorr.)—Moscow workers, members of the Red Aid, have addressed a letter to the members of the German workers' delegation dealing with the white terror in capitalist countries. The letter says amongst other things: "The Polish hangmen have decided to suppress the movement of the workers and peasants and the national minorities for freedom. This they are attempting to do with bullets and gallows.

"The graves of the hanged are dotted all over Bulgaria. The government of Zankov has carried out St. Bartholomew's massacres amongst the workers and peasants. The Roumanian hangmen are preparing the execution of 500 Bessarabian peasants. You must raise your voices against the white terror in Poland, Bulgaria, and Roumania."

The answering letter of the delegation says: "We are aware of the executions in Poland, Bulgaria, and Roumania, and we will convey the facts to the German proletariat in order to exercise some pressure and to hinder the bloody powers in their terrible work. Your alertness, your exemplary Red Aid organization will spur us on in our task of building up the German Red Aid."

The Red Aid has sent $35,000 to the Shanghai Trade Union Council for the support of the families of the killed and wounded workers.

Appeal to All Seamen and Longshoremen to Aid British Strikers

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 10—The following appeal to all marine workers was issued yesterday by the International Marine Transport Workers' Amalgamation Committee, by J. Stone, secretary:

"The British seamen are out on strike against wage cuts and oppressive conditions. The British ship owners with the help of the British government are using all brutal means to break the spirit of the seamen and to crush the strike. The American seamen, unorganized, oppressed and enslaved by the American ship owners with the backing of the American government are on the verge of following the action of their British fellow workers.

"In the midst of the strike the British trans-Atlantic steamer Majestic sailed to New York with a scab crew. One of the passengers on this scab boat was Morris Hillquit, returning from the Congress of the Second International, prominent leader of the socialist party of America.

"This action of Morris Hillquit indicates the strikebreaking attitude of the socialist party. The Marine Transport Workers' Amalgamation Committee protests against such action and condemns the strikebreaking attitude of the socialist party and its leader.

"The International Marine Transport Workers' Amalgamation Committee calls upon you seamen of America to show your solidarity with the striking British seamen and to give them your cooperation. The American seamen shall not sign up on British vessels while the strike of the British seamen is still on.

"The American longshoremen shall not discharge cargoes of British vessels manned by scab crews, as a victory for the British seamen is a victory for us."

J. STONE, Secretary.

PRO-COMMUNIST GOD BEDEVILLED GREEN'S SPEECH

Satan Appeared Robed Like Small Cyclone

By OWEN STIRLING

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich.—(By Mail)—If there is a god he is a just god and a Communist god. The gentle south wind proved it.

William Green, the president of the American Federation of Labor, by grace of the executive council, was reading his Labor Day address on Belle Isle, Detroit's island playground. Thousands of workers were at the American League ball game. Thousands were at the opening of the Michigan state fair. Thousands were along the bridge railing and river shore watching the speed boat racs on the Detroit river. Thousands more were sprawling on the grass with their kids having a good lazy time. About two thousand were sitting in front of the open air platform listening to the speech. Organized labor in Detroit has a certain discipline of its own. It turns out on certain occasions. This was not one of them.

Devil Yet Busy.

Green came to the most momentous part of his speech. It was the part in which he belabored us Communists most unmercifully. In fact we might almost say he be-Federation-of-labored us. But right in the middle of the second sentence—whiff! The gentle south wind took his words right out of his hand. The sudden eddy of air snatched the sheets of paper on which the speech was written and laid them in the utmost disorder on another part of the platform floor. Green was left standing with his mouth open. Altogether it was a sign.

But if there is a god Frank X. Martel, president of the Detroit Federation of Labor, is going to the bad place. He was sitting near where the speech fluttered. So he picked up the sheets, rearranged them and returned them to Brother Green. And Brother Green is going to the bad place too, because he finished reading the speech.

The audience didn't appear supersititious tho. Everybody laughed.

SHOP CHAIRMEN GIVE SIGMAN UNHAPPY HOUR

His Peace Plan Gets Howled Down

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 10—Morris Sigman, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union has lost control of the union. This fact was evident to anyone who attended a meeting of shop chairmen he called at Cooper Union Wednesday evening to listen to his great "peace plan."

The meeting broke up in disorder after Sigman had been booed continuously and the chairman, David Dubinsky, had been unable to gavel down the shop chairmen who were calling for the floor.

Sigman Says He Won't Run Again.

Sigman, when he heard the hostile boos from various parts of the hall, pleaded for confidence, said he had always been a friend of the union and promised he would "never be its president again." He said he would not resign, however, until the regular convention next May, nor would he promise he would resign even then. He declared an "epidemic of rebellion" had the union in its grip.

From various parts of the hall came shouts of "Let us speak," and "We will hold another mass meeting," but David Dubinsky, chairmen of the meeting, overruled all requests to talk from the rostrum and rapped for order whenever Sigman was interrupted. As he ended his speech, a shop chairman rushed up close to Sigman and shouted at him:

To His Teeth.

"You are breaking up our union. You have come out with what you call a peace plan, but what have you done? You have not given us a chance to be heard—you have not listened to one of us. Ask us what we want and we will tell you."

Sigman tried to pacify the excited shop chairman, but the meeting was not restored to order and excited groups hovered around long after Sigman had gone.

Demand Scabbing Cease

SCRANTON, Pa., —(FP)—A delegation from the Central Labor Union appeared before the Scranton city council demanding passage of an ordinance forbidding city employes from doing the outside work other workers depended on for a livelihood. The delegation had building inspector's office records showing that permits were issued to two policemen and a fireman to carry on contracting work—the work being done in the off hours of these city employes who are paid out of public funds. The labor delegation included representatives of the carpenters', steamfitters', and plumbers', painters' and structural iron workers' unions whose jobs are effected by the scabbing in off time of non-union city employes.

COMMUNIST PARTY WIELDS GROWING INFLUENCE IN ENGLAND, McMANUS TELLS OF WORK IN TRADE UNIONS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, England, Sept. 10.—The Communist Party of Great Britain is not large, having 5,000 members, but its influence is much greater than its membership would indicate, the secretary of the party, A. McManus, said when interviewed at the headquarters, 16 Kings St., W. C. 2, where the Communist bookshop is located.

The Workers' Weekly, McManus said, has a circulation of 54,000 and the Sunday Worker, a left wing publication, has one of 84,000, in spite of the opposition from officials of the labor party and the boycott by all the news agencies.

The party's influence therefore, is causing the capitalisht newspapers great irritation, especially on account of its campaign against all war activities. Not long ago the headquarters were occupied by the police, who however, left without any further action.

On account of party conditions in Palestine, Egypt, and other places, the colonial conference planned for September was postponed, McManus said, and the five delegates from India have returned.

The main thing now occupying the attention of the party is the Minority Movement within the trade unions.

The left elements are gradually gaining more and more influence.

Among the leaders of the Minority Movement are Tom Mann and Harry Pollitt, and the London, Glasgow and Manchester Trades Councils are affiliated with it.

As proof of the Minority Movement's strength, during the last two years it has forced the labor organizations to adopt the following measures:

1. To accept delegates from Soviet Russia.
2. To work for the organization of the unemployed.
3. To admit the organizations of factory committees to affiliation with the trade union council, whereby they have been made an essential part of the trade union machinery.

A minority trade union daily is among the possibilities of a not too distant date.

Will Surely Come Off Sunday.

The most extensive and elaborate preparations have been made for this year's celebration of International Youth Day. The character of the meeting will be an international one. There will be Hindu, Chinese and Negro speakers. The struggle against world imperialism by the oppressed races will be elaborately discussed. Barney Mass, of the National Committee of the Young Workers' League, will speak in behalf of that organization and Edgar Owens, district organizer of the Workers Party, District No. 7, will act as the chairman. The Workers Party in Action

Eight Questions Answered

By JAY LOVESTONE.

THE organization department of the Central Executive Committee is receiving many questions from comrades in various parts of the country regarding the rebuilding of the party along the lines laid down by the last national convention, along the lines of shop nuclei and international branches.

Comrade Christensen, secretary of the Scandinavian Federation, has submitted to us eight questions which are of sufficient importance, and of a sufficiently general character, to warrant a reply to them in the party press.

We herewith reprint these questions, and answer them.

QUESTION No. 1: Should federations continue to exist outside the party, as independent propaganda organizations directed by party nuclei?

ANSWER: With the re-organization of the party, the federations will cease to exist as independent propaganda units of the party. All party members today found in language branches will be party members, either thru their membership in a shop nucleus, or an international branch. These are to be the only units of our party thru which membership in our party is to be held.

But comrades who are today members of various language sections of the party will also function in what is called special language fractions in the workers' club, wherever these are organized, to consist of the present language branch members and new non-party proletarians, as well as in other working class organizations containing non-party proletarians. These special language fractions will consist of those comrades in every language workers' club who belong to a shop nucleus or an international branch. The present language branches have to be re-organized as workers' clubs not affiliated to the party. These workers' clubs will in no way be connected with each other, neither nationally nor even on a district scale. These workers' clubs are not to be locally co-ordinated. Only the Communist fractions will have connections with each other as provided for in the constitution.

QUESTION No. 2: If the federations are to be dissolved entirely, what sort of machinery are we supposed to set up to take their place, if any?

ANSWER: The existing language branches, after reorganized as workers' clubs, will no longer be units of the party. We repeat that the only units of our party upon reorganization will be the shop nucleus and the international branch. These party units take over all the party work of the federations. There will be no special national language machinery to take over the activities of the federations, as such.

The language fractions of the workers' clubs are auxiliary organizations of the party for Communist work amongst the proletariat of a particular language group. Only party members affiliated to shop nuclei or international branches and paying dues to these basic party units can be members of such language fractions.

The constitution provides the regulations for the functioning of language fractions along the lines of subsections, sections, or city, etc., and for the calling of special district, and if necessary, national conferences of these language fractions by the district committee or the nationa' C. E. C.

These language fractions in addition to carrying on Communist activities among the members of the workingmen's clubs, must also organize fractions of party members in the existing fraternal and benevolent associations of their respective nationalities.

QUESTION No. 3: If the federations are to be dissolved, when is this to take place?

ANSWER: As speedily as possible. But we will not declare dissolved a language section of the party as it is presently organized until the membership of the particular language section in question has been organized into shop nuclei or international branches. We must emphatically declare that in the campaign to rebuild the party, we will exercise the greatest care so as to hold, if possible, every member we now have and to substitute with the maximum efficiency, the new and Communist form of organization for our present form.

QUESTION No. 4: Will the party consider it objectionable if the membership of a federation desires and decides to maintain their federation independently as a Communist propaganda organization?

ANSWER: Absolutely objectionable. If we are to permit the existence and organization of Communistic propaganda federations outside of our party, we would make our party even more decentralized than it is today. The object of the campaign to reorganize the party along Communist lines is to centralize and unify the activities of our party. We must overcome the federalistic principle on which our party is today organized. We must substitute for this social-democratic federalistic principle, the principle of Communist centralization.

The party as a unit, as a unified, single organizatioin adjusts its apparatus for work and co-ordinates its activities among all sections of the proletariat. There are no longer to be any special Communist federations for work among the proletariat of certain languages or nationalities. Among the proletarian non-party language organizations for workers, there are to be only fractions, language fractions, under the leadership of one, unified, centralized Communist Party, functioning as mere auxiliaries of the party apparatus, auxiliaries of the Workers (Communist) Party, among the proletarians speaking a particular language.

QUESTION No. 5: Will the press, now owned and published by the federations be taken over entirely by the party and their publication continued as party organs? If so, when?

ANSWER: Yes, as soon as this can be achieved, either directly or thru our party fractions in co-operative associations, workingmen's societies, or any other form of organization found necessary. The fact of the matter is that the problem of unifying and centralizing our party press will be one of the first problems in the re-organization of the party. Actually our party owns today, but exercises too little control over the papers issued by the various language federations. Our newly created agitprop department is now organizing an apparatus whereby the C. E. C. is to direct the policies of all papers now recognized as party organs. These instructions of the C. E. C. will be transmitted thru competent national fractions, that is, thru those party members who act as representatives of the party as a whole, as representatives of the C. E. C. These party members, as a body, are to be the shareholders of the various language papers. These comrades are to be on the directing boards and editorial committees of the various language papers. The party is to own and control every language paper calling itself a party organ thru such a special apparatus as the C. E. C. may deem necessary to set up in each particular case.

QUESTION No. 6: If the party takes over the press, will it provide for its maintenance? If not, who shall do it?

ANSWER: The party, the C. E. C., will arrange to have the various language fractions organize such campaigns and engage in such activities among the non-party proletarian masses of their respective languages as may be necessary to insure the continuation and success of these papers.

QUESTION No. 7: What form of administration is to be provided for these language papers? Will the party handle this directly or thru some channels connected with the respective nationalities, or how?

ANSWER: This questions has already been partly answered in Answers No. 5 and 6. Either directly or thru various language fractions and workingmen's associations the C. E. C. will administer and control the various language organs of the party. The C. E. C. will appoint the editors of all party organs regardless what language they are published in.

Those language papers which are not officially party papers will be brought under Communist influence thru our comrades, especially chosen, winning positions on the editorial board or directing committees of these papers.

QUESTION No. 8: If the federations are to be abolished entirely, how does the party intend to dispose of their property, incorporated and otherwise?

ANSWER: The property, as well as the press, of every language section is to be owned by the party as a whole. The apparatus which the party will set up for the ownership and control of the property now held by its various language sections depends on the existing legal conditions for incorporation or otherwise, on special conditions which may exist in various language federations, etc. In all instances, the party will exercise its ownership and control of the press and other properties of the various language sections thru committees of party members in the various language fractions and other responsible leading comrades.

Conclusion.

These questions and answers are the concern of every party member and every party section. In the course of the re-building of our party many problems and questions will arise for solution. The comrades are urged to submit to the organization department all such questions, all points of difficulty which they may encounter in the course of the reconstruction of our party.

Get Ready for Reorganization

WITHIN a few days the Organization Department will announce its plan to mobilize the membership for the reorganization of the party into shop nuclei and international branches.

With the beginning of this campaign to reconstruct our party, a series of articles on organizational questions will be printed in every organ of the party. Questions and problems confronting our members in the rebuilding of the party will be answered and analyzed in the DAILY WORKER by Comrade Jay Lovestone, head of the Organization Department, and other party members.

The DAILY WORKER will also establish a special section for the Organization Department. In this section there will be printed articles on the progress of the organization campaign, the experiences of the comrades in the work of organization, and letters and reports from comrades giving their experinces in carrying on the party's activities thru the shop nuclei.

These articles will be living articles, and of intense interest. Watch these columns closely.

But is also such an influence in every world event,—so loyally defended by bodies of intelligent workers in all parts of the world,—so bitterly attacked by the owners of the means of production and their governments.

LABOR GROUPS TO CONFER IN N. Y. ON DEFENSE

Meeting in Evening at Webster Hall

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—the International Labor Defense, New York section, is arranging a conference on Sunday, September 13, at the Labor Temple, 243 E. 34th street, to establish a broad organization in this city. More than 2,000 organizations have been invited to send delegates to the conference, which promises to be an important step in the building up of an all-inclusive Labor Defense in this city.

In the evening, a mass meeting will be held at Webster Hall, 119 E. 11th street, at which the speakers will be Ben Gitlow, James P. Cannon, Richard Brasier, Robert W. Dunne and Joseph R. Brodsky. This meeting will voice the needs of the workers of this country to provide themselves with a defense organization which will protect them against the coming reaction in this country and to protest against the white terror which is raging in Bulgaria, Poland, Greece, China and other capitalist countries of Europe and Asia.

Every working class organization is invited to send delegates to the conference. Class conscious workers interested in and recognizing the need of this second trench line of defense in the struggle against exploitation and suppression should attend the meeting and support the new organisation, the International Labor Defense. Admission is free. Further information may be obtained from the secretary, Rose Baron, 799 Broadway, Room 422.

BRITISH STRIKE TAKES HEAVY TOLL OF EMPIRE SHIPPING COMPANIES

LONDON, Sept. 10.—The "outlaw" strike of British seamen is continuing with the reactionary leaders of the National Sailors' and Firemen's Union trying hard to break the strike which is called jointly by the left wing minority movement and the revolutionary seamen's union—the Amalgamated Marine Workers' Union.

The Amalgamated Union is issuing strike benefits of 15 shillings a week, and leaders of the strike are visiting the Trade Union Congress at Scarborough to try to enlist support by that body.

The strike has taken heavy toll of British shipping not only in the British isles, but thruout the empire, particularly in Australia and South Africa. A conference is to be held at Cape Town between the South African minister of labor and the strike leaders.

Strikers at Southampton were visibly pleased at the news from America of the picketing of the White Star liner Majestic by united forces of the I. W. W. seamen and the Workers (Communist) Party.

CHINESE STRIKERS GREET SOVIET TRADE UNION DELEGATION WHICH PROMISES SUPPORT TO WORKERS

SHANGHAI—(Tass)—The following statement appears in the Ming Kuo Chi Pao: "The Russian trades union delegation visited the Council of Shanghai Unions and was met by the presidium of the council.

"In the course of his address, chairman of the Soviet delegation, Lepse, stated that the delegation of the U. S. S. R. trades unions represented millions of Russian workmen, who express their full readiness to render support to the Chinese people, particularly to the Chinese workers, carrying on a national liberative struggle against foreign imperialism.

"The international fraternal solidarity of Russian and Chinese workers is strengthened by their belonging to the Red International of Labor Unions, which the Chinese trades unions have now joined"—the speaker declared.

Need Strong Organization.

"While passing via Pekin," Lepse goes on to say, "the delgation had the opportunity to get briefly acquainted with the situation. The Chinese proletariat is still weak organizatinoally, but the delegation feels crtain that the workmen of Canton and Shanghai have resolutely raised the banner of anti-imperialistic struggle and that, baptized in the recent battles against imperialism, they will lay down the foundation of further organization of the Chinese proletariat and successfully achieve the heroic struggle opening a new page in the history of China.

"At the present moment, there is a noticeable increase in the whole world of the national liberative movement. We, Russian workmen, were heavily oppressed and exploited before the revolution, but after several years' fight we liberated ourselves from bonds of slavery, as will some day do the Chinese proletariat."

Replying, Liu Shao-chi, secretary of the Shanghai Council of Unions, expressed thanks to the Soviet delegation for their intention to acquaint themselves with the conditions of life and labor of the workers in China and for the support rendered by the Russian workmen to the national struggle of the Chinese people.

The orator further states that the present anti-imperialistic movement in this country was characteristic of a broad national movement, in which there participated the most various circles of the Chinese people—artisans, handicraftsmen, students, and merchants—thru the main force and the main factor of the movement was the Chinese working class. There actually are altogether 400,000 men on strike in China, of which number over 200,000 are in Shanghai alone, stated Mr. Liu Shao-chi.

Number of Strikers.

Shanghai being the stronghold of foreign imperialism in China, the orator further declares, the struggle of the Chinese workers for their liberation is a very hard one. The imperialists are cleverly using reactionary militaristic groups of the Chinese' own community in order to suppress the movement and disorganize the forces of the Chinese people struggling for their own national liberation. This, however, emphasizes the speaker, only "causes us to unite and increase our energy in the anti-imperialistic struggle."

Producing certain figures, the secretary of the Shanghai Trades Union Council remarked that, at the present moment, there were about 160,000 workers on strike in English and Japanese mills and some 60,000 in Chinese mills, where the supply of electrical power was cut off: To support this army of workers, at least one million dollars a month were necessary. As for the Shanghai Council of Unions, it united 127 labor organizations, with a total membership of about 316,000 working men and women.

Concluding his speech, Mr. Liu Shao-chi declared that owing to martial law having been introduced by the Mukden authorities at Shanghai he could not tell the Russian trades union delegates beforehand when the next delegate meeting of the Shanghai Council of Unions would take place but promised to immediately inform the Russian delegation as soon as that question would be fixed, so as to enable them to attend the meeting.

As regards the desire of the delegation to obtain full information as to the organization and labors of the Council of Unions of Shanghai, as well as the recent events, all the respective data would likewise be given in a near future.

PAINTERS FIGHT EXPULSION PLOT OF OFFICIALDOM

Want Union Law Used to Aid Locals

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MONTREAL, (By Mail)—The international convention of the Painter's Union is just beginning its sessions here, with the prospect ahead of a sharp fight between the reactionary officialdom and the progressive bloc which is condemning the discrimination practiced by the officialdom in not upholding the right of local unions to elect whomsoever they please to city central bodies.

Delegates elected by local unions, particularly in Seattle and Minneapolis, have been denied seats in the Central Labor Assemblies of these cities on the ground that they were Communists or at least had different political opinions than the controlling group in the central body. This denial of delegate rights is in violation of the union laws, but the international officials of the Painters' Union have ignored the complaints of the local unions.

The matter may reach considerable importance, since the international officials have been travelling about the country, not only upholding their refusal to obey the union rules, but announcing a determination to expel the left wing members and all those affiliated with the Workers Party or the progressive group centered around the Trade Union Educational League.

This expulsion policy, and many progressive resolutions, gives promise of a struggle in the convention now beginning.

FAKERS TAKE SCAB ADS TO GRAB PROFIT

Open Shoppers Fill the "Labor" Year Book

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DULUTH, Minn., Sept. 10.—The official year book of the Minnesota State Federation of Labor has just been issued, and it contains matter that the rank and file of the Duluth labor movement, considers as a direct insult to its intelligence and integrity.

The offensive stuff in the year book, is a full page ad of the Stone-Ordian-Wells Co., wholesalers.

This firm is notariously unfair to organized labor. Last year it built a coffee plant entirely with scab labor. It paid 35c. per hour for building laborers and from 45c to 70c an hour for building mechanics.

The carpenters scale here is not less than 90c per hour.

The local Trades & Labor Assembly put this outfit on its unfair list. The Minnesota Federation of Labor, at its Fairbault convention last year, also put the ban on. Both E. G. Hall and Geo. T. Jacobson, president and secretary of the federation respectively were fully aware of that action. Nevertheless, they inserted that scab ad in the year book, together with a host of others.

The year book of the federation has all the earmarks of being issued by the Minneapolis chamber of commerce, instead of a labor organization.

When the labor organizations of Duluth protested against this outrage to their sense of unionism, Mr. Geo. T. Lawson declared that he accepted full responsibility for the insertion of the scab ad.

Really Blackmail Scheme

This official year book, under Hall and Lawson, is nothing more nor less than a diplomatic form of industrial blackmail. A careful examination of the book in question, during the last twelve years, reveals some astounding facts as to its aims and objects.

Praises Steel Trust

Its pages are fairly lettered with big steel trust ads, which sing the songs of praise for the steel trust policy toward its wage slaves, with regard to its share distribution among the workers; its old age pension schemes that no worker ever gets. It is estimated that Hall and Lawson have collected from the steel trust, for these "ads," during the past twelve years, about sixty thousand dollars.

In return for those "ads," Hall and Lawson have done about as much organization work among the steel trust workers, as a couple of snails. They have fastened the wet blanket securely over that sort of work.

To Fight Fakers

The Duluth labor movement is up in arms against both Hall and Lawson, and are going to take the proper steps at the coming Austin convention, to rid the labor movement of an anti-labor program on the part of its paid officials.

Economy and Charity

WASHINGTON, —(FP)—Economy on the part of congress in dealing with the police and fire fighters employed by the District of Columbia has forbidden the creation of a pension system for the widows of men dying in the service, or funds for protecting their orphans.

Fight for Women in Japan

THE main industry of Japan is the textile industry. Nearly 73 per cent of the total value of Japanese exports in 1922 was occupied by textile goods, mainly raw silk and cotton threads, the money value of which was 1,164,453,000 yen. As a matter of fact, the production of these goods depends largely upon the female labor power. In 1921 the number of female workers engaged in textile factories was 1,101,773 (cotton spinning 148,153; silk filaturing 15,592; weaving 841,090).

These female workers have to be yearly hunted out from villages, for on account of brutal exploitation under extreme sweating system exercised upon them, the average length of service of one female worker in Japan is one year. About 20 per cent of women in factories simply "disappear" every year, to borrow a term of official statisticians; that is, they escape from the prison-like factories to be drifted into the ranks of prostitutes. A large percentage of the remainder dies out yearly from consumption or other diseases contracted in factories. Only a few return to their native villages with a little pocket money to marry.

Thus, the female labor in Japan is fast exhausted, in spite of a large percentage of increase of population, and the factory owners are more and more facing difficulties in replacing their cheap labor power. They are compelled to send out, all the time, their "hitokai" (men buyers) into the provinces far and wide. The following description of the activities of these hitokai will show how the source of the labor power of the textile industry of Japan is already beginning to dry up and is compelling the industry either to reform its system of exploitation or to die out.

In one of the northern provinces, Toyama (population 735,000) alone, this year up to February 23, already more than 1,900 canvassers representing about 200 factory owners all over the country applied for certificates to engage in collecting female workers in the province. The total number of female workers needed was 24,000. A big competition among these numerous hitokai is expected owing to the scarcity of eligible females.

The yearly emigration of female workers from Toyama province is about ten thousand. There are no adequate protective measures for these women and they are subjected to all sorts of unscrupulous methods of exploitation. The yearly number of cases of infringement of regulations for collecting workers is about 1,000 in the province alone. Such a condition should not be tolerated. The provincial authorities are now advocating the organization of female workers both to protect themselves from unscrupulous canvassers and to improve their technical skill.

Incidentally, the above description appearing in one of Tokio bouregois papers (the Tokio Asahi, February 26), discloses a significant fact that even a local administration is now enthusiastically active in assisting capitalists in their efforts to save themselves from the threatening economic ruin, which is particularly evident since the great earthquake of 1923. The bourgeois government never advocates any kind of workers' organization for the benefit of workers. The provincial governor of Toyama wishes for the women under his jurisdiction to organize unions, simply because the terrible waste of human life hitherto conducted by capitalists has begun to weaken the very foundation of capitalist exploitation itself, and thereby it has become an absolute necessity for capitalists to conserve someway or another their source of cheap labor.—TANI.

WORLD'S MILITANT WORKERS FLAY POLISH SOCIALISTS FOR AIDING WHITE TERROR KILL COMMUNISTS

MOSCOW, (Inprecor.)—The following appeal has been issued in connection with the execution of Gibner Rutkovsky and Knievsky, signed by the following comrades: Brown (England), Jacobs (France), Thälmann (Germany), Kuuisinen (Finland), Dimitrov and Kolarov (Bulgaria), Boshkevitch (Jugo-Slavia), Sheffio (Norway) and Katayama (Japan).

Against the Three Death Sentences.

Workers of all countries, protest against a shameful crime.

The process against Comrades Gibner, Knievsky and Rutkovsky before the Warsaw field court ended with the death sentence. All three comrades were shot.

For one dead Judas, a provocateur, the working class of Poland has paid with the lives of four proletarian fighters. Botwin, Gibner, Knievsky and Rutkovsky have been executed.

The Polish government is attempting to intimidate the Polish working class by mericiless death sentences. It is attempting to defend its system of poisoning the working masses by provocation. Even the bloody czarist regime despised the provateurs and did not dare to demand for the life of a traitor the life of a worker. The methods ofs the Polish government go beyond the foulest crimes of czarism.

The base role which the leaders of the Polish socialist party play in the affair beggars all description. Whilst the working class of Poland and the working class of all other countries defends the proletarian fighters, the press of the Polish socialist party denounces our comrades as "bandits," who have shot down "proletarians in uniform." By this they mean policemen. The traiterous leaders of the P. S. P. have gone so far that in the process the prosecutor when demanding the death sentences, supported himself upon articles and appeals taken from their papers.

The leaders of the Polish socialist party share the guilt for the murder of four workers who fought against provocation.

Workers of all countries! Show the Polish bourgeoisie that the Polish proletariat does not stand isolated in its struggle against the white terror! Protest in meetings and demonstrations against the bloody criminality of the Polish counter-revolution! Expose the base role of the Polish social traitors who assist in the shooting of proletarians! Honor those who have fallen for the cause of the working class! Down with the white terror of Polish capitalism. Down with its helpers in the Second International. Long live the revolutionary struggle of the Polish proletariat!

Protest Arrest of Workingclass Poet

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW—(Inprecor) — The international bureau for proletarian literature has issued an appeal in connection with the arrest of Johann Becher. The appeal which is signed by Lunacharsky, Auerbach and Valaitis, points out that literature also is a class weapon and for this reason the bourgeoisie suppresses proletarian newspapers and publications and arrests revolutionary poets. "The bourgeoisie which grasps the bible and forbids Darwinism in its struggle against Communism, and which approaches ever more the spirit of the middle ages arrests the singers of humanity tomorrow! Flaming greetings to our comrade, Becher! The proletarian poets must fight for the release of Becher!"

The Moscow and associated sections of proletarian poets join in the protest and also the German section.

Time Clock Rule Greets Teachers as Public Schools Open

A clumsy ruling aping the factory time clock has been enforced in the Chicago Public Schools by boss Superintendent William McAndrew on the very first day of the new term. The ruling requires each teacher to sign a register showing the time of arrival and departure each morning and afternoon. The register sheets are then sent to headquarters thus giving a complete record of the comings and goings of each individual teacher.

The teachers resent this new ruling not only because it says to each teacher "you cannot be trusted" but also because of the messiness of the whole business.

Teachers for classes beginning at 8 in the morning (the morning shift) arrive at 7:45 in the morning. Now they must stand in line waiting their term to jot down their attendance. The same procedure must be gone thru when leaving for lunch, when returning from lunch which of course cuts down the lunch hour and then once again at the end of the day.

Discussion on Councils Held Up.

Evidently the board trustees does not intend to consider the reinstatement of teachers councils and expect a fight from the teachers for committees of the board of education voted to postpone discussion on this matter and also the salary schedule until October 14th.

However the teachers do intend to give immediate consideration to these matters. The Chicago Teachers Federation has called a special meeting on Friday, Sept. 11th at 4:15 to discuss the salary question. The meeting will be held at the Studebaker Theatre at 418 S. Michigan ave. and all teachers should attend to get the facts on Superintendent McAndrew's fake salary boost.

REPORT STRIKE BREAKER VISIT TO HIS MASTER

But Lewis Does It Wholesale

We are in receipt of a report that a strike breaker appealed to John L. Lewis for a strikebreakers' job in the anthracite. It is also reported that the strikebreaker thought the headquarters of the miners' chief was the headquarters of the coal barons. The scab offered credentials to show that he scabbed on the railroad shopmen in the big strike of the railroad shops.

Lewis is reported to have advised the scab against seeking employment in the coal mines at the present time. John L. Lewis does not break strikes in that manner. He don't hire scabs to break strikes. He breaks them himself, as we have good reason to know from experience. When Lewis breaks strikes he does it wholesale. Remember the 1922 strike and Lewis' submission to the authorities when the miners were at the point of victory. He betrayed 500,000 that time at a single stroke.

A Natural Attraction.

What is the affinity between scabs? Why did the scab approach Lewis?

Lewis is living in a million dollar hotel at the present time in Philadelphia, like an European prince, fat and slickly groomed, the picture of wealth and affluence. John L. has been mistaken many times in Philadelphia for a financial magnate. It is any wonder that the scab took him for a strikebreaking chief?

Lewis has his office set up in Philadelphia amidst fine surroundings where John can agreeably rub shoulders with, and hob nob with the elite of society. One would think that an honorable labor leader would have his office in the heart of the coal region during a strike, near to the people who pay him his salary, but not so with Lewis. He has not yet considered making a coal mining town his headquarters. Coal miners' treasuries are all right to keep up labor fakers, but to associate with the underground workers is entirely out of the question. It would indeed be very disagreeable to Lewis to have to associate with the coal miners and be removed from the gay swirl of Philadelphia, with its bright lights and fashionable girls.

Was No Mistake.

I wonder if the scab did really make a mistake. Perhaps he knew of the Lewis expulsions, the Howats, McLachlans, Thompsons, McDonalds, Watts, etc. Perhaps the scab knew the actions in these cases were even worse than that of a strike breaker. We don't know the conversation that passed between them, but no doubt it was the usual kind that passes between one scab and another.

Lying About the Riff Campaign

After the world war was over, one British correspondent who was decorated for lying about the German army, wrote a book under the title: "Now It Can Be Told." This meant that the war was over and no good purpose could be served by lying any longer. The truth would now be more profitable and would command a better market than false information.

During the war both sides fed their followers on victory after victory. Every retreat was for strategic purposes. The morale of the masses had to be kept up. The bourgeoisie have no qualms of conscience about lying. Indeed it is one of their most effective weapons.

The capitalist powers have not suffered any impairment in the fine art of prevarication since the end of the world war. This is plainly evident by their conduct in the Moroccan campaign against the Riffians.

Up until now the forces of Abd-el-Krim have decidedly the best of the struggle, yet stories of victories appear daily in the capitalist press—victory for the Spanish and French. Once in a while a correspondent sneaks out a little bit of truth thru the censorship wall, but for every word of truth that reaches the public ten thousand lies follow.

Only a few days ago, a Spanish troopship was sunk by Riffian fire. One thousand Spanish troopers perished with the ship. The news was suppressed by the Spanish and French censors in Morocco but one newspaperman in Paris risked losing his job by putting it on the cables to the United States. Not a word has appeared about the great disaster in any capitalist daily since then. Evidently is is hoped the public will have forgotten the incident.

We have read of airplanes hurling death on Riffian forts, towns and villages, of tribes deserting Abd-el-Krim and of Spanish and French cooperation. But the truth is that ninety per cent of those stories have no foundation in fact. The truth is that the Spanish and French governments are liable to fall at any moment over the Riffian debacle. Both governments hope to stave off the inevitable by feeding their people on imaginary victories.

The workers should think ten times before believing anything that appears in the capitalist press. What they read even in the news columns is not news but propaganda. Ninety per cent of what fills the pages of the capitalist dailies is copy, furnished by the thousands of agencies that exist in this country to advance some particular scheme in support of the capitalist system. Workers who want to know the truth about the labor movement here and in other countries, about the struggle of subject peoples against the imperialist powers and particularly about Soviet Russia should read the DAILY WORKER.

Paining the Reactionary Painters

If Gregory Zinoviev had walked into the convention of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers held in Montreal, greater consternation could not have been caused among the reactionary officials than followed the nomination of Dan W. Stevens, Minneapolis Communist, for the office of first vice-president in opposition to J. Finan of Chicago, professional red baiter.

Finan (no relation to Haddie tho very much like a fish in his ways) has been going around the country lately reading the riot act to the Communists and threatening with expulsion every painter who insisted on using his head for something other than a hat rack. Finan expected the radicals to lie down and draw in their red horns after the priests of the new dispensation placed them on the index expurgatoris.

It was therefore with something of a shock that the fakers heard the name of the fighting painter of the Twin Cities being placed in nomination. Was not Dan Stevens ousted from his position of secretary of the Minneapolis Trades and Labor Council by order of Paul Smith, traveling grand goblin of the American Federation of Labor? If the fakers thought that Stevens or the Communists are going to be intimidated by the traveling janissaries of the grand dukes of the A. F. of L. they are greatly mistaken. And the substantial support given to Comrade Stevens at the Montreal convention is a warning to the reactionaries that the fight to expel the Communists from the unions, is not an easy one, but one that will end in complete triumph for the radicals and ignominious defeat for the labor lieutenants of capitalism.

The drive for the class war prisoners will forge ahead stronger than ever on International Labor Defense Day, Sunday, Sept. 13.

WILSON TRIED FOR ALLIANCE WITH KAISER

Wilhelm Charges Col. House Approached Him

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Germany, Sept. 10.—In a signed article in the Deutches Zeitung, Kaiser Wilhelm exposes the fact that Col. House, acting as President Wilson's representative, attempted to form an alliance between Germany, England and the United States, just prior to the world war.

The kaiser, writing from Doorn, in an effort to place the blame for the war on England, reveals that Viscount Grey, then British foreign minister, went to Kiel to discuss the probabilities of such an alliance with Col. House and German representatives.

Wilhelm quotes letters from Col. House expressing satisfaction with Berlin negotiations between himself, the ex-kaiser, and Admiral Tirpitz, relative to the proposed alliance.

Great Britain killed this attempt at an imperialist alliance by attempting to conclude a naval treaty with Russia instead, Wilhelm declares. He states that Britain was fearful that Wilson's negotiations for an alliance might cause consternation to French and Russian imperialism.

MOTHER BLOOR REACHES GOAL OF LONG HIKE

NEW YORK, N. Y.—The coast to coast tour of "Mother" Bloor will soon be completed when she arrives in New York City, September 9th, after travelling for over three months from Berkely, California, stopping in every large city on the way. "Mother" Bloor boasts that she has not spent a cent on railroad fare, and what is more, she insists she will not spend a single cent on railroad fare, and while hitching and hiking conditions to be so agreeable to people of sixty years that will continue to be her way of travelling.

"Mother" Bloor will be remembered by her many friends among militant trade unionists in this city for her activity on the picket line in the strike of the Millinery Workers' Union.

At the meetings to be held collections will be taken and every dollar raised will go for two months subscriptions to the DAILY WORKER. Be on hand.

Forward! Anthracite Miners

M. W. of A., accept the challenge of the owners and pledge ourselves to fight until the demands of the anthracite miners are met and victory is achieved.

AN ATTEMPT TO KILL THE UNION.

The present attack on the anthracite miners is part of the general scheme of the owners to destroy every semblance of organization among the coal miners. The bituminous miners are reduced to a frightful existence by the continuous campaign that has been carried on against them by the operators, aided by every branch of the government. The owners now feel that the miners and the organization have been weakened to such an extent that it will be easy to deal the finishing blow to the U. M. W. of A. by smashing the anthracite miners. The fight to win the anthracite strike is a fight to save the United Mine Workers of America from destruction.

The attempt of the employers to break up the United Mine Workers is only part of a larger scheme of the whole employing class to destroy every trace of trade unionism among the whole working class. The miners are now the center of attack. The bosses know that if they are successful in reducing the miners' wages and breaking up their union, which is the most militant section of the working class, they will be far on the road to the accomplishment of their goal to establish the "open shop" in every industry in America.

The anthracite strike must be the rallying center of all trade unionists in America. Every working class organization must come to the support of the anthracite miners in every possible way. The strikers must be given full financial, moral, and active support in this industrial battle. It is the moment when labor, thruout America, must call a halt to wage-cutting and union-wrecking campaigns of big business.

ALL MINERS MUST STRIKE!

In the great industrial struggle now centering in the anthracite region the employers will be fully united against the workers. The anthracite operators will have the full support of the coal barons in the bituminous fields. The press, the state, and every institution of capitalist control, will be on their side militantly. In this situation the workers must display equal solidarity and class consciousness.

The bituminous miners must not stand aside and allow their brothers in the anthracite to be cut to pieces. The miners in the soft coal fields have been practically idle for the past two years due to the coal operators' attempts to break the union. The latter have practically ignored the Jacksonville agreement and have held the U. M. W. of A. in scorn and contempt, gradually destroying it in every organized district.

Now is the time for the bituminous miners to retrieve their position and standards of living. They must make common cause with the hard coal miners. The bituminous miners must join hands with the anthracite miners and bring the whole mining industry in America to a standstill in a general strike until the autocratic employers are forced to recognize the workers' rights to organize and to concede their economic demand. Failure of the bituminous miners to strike at this time would be a monumental error for which the whole miners' union would have to pay dearly.

RAILROADERS! HAUL NO SCAB COAL!

The railroad workers must also lend a hand in this struggle. They must absolutely refuse to haul scab coal. In past strikes in the coal mining and ralroad industries there has been the sad spectacle of union railroad men hauling scab coal and of union miners furnishing coal to scab railroads. This suicidal lack of solidarity must come to an end.

There must be an alliance, offensive and defensive, between the railroad workers and coal miners. Such an alliance would be invincible. The time to lay the basis for it is now in the big anthracite strike. No railroad man worthy of being called a unionist will degrade himself and betray his class by hauling scab coal in the anthracite region.

NATIONALIZATION—WITH WORKERS' CONTROL.

The anthracit eminers, the bituminous miners, and the labor movement as a whole must realize the broader aspects of the gigantic struggle now going on. It is not merely a trade dispute over questions of hours and wages. It has a far deeper political significance. It is only one more manifestation of the great struggle that is going on between the capitalists and the workers for control of the industries and the government.

In this struggle the miners must lay the basis, in policy and organization, for carrying on the fight effectively on the broad front of the class struggle. They must realize that so long as private ownership endures in the coal industry, so long will low wages, long hours, unemployment, and the other evils of private ownership obtain. We must fight definitely for the nationalization of the mines, with workers' control.

BUILD A LABOR PARTY!

And to further this struggle we must found a labor party based upon the broad masses in the trade unions and other workers' organizations.

We must also fight for the regeneration of our union. The present crop of misleaders, who are responsible for our present plight, must go, and be replaced by a generation of real fighters.

We must end Lewisism in the U. M. W. of A. The present policy of class collaboration must give way to one of class struggle.

WHAT TO DO

The Progressive Miners' Committee of the U. M. W. of A. demands:

No compromise to be made through arbitration or in any other way.

Categoric rejection of government interference.

A Six-Hour Day and a Five-Day Week.

Minimum wage to be not less than the full union rates.

Abolition of the Conciliation Board.

Immediate unemployment relief from the state and national governments.

Bituminous Miners! Railroad workers! Workers in all industries! Support the struggle of the anthracite miners! Break up the great "open shop" drive of the employers!

TRIPOLI REVOLT MENACES BANKS' HOLD ON AFRICA

French Caught Between Two Uprisings

PARIS, Sept. 10.—All Tripoli is in revolt against the rule of Italian imperialism, and the Senusai natives are driving the Italian troops toward the sea with heavy losses. The revolt in Tripoli, now admitted by the official Stefani agency, has caught the French in Algeria and Tunis in a trap between the revolting Moroccans and the uprising in Tripoli. The hold of all European powers in North Africa is thus threatened.

Premier Mussolini, greatly alarmed has sent 20,000 troops and 300 airplanes to Tripoli. The fascisti accuse the Turkish government of aiding the revolt with officers and ammunition. The intention of Mussolini to seize all western Anatolia at the earliest opportunity has been blocked.

PARIS, France, Sept. 10.—The Spanish forces have landed a column of troops on the shores of Alhucemas bay, near Adjir, Krim's capital, according to the Spanish dictator Primo de Rivera. Rivera's dispatch does not state the number of the Spanish losses.

Meanwhile the Riffians are harrassing the French troops in the sector east of Quezzan, and are attacking the French position at Djebel en Nehir.

In the Spanish zone Krim is attacking the line of communications between Tetuan and Fondack.

Many New Members Enroll at Duluth, Minn., I. L. D. Meeting

DULUTH, Minn., Sept. 10.—The I. L. D. conference and mass meeting was held in Duluth Sunday, Sept. 6. Both were well attended considering the two holidays. About 25 workers joined. The prevailing sentiment was that this could easily be increased a hundred fold.

John Soltis delivered an excellent speech, outlining the aims and organization of the I. L. D. He also dwelt at length with the history of all progress in the political field. The audience was in hearty accord of uniting all elements of labor in the defense work.

The local committee are pleased with rsults and will continue to hold meetings often as soon as arrangements can be made. We are assured of a powerful movement in this steel trust mining district.

JEWISH SECTION, WORKERS PARTY, STRIVES TO WIN WORKMEN'S CIRCLE MEMBERS FOR THE REVOLUTION

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 8.—(By Mail.)—The first day's session of the convention of the Jewish Section of the Workers Party, took up the problem of the policy of the party in the Workmen's Circle.

The report on this question was made by H. J. Costrell, secretary of the Left Wing Actions Committee in the Workmen's Circle.

Costrell Makes His Report.

Comrade Costrell reviewed the campaign which the party had carried on in the Workmen's Circle and in this connection called attention to the campaign for relief of Russian children, which was taken up at the time the Workmen's Circle administration proposed relief for the orphaned children. He also outlined the campaign in support of the national presidential campaign of the party and pointed out that the influence of the party in the Workmen's Circle has grown but that the left wing has been unable to achieve as many victories as in the past, giving as the reason for this the organization of the reactionary elements in support of the right wing machine, with the result that a much larger proportion of the membership of the Workmen's Circle was participating actively in the work of the Circle than in the past.

The report was criticized during the discussion, the speakers pointing out that the policy pursued was not that of revolutionizing the workers in the Workmen's Circle and our policy must be directed towards winning these workers ideologically for the revolutionary struggle against capitalism. The lack of preparation in relation to the national convention of the Workmen's Circle was also criticized as well as the methods used in constituting the Left Wing Actions Committee after this convention.

Supports C. I. Viewpoint.

The resolution supporting the report of Comrade Costrell, was adopted against a resolution by the minority criticizing the report. The voting on this resolution brot the first break in the alignment in the convention, when Comrade S. Glauberman, delegate from Los Angeles, who had supported the majority group in the convention voted for the minority resolution and made the following statement:

"I have been a supporter of the majority group in the party altho I have believed that both groups were good revolutionary groups. I have however strongly criticized the methods used by the former majority group in their attack upon the minority group, for instance, the majority in its caucus voted to refuse to join in the demonstration when Comrade Ruthenberg, the representative of the C. E. C., entered the hall. Now that the Communist International has stated its position in relation to the two groups, I support the viewpoint of the Communist International. I cannot further support the group which I have been supporting. I therefore take my position in support of the present C. E. C. of the party."

The statement of Comrade Glauberman caused a great demonstration by the delegates and the three or four hundred spectators who attended at the convention.

After the debate on the Workmen's Circle policy, the election of the bureau of the Jewish Section was taken up.

Comrade C. E. Ruthenberg, the representative of the Central Executive Committee, took the floor and made the following proposal:

"I propose, as the representative of the Central Executive Committee, that a bureau consisting of an equal number of representatives of both groups be elected. The basis for making this proposal are the following reasons:

"First, this convention has come very closely after the national convention of the party. The result of the work of the national convention, and particularly the viewpoint of the Communist International transmitted to our convention, was not before the membership of the Jewish Section when the elections took place. These members had no opportunity to take into consideration the work of the convention and the view of the Communist International in electing the delegates to the convention.

"Second, the report of the credentials committee leaves in doubt the relation of forces in this convention. Eleven delegates of the majority were elected by only 78 members, having been elected by proxy to represent branches of five or six members. There are discrepancies in relation to the elections in Detroit, North West Jewish in Chicago where extraordinary dues stamps purchases were made during the last months of July, and in the case of Detroit particularly no stamps were purchased for the months of April, May and June. This and similar instances opens the question of whether a number of the delegates in the majority in this convention actually represent the majority of the membership.

"My third reason for the proposal is the debate on the report of the Central Executive Committee. This debate showed in the statements of the former members of the Loreist group that the majority group in this convention entered into caucuses, alliances and arrangements with the Loreist group even as close as two weeks before the national convention and that its attitude toward the Lore group of the Jewish Section was entirely unprincipled and completely opportunistic and the minority in this convention, on the other hand, took a definite and consistent position of struggle against the Lore tendency even as it has in this convention altho a number of former Loreites are now supporting the minority. The facts as shown in the debate on this question indicate the need of a strong element of the minority in the bureau in order to carry out the decisions and eliminate Loreism from the Jewish Section.

Equal Responsibility.

"My fourth reason for my proposal is the decision of the Comintern in regard to our party. This decision put the responsibility for conducting the party work upon the present majority of the Central Executive Committee in the reorganization of the party, the bureau of the language fractions becomes more than ever an instrument of the Central Executive Committee and it is necessary that there be a bureau of the Jewish Section which will be responsive and carry out the decision of the Central Executive Committee.

"My fifth reason for this proposal is the need for achieving the unification of our party. It is necessary that the two leading groups in the party and in the Jewish Section be united. This can best be achieved by electing a bureau consisting of equal representation of the two groups."

Comrade Mindel, for the majority, proposed a bureau of eleven representatives of the majority group, and seven representatives of the minority of the convention. Comrade Mindel asked whether the proposal of Comrade Ruthenberg was an instruction to the convention to which Comrade Ruthenberg replied:

"The proposal I have made is a proposal to the convention as the representative of the Central Executive Committee of the party. Naturally I am responsible to the Central Executive Committee for this proposal. The bureau elected, no matter how it is constituted, is subject to the approval of the Central Executive Committee."

The vote on the two proposals before the convention resulted in 53 for the Mindel proposal and 41 for the Central Executive Committee proposal.

Paterson Comintern Communists.

During the vote on this question the delegate from Paterson, New Jersey, who had been supporting the majority rose to the floor and made the following statement. "Our Paterson branch has always been a good Bolshevik organization. My branch has not instructed me to vote against the proposal of the Central Executive Committee and I cannot see my way clear to vote against this proposal of the Central Executive Committee." The statement was greeted with a great demonstration by the delegates and those present.

The bureau of the Jewish Section was then elected and the question of the Freiheit was taken up and a resolution passed to begin a campaign for a $50,000 fund to meet the emergency in the Freiheit situation.

The convention then adjourned.

Col. Mitchell Again Charges Washington with Airship Deaths

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 10.—In another statement on the inefficiency of the army and navy heads at Washington, Col. William Mitchell declared, "Non-fliers indulge in mental gymnastics in Washington in an attempt to evade the truth by whitewashing boards, alibis, and suggestions for fixing the blame for disasters on the dead commanders, when they know that they themselves were responsible."

The war department is expected to court martial Mitchell, with the result that he will be dismissed from the army.

Rain Ends Drouth.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 10—Ten days of scorching drouth in the Illinois and Missouri regions of the Mississippi valley had been broken today following a night of cool rains. More than a score of lives were claimed during the abnormally hot advent of September. The weather bureau predicted the backbone of the record heat wave had been broken and that cool weather might be expected.

The Anthracite Slaughter-House

By EARL R. BROWDER.

THE 150,000 anthracite miners now on strike are told by the employers that the industry is so "heavily burdened" that their wages must be reduced. It is true that the industry is "heavily burdened" by the capitalist monopoly, in the shape of profits of gigantic proportions by the coal companies, profits by the railroads, profits by wholesalers and retailers, plus royalty to landowners running from $1.00 to $1.50 per ton. Out of the current retail price of anthracite, $17.00 per ton, the "burden" placed by wages (employers' classification including administration) is less than 20 per cent. We shall examine this angle in more detail later. But what about the "heavy burden" of injury and death placed upon the workers by the industry? This is the most terrible burden of the coal industry, and the workers must bear it all in addition to their burden of starvation wages.

A report has just been issued by the commonwealth of Pennsylvania, department of labor and industry, which deals with industrial accidents in the state for the first six months of 1925, from this we learn that in this half-year period, almost one out of every ten workers engaged in anthracite production was injured, 96 out of each 1,000 workers injured non-fatally, and two out of each 1,000 killed.

OUT of a total of 89,494 non-fatal industrial accidents during the first half of 1925, the anthracite miners suffered 14,561 of them. Of 1,087 deaths, 296 were of anthracite miners. In other words, anthracite mining costs the workers almost twice the price in life and limb, over the average borne by all workers in Pennsylvania.

And this is not a recent development. From the year 1900 to 1920, there were 12,032 anthracite miners killed in the course of their work, with non-fatal accidents in proportion. (Report of Department of Mines of Pennsylvania, 1921). Approximately every twelfth worker in the industry was killed during the 20 years.

ANTHRACITE is a veritable slaughter-house of the workers. They are on strike now because the employers want to buy their lives and limbs for 10 per cent less wages, while the workers feel the price of their blood and sweat should rise a bit. The day must come before long when the miners, together with the working class as a whole, will refuse altogether to allow capitalists to coin their lives into profits, will take over the mines and industries, kick out the exploiters, and turn the work-places from slaughter-houses into safe and comfortable centers for producing the wealth of a workers' republic.

Until that time arrives, every class-conscious worker will help all he can in the struggle of the anthracite miners to protect themselves partially against the assaults of coal barons whose profits are stained with the blood of our working class brothers.

WORKERS RALLY SUNDAY FOR DEFENSE

FARRINGTON'S ELECTION FRAUD IN ILLINOIS MINERS' UNION EXPOSED BY DAILY WORKER

By ROBERT MINOR.

The DAILY WORKER is able today for the first time to publish a complete exposure of the stealing of the election of the United Mine Workers in Sub-District No. 9, of District No. 12, Southern Illinois, last December, which was one of the links in the chain of events leading up to the present crisis in which one Communist coal miner has been murdered and 15 of the most militant members of the union are facing trial on the framed-up charge of "assault with intent to kill."

The new evidence consists of documentary proof that forged ballots were used in the sub-district election.

The DAILY WORKER has obtained possession of several copies of the forged ballots, and has had these examined by scientific experts.

A high-power magnifying glass shows that the forged ballots were not printed from type, but from a photo-engraving of the official ballot, obtained by a process often employed by makers of counterfeit money.

That the counterfeit ballots were not printed in the same shop in which the authentic ballots were printed, is proven by a photographic enlargement of the printers' union label.

The union label on the forged ballot had been mutilated, apparently, to prevent identification of the shop where it was printed. By careful photography thru a magnifying lens, a camera expert has made it possible to read the mutilated label on the forged ballot.

Stolen Election, Betrayal and Murder.

That the subdistrict election of December, 1924, was saturated with fraud at the hands of the Farrington machine, has long been known by the coal miners of Southern Illinois. But to prove it was a difficult matter. The steal was covered up with technicalities. Now these technicalities are torn away by the DAILY WORKER, which is now able to

AMALGAMATION OF RAIL UNIONS SUBJECT OF CONFERENCE WHICH OPENS SATURDAY AT CHICAGO

The Second International Amalgamation Conference of railway workers which is to open in Chicago Saturday at the Workers' Lyceum, 2733 Hirsch Boulevard, has had an interesting history, according to Otto H. Wangerin, secretary of the movement, who was interviewed yesterday by the DAILY WORKER on his arrival from St. Paul, the headquarters of the movement to amalgamate the railroad unions.

Began in 1922.

"The movement began simultaneously with the great shopmen's strike on July 1, 1922," said Wangerin. "The whole railway industry was circularized with what is known as the 'Minnesota Plan of Amalgamation,' 12,000 local unions receiving the plan and a resolution to act upon. In the course of a year 3,000 local lodges endorsed the plan as well as many system and district organizations. Two international unions, the Railway Clerks and Maintenance of Way Men, also endorsed the plan, the left wing of the latter organization defeating the reactionary president, F. H. Grabel on the amalgamation issue at their convention.

"The first conference was held at the instance of our committee on December 9 and 10, 1922, at Chicago, 411 delegates being present, representing all the sixteen standard railway unions and coming from all sections of the United States and Canada. The conference adopted a comprehensive plan of amalgamation, established our movement as the International Amalgamation Committee, provided for local committees and funds to finance its activities which included the publication of the "Railroad Amelgamation Advocate," as an official organ of the movement.

"Two district conferences, one at New York City and another at Tacoma, were held in 1923, both well attended. Early in that year, Division No. 4 of the Railway Emeloyes' Department, embracing all shop crafts in Canada, endorsed the amalgamation plan at its Montreal convention

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

WHO is running this country? The capitalist politicians tell us that the "peepul" are doing the running, and every Tom, Dick and Harry you meet on the street cars or hanging on to them, going to and coming from work, slaps himself on the back and with an Andy Gump grin, consoles himself in his misery with the thot that he is one of the "peepul." It used to be said in the old days when the Roman eagles were planted in almost every corner of the then known world that there was no prouder title than that of citizen of Rome.

WHAT that meant to the average Roman who had to lug wine to his master's table and supply his mistresses' boudoir with perfume, all for a bare existence, is just what the title of American citizen means to the average wage serf employed by a Gary, a Rockefeller or a Ford. The psychological dope that is injected into his system by the capitalist press does not differ materially from the dope that was used by the Roman ruling class over one thousand years ago.

IF the workers of the United States think they are running this country, they are crazy, without knowing it. What prompted me to ask this question is a little news item that appeared in a labor paper, which shows that Andrew Mellon, secretary of the treasury, paid a tax of $1,882,609.25 on his 1924 income. Quite a neat little sum. Andy owned a thriving distillery business which is still doing business, tho Andy put it in new hands a few weeks ago. Andy has the job of putting teeth in the Volstead act.

ANDY'S brother, R. B. Mellon, came within a half a million of paying as much as the whiskey secretary of the treasury. High on the list was "Hell an' Maria" Dawes, vice-president. He paid over $24,000 on his 1924 income. Our friend, J. P. Morgan, coughed up over half a million. This is merely a few names picked at random from the list of those whose income tax payments prove that they are the real owners of the country and not the deluded workers who produce the wealth on which those parasites are paying taxes. Those who

MELLON WOULD GET MILLIONS FROM TAX PLAN

Issues Program in Behalf of Wealthy

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 11.—The multi-millionaire secretary of the treasury, Andrew J. Mellon, announced the Coolige administration's tax program today as being for (1) repeal of the publicity clause of the revenue act, which revealed that Mellon paid an income tax of several million dollars; (2) heavy reduction of the surtax on big incomes, which would save Mellon those millions; (3) legislation to curb issuance tax of exempt securities, and (3) elimination of the estate taxes, which would also save the rich men of the country millions of dollars.

Mellon will advocate this program before ways and means and finance commitees of the house and senate next month.

SPANISH LOST IN FOG, RIFFS GET UPPER HAND

Tetuan at Mercy of Krim's Forces

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, France, Sept. 11.—Dense fogs, foreshadowing the closing in of the dread rainy season, have settled over all northern Africa, and the Spanish and French drives against the Riffian natives are lost in the fog banks.

The Spanish force which landed on the shores of Alhucemas Bay is in a critical situation, being unable to see its fleet or to follow the moves of the Moroccans. The Spanish column is helpless on the tip of Cape Moor.

Planes Forced Down.

Tetuan, which has been surrounded by the Riffian soldiers, seems to be at the mercy of Abd-el-Krim.

The 300 airplanes, which have been bombarding Adjir, Krim's capital, and other towns, have been withdrawn from the air because of the weather and the Spanish-French armies have thus lost their eyes. Among the planes forced to cease activity were those manned by the Sherifian escadrille, composed of Americans who volunteered to aid the French bankers carry out their program of slaughter in Africa. These planes had bombed Sheshuan seventeen times.

Rivera Asks More Troops.

The French government has definitely decided not to push its present offensive further than the Spanish protectorat frontier, because of the objection of England and Italy, it is reported. Thus the Spanish forces at Tetuan and Alhucemas Bay are in a serious position.

The Spanish dictator, Primo de Rivera, has cabled frantically to Madrid for "unlimited re-enforcements."

The Riffians have cut the roads from Tetuan to Ceuta and Tangier.

Storm Hits Burlington.

BURLINGTON, Wis.—(By Mail)—A storm passed here smashing windows and felling trees. A horse and wagon were blown into the river, but were saved. The streets were covered with debris for several hours.

LONDON, Sept. 11.—While Spanish troops are claiming successes in their advance upon Adjir, the Riffians have administered defeat to the Spaniards near Larache, according to a dispatch today from Madrid.

The Riffian drive in the vicinity of Larache has broken thru the Spanish lines, the dispatch declared.

15 COAL MINERS HELD FOR JURY IN ZEIGLER CASE

All Progressive Miners Opposed to Machine

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ZEIGLER, Ill., Sept. 11.—Of the twenty-six Zeigler miners for whom, originally, warrants were sworn out by D. B. Cobb, vice president of subdistrict No. 9, U. M. W. of A. charging that they conspired to murder him at a union meeting following a local strike in Zeigler, Ill. several weeks ago, fifteen have been held for the grand jury. At the preliminary hearing held in Benton where Cobb appeared with 20 witnesses and a special prosecutor, the prosecution and its witnesses cut a confused figure under examination and it developed that some of those indicted were not within miles of where the melee in which Cobb was roughly handled occurred.

Despite this fifteen were bound over. All of these are progressives and have consistently opposed the corrupt practices of the sub-district officials. They are:

Chas. Corbishley, Henry Corbishley, Frank Corbishley, Matt Crnoevich, Ignatz Semich, Martin Semich, Frank Skibinski, Oscar Farthing, Bert Farthing, Pete Blazin, Steve Meanovich, William Bartash, Stanley Paurey, John Loke, Matya Buck.

The grand jury will meet the first part of October and in all likelihood will indict at least some of the Zeigler men. An interesting fact has been disclosed concerning Lon Fox, president of the sub-district miners organization who signed the warrant with Cobb. It has been found that Fox posted the $10,000 bond that secured the release of Alex Hargis, klan supporter, who is charged with the murder of Mike Sarovich a loyal member of the union in the same fray in which Cobb was supposed to have been a victim of a "conspiracy."

SEAMEN OF U. S. CALL STRIKE ON ALL SEABOARDS

I. W. W. Marine Union Issues Strike Call

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 11.—That American seamen who have grievances of their own against the shipping companies mean to back-up the so-called "outlaw" strike of their British fellow workers which is now tying up British shipping thruout the empire is indicated by the following notice issued yesterday by the Marine Transport Workers Industrial Union No. 510 of the I. W. W.

"A strike on all sea-going ships was called at midnight last night at the regular business meeting of the Manhattan Branch of the Marine Transport Workers Industrial Union No. 510 of the I. W. W. This action to be followed by all marine branches at Atlantic, Gulf and Pacific ports.

"The strike call is for all seamen, deck department, firemen and stewards' departments of all sea-going ships under any flag signing articles in American ports.

"Strike demands are attached and further news may be had from strike committee at No. 3 Coenties Slip, M. T. W. headquarters. Funds are very badly needed. Same to be sent to P. O. Box 69, Station D. New York City."

Signed,

M. T. W. I. U., No. 510 I. W. W.

The demands of the I. W. W. seamen are as follows:

1. "Wage increase of $15 for all men licensed and unlicensed on all U. S. Shipping Board ships.
2. "That the American Steamship Owners' Association and private owners pay the same rate as the U. S. Shipping Board ships; there must not be any difference in wage scales.
3. "The same wage scale for all vessels of foreign registry signing articles in American ports.
4. "The eight-hour day as a maximum for the marine industry with 44-hour week in port.
5. "That there be no overtime work without pay. Overtime pay to be at the rate of sixty cents an hour for all sea-going and coastwise vessels.

CONFERENCES AND MEETINGS IN ALL PARTS OF COUNTRY FEATURE LABOR DEFENSE DAY

The conferences and mass meetings being held thruout the country on Labor Defense Day, Sunday, Sept. 13, will supply the mass basis that will make International Labor Defense the outstanding champion of persecuted workers in America. In practically every large center in the country conferences of delegates from workers' organizations are gathering on Sunday afternoon to set up local working bodies that will rouse the whole labor movement to renewed interest and action for its class war prisoners. These conferences will be aptly followed by huge meetings of protest against the persecution and deportation of working-class fighters.

The agenda of the local conferences which meet Sunday afternoon in most of the major cities and many smaller ones from New York to Los Angeles, include concrete points dealing with the immediate work of Labor Defense. The formation of permanent, solid membership organizations in the cities in which conferences are being held will be the chief task. The local units of International Labor Defense will consist of permanent, individual dues paying membership branches and collective affiliations from workers' organizations such as trade unions, benefit societies, co-operatives, etc.

Zeigler Case.

The feature of both the conferences and mass meetings will be the defense of the 15 coal miners of Zeigler, Ill., who are face to face with being railroaded to prison by a conspiracy between their own union officials and the mine operators. The white terror in Europe will be an important consideration before the conferences and resolutions of protest will be passed and sent to the Polish, Roumanian Bulgarian and Esthonian ambassadors at Washington. Agitation for the release of the two soldiers, Crouch and Trumbull, who are now in Alcatraz Prison, California, will be considered and resolutions asking their release will be sent to the United States war department.

Endorse National Conference.

The local conferences will endorse the resolutions and constitution of International Labor Defense that were formulated by the National Defense conference held in Chicago last June and will elect local executive committees to direct the work of the units set up. The first work of the new organizations will be the raising of funds for the Zeigler defense and for supplying aid to the more than one hundred class war prisoners in the jails of America and their families.

UNORGANIZED MINERS STRIKE FAYETTE PITS FOR WAGE INCREASES

MONESSON, Pa., Sept. 11.—Over three hundred men are on strike at the two mines of Jamison Coal & Coke Co. at Perryopolis, according to reports.

It is rumored that at least seven hundred miners will strike at the Washington Coal & Coke Co. at Star Junction.

The unorganized miners are wanting more pay and they have been organizing for the past month.

ARREST THREE COMMUNISTS ON SOCIALIST PLEA

Call Cops When W. P. Terms Hillquit Scab

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—Morris Hillquit, leader of the socialist party, returned from England on the British vessel "The Majestic," which sailed from Southampton with a crew consisting partly of scabs. On arriving in New York, he declared that he had reserved passage on the boat and could not cancel it. This is the excuse of a leader of the socialist party, allegedly a party of the working class and pretending to represent organized labor.

Hillquit was properly met at the pier when he arrived, by Communists and I. W. W.'s. In the evening the socialist party held a meeting at 10th street and Second Ave. The Workers (Communist) Party put up a stand at the opposite corner. Several comrades went into the socialist crowd carrying one of the banners which they carried during the demon-

ITALO-GERMAN PACT WORRIES RIVAL POWERS

"Pact" Develops Into Race for Plunder

GENEVA, Switzerland, Sept. 11.—The intrigues of European imperialistic governments to come out of the proposed "security" pact with the advantages over rival participating countries took the form of a reported understanding between the governments of Germany and Italy to fight for each others demands. The foreign ministers of France, Belgium, England, Italy and Germany are scheduled to meet at Lausanne soon.

The Baldwin government is alarmed at the reported alliance between the Mussolini and Hindenburg governments, as British imperialism has been looking upon Italy as a potential Mediterranean ally. The new grouping is also a blow to French imperialism, which aims to prevent the strengthening of German capitalism.

The name "security" pact has been changed to "Rhine" pact, because Great Britain has flatly refused to discuss the question of Germany's eastern frontiers, and would limit negotiations to a pact agreeing to support France and Belgium against possible invasion from Germany. France wishes to make sure that Poland is allowed to retain all her territory, as Poland is under the thumb of French imperialism. And the German capitalists wish to extend their eastern frontiers at the expense of Poland.

The European imperialist powers are contemplating a combined alliance against Soviet Russia, but are meanwhile, fighting to win more boodle at the expense of their rivals.

Hope Fades for Boy Buried in Brickyard Under Mass of Clay

Hope that Thomas Zygil, 14, might be rescued alive dwindled as a fresh crew of volunteer workers began burrowing thru the 40-ton mass of clay and earth which slipped from its place on the hillside and buried the boy as he was playing in the Bohnsack Brick company clay pit with two companions.

Rescue efforts started almost immediately and a steam shovel was brot into play to expedite the work.

Hundreds drenched by a heavy rain, stood by behind police lines awaiting reports of progress.

Dunne at Milwaukee

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 11.—The Milwaukee Labor Defense Day demonstration will be at the Labor Temple, 808 Walnut, at 8:00 p. m. The speaker will be Wm. F. Dunne, editor of the DAILY WORKER. The meeting will be preceded in the afternoon by a conference representative of workers' organizations in Milwaukee. Milwaukee workers are invited to attend both the conference and the mass meeting which will put the Milwaukee labor movement on record for the release of class-war prisoners and for the building of International Labor Defense.

Indiana Worker Electrocuted.

FORT WAYNE, Ind., Sept. 11.—Francis Henry Monahan, 18, painter of Van Wert, Ohio, was electrocuted at a sub-station of the Indiana Service Corporation here today when he came in contact with a high tension wire carrying 43,000 volts.

SAVING DAILY WORKER BECOMES SERIOUS BUSINESS FOR ALL OF MILITANT WORKING CLASS

Every Communist Must Swell the Ranks

THE two thousand dollar mark was passed yesterday as a few score more of party branches and fighting workers added their names to ranks of DAILY WORKER savers. "We must save our daily paper and we will save it," is the chorus that answers the DAILY WORKER'S call for help.

Thus do Communists react in the face of danger, with redoubled courage and energy. The danger is not over. The front ranks have been formed and have made a splendid beginning. But the task must be completed. Within the next ten days the many thousands of workers who have not yet taken their place in the army of DAILY WORKER savers must step forward to send in the remaining four-fifths of the $10,000 emergency fund.

KUOMINTANG IN CONVENTION AT SAN FRANCISCO

Parade Stirs Chinese, Angers Imperialists

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 7.—(By Mail)—Yesterday morning at 11 a. m. along Kearney and Bush streets and thru the heart of Chinatown, there marched nearly 2,000 delegates of the Kuomintang, who are attending the national convention of the Chinese nationalist party.

Led by a fine band (Chinese) of 30 pieces, besides a Chinese boys' band of 17 pieces, with every delegate wearing blue hat bands inscribed "Hands Off China," with similar banners and carrying the flag of the Canton South China republic along with the five barred flag of the Republic of China, they marched along with precision and determination in their bearing.

Chinatown was plastered and hung with banners and posters in red, with pictures of Dr. Sun Yat Sen and revolutionary slogans. All Chinatown was agog with interest.

A couple of Britishers, with their inevitable canes, who were encountered along the route of march, were visibly upset but pretended they didn't notice the parade. It may be they were the "unofficial eyes" of the British secret service, but if they didn't enjoy the spectacle, your correspondent did.

It being the Frisco christians day of worship, a catholic church on the corner of Grant Ave. and California St. disgorged its wealthy be-silked and be-satined congregation just in time to witness the parade. The good christians finding themselves among so many "heathen" milled around not knowing what to say or where to look.

Amalgamation of Rail Unions Big Subject Before Conference and a Canadian committee was organized.

Reviving After Depression.

"The movement has suffered a depression with the loss of the shopmen's strike, largely because of the most militant workers being blacklisted and the unions themselves being reduced to impotence. But a new spirit is being manifested among the rank and file, who complain bitterly against the unions' higher officialdom, which has uniformly sabotaged the amalgamation movement and prevented its possible progress. The present conference gives great hope of shaping a policy which will combat this official opposition to the amalgamation movement, which movement is the only hope of saving the unions from utter annihilation and making them into fighting organizations ready to battle for the interests of the railway workers.

Amalgamation Lesson Learned.

"The lessons of the great strike should not be lost. The weakness of the unions shown in the strike to be reside in craft separation, with some unions working while the rest were striking, is the unanswerable argument for amalgamation; and the Daugherty injunction and the use of all agencies of the capitalist government to crush the strike has likewise stimulated the workers to work for the formation of a great labor party to be based upon the trade unions, bringing in all workers' organizations which realize that labor must build up political power independent of the old political parties that have proven completely servile to the capitalist class."

The conference is to open at the Workers' Lyceum on Saturday morning. Delegates are expected from all parts of the United States and Canada.

Minneapolis Labor Invited to Meeting on Sunday Evening

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Sept. 11.—A great mass demonstration on behalf of the striking anthracite miners, is going to be held Sunday evening, Sept. 13, at 7 p. m., at Washington Square, "Seven corners." This mass meeting is arranged by the Workers (Communist) Party for the purpose of acquainting the workers of Minneapolis with the issues at stake.

The following speakers will address the mass meeting:

C. A. Hathaway, John Gabriel Soltis and Jack Bradon.

Soltis, as a practical miner in the past, will speak from first hand knowledge of the life of the coal digger. All workers should attend this meeting and demonstrate their solidarity with the heroic coal miners, who are the backbone of the American labor movement, and who never fail to help other sections of the working class when they are in distress. So be there!

Arrest Three New York Communists On Socialist Plea

stration at the pier. This aroused the workers present, who jeered the socialist speaker.

Twit Hillquit for Scabbing.

They crowded over to the platform of the Workers (Communist) Party, where Comrade Amter showed up the treachery of the "yellow scab socialist Hillquit, who for this act of treachery to the organized workers, should be thrown out of the labor movement."

Amter spoke for about 30 minutes, when a policeman arrived demanding that the speaker present the permit for the meeting.

No permit is required in New York, and the cop knew it. The speaker informed him that police had been notified of the meeting and that is all that is required. This seemed to satisfy the cop for a moment, for he went away and the meeting proceeded. But not so the socialists. They had already caused the arrest of one comrade, Comrade Gordon, who acted as chairman of the meeting and they evidently insisted that the meeting of the Workers (Communist) Party be stopped.

A sergeant and the cop returned to the W. P. stand, and demanded that the crowd disband. Amter remonstrated with them for a time, and finally declared that he would continue with the meeting, and that the cop could arrest him. He spoke a few more words and was then arrested.

Court Has to Ponder.

Comrade Jack Stachel immediately mounted the platform, but was immediately arrested by the cop. There were no further comrades on hand, otherwise the cop would have had his hands full. The International Labor Defense bailed out the two comrades, who were put under $500 bonds each. Comrade Gordon was fined $2, and not having the amount was dismissed.

The judge considered the cases of Amter and Stachel and has to consult the law, in spite of the fact that Joseph R. Brodsky, the attorney of the International Labor Defense, pointed out that the law is on the side of the defendants. The matter will come up before the court later.

Seamen of United States Call Strike on All Seaboards

6. "Better food and living conditions.

7. "That the ship furnish clean bed line once a week, mess gear, towels and soap also to be furnished by the company.

8. "That logging only be permitted if a member of the crew fails to turn to for a whole work day in port, the same to be at the rate of 'one for one.'

9. "That the delegates of the I. W. W. shall have access to all ships and docks.

10. "That all men shall be hired from the Marine Transport Workers No. 510 hall."

Spread to All Seaports

Interviewed by the DAILY WORKER yesterday, Bob Hayes, secretary of the Chicago branch of the M. T. W. stated that the action taken by the Manhattan branch was expected to be concurred in by all or nearly all branches and to become effective at once especially on the Atlantic and Gulf coasts where the chief center of struggle lies.

Hayes stated that the Chicago branch had concurred in the strike call although the lake seamen were not affected, but the local branch would give all support possible. The Chicago branch has received word that the Buffalo branch had voted to walk out.

Simultaneous action is expected from all important branches. The unorganized state of the industry as a whole may militate against a complete tie-up, but the M. T. W. means to attain leadership of the seamen by fighting for their interests and demonstrating that the I. W. W. seamen stand 100 per cent behind the British seamen who are striking against a wage cut of $5 a month.

Terror Used Against Striking Seamen

LONDON, Sept. 11.—Cables from the Australian, New Zealand and South African ports tell of the ruthless brutality used by the police of these dominions in attempts to break the seamen's strike which is tying up shipping thruout the British empire.

More than 200 strikers are in jail under sentence and with forfeiture of pay for alleged violation of their articles and "insubordination."

At Melbourne Thursday, the police surrounded the town hall where the striking seamen were holding a mass meeting, and arrested the chairman of the meeting and the whole strike committee. In spite of this policy of government strikebreaking, the seamen are standing firm and shipping is practically paralyzed.

Marseilles Conference of the Socialist International Exposes Its Character

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the delegates to the world congress of the Second (Socialist) International are back in their capitalist homelands. They were not compelled to travel far. Of the 37 parties affiliated to this international of betrayers, only eight are located in countries outside western or central Europe. Only three of these are to be found in the two Americas, the United States, the Argentine and British Guiena.

M. Philips Price reports in Lansbury's Labor Weekly (London) that 5 of the remainder are "parties on the threshold of Asia." But this does not state all of the truth. They may have one foot in Asia, but the other is firmly planted in some counter-revolutionary center in Europe. This is notably true of the menshevik socialist parties of Georgia and Armenia, two Soviet Republics. Then there are the parties in Turkey and Palestine, while the so-called Russian menshevik party still cooks its plots in Paris. What an aggregation!

The "socialist" parties may thus be said to have the confidence of West European capitalism, where they continue to eke out a meager existence as the left wing of fascism in the war on the Communists. But in addition to losing gradually the confidence of the workers of Europe, clearly seen in the reports even of social-democratic labor delegations to the Soviet Union, the facts prove the Second (Socialist) International has also completely lost the little faith that the oppressed nations and subject peoples of the two greatest continents, Asia and Africa, might have had in it in the days before the last imperialist war.

In China, India, Japan, to mention only three of the great nations of Asia, there are no "socialist" parties. None in Egypt, Morocco or South Africa, on the second greatest continent. None in the dozen countries of South America, where the class struggle is daily growing more keen. None in Central America. None in Mexico, nor in Canada, and Morris Hillquit, the representative of the dwindling sect that still calls itself the American "socialist" party, returns across the Atlantic to New York City on the scab-manned steamship, the Majestic.

This is the international, the conscious and deliberate betrayer of the workers, that cowers before the Communist International that has already planted the red flag of workers' emancipation over half of Europe and Asia, and whose call to struggle has met response in every country upon the face of the globe. The "socialist" international lives as an anti-Soviet propaganda agency and even the non-Communist writer, Price, is forced to declare:

> "It would be interesting to know who provides the funds for this anti-Soviet propaganda inside the labor and "socialist" international. The Russian government has every reason to demand a quid pro quo."

Price should not be compelled to go far for his answer. There is only one power interested in the overthrow of the Workers' Republics. That power has its headquarters in the seats of the great capitalist nations. It was capitalism at Paris, that selected a French "socialist" as its ambassador to French Indo-China, on the borders of revolutionary South China.

• • • •

This is the hideous face that the Second (Socialist) International presents not only to the workers of the United States, but to world labor.

Irretrievably wrecked during the war, it tried to recuperate thru reorganization in a conference held at Hamburg, Germany, in 1923. But it has signally failed. No greater testimony to this fact is needed than the present conference just adjourned at Marseilles.

AS WE SEE IT -:- By T. J. O'Flaherty

own the resources of this country own the government and run it.

IT may be news to many, and good news at that, to learn that Chester Wright, former socialist, later on stool pigeon for the government during the war, again press agent for Samuel Gompers, and after Sam's demise wild cat stock peddler, is now back in Washington at his old trade of press agenting for anybody willing to pay for the output of his pen. We hear that Wright is now on the payroll of some international union. No doubt he will take an occasional stab at the Communists, provided he gets paid for it.

WE remember reading a very poetic effusion, tho not gotten out even in free verse style, from the pen of Mr. Wright, chanting the praises of a piece of oil territory which dame fortune and his own wisdom placed in his hands. Chester, like a good fellow was willing to let the working class in on it. He knew the labor fakers were too foxy to fall for anything backed by one of themselves, so he appealed to the rank and file of the trade union movement and to the small fry officials. Evidently Wright did not strike oil either in the pockets of the trade unionists or in Texas. So he sadly decided to leave the task of emancipating the workers one by one to some other missionary.

IT is rumored "in quarters usually found reliable" that the officials of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers are between two minds, whether they should let the union run the banks or have the banks run the union. As a matter of fact the banks and other institutions established under the leadership of Warren S. Stone, are now running and ruining the union. Our modern labor fakers look on the unions as so many necessary nuistances, that must be tolerated because they are useful in giving them cnotrol over the workers and enabling them to make connection with their pocketbooks.

BUSINESS unionism is in the saddle in the United States at the present time. But it is riding to a fall and when the crash comes, the labor skates will run for cover faster than hares. The workers cannot free themselves from capitalism by competing with capitalism in making profit under the profit system. The only way they can free themselves from poverty, over-work, long hours and intellectual starvation is to abolish capitalism. This is what the Russian workers are doing and according to reliable information they are succeeding very well.

THE capitalist papers carried a news item a few days ago to the effect that the "extremists" at the British Trade Union Congress lost out on the One Big Union plan. The fact is that this proposition was backed by one of the sloppiest reactionaries in Britain, a fellow by the name of Jack Jones, who sometimes sings the Red Flag in the house of commons and on the day following may present a bouquet of flowers to Queen Mary's daughter. The real radicals favored a plan for giving power to the General Council of the Trade Union Congress to call on all the unions to strike together for a common purpose. This is the best way to bring about solidarity. Unity for action!

SIGMAN USING GANGSTERS AND COPS ON WORKERS

Brutal Assaults Upon Left Wing Pickets

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 11.—Another brutal assault on members of the International, Ladies' Garment Workers' Union occurred in front of the dress shop of Alexander Weiss, 368 East 148th Street, the Bronx.

This is one of the shops called on strike by the Joint Committee of Action following the discharge of workers for participating in the stoppage of August 20th. Workers were peacefully picketing when a crowd of gangsters appeared and started an attack.

Sigman's Union Disruption

Sam Grossman of 282 Liggett Ave., was badly beaten and his right eye was severely bruised; Sam Weintraub of 841 Jennings Ave., was also hit about the head and face and both men had to be treated by a physician. After being assaulted in this manner, they were both arrested, together with Morris Neuman of 425 East 170th St., and 2 gangsters and were taken to the East 161st Street Police Station on a charge of disorderly conduct. They were paroled in the custody of their lawyers.

During this attack by the gangsters, Anna Rosen of 2931 West 25th Street, Coney Island was hit over the head and chased by a thug into the hallway of a neighboring building where the tenants protected her. Ida Lifsky of 18 East 108 Street fainted as a result of the attack on the pickets.

Promises of State's Attorney

This case will probably be cited when the whole history of the joint board's use of gangsters to terrorise workers during the past three months is told to the grand jury by District Attorney Banton. Assistant District Attorney Pecora promised the Joint Committee of Action on Tuesday that drastic steps would be taken to stop these continued assaults.

Sam Sabalofsky, and other workers from the shop of Shulman Bros. which was raided last Friday, will appear with representatives of the Joint Committee of Action to tell their story to the grand jury tomorrow.

Injunction Postponed

The hearing on the injunction taken out by Artman & Saltzman against the Joint Committee of Action to prevent picketing of their shop, was postponed until Sept. 15. The injunction of Roth Costumes Inc., comes up for hearing in the N. Y. state supreme court tomorrow.

Police and Courts Play Sigman's Game

There were two more girls arrested in front of the S. Zweig Dress Shop at 500, 7th Ave. They were Ray Wolfson and Mollie Lutswitz, both of whom were taken to Jefferson Market court and there fined $10 each on a charge of disorderly conduct.

The four girls arrested at this shop the day before, Anna Moskowitz, Mollie Rosen, Esther Weissberg and Marion Gross, were arraigned and fined $2 each.

A man arrested at the same time, but not one of the picketers from the ranks of the Joint Committee of Action, was dismissed without fine.

ELECTION FRAUD OF FARRINGTON IS LAID BARE

Daily Worker Gives the Facts to Miners

throw a light on an important link in the chain of treason of the crooked labor leaders and their coal-company allies.

The Trail of the Thieves.

The DAILY WORKER has uncovered the following facts concerning the stealing of the sub-district election of last December:

Shortly before the union election two men, as yet unidentified, but believed to have been connected with the ku klux klan and the Farrington machine, appeared at the printing shop of J. W. Grear in West Frankfort, where the official ballots had been printed for the sub-district election of the union. The unknown men asked Grear to print 5,000 additional copies of the ballot from the same type, and offered to pay well. Grear refused the offer.

The agents of reaction in some way obtained a copy of the official ballot, and went to another printer to get some fraudulent ballots printed.

But it was impossible for the second printer to make an exact duplicate that could not be detected. The original ballot had been printed from imperfect type—that is, type that was battered and broken. This could not be imitated with any other type.

Method of the Counterfeiter.

For this reason it became necessary for the forgers to make a photographic likeness of the original ballot, so that the peculiarities of the broken type would be the same. The original ballot was taken to a photo-engraving shop. The photo-engraver made what he thought was an exact reproduction of the type of the ballot, down to the slightest detail, broken type and all, with one exception—the engraver apparently was afraid to reproduce the printers' union label because there is a law penalizing the making of a duplicate of the union label for purposes of deception. So the engraver left the union label out of the engraving.

Apparently for the reason that the union label was missing, and because it was necessary to supply this deficiency, the forgers seem to have hunted up a printing shop having a label with the same shop number as the shop where the original ballot was printed.

The original ballot has on it the union label bearing the number "3" and the name of the town, "West Frankfort," which means that it was printed in the shop of J. W. Grear of West Frankfort.

The forged ballot also carries a union label number 3, but with the name of the town mutilated so that it cannot be read. An expert photographer has photographed this label, however, thru a powerful magnifying lens, and the experts agree that it reads "Mt. Vernon, Ill." This would at least superficially indicate that the forged job was printed in the shop having the label number 3 in the town of Mt. Vernon, a few miles from West Frankfort. The printing shop in Mt. Vernon which uses the label No. 3, is the shop of Theo. P. Stelle. However, the DAILY WORKER in the absence of more conclusive evidence cannot make the charge that the forged ballot was printed there. A close comparison of the label on the forged ballot to the label appearing on work done by Stelle's shop seems to confirm the identity of the labels, altho it is of course possible that Stelle's label was stolen and used in another shop.

Union Label Mutilated.

The smearing of the printers' label was necessary in order to conceal the fact that the forged ballot was not printed in the authorized shop.

WEST FRANKFORT PRINTER IN AFFIDAVIT SWEARS BALLOTS USED IN ELECTION WERE BOGUS

STATE OF ILLILNOIS
FRANKLIN COUNTY } ss.

J. W. Grear, being duly sworn upon his oath, states that he is engaged in the business of job printing, at West Frankfort, Illinois, and that he was employed by Frank Johnson, secretary of Sub-District No. 9 of District No. 12, U. M. W. of A., state of Illinois, to print the official ballots for the biennial election for sub-district officers, which was held on Tuesday, December 9, 1924. And did so print said ballots, and he further states upon his oath, that the annexed ballots were not printed by him, and is not, to the best of his knowledge, and belief, an official ballot for said election; that he has no knowledge of where said ballots were printed, that he did not print them; that the omission of periods, a blurred union lable, and other defects is conclusive proof to his mind, that the annexed ballot was not one of the official ballots printed by him.

The forgers thought they had covered their trail. However, a peculiarity of the printing process betrayed the fraud. As long as the ink on the printing press was freely distributed, the label appeared only as a black smudge. But after examining hundreds of the bogus ballots, the DAILY WORKER has found one on which the ink had run thin. On this one ballot it has been possible to read with a powerful magnifying glass the name "Mt. Vernon, Ill."

Other Marks of Fraud.

On obtaining copies of both the official ballot and the bogus ballot, the DAILY WORKER set out to prove the fraud practiced in the sub-district election. Detail by detail, the proof was worked out and is now published for the benefit of the members of the United Mine Workers.

The next evidence of fraud discovered was that the faking photo-engraver had made the mistake of making the engraving larger than the original type of the ballot. A measurement of the two ballots shows that the printed area of the bogus ballot is about 5-16 of an inch longer than that of the good ballot, and about 3-16 of an inch wider. This surprisingly clumsy error is alone enough to betray the fraud. But the counterfeit is even more definitely shown by the fact that the lettering on the bogus ballot is of an odd size that does not exist in printers' type. On the good ballot the large type is of the size known as "18 point." On the fake ballot the same lettering measures more than 18½ points. Type of such a size never was known to the printers' trade—never was manufactured. The odd size proves that the bogus ballot was not printed from type at all, but from a photographic reproduction which slightly enlarged the original.

Next the DAILY WORKER had the bogus ballot examined by an expert photo-engraver, who pronounced definitely that it had been printed from an engraving and not from type. This expert noticed that several periods and commas had been lost in the acid process, which had also left blurred edges on the type in several places, such as would be impossible except in an engraving. He then discovered the marks of the turned-up edges of the zinc plate from which the engraving was made, and one place where unmistakably the engravers' routing machine had cut a semi-circular gash in a piece of box rule.

By such means the DAILY WORKER was able to establish beyond a shadow of doubt that fraudulent ballots were used in the election.

How the Steal Was Put Over.

The next step was to find out to what extent the fraud affected the election results. This search reveals a grimy trail which leads from the union election of last December directly up to the present point of the murder of one faithful member of the union and the effort to lock into the penitentiary 15 others for no other reason than to get them out of the way of the crooked labor leaders and their coal-company allies.

It is not possible to prove exactly every instance in which the bogus ballots were used to swamp the election. The only place in which the DAILY WORKER has been able to obtain actual possession of the bogus ballots is Buckner, Ill. In several other local unions it is morally certain that the ballots counted were not the ballots cast by the union members. The most glaring instance of this moral certainty is in the case of Local Union No. 789 of West Frankfort, taking the race between the progressive candidate, Frank Johnson, and the reactionary Farrington machine candidate, E. B. Loden. In this local union Johnson received the nomination. Yet in the election the official returns showed Johnson as receiving only 77 votes as against 538 votes for Loden. The coal miners take this as prima facie evidence of something crooked. But copies of the ballots that were cast there are unobtainable.

At Buckner the case is absolutely clear. Here the tellers met at the union office on the night of the election, December 9. The ballots were brought in late and all of the tellers were tired. As it was midnight someone suggested that the ballots be locked up for the night and that the tellers return the next day to count them. This was agreed to, and the ballots were left on the desk, the door of the office was locked.

Next day when the tellers returned, a stack of ballots was on the desk, apparently the same as the night before. These were counted and showed an overwhelming majority for the Farrington machine candidates. As it was known that the miners of this local were largely opposed to the machine candidates, this aroused suspicion.

Frank Johnson, progressive candidate for sub-district secretary treasurer, told the tellers, "The genuine ballots were marked by me for identification. I marked them with a light yellow crayon on the bottom edge of the stack. You cannot see the yellow crayon on a single ballot, but when you stack them up you can see the yellow mark." The ballots were stacked up and showed no sign of the yellow mark.

Burglar Methods.

The office was then searched, and it was found that the door had been jimmied open during the night. Later it was discovered that the initials of the secretary on the backs of the ballots seemed not to be in the handwriting of the secretary, Sam Congardo. Nevertheless, the tellers decided to turn in the vote as genuine.

It was from this set of ballots that the DAILY WORKER obtained the samples of the counterfeit.

Throw Out Good Ballots.

When the returns of the sub-district came in, it was shown that in spite of whatever frauds were perpetrated with the bogus ballot, at least one of the candidates of the progressive slate, Frank Johnson, was elected. Johnson had been elected on the face of the returns by 4659 votes as against 4411 votes for his highest opponent, the candidate of the Farrington machine, E. B. Loden.

But the machine could not afford to have the important office of sub-district secretary-treasurer in the hands of the progressives, and so decided to throw out enough ballots to beat Johnson.

This was done. In Local No. 992 at Zeigler, Ill., the progressive slate had run highest, Henry Corbishley having received 640 votes for snub-district president, as against 241 for Lon Fox, the machine candidate, and Frank Johnson 555 votes as against the reactionary Loden's 154 votes for secretary-treasurer. Johnson's lead of 401 votes in this one local union was enough to make the difference between his election or defeat.

To throw out the returns of this Zeigler local would, therefore, be alone sufficient to wipe out the last candidate of the Progressives and leave the control of the sub-district completely in the hands of the Farrington machine.

The machine found a way to throw out the Zeigler local's vote.

Alex Hargis Helps Crooked Game.

Farrington had his man in the office of recording secretary of Zeigler Local No. 992. It was Alex Hargis, who is believed by the miners to be a member of the ku klux klan, and certainly known to be a tool of the Farrington machine. The constitution of the U. M. W. of A. requires that the election returns of any local, in order to be counted, must be signed by the recording secretary of the local.

The machine saw to it that the recording secretary, Hargis, refused to sign the returns. Then the machine ruled that since the recording secretary failed to sign the returns, the vote of the big Zeigler local was illegal.

Another local, No. 2657 at West Frankfort, where the progressives ran a high vote which it was impossible to overcome with the fraudulent ballots, was thrown out on the excuse that the returns were sent in by special delivery mail whereas the rules require that they be sent in "by registered mail." A smaller local at Rend City was thrown out on the ground that the returns were not in the mail in time.

The Trail of Fox, Cobb and Hargis.

It is now necessary to follow the trail of Lon Fox, D. B. Cobb and especially the petty tool, Alex Hargis. Fox and Cobb, as president and vice-president of the sub-district showed themselves to be the outright agents of the Bell & Zoller mine owners and worked hand in glove with both the republican party machine and the ku klux klan. Their tool, Alex Hargis, was destined to fire the shot that killed Mike Sarovich, a faithful union member and member of the Workers (Communist) Party.

When Frank Johnson, cheated of the election as sub-district secretary-treasurer, was elected by the Zeigler Local 992 as assistant checkweighman, he became an obstacle to the cheating of the miners in the weighing of their coal. Johnson discovered that the scale at the Bell and Zoller No. 1 mine was registering 80 pounds light on each car of coal. He reported this and compelled the company to correct the scales, thus costing the company thousands of dollars out of which they were swindling the miners.

Within a few days after Johnson had compelled the correction of the scales, the company discovered that under the contract with the union only one checkweighman is entitled to work at the pit-head for the miners, and Johnson was forthwith notified by the company that he would not be permitted to weigh coal. Johnson was put off the job.

But the amount of coal dug was too much for the single checkweighman to weigh, and he notified Corbishley, president of the local union, that he could not weigh the coal alone, and walked off the job. Corbishley immediately went down and told the men in the mine that their coal was not being weighed by any checkweighman.

The men threw down their picks and came up out of the pit, and an "outlaw" strike was on.

Corbishley called a mass meeting. It was pointed out that the contract required that the men keep on working until the case could be settled, and Corbishley advised the men in the mass meeting to continue work accordingly, which they decided to do.

Union Officials to the Rescue of the Bosses.

The sub-district president and vice-president, Fox and Cobb, immediately came to the rescue of the company's right to rob the miners. They removed Corbishley as president of the local, and Mat Cernovich as secretary, and called upon the local union to hold a special meeting to elect new officers. The meeting was held on August 11.

Fox and Cobb came to the union meeting, Cobb carrying a blackjack in his pocket. Their tool, Alex Hargis, came carrying a gun.

The two sub-district union officials made lame speeches showing that they had no interest in the affair except to protect the company in the right to short weight the miners. The miners were angered and the discussion became heated. Thereupon Cobb lost his head and pulled the blackjack from his pocket. A coal digger jumped on him and jerked the weapon from his hand, and this incident created a disturbance.

In the excitement, Alex Hargis, with the gun in his pocket, worked his way toward the door. After making sure of his get-away, with one foot on the stairway, Hargis turned, drew his gun and began firing point blank into the crowd of union miners a few feet away.

A bullet from Hargis' gun tore thru the entrails of Mike Sarovich, who fell mortally wounded, to die in the hospital later.

The long trail of treachery had reached the point of murder.

Prosecute the Victims, Not the Guilty

Right away the cowardly Cobb (who, needless to say, was roughly handled by the workers in the scrimmage) ran screaming to the capitalist courts to wreak vengeance upon the workers. Twenty-five of the best, most outstanding figures among the members of Zeigler Local Union No. 992 were arrested on Cobb's complaint and charged with "conspiracy to murder."

Later this charge was dropped, but 15 of the miners are being prosecuted for "assault with intent to kill," with Cobb as complaining witness.

Of course, Frank Farrington, the "inside scab" who serves the coal companies from the advantage of his position as district president of the union, has declared that he will back up the prosecution of the workers with all his resources, including the treasury of the Mine Workers' Union.

An Old Fight Flames Again.

This is not the first time that blood has flowed in the mine fields of Southern Illinois. The trouble goes back twenty years, to 1905, when the big Zeigler mine was opened under the ownership of Joe Leiter, who began armed warfare against the unionization of the plant. Gunfire has been heard before both at Zeigler and the nearby historic town of Herrin. Out of the terrific struggle have emerged some of the best men ever known to the labor movement—and also some of the worst inside scabs that ever worked for the bosses within the Mine Workers' Union.

It is safe to say that among the best are Henry Corbishley and the others of the fifteen heroes who face the danger of long prison terms at Zeigler, and among the worst are the scabs and company gunmen who, with Frank Farrington at their head, control this district of the United Mine Workers.

The struggle, after all, is a struggle to take away from these thugs the control of the United Mine Workers. It has cost Mike Sarovitch his life, and it may cost Corbishley and the others their liberty, but it must go on until the union belongs to the mine workers, and until the final victory over Farrington's masters, the bosses and their class.

MINER OFFERED BRIBE FOR SUPPORTING MEN PICKED BY MACHINE

AN example of the way the crooked game has been played in the southern Illinois coal fields is shown in an old letter which a coal miner exhibited to the DAILY WORKER. The man who wrote the letter is dead now. "He wasn't as bad as most of them," said the coal miner who has the letter, "and so I ask you not to print his name. He got ashamed of the crooked game before he died. The letter was written to Jack Carso. He's dead now, too. Before Jack died he gave me this letter to show to the boys, so they would understand how it is they are swindled by the machine. Here it is:"

(The letter is on the stationary of a subdistrict executive board member at Benton, Ill., and the blurred date appears to be November 23, 1916.)

"Mr. Jack Carso,
"Christopher, Ill.
"Dear Sir and Bro.

"These are the names that I would like to see elected; they are good men. If you get to go to Zeigler or Johnson City some time see some of the boys and have them work for them.

"If they are elected old Santy Claws might come to see you. Destroy this when you are through."

The last paragraph, Sam Carso said, was a promise of a share in the large amount of bribe money that was being paid out by the machine to buy up all of the local leaders in the union who were able to influence the rank and file. By this method the union was kept in a debauched condition for many years and the machine was kept in power. That the coal companies supplied the union officials with the money for bribery is the inference. But recent events show that this method is supplemented by the use of the automatic pistol and the gunman, as witness the dead body of Mike Sarovich, and by the organized crime of the ku klux klan, as witness the klansman Alex Hargis, who killed Mike Sarovich.

It is further supplemented by the present collaboration of the union officials with the capitalist criminal courts, as shown by the present prosecution of 25 of the best and most loyal union members for "conspiracy to murder" with D. B. Cobb, sub-district vice-president of the union, acting as the chief state's witness, while Frank Farrington, district president, making use of the whole financial resources of the union, is ruthlessly goading on the prosecution.

Grand Jury Probing Sigman Gang's Raid; More Pickets Jailed

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 10.—The grand jury will hear on Thursday, September 10, all the details in the case of the assault of Sam Sabalofsky, of 218 East 122nd street, whose case was brought to the attention of the district attorney this morning upon recommendation of Judge Henry Goodman.

Assistant District Attorney Ferdinand yesterday interviewed Sabalofsky, Attorney Abraham Goodman, C. S. Zimmerman, representing the Joint Committee of Action, and various members of the shop of Shulman Bros. of 26 West 20th street where last Friday a group of gangsters entered the shop, attacked the 30 workers, and severely wounded Sam Sabalofsky.

There were four arrests yesterday morning on the picket line before the shop of S. Zweig, 500 7th Ave., which was called on strike two weeks ago by the Joint Committee of Action, following the discharge of workers for participating in the stoppage.

Anna Moskowitz, Mollie Rosen, Esther Weissberg and Marion Gross were arraigned before Magistrate Francis McQuaide in the Jefferson Market court on a charge of disorderly conduct and were released on $100 bail.

POSTAL UNION ASKS END OF SPY SYSTEM

Postal Service Ruled by Secret Inspectors

WASHINGTON—Thos. F. Flaherty, secretary-treasurer of the Natl. Federation of Post Office Clerks, in his annual report, to be given to the convention of the organization in Kansas City, Sept. 7-11, admits that under present conditions the postmaster is less important than before the inspectors became the actual ruling element in the service. But he argues that "the opportunities for postmasters to harrass clerks" can be minimized if men who approach the problems of the office with sympathy for the human element are promoted to these places.

Ordinarily, Flaherty observes, promotion from the ranks has had the effect of hardening the individual in his policy as a supervising officer. The antidote to this hardening tendency is prior experience as an executive in the labor movement. Trade union officers know men and the needs of men; they can learn rules without forgetting men.

Wants Spying Abolished.

Calling for a reorganization of the post office inspection force, with a restoration of the crime-detection service to the department of justice, the report emphasizes the demand of the union that overhead lookout or spying galleries in post office buildings be removed.

"No humanizing program can be complete," it says, "unless these relics of an archaic and ineffective spy system are removed. If we are to be partners in conducting the postal industry we shall insist upon being treated as the trustworthy equals of those in authority and not be constantly subjected to an objectionable espionage that stigmatizes subordinates as potential wrongdoers. . . . It is a singular fact that railway clerks, rural carriers, city carriers and other postal meployes are not subjected to a similar constant espionage."

Union Bulletins Censored.

Protest is made against Postmaster General New's policy of censorship of bulletin boards in "swing" rooms at the main offices. Unless statements from the unions are found to be laudatory of the department officialdom, they are not permitted to be posted.

"The thot is abhorrent to me," says Flaherty, "that after our long struggle to be freed from official domination and official gags, that we now, even by implication, submit to a censorship by postal officialdom of any of our news utterances."

Air Mail Landing for Post Office Planned

The new post office building planned for Chicago will boast an air mail landing platform stretching across a two-block roof. Four giant lights from each of the corners of the gigantic $15,000,000 structure will light the way for night flying pilots. If congress approves this venture at its next session the building will be set down upon the two-block site of Madison-Adams-Canal-Clinton streets.

Here and in Britain

While William Green and the principal labor lieutenants of capitalism on the A. F. of L. payroll were reading the Communists out of the American trade union movement the leading officials of the British labor movement were presenting a petition to the British Trade Union Congress in session at Scarborough protesting against the exclusion of the Communists from the British labor party.

This document calls attention to the need for the closest solidarity in the ranks of labor against the common enemy of the workers. That enemy is capitalism. Those who do not recognize capitalism as their enemy are in deadly opposition to Communist participation in the labor movement, because the Communists insist that the only way the workers can free themselves from the evils which surround them at present is to fight and overthrow the capitalist system, the cause of their misery.

The right wing elements in the labor party, led by the yellow socialists had a resolution passed which made Communists ineligible to membership in the labor party. Owing to the strong opposition that developed in the ranks of the labor party and in the trade unions, the yellow socialist exclusion against the Communists was little better than a dead letter. Each succeeding year saw the strength of the Communists increasing. The number of those who supported the rescinding of the resolution became greater and greater as the class struggle grew in intensity and the more class conscious workers learned from experience that the program of the Communists was constructive and not destructive, in fact that it was the only program that showed them a way out of the present impasse.

Thus it has come to pass that attached to the appeal demanding the rescinding of the Communist exclusion resolution from the labor party, were the names of the best known and most militant non-Communist fighters in the British trade union movement. Their records shine in comparison with those of the capitalist lickspittles who do the dirty work of the bosses in the American Federation of Labor. The names of A. B. Swales, A. Purcell, A. J. Cook, leaders of millions of workers, are known thruout the world as friends of Soviet Russia and enemies of capitalism. The Communists are as happy in the support of such men as they are in the undying enmity of Green, Woll, Berry, Lynch and the thousands of other union strikebreakers that infest the American labor movement.

International Labor Defense

On next Sunday, September 13, conferences and mass meetings will be held in several cities thruout the United States for the purpose of setting up local organizations of the International Labor Defense.

Many workers may be lulled into a feeling of fancied security by the fact that persecution on a national scale such as existed during the war and in the years immediately following, does not confront the radical wing of the American working class movement today. This is a dangerous feeling.

One has only to read the papers to be convinced that there is no let up in the campaign of the capitalists against the workers even tho the conditions under which it is waged are not so spectacular as those employed by the government in the days of Mitchell Palmer and up until the date of the Bridgeman raid.

Since the Bridgeman raid which was planned by the national government, using the state of Michigan as its instrument, the policy of the Washington administration has been to let local capitalist governments, county and state, use their powers to crush the militant workers. In some cases extra-legal organizations, such as the American Legion, the ku klux klan and the labor fakers are used for the purpose. This was the case in Zeigler, Ill., where the reactionary officials of the Illinois Miners' Union and the ku klux klan took the initiative in an attempt to destroy the progressive element in the local miners' union, not even stopping at murder to accomplish their purpose.

It is not necessary to go into detail to prove that an organization like the International Labor Defense is sorely needed. This organization is pledged to aid in the defense of all working class victims of capitalist persecution without regard to political views or affiliation. And as its name implies, the International Labor Defense links up the defense of American workers against their oppressors with the struggle between the workers and the capitalists in all lands.

Every class conscious worker should support the International Labor Defense and help to put it on its feet thruout the country so that it can accomplish the purpose its founders had in view.

Wall Street in China

We are casually informed by a Shanghai news item that the construction corps of the United States navy is on its way to Shanghai to start the construction of six gunboats for use by the navy upper Yangtze patrol by an appropriation of $6,000,000 authorized by the last congress.

It is taken for granted that the United States has as much right to patrol the inland waters of China as it has to install a prohibition agent in front of a sacramental wine store in dry America.

How many American workers compare the acts of the United States government in South America and Asia with that government's professions of loyalty to the principle of self-determination? Have the Chinese no right to run their own country?

American, British, Japanese and French capitalist governments are riding rough shod over the rights of the Chinese. They are doing this because there is profit to be made out of the exploitation of the Chinese and because the Chinese are not yet sufficiently well organized to kick out the imperialist robbers.

The American workers should take an interest in what is happening in China. They should see to it that no warships are built that will enable the House of Morgan to hold its greedy talons on the throats of the Chinese workers and peasants. The struggle of the workers and peasants of China for their emancipation from the yoke of foreign imperialism should have the whole hearted support of the workers and farmers of all countries.

WASHINGTON —(FP)— W. Jett Lauck's summary analysis of the anthracite monopoly, prepared for the U. S. Coal Commission and submitted to that body with two large typewritten volumes of text on March 23, 1923, is at last to be accepted by the commission and made a part of its five-volume report, which will be published in October.

Only the summary analysis, however, will appear; the two volumes showing how the anthracite monopoly was formed and of what it is composed, how it works and who gets the benefit of its exactions, will not be permitted to reach the public.

In the commission's own words, printed at the head of the summary: "The commission considered the documents prepared by Lauck as preliminary studies for its personal guidance in advance of the completion of its own original investigations rather than as staff reports prepared for publication. The commission did not adopt these documents as part of its own findings, but transmitted them along with its own reports for the information of congress. The committee on printing decided not to print them in full because of the large cost involved... The complete text of the report with supporting appendices may be examined in the files of the commission on application to the director of the geological survey."

The fact is that the commission made no "original investigations" of its own as to the anthracite monopoly, and the Lauck report was unwelcome in that meaningless document.

In his summary, Lauck says that the "monopoly and other conditions which have been condemned and ordered dissolved by the supreme court" (but which have not really been changed to any extent) include the concentration in ownership and control of coal-mining operations and of coal land reserves by the railroads traversing the different anthracite fields; development of a community of interest between the seven coal-carrying railroad systems in the anthracite region; imposition of large issues of watered stock and other unwarranted capital charges upon the industry; concealment of excessive monopoly profits thru multiple corporations; fiscal control of anthracite by the Morgan banking interests and their allies, who have apportioned the anthracite traffic among the seven railroads; extension of the combination to retail trade, thru a corporation created to direct retail distribution in Boston, New York and Chicago.

He then analyzes the failure of 50 years of attempts to legally dissolve the anthracite combine, and declares that under existing laws the trust is secure.

SOVIET RUSSIA GIVES FARMERS OF U. S. LAND

Homesteads Opened in Volga and Caucasus

NEW YORK, Sept. 11. —(FP)— Homestead tracts in the fertile Volga region and in the Caucausus, are offered to American farmers by the Society for Technical Aid to Soviet Russia which is acting for the Soviet government. The offer, advertised several months ago, is now going into effect, and the Technical Aid Society is undertaking a campaign to acquaint American agriculturalists with the project.

Land will be rent free, subject to tax only and leases are renewable in 12 years if the homesteader proves competant. None but expert farmers are desired, for the purpose of the government in giving up this land is to get trained western farmers whose crops and methods will serve in the national program of building up the agricultural industry. Tracts per farmer will range from 15 to 50 dessiatins, or up to more than 130 acres, and each immigrant will be expected to furnish an average of $30 capital in equipment per dessiatin of land. Further information may be secured at the society's office, 799 Broadway, New York City.

The general crop situation shows little improvement since last month, the crop reporting board of the department of agriculture announced today. The yields of spring grains are running slightly over earlier expectations, but potatoes, and most of the other crops show further decline, on the whole, the board said, crop yields will be below the average of recent years.

I. W. W. BOYCOTT BRITISH SHIPS; SCAB CREW SHORT

American Communists Aid British Strike

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 11—"How interesting," was the comment of Morris Hilquit, socialist millionaire coal dealer and lawyer and returning delegate of the American socialist party to the Second International congress recently held in France when informed that his returning home on a scab steamer struck by British seamen was resented by several hundred Communists and I. W. W. seamen picketing the White Star Line's pier when the Majestic docked in New York City.

The scab ship was nearly on schedule tho short of crew, the boat being steered by scab quartermasters hastily recruited from the patriotic upper strata of the British naval and ex-naval clique. The Boy Scouts, too, showed their scabby training by doing the polishing on the way over.

The chief engineer, Joseph Wolf, declaimed on the superiority of oil over coal as fuel, saying that if the ship had burned coal, the stokers' strike would have left the boat still at the docks in Southampton, but the oil feeders could be run by a child and the scabs needed only a little training.

Avoiding the pickets of the Marine Transport Workers of the I. W. W., who have laid down a boycott on British shipping and are giving special attention to the Majestic, the ship sneaked thirty scab longshoremen aboard at quarantine in lower harbor to bring up baggage and mails from the hold. The Workers Party and the I. W. W. are cooperating to give the ship's scab crew a proper reception if they go ashore.

SOCIALIST PREMIER OF BELGIUM DEPORTS TWENTY COMMUNISTS

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Sept. 11.—The government, headed by the socialist premier, Vandervelde, has ordered the deportation of a score of Communists accused of "disorderly agitation."

MOTHER BLOOR ARRIVES AT END OF TRIP

Reaches N. Y. in Time for Street Battle

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 11.—Ella Reeve Bloor, the storm-petrel, arrived in New York from her cross-continent trip for the DAILY WORKER just in time to participate in the demonstration before the White Star Docks protesting against the scab seamen that brot in the Majestic, and calling attention to the fact that Hillquit of the socialist party used this particular ship on his homeward journey from the meeting of the yellow socialist Second International.

An Inspiration.

It was an inspiration to see this sixty-year-old grandmother join in with the several hundred picketers from the I. W. W. and the Workers Party in this expression of solidarity with the British seamen who are on strike. And it was very fitting and proper indeed for Morris Hillquit, the socialist party leader, to side with the capitalist class and their strikebreakers against the workers by using this scab ship.

Equally true to form was the New York police, who broke up the demonstration, beat up several of the workers, and chased them, including Mother Bloor, from corner to corner in order to save Hillquit the annoyance of hearing what some of his old time acquaintances think of his present actions.

Mother Bloor's historic trip was made as a nation-wide but lone-handed campaign to boost the DAILY WORKER. Considerable numbers of subscriptions were obtained and dozens of meetings held by her as she hitch-hiked across the North American continent.

CONN. STRIKERS GET HELP OF 11 ORGANIZATIONS

Conference Formed to Aid Thread Workers

(Worker Correspondent)

HARTFORD, Conn., Sept. 11.—At a conference of eleven organizations there was organized here the Amalgamated Aid Conference for the Willimantic "strikers" to help the strikers of the American Thread Co. of Willimantic.

Present at the conference were delegates from branches of Workmen's Circle, from the Jewish Literary Society, Jewish Union Painters Benefit Society, Workers Party, Young Workers League, Poale-Zionists etc.

The miserable conditions of the Willimantic strikers were discussed and plans were laid for further work to help them. It was decided to have a house to house collection on Sunday, Sept. 13.

An executive committee consisting of chairman M. Hurwich of the Jewish Union Painters Benefit Society, vice-chairman J. Rosenblatt of the Young Workers League; recording secretary, Hershanov of the Jewish Literary Society, financial-secretary, M. Bobrove of Branch 326, Workmens' Circle, treasurer, L. Rosenblatt of Branch 5, Workmens' Circle.

Tho Mayor Stevers and the chief of police of Hartford will not give a permit for a tag day for strikers, the Amalgamated Aid Conference for the Willimantic strikers is confident of collecting several hundred dollars with which to buy bread and other necessities for the strikers.

FOLSOM PRISON FREES WORKER AFTER 4 YEARS; LOUIS ALLEN RELEASED

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 11—Tomorrow there will come out of the California prison hell at Folsom penitentiary, Louis Allen, one of those victims of capitalist government terror who have been buried alive by the scores merely for carrying a card in the I. W. W.

This worker, whose letters from prison have been commented on as exemplifying the high order of intelligence prevailing among class war prisoners, was first arrested at Los Angeles in April 1921.

Along with eight other members of the I. W. W. Allen was convicted in the case known as "Abe Shocker, et al." Allen served a short time at San Quentin, and was then transferred to the more savage prison at Folsom, from which place he will be released at expiration of his sentence on Sept. 11.

Shocker, whose name was used to identify the case in the courts, died in San Quentin prison while serving his term on August 9, 1923, a victim of the capitalist dictatorship whose martyrdom to the cause of the workers will be remembered in American labor history.

COMMUNIST FLED TERROR, REACHES SOVIET RUSSIA

Peasants' International Questions Socialists

MOSCOW— (Enprecorr)— A member of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Rumania who escaped from the Rumanian prison during the process has arrived in Russia. The Red Aid is informed that of the sixteen prisoners who escaped none have been rearrested.

Acting upon demands of its local organizations the Peasant International has addressed the following telegram to the Marseilles Congress of the Second International.

The telegram says: "The Hamburg Congress adopted a resolution upon the support of the movement for national emancipation in the colonies. Since then giant mass movements have developed in Asia and Africa. In China, Morocco, Syria, Egypt and Sudan, India and Corea the imperialists are attempting to drown the movement in blood."

"America suppresses the Negroes and England is preparing an intervention against Canton; and intends to occupy Mosul for a long period. The plenum of your executive in this situation warned the peasants of the East against Asiatic nationalism but found no word of condemnation for the imperialist.

"This attitude convinces the peasant masses that the Second International is only a weapon in the hands of imperialism. In order to make your policy perfectly clear we ask you: (1) Are you prepared to support the movement of the peasantry for emancipation in general and the movement of the peasants in the East and in the colonies in particular?

"(2) Are you prepared to demand the end of the wars in China and in Morocco, the withdrawal of English and other fighting forces in China. The abandonment of one-sided agreements and the handing over of the occupied territory to China?

"(3) Are you prepared not only with words but also with deeds to support the peasantry of the East and of the colonies in its struggle for independence?"

Three Killed in Autos.

BLAIRSVILLE, Pa., Sept. 11.—Three persons were killed and several badly hurt when a train on the Greensburg-New Alexandria branch of the Pennsylvania railroad crashed into two autos at a crossing in Frogtown, near New Alexandria, Westmoreland county, early today, it was reported in advices reaching here.

PAINTERS' LEFT WING DISTURBS MACHINE RULE

Stevens' Strength at Montreal Dazes Gang

MONTREAL, Quebec, Sept. 11.—The reactionary machine of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers got a shock yesterday at the convention in session here, when one of the leading labor fakers, John M. Finan, discovered that the left wing had more strength than the old gang had reckoned on.

The left wing ran Dan W. Stevens of Minneapolis, quite frankly and openly as a Communist, against Finan in the contest for the first vice-presidency of the union. The machine demanded a standing vote, and were rather sorry they did so. For altho the big majority went to Finan, the left wing showed a surprising strength and the machine was rather dazed as to what to do next.

Finan was the only official not elected unanimously, and the machine is given a warning not to advance any further on its attack on the left wing, as Finan was particularly noisy in going about the country and threatening expulsions of the progressives in the local lodges. It is evident that the left wing has enough strength to make the machine pause before rushing into trouble.

Citizens' Committee Reports Show Huge Gains for Railroads

Seven railroads, the Pennsylvania, Baltimore and Ohio, Chicago and Northwestern; Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, Baltimore and Ohio, Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific and Rock Island and N. Y. C. jointly owners of land between Polk and 16th streets near the river, pleaded that they could not go ahead with terminal developments until the straightening of the river and that they could not afford the cost of that job.

A report by a citizens' committee appointed to look into the matter was sent to the railroads and Mayor Dever yesterday, which shows that huge land gains will be made by the railroads. The cost of river straightening is estimated at $3,400,000 while the gain would enable the railroads to afford the expenditure of $4,550,000.

Preacher-Leader of German Klan Jailed; Monarchists in It

BERLIN, Sept. 11.—Pastor Gothard Strohschein and his son, allegedly the American organizers of the "Knights of the Fiery Cross," the German branch of the ku klux klan, backed by German monarchists have been arrested in Breslau, the police announce.

The Strohscheins are being brot to Berlin where it is understood they will be charged with conspiracy. They are reported by the police to have been attempting to escape from Germany, when captured.

The ceremonies of the German K. K. K. are conducted with the monarchist flag as well as the American flag.

The police now refute their previous charges that the organizers of the German K. K. K. were American "swindlers' and state that they have evidence that the leaders of the movement have extensive funds contributed by American members of the ku klux klan.

A complete list of the German members of the organization has been confiscated, bearing about 1,000 names, most of whom have been identified as ultra-nationalists, between the ages of thirty and forty.

One of their stated objects is to "drive undesirables from the country."

GERMAN DELEGATION FINDS THAT PRISONERS IN SOVIET UNION ARE TREATED WELL, FAVORS EXCHANGE

MOSCOW—(Imprecor.)—The German workers' delegation has addressed a declaration to the Soviet government and to the Second International in which it says that it has visited a number of prisons and that its chief attention has been paid to the situation of the political prisoners. The delegation declares that the treatment of the prisoners is completely human.

The delegation recognizes that political crime within the Soviet Union must be estimated differently from that in capitalist countries, for the participants consciously or unconsciously support the capitalists. The German delegation is nevertheless of the opinion that despite everything something should be done in this question. In Germany the campaign for the release of the political prisoners which has been carried on for months, must be continued.

The delegation decides unanimously to direct itself to the unions and to the parties in order to obtain from the government the release of the political prisoners. The delegation asks the Soviet government if it is willing to enter into an exchange of political prisoners in the spirit of the proposal made by the Red Aid to the Second International which up to the moment is still unanswered, and upon the conditions laid down by the Red Aid.

These conditions are as follows: The Red Aid undertakes to work for the exchange of political prisoners with the Soviet government, the Second International and the governments in which its members participate. Both sections mutually undertake to inform themselves upon the situation of the political prisoners and to prepare jointly a mutual support.

Problems of the Railroaders' Left Wing

By EARL R. BROWDER.

WITH the meeting of the International Conference of the Committee for the Amalgamation of the Railroad Unions, in Chicago, Sept. 12-13, there will be value in taking a look over the transportation industry in the United States, the place of railroads in the economic life of the country, conditions of organization on both sides of class war battle front, etc., as a background for better estimating the tasks of the left wing conference of railroad workers.

Growing Importance of Railroads.

Comparison of a few statistics of 1890 and 1920, the period of emergence of American capitalism into the stage of imperialism, will show the growing dominance of railroad transportation.

In this 30-year period the total population increased by 67.93 per cent; the number of miles of main track operated increased 78.42 per cent; number of locomotives increased 123.10 per cent; investments increased 155.94 per cent; average ton-miles of freight per person increased 223.21 per cent; while the total ton-miles of freight increased 442.86 per cent.

Railway operating revenue increased from $1,052,000,000 to $6,311,000,000, an increase of approximately 600 per cent.

Increasing Exploitation of Workers.

But if the railroads have grown enormously in economic importance and revenue, the wages and conditions of the workers have not improved correspondingly. No, there has been no improvement, but on the contrary, a decided downward tendency. This was somewhat obscured by the war-time increase in wages, which looked big, altho it immediately was more than offset by rising prices. Real wages, in terms of purchasing power, are lower than 30 years ago.

Since 1920, however, and especially in the past year, there has been a tremendous drive by the employers to increase the rate of exploitation of the workers, to make fewer men handle more traffic for less wages, thereby to increase the rate of profit on railroad capital. This offensive has been quite successful from the capitalist point of view.

Volume of freight traffic is increasing steadily. The year 1923 was high above 1922, and 1924 almost held up to the previous high year, while 1925 is setting a record for volume of freight, the figure being 15 per cent above normal for the period of Jan. 1 to Aug. 22, 1925.

The growth in volume of freight is well illustrated by a comparative table of car-loadings for the first 32 weeks of the past five years, just issued by the American Railway Association, as follows:

Cars loaded, Jan. 1 to Aug. 8 (32 weeks:)

1921	23,279,253
1922	24,957,727
1923	29,953,453
1924	28,597,081
1925	30,280,136

But what happened to the workers? The number employed to handle this increasing volume of transportation has constantly diminished, and the wages paid has as constantly decreased. From the approximate 1,850,000 employed in 1920, a reduction to 1,827,425 is registered in 1923 (including numbers of scabs to break 1922 strike); in 1924 a further reduction to 1,770,96; and in 1925 still further to 1,729,134. (Figures of April each year from Monthly Labor Review, except 1920 which is from Occupation Census).

This means that 57,000 workers were eliminated from the railroads from 1923 to 1924, and more than 40,000 were eliminated between April 1924 and April 1925.

The smaller working force not only handled the larger traffic—it did this for less wages while hours of labor were increased. Thus, the amount of railroad wages, April 1923, $239,000,000, is reduced in 1924 to less than $230,000,000, more than $9,000,000 per month reduction while 1925 shows a further reduction of $2,200,000 per month.

Employers' Organizations Stronger—Workers' Weaker.

During the first post-war years, the railroad unions grew enormously, until, from a few hundred thousand members they had in 1921 about 1,500,000, or 85 to 90 per cent of all workers in the industry. These masses were demoralized and dissipated, however, because the lack of fighting policy of the union leadership, and the growingly systematic "class collaboration," left the workers helpless before the employers' offensive. After the disastrous 1923 strike there remained not more than 750,000. This number is now still smaller.

There is only a pretense of organized unity between the groups which are organized. The only nucleus of a center for common action is the Railway Employes' Department of the A. F. of L. This was so completely shattered by its criminal incompetence in handling the 1922 strike, that its membership dropped from 520,000 in 1922, before the strike, to less than 122,000 at the beginning of 1925.

While the workers' organizations have been broken up and rendered helpless, the railroad employers have continued to concentrate and consolidate their power. In addition to the well-known fact that 25 men, organized in inter-locking directorates, unite 99 of the principal railroads, operating 211,280 miles, or 82 per cent of the entire steam transportation of the country, we also have the recent government sanction, thru Coolidge, of the formal amalgamation of all railroads into a small number of systems. The unity of the railroad employers, always comparatively high, is becoming absolute.

In the above figures we have some measure of the immediate tasks of the left wing of railroad labor. It is the function of the left wing to bring organization, unity, and a fighting working class policy in the ranks of the 1,700,000 railroad workers in America. This means, also, that the historic task of the working class to take over and administer the machinery of production, and the necessary means to that end—the conquest of state power—must be made an integral part of the consciousness and program of the revolutionary railroad workers.

A tremendous task, but it is one which has been well begun by the International Committee for Amalgamation of the Railroad Unions.

French Imperialism Let Loose

By J. JACOB.

SEVEN years have barely elapsed since the end of the great carnage which cost France 1,700,000 dead and 25,821,782,000 dollars, and now French imperialism is already engaged in a new military adventure in Morocco.

This is a demonstration of the complete bankruptcy of the pacifist ideology of the bloc des gauches. They have promised peace to the world and are now making war in Morocco. We have always vigorously denounced the the demagogy of Herriot and socialists who pretend they were able to present a pacifist solution for the serious post-war problems.

Statements and symbolic gestures in favor of peace could not solve these problems.

THE outbreak of the Moroccan war is the first result of the imperialist policy that Herriot and Painleve have pursued since the 1914-18 war as faithful successors to the Clemenceau and Poincare governments.

Could it be otherwise? No.

During the 52 months' duration of the long and terrible butchery that brot Europe into such an abominable morass, the politicians of the right, radical and socialist parties, did all they could to continue the war to the bitter end.

THE conclusion of the war led to the framing of the shameful Versailles treaty which, in spite of the fact that it contained the germs of new war in every one of its articles, was approved by the left democrats and the socialist patriotic leaders. It was unable to assure world equilibrium, dictated as it was, by the victorious imperialists. Now imperialism has changed sides.

Having taken part in the war and in the preparation of the Versailles treaty the radicals and socialists had inevitably to bear the consequences.

CLEMENCEAU'S sinister document had hardly been signed when the most serious complications arose and the allies of yesterday were no longer in agreement as to its interpretation.

The incidents which took place in connection with the Ruhr occupation have disclosed the antagonisms between French and British imperialism in all their nakedness.

They have reached perfect agreement for the plunder and sharing out of conquered Germany. But once this had been done the struggle commenced for the conquest of the world market. This situation often caused sharp conflicts between France and Great Britain both of which needed new outlets. None of the internal contradictions of capitalism and imperialism which made the world war inevitable in 1914 have disappeared; the men of the bloc des gauches know this very well. Why then do they continue these pacifist statements if not to lull the working class to sleep, and to lead them towards new fields of battle where once more there will be a struggle for the capture of the world market.

SINCE 1918 there have been serious threats of war on several occasions. Now France has rushed headlong into a war in Morocco. The pacifists of the bloc des gauches' are bringing home civilization to the Riffs by means of gun fire, rifles and aerial bombardment.

The first Moroccan adventure in 1907, which was so forcibly denounced by Jaures, was the prelude to the world war. In 1911 the Algaciras affair almost started a war between France and Germany. At the present moment the fear of the national revolution becoming extended, outweighs the international complications which might arise from a Franco-Moroccan conflict, Great Britain casts an unfriendly glance towards France in view of Gibralter being on the Mediterranean coast. The Morrocan war has ressuscitated Italian designs on Tunis.

AS a matter of fact the present conflict which confronts French imperialism with the Riffs fighting for their independence is a disturbing influence to capitalists of all countries. The national revolution started by Abd-El-Krim has aroused the enthusiasm of the whole of Islam; it started in Morrocco, and if it was victorious it would extend to Algeria, Tunis, Sudan, Senegal, Indochina, Egypt and India, and all the colonial or semi-colonial countries. The loss of the colonies would be a terrible blow for France and Great Britain and would shake their entire regime. Therefore this must be prevented at all costs. Realizing this danger the entire press—including both the right and the left—is shouting for a war to a finish. Herriot and Panileve are mere playthings in the hands of the directors of the Banque de Paris at des Pay Bas, and are playing their role admirably. They continue to talk about peace and to proclaim the pacifist intentions of France in order to pacify disturbed public opinion, while at the same time they continue the war.

In any case a world war might break out. If Abd-El-Krim is beaten the various designs of the imperialist powers will become clear. French, Spanish, and British imperialists will commence quarreling over the domination of Morocco.

IF the national revolution develops, the powers will not fail to throw the responsibility onto the Soviet Union, which they are already doing, and will declare war against the U. S. S. R. The attacks against the Soviets on the part of the entire press and of the British government for the formation of an anti-Soviet front, prove that public opinion is being prepared for this possibility.

What are the socialist leaders doing in the face of this situation? As in 1914 they have entered into a union-sacree; they are deceiving the workers by lies and hiding the seriousness of the situation by pacifist statements. Just during the war they are also playing the role after the war of a wind screen behind which imperialism is hiding to carry out its sinister designs.

FORTUNATELY today there is a party which is rising up against rampant imperialism with all its forces: this is the Communist Party.

From the very commencement of the Moroccan conflict the Communist Party has taken u pa clear and definite position, issuing precise slogans capable of rallying wide masses against the Moroccan war. Every day the activity of the party is becoming more intense, and is continuing in spite of all repression; the party has already been able to rally millions of workers around its slogans. The Paris and Lille workers' congresses are a proof of this.

The French imperialists now feel that they are not only confronted with a party, but that they are faced with a mass of workers who are ready to demand peace with Morocco. They realize that if they perpetuate the folly of wanting to attack the Soviet Union they will not only be confronted with the soldiers of the Red Army, and the entire Russian people standing shoulder to shoulder to defend their revolution; but within France itself they will also be faced with the working class masses mobilized by the Communist Party in order to prevent by all means at their disposal an onslaught against the hearth of the world revolution.

The Armies of Capitalism After the War

By A. SVETCHIN

The most important conclusion drawn from the world war with regard to armed forces is that a state can only attain the maximum exertion of its fighting forces by expending all the material resources it possesses, however, considerable these may be, and not merely a part of them. Even such arch-military countries as Poland who expend half of the state budget on military needs cannot regard themselves as being materially prepared for the development of a maximum military activity within three weeks of the commencement of mobilization.

The modern field of battle has an unquenchable thirst for swallowing up material resources; there is no limit to satisfying it by means of the production of technique. No one state economy is sufficiently strong to support all military equipment even in peace time which must be adorned from the very commencement of the war. It would be suicide for any government already to start turning plough shares into swords in peace time.

A New Epoch.

Under the new state of affairs the old sphorism again cropped up "war must nourish war." This must now be understood in the sense that the main masses of fighters and the war munitions demanded must be prepared and produced during the course of the war itself. It thereby follows that the epoch of the military art of a Moltke, who carried on warfare exclusively on the basis of peace-time preparation and who had an army at his disposition in 20 days after mobilization with maximum fighting strength—such an epoch as this has ended; during the 20th century we have entered into a new period of military art, when mobilization is no longer just one point in war operations, but becomes a permanent factor. Thruout the whole length of the war until it has finally subsided capitalist states will be moving forward echelon after echelon of newly formed troops.

Two Sides to Conscription.

The second fundamental conclusion from the world war is that conscription will also remain a means of drawing masses having a national character, into the war in bourgeois countries. It forms an armed force not sufficiently flexible to respond to all the tasks presented by imperialism. Conscription creates an armed force which during the present epoch of socialist revolutions is none too serviceable a weapon in the hands of the ruling classes, and which, under certain conditions might even rise up against the capitalist states. Conscription was able to flourish in the Prussia of the 18th century which had no fleet, no colonies, and whose entire military interests were connected with uniting various German lands into one political whole.

Great Britain and France, old cradles of imperialism were always opposed to conscription and for a long time talked of the advantages of long service soldiers. It was only Sedan which compelled France to pass a law on conscription. while with Great Britain it was the experience of the world war; when these war demands had ceased to exist Great Britain returned to its beloved recruiting system. The German renunciation of conscription was signed with the Versailles peace; but the British army may be distinguished from the organizations of the conquered—the Reichswehr only by the existence of the remarkable military technique which is denied to Germany.

Cannon Fodder Experts.

Of course under these conditions conscription as a basis for forming armed forces in Europe still holds sway. It would be erroneous to assert that conscription was a brief and already completed episode in the development of capitalist Europe. The bourgeoisie purveyors of cannon fodder place exceedingly great value on the masses whom they may obtain from conscription in cases of large scale wars. But nevertheless, conscription in the 20th century is already beginning to have quite a different physiognomy as compared with that of the 19th century. It is the fund with which modern capitalist armies are built up. It still represents the main weapon of a great war on a par with the material resources gained from economic mobilization. But just as there exists a certain independent military industry, independent of the economic whole of the industry of the state, so also independent of the millions of masses who might be mobilized by conscriptions, modern imperialism strives to form a select and absolutely reliable and serviceable front line army. It is essential for them when finding and subjugating allies and also to bring violence to bear during internal struggles with the workers, and in order to mask general mobilization in case of a great war.

Spontaneous Action.

In the XIX century a stubborn fight was put up against special select troops and for uniting the whole army into one entity. Modern actuality compels imperialism to abandon this point of view. Spontaneous action of the toiling masses represents for imperialism a bill of exchange that cannot be realized at any minnte while convoy armies and expeditionary corps and permament colored regiments are regarded as good money. There is a deep cleft in the military organizations of the imperialist states dividing the permanent forces—the favorite and technically well equipped children—from the mass of armed people which actually in peace time has practically no ready frame work, but whose rapid formation is guaranteed in secret mobilization plans.

The secret armies are the first echelon always ready to commence the war in strict obedience of the command of the ruling classes. But the continuation and ending of the war will not be done by the first but by the following echelons, who will be formed of varying elements considerably, these need both a different political approach and different methods of preparation and command. The dual nature of the complete preparation of all large imperialist states is the most characteristic feature in the modern evolution of the armies of the imperialist west.

Soviet Russia As Seen by a Worker

It was with the greatest interest that I and 300 other working men and women started on our journey to Soviet Russia. We made up the delegation sent to Russia by the Swedish newspapers, Folkets Dayblad Politiken official organ of the Swedish section of the Communist International.

We left Stockholm, July 16 for a ten days' trip to that land in which the workers are the ruling class.

In spite of a thousand and one obstacles and difficulties, mostly by the Esthonian authorities who tried by all means to prevent us from reaching Russia thru their god forsaken land, we passed the border in the early morning of July 18.

Who can describe our feelings when we looked out from the car windows that morning with the mist and fog hanging over the tree tops and saw the red soldiers lining up each side of our train. Presently the International was played by the military band, the soldiers saluting, standing under attention. A reception committee bid us welcome in the name of free Russia.

The train continued to Kingiseppe only a few miles from the border. Kingiseppe a town of about 5,000 people was formerly called Jamburg and renamed in honor of the Esthonian Communist, Kingiseppe, murdered by the Esthonian authorities for his work in behalf of the exploited workers of that unhappy country.

Thousands of workers had waited over 6 hours to receive us. The station was beautifully decorated with red flags and bunting and an immense sign greeted us welcoming us in our own language.

Tea and sandwiches were served in the beautiful park and we were received with open arms and warm greetings by everybody. We were amazed! The people were all well clothed and seemed to be otherwise well taken care off. Particularly were we impressed with the youth and children. Wide awake, eager, interested.

The social-democrats in the delegation shook their heads: "That's a good show," they said, "bet you this is the best they have for miles around here"!

But time was short. We had to bid our new friends good bye and were off for Leningrad.

The train was an ordinary passenger train. The cars modern, clean and comfortable. The road in first class condition and we were making American express train speed. About noon we reached Leningrad. Leningrad! So long as workers value liberty shall your name be glorified! Your workers have contributed their full measure to the cause of freedom!

We are at the Baltic station.

Talk about crowds! Tens of thousands of singing and cheering people.

Such singing no one of us ever heard before.

The Russian workers sing the International as tho they mean every word of it.

Those who thot that our reception at Kingiseppe was arranged to fool us realized that this was no show, no acting, no artificial affair.

Indeed, this was the real thing! Genuine, sincere and spontaneous!

We were quartered at old historic Smolny. No building in the world has witnessed such happenings as Smolny Institute.

Here came the young princesses and duchesses of an old order to learn "the tricks of the trade"—spend time and money and exploit and deceive the masses. Here come the priests and monks and the nuns. Here came the dukes and high officers to have a good time—drink and be merry. But here came also revolution! Smolny Institute was the headquarters of Petrograd Soviet in "the ten days that shook the world" and after there come the delegates to conventions of all kinds. Here was now the first delegation of workers to study and learn and go back to the four corners of the world and tell the truth.

As soon as we had washed off the dust we were taken for dinner. Zeth Hoglund, ex-Communist, ex-editor of Politiken, ex-friend of Russia, ex-radical, warned me before I left that the food would be the poorest. A little black bread, a little black soup and perhaps a black egg. (No he did not say black egg)

Sure enuf! There was the black bread, but there is also white bread and plenty of both. And here comes the soup—black? Yes, and after a while the eggs and a big chunk of meat. Fair enuf I thot! Many a day I have lived on less than this. I will manage on soup, egg and meat and bread till I reach the "garden" shores of U. S. A. again.

I finished my meal and as I was elected sort of group leader I hustled away to do my duties. A while after I passed my table and found my comrades still at at with some juicy sirloin steak, French fried potatoes, tomatoes, cucumbers and combination salad in front of them. I found that after the soup fish was served then tin meat and on top of it all the most delicious ice cream I ever ate and of course, tea. I inquired for the cost of such a meal—35 kopeks (17 cents.) Compare this with what you American wage slaves pay for a meal like that under capitalist rule and management and you will realize why they are lying about Russia.

In order to accomplish the best results we divided our delegation in ten groups under a group leader. No programs were arranged for us, no suggestions made. We were at perfect liberty to go wherever we wished any and all time.

Our first visit was the workers' rest home near Leningrad. About twenty castles or villas of the old nobility were being used for that purpose. These castles were all very beautiful, both in structure and furnishing. cation with full pay and all expenses paid. I was asked if we had such homes in America. I answered yes, many of them! The quesitoner seemer rather puzzled but when I added, that isasmuch as in America the workers still permit themselves to be fleeced, the capitalists doing the fleecing used the homes themselves to rest and recuperate.

Our next visit was the Winter Palace and the Hermitage. Here we found that the capitalist press talk about vandalism and destruction was pure lies. Everything here was in perfect order and condition. One immense hall after the other with walks covered with beautiful paintings of the world's greatest masters. Articles of gold and silver and other precious metals and stones that were staggering, all of which the barbarous and blodthirsty Bolsheviki were nursing with warm and tender hands. Next day we were guests of the Leningrad Metal Workers but that will be told in another article.

SOVIET UNION WILL SEND STUDENTS TO AMERICAN COLLEGES

MOSCOW—(B Tass)—Prof. Steven Doggan, of the Columbia University, New York and director of the International Education Institute, is negotiating with the U. S. S. R. Association of Cultural Relations with Foreign Countries for the exchange of students and professors between the U. S. S. R. and America.

It is being contemplated to send five or six Russian scientific workers for carrying on their scientific investigations at various universities of the United States in the second term of the coming college year, and two learned pedagogues to get an insight into the question of education of the U. S. A. Students' excursions to America will also be organized next summer.

Restoration of Water Transport Planned by Soviet

MOSCOW, (Tass.)—The state planning commission is reported to have approved the draft five years' plan of restoration of the U. S. S. R. water transport by the People's Commissariat of Communications. The scheme provides for a series of measures to be effected in the course of the years 1925-1930 and calling for allotments of 75 million rubles for the full restoration of the waterways and 96.5 million rubles for the complete reconstruction of the river fleet.

This scheme, however, provides only for the restoration of Russian water transport conditions up to the pre-war level, so that the state planning commission has simultaneously decided to draw up a plan, and have the draft ready before the first of next July, of new construction on the union waterways such as would raise water transport conditions in the U. S. S. R. above the pre-war situation. This new scheme is naturally to be linked with the union railway development program.

Soviet Russia Kept Up Art Studies in Spite of Hardships

PRINCETON, N. J., Sept. 11.—In a lecture delivered by Professor Alexander A. Vasiliev, before the Harvard-Princeton Fine Arts Club, on Byzantine Studies in Russia, Past and Present, the professor told the students that Russia has done much to advance the systematic study of Byzantine history after the revolution and has given to Russia the reputation of occupying the first place in the history of Byzantine art.

Professor Vasiliev said that his pupils worked hard and willingly in a cold room, in spite of famine, and that, after one year, the members of his group could go to the Crimea and be able to intelligently study the archeological remains of the Middle Ages in the Crimea. This summer three of his students visited the Crimea, one of whom has already measured all the Genoise fortifications and made new copies of all Italian inscriptions.

U. S. S. R. SCIENTIFIC EXPEDITION INVITED TO SURVEY MONGOLIA

MOSCOW, Sept. 11.—A Russian scientific expedition, headed by Professor Liebedev, is to proceed to Northwest Mongolia to make a geological survey of that country at the request of the Mongolian government. The expedition intends to continue the systematic survey of the country which was started in 1923 by another Russian, M. Ratchkovsky.

BELGIAN LABOR GROUP REPORTS ON SOVIET VISIT

Greatly Impressed by Good Conditions

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, (Tass.)—The Pravda, organ of the Russian Communist Party, reproducing the reports carried by the Brussels papers whose representatives interviewed the Belgian labor delegates on their return from an extended trip in the U. S. S. R., lays stress on the generally excellent impression made on the delegates, who more especially noted the rapid improvement materially and morally of labor conditions in the Soviet republics.

It is also worth noting, remarks the Moscow paper, that the Belgian workers not only could visit different centers and other places in the union, but were also given ample opportunity to see for themselves the actual conditions of labor and could talk, unimpeded, with Russian workers in the factories.

French Interest In Soviet Union Grows, Hold Conferences

MOSCOW (Tass).—The Moscow papers note with satisfaction the genuine interest shown by various French circles for a closer and more thoro study of the real facts concerning the Union of Soviet Republics. In particular, they refer to the recent sitting of the so-called France-Soviet parliamentary group, which was held in the chamber of deputies at Paris to hear a substantial report on Soviet jurisdiction delivered by Prof, Tchlenoff.

After the meeting, the presiding French M. P. called on Krassin, ambassador of the U. S. S. R. in France, to attest the keen interest taken by the group in the matter under study.

If you want to thoroughly understand Communism—study it. Send for a catalogue of all Communist literature.

LAUNDRY CO-OPERATIVE NEEDS MEN TO BUILD INDUSTRY IN THE U. S. S. R.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—A few days ago a meeting of the laundry cooperative "Progress" was held in the office of the central bureau, 799 Broadway, Room 402, where plans for the future work have been discussed and accepted. The laundry cooperative has decided to send in the near future delegates to Russia for the purpose of selecting a proper place for such a cooperative. This cooperative has a great field of work in the Union of Soviet Republics, as this will be the first cooperative of this nature in Russia.

The cooperative needs men experienced in wet wash laundry. For all information regarding joining of this cooperative apply to the Central Bureau, 799 Broadway, Room 402, New York, N. Y., or to the secretary of "Progress," M. Rohinsky, 55 East Ave., West Haven, Conn.

Every applicant, before applying for membership, must know that he is going to the Union of Soviet Republics in order to help to develop and upbuild the industry in the Union of Soviet Republics. He also must be ready to overcome all difficulties that the cooperative may be confronted with. Only class-conscious and hard workers need apply for membership.

The Red Army---The Guardian of Peace

THE bourgeoisie and their lackeys of the Second (Socialist) International, hypocritically and falsely shout about "Red Militarism," "Red Imperialism," "The Red Danger," etc., and hence allege that the U. S. S. R. has an army.

It would be superfluous to prove that the proletarian power is not carrying on an imperialist policy and that it is of its very nature an irreconcilable enemy of any kind of imperialist aspirations. The whole structure of the Soviet regime, the very form of political training of the army in itself differs sharply from that of the armies of capitalist countries—this is sufficient to prove that the demagogical slogan "Red Imperialism" is absolutely senseless.

AS far as the numerical strength of the Red army is concerned, this is an absolute minimum. The Red army is composed of 563,000 men, i. e., one Red army man to every 231 members of the population of the U. S. S. R. and for every verst of the frontier there are only 11 men, while in Poland, which has an army of 263,000 there is one soldier for every 107 members of the population, i. e. the military force of Poland in so-called peace time is more than twice than that of the U. S. S. R. For Roumania, which has an army of 163,929 the figures work out at one soldier to 103 inhabitants, i. e. the military strength of Roumania is even greater than that of Poland. For France whose army amounts to 685,459, i. e. the proposition is one soldiers per 57 inhabitants, France's military strength as compared with U. S. S. R. is simply monstrous.

They also like to retort that in actual numbers our army is bigger than that of any other country. First, this is untrue; France for instance, has a much larger army than we have, and second, if we take into consideration the fact that it is not simply some one state which will fight against the U. S. S. R., but also the little entente, and possibly Japan, we then see that in peace time there are 843,529 men on the side of the "coalition" a figure far in excess of our army. These are sufficient reasons for saying that the Red army, with its negligible quantity of men is far from occupying the first place, and it will be truer to say, takes the last place. What do these figures signify? They signify that with an army of such dimensions there could not be even any thought of "imperialist attacks" on the part of the Soviet Union. Former Russia did have imperialist tendencies and it had an army nearly three times as big as the present one.

BUT malicious people generally reply to this by saying: "All right, let us assume that the Bolsheviks really have a small army. But to make up for that, they say, they spend crazy sums in preparing for war and in this manner, they say, they redeem the insufficiency of their numerical strength and at the same time usually refer to the fact that we are introducing a territorial system. Let us examine these two arguments. What does the existence of a territorial-militia system in the U. S. S. R. signify? This system permits us to keep under arms the smallest number of men possible leaving the largest possible number free to be employed in productive labor. This alone goes to show that a state adopting such a system cares more about raising the standard of its economy than about warfare. Second, if we remember the numbers of railways in the U. S. S. R. and approximately the time necessary for rallying all the people occupied on the economic front thruout the whole extent of Mother Russia, it will be quite clear to all that the "campaigns" which give Mr. Chamberlain no rest, cannot even be thought of by the Red army. The introduction of a territorial system is the best proof of the fact that the state is only preparing for defense and not for attack.

NOW with regard to finance. We will base our conclusions not on the information of "our own correspondents" but on the basis of official state records of the U. S. S. R. and other states. The war budget of the U. S. S. R. in 1924-25 amounts to 406 millions, plus 6 million rubles released subsequently, i. e. a total of 412 million rubles which includes expenditures on the fleet and war industry. This figure represents 16 per cent of the total state expenditure while in Great Britain war budget for 1925-26 (From March 1, 1925 amounts to £120,513,000 sterling, which in Soviet rubles amounts to 1,070,191,230.) We therefore, see from this that there are some who are spending much more than the U. S. S. R. on armaments. Poland has a war budget of 680,500,000 zloti (540 millions according to the estimate, plus 40 millions already received on account of the 70 millions demanded by Askorsky), or 34 per cent of the total state expenditure. In this manner Poland is squandering more than one-third of its budget on preparation for war, while the U. S. S. R. is spending only one-sixth or in other words Poland is preparing for war twice as intensively as the U. S. S. R. In Soviet money Poland is spending approximately 255 million rubles. At first glance this might seem less than the U. S. S. R. If we speak in absolute figures, then Poland is of course spending less, but if we take the comparative size of the states, the corelation becomes quite different. If we take these figures in relation to the population, we find that in the U. S. S. R. war expenditure amounts to 3r. 16k. per head of the population, while in Poland 9r. 10k. Where and by whom the greater preparations are being carried on one may judge for oneself.

FOR France the latter figure (war expenditure per member of the population) amounts to 154 francs or approximately 38-39 rubles i. e., the war preparations of the state which cries loudest about the "Red Danger" and about "Red Imperialism" leaves no doubt. In this manner "mad sums" may also be relegated to the domain of the usual gossips of "our own" correspondents. They also make a very poor show about "imperialism." Resources are spent on the army just in so far as is necessary for preparing for the defense of the conquests of the working class.

All that we have shown quite sufficiently confirm that the Red army is an army of the workers' and peasants' state and of the conquests of the working class. It is only because the U. S. S. R. is surrounded on all sides by bourgeois sharks with gaping mouths ready to swallow up the U. S. S. R., it is only because there is not yet such a power of Soviets anywhere in the world, for this reason only is there such a stern necessity for a workers' and peasants' Red army.

WHAT is the cause of these hypocritical wails in the bourgeois (and Second International) camp about the Red budget? This is because, they (the bourgeois states) are all themselves partly preparing and partly already conducting a war. The budget figures (constant increase of budget for military expenditure) show this in an illuminating fashion as also all measures taken of late in China and Morocco. Polish attacks on the frontiers of the U. S. S. R., a frantic increase in the air fleet, the construction of new war ships, new naval bases, etc., etc. All go to show that the imperialists are preparing new wars. The contradictions of the imperialists are too strong and too evident to allow the slightest doubt as to this.

The policy of the U. S. S. R. is a policy of peace; the Red army is the guardian of the policy of the U. S. S. R.—the Red army is the guardian of the policy of peace. What arises from this? The imperialists are preparing and are ready for war. Already several times after the "peace conferences" there have been moments when war has seemed inevitable. But it has not happened. Why is this? This is because the imperialists very well understand the existence of the U. S. S. R. and the Red army which are decisive and real guardians of peace and attentively follow all these preparations and at the right moment will give a reminder that they are "against the war." The imperialists are perfectly aware of this and know that the Red army, which guards the peace of the Union of Soviet Republics will in general not allow this peace to be disturbed. One reminder about the existence of the Red army in a moment of intense preparation for war drives the imperialists frantic, for it partially (and to no small extent) cools their war fever. But one might reply to this that the Red army is not so strong that the mere fact of its existence would influence the decision of world questions. That is so. From a numerical and technical point of view the Red army is relatively weak, but the strength taken at one with the masses, and in its international nature, its striving to preserve peace guarantees it the sympathy of tremendous masses of toilers thruout the whole world. This force is already threatened and has not only to be considered but has even sometimes to be listened to. And the remaining reason of the violent cries about the "Red Danger" is of course, the growth of the revolutionary movement thruout the whole world. The bourgeoisie has become temporarily "stabilized," but it knows very well that its rule is coming to an end.

THIS of course, enrages the bourgeoisie. Therein lies the real reason for the cry about danger. The imperialists fear that the Red army will not allow them to disturb peace, drag the masses into war and take the vengeance on the revolution just when they want to. And after all the whole of their policy and all their measures are based on warfare and struggle against revolution and it is obvious that when this basis is undermined, they begin to yell. They scream and try to save their skins.

The aim of our article is to show the masses the root of the evil is not to be found in the person of the Red army, but in those who are shouting about Red imperialism for, the Red army as has been shown already, by its very nature cannot have imperialist tendencies. But, defending the conquests of the working class, the U. S. S. R. guards peace and is ready to meet the peace-breakers with an insuperable resistance. In the struggle for peace and on behalf of the conquests of the working class the Red army is always ready for action.

DETROIT Young Worker's League Sport Alliance and the Cleveland Young Workers League Soccer Team participated in Labor Day program in Belle Isle. The Cleveland Young Workers Team evened the score with the Young Workers Sport Alliance of Detroit by beating them in a return game:—(One to Nothing). The Young Workers Sport Alliance has been victorious in a previous game by beating them 3-0 in Cleveland.

The Cleveland team scored early in the first half the only point in the whole game. The ball travelled at fast rate thru the entire game being in Detroits territory in the first half. After Detroit changing the field players to different positions, started to make a rally in the last half. They kept the ballnear their opponents goal quite steadily. The last ten minutes of the game Detroit dangerously threatened Clevelands goal, only the fire work of the Clevelanders saved the day for them.

After the game the Detroit Young Workers Sport Alliance gave a banquet to the Cleveland Young Workers Soccer Team at the House of the Masses, 2646 St. Aubin. After the various talks made by the members of both teams, and the dancing with the music furnished by the Young Workers Sport Alliance, our reception committee escorted the Clevelanders to the boat. And so ended a really enjoyable day!

The Slave Treaties of China and the U. S.

By A. IVIN (Pekin).

THE present movement in China which was provoked by the brutal shooting down of unarmed demonstrators by the British police in Shanghai, demands not only that the victims, not only that the British and Japanese consuls be removed and the ambassadors of Japan and Great Britain recalled, and that guarantee be given that there shall be no repetition of such use of fire-arms; besides all this the demand has been made that all treaties in which China has not equal rights should be annulled. This is not merely the result of "a momentary exasperation." In the course of the past year, the slogan "Down with the slave treaties!" which came into being almost at the exact moment when the agreement between China and the Soviet Union was signed, has seized one province after the other, one stratum of society after the other, and at the time of Sun Yat Sen's funeral its formidable echo resounded thru hundreds of Chinese towns.

Anyone who has followed the labor movement in China, in whose memory the seamen's strike in Hongkong and last year's strike in Shamin is still fresh will see nothing unexpected in the unanimous movement of the proletariat of Shanghai and in the echo which it finds in the other provinces.

Finally, the student movement, which not only equals, but exceeds in numbers, the "national movement in 1919," is simply the logical development of the anti-imperialist agitation which was given a specially glaring expression in the end of last year and the beginning of this, also in the struggle of the students of Futshen in connection with the assemblies of students and with the demonstrations on "the day of national humiliation."

THE immense historical significance of the bloodshed in Shanghai and the movement arising therefrom, consists in the fact that the imperialist powers are faced for the first time by an ultimatum from the whole Chinese people which peremptorily demands relations on the basis of equal rights. The Chinese question has become one of the main questions of international diplomacy, especially insofar as it is at present inseparable from the question of the Soviet Union. The Chinese toy militarists, the Chinese bureaucrats and bourgeoisie hardly suffice to form a thin upper stratum over the enormous mass of the Chinese toilers. This makes the challenge which China in the name of the whole of Asia, offers to capitalist Europe and America, all the more impressive and dangerous.

The contents of the collective notes of the ambassadors of England, Japan, America, France and Italy in reply to the note of protest from the Peking government, as well as the attitude of the local imperialist officials and of the American religious missions, show that all is not well with the united front of the imperialist powers against China.

IT is a most remarkable fact that, in spite of the substitution of Anglo-American "co-operation" for the Anglo-Japanese alliance, the greatest differences of opinion are to be expected, not between Great Britain and Japan, but between Great Britain and the United States. The semi-official press of the United States condemned the action of the English police in Shanghai in a more or less decided manner. The comparatively mild tone of the notes referred to is explained to a large extent by the "beneficient influence" of the American representative, a fact with which official circles in China are being carefully acquainted, tho not of course from official sources. The Italians and more especially the French, who are very ready to place obstacles in the way of their English friends, are endeavoring, tho also secretly, to emphasize that there is a distinction between themselves and the latter; the same tendency can also be noticed in the Japanese, who have already had the opportunity of convincing themselves of the serious consequences which the Chinese boycott would have for them. America's attitude however will be of predominant significance.

AMERICA'S interestedness in China's fate is shown in the most obvious way in the work of the American missionaries as upholders of civilization, whose schools, hospitals and other institutions for education and welfare work cover the whole of China with a close network and serve as the chief means for the Americanization of China. It is not to be wondered at that Washington has up to the present paid incomparably more attention to the opinion of the American missionaries in China than to that of the American merchants who are in favor of the "open door." The missionaries who are better acquainted with the attitude of mind of the Chinese masses, obstinately defend the traditional "liberal policy" of the United States.

The Pekin correspondent of the Chicago Tribune expresses indignation at the "ingratitude" of the Chinese to America, which is expressed among other ways by the students' strikes in the educational establishments financed by the Americans as well as in the refusal to study the bible. The correspondent glorifies the depth of the christian spirit of the missionaries who, regardless of the insults offered them, have actually organized a "society for reconciliation" for the "study of the question of rescinding the treaties in which China has not equal rights."

In the present movement ,the American missionaries, in view of the menacing indignation of the whole country and of the general strike in all educational establishments, have found it to their advantage to come forward with letters of assent and resolutions. More than that! There are already a whole number of declarations of such influential American educational establishments as the Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A. the so-called Pekin University (missionary university), the Tsin-Khua College, etc., in which a "revision of the unfair treaties which were forced upon China" is demanded.

ALL this of course does not mean that the American missionaries and pedagogues, i. e., the most active agents of American imperialism, have suddenly turned into anti-imperialists. They must however out of fear lest they should be washed away forever by the national movement, swim with the stream which they themselves only yesterday called Bolshevist. The American formula: "Removal of the treaties in which China has not equal rights, by way of evolution!" will pass into the archives, and the question of the immediate revision of these treaties will become acute and will demand a direct and clear answer. The missionaries themselves, tho of course unintentionally, are driving the government of the honorable Coolidge to the wall, by forcing him to solve the dilemma, either unequivocally to pronounce in favor of the revision of the treaties, i. e., to meet the Chinese people as the Soviet Union has done, or, together with Great Britain to pronounce against revision, and thus finally to destroy the legend of American liberalism which in Asia has been so laboriously created.

THE GERMAN BOURGEOISIE IN THE TOW OF ENGLISH IMPERIALISM

THE leading article in the Pravda of July 10 points out that at the present stage of English plans for intervention against the Soviet Union, important circles of the German bourgeoisie are getting more and more in the tow of English imperialist policy. In reply to the warnings of the Soviet press that Germany's entering the league of nations meant an attempt to draw it into the anti-Soviet bloc, Germany declared that it was by no means a case of any change in Germany's policy, that it would not renounce its political independence and sovereignty and that its friendship with the Soviet Union remained unshaken. Nevertheless for some weeks te most audacious, systematic anti-Soviet campaign has been carried on in Germany which is also reflected in official German policy. Under the pretext of the verdict in the Moscow fascist trial, some German papers commit themselves to use a tone towards the Soviet Union which is by no means reconcilable with friendly relations.

The Pravda further points out that even a German observer, the lawyer, Freund, could not but agree that the public prosecutor had succeeded in proving the guilt of the accused. The whole fuss about the Moscow "consul" trial proves to be an artificial, irresponsible press maneuver which strongly contradicts all true national interests of Germany.

OF much greater importance is the recognition by the Frankfurter Zeitung which wrote on July 4 that there can be no doubt that England is making the greatest efforts to draw Germany into the anti-Russian policy thru the guarantee pact. It will now be easy for the most naive to understand why the press maneuver was necessary and why they wished to surpass England in the anti-Soviet agitation. In the light of this, the artificial, hypocritical indignation of a Berliner Tageblatt and the language with regard to the Soviet Union which was unworthy of an independent people, become comprehensible.

The German nationalists whose slogan until recently was hatred of England, appear today as pitiful mercenaries of English imperialism, the thoughts of revenge are sold for the advantages which it would gain by playing the part of a gendarmerie against the Soviet Union. If Germany wishes to preserve a paramount prospect of independent development, it cannot sell itself body and soul to English imperialism. But in this case they should not play the part of an obliging, over-hasty vassal.

We once more decisively declare: We will not let ourselves be bartered! With the same decision we declare that it is our unchanging firm wish to develop our economic relations to Germany in every way. Only those who are struck with blindness, fail to grasp what promising prospects this co-operation which England and her agents in Germany are trying to destroy, opens to both peoples.

Many Foreigners Barred

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—(FP)—Because hundreds of thousands of men and women in Italy and other countries have been unable to get into the United States as immigrants under the restricted quota during the past year, pressure to secure entry as visitors has increased. A book of instructions to American consuls has been issued by the visa office in the state department, requiring rigid examination of the claims of applicants for visas that they propose merely visiting in this country.

Small Cyclone Hits Peoria.

PEORIA, Ill., Sept. 11.—Damage estimated at $250,000 was done by the second miniature cyclone which swept Peoria during the night, nine persons were injured and considerable damage wrought by the one which swept the city so suddenly during the afternoon, while the second started a big blaze in the wholesale district.

Birth Control and Unemployment

By Karl Reeve

ZEALOUS advocates of birth control organized in the American Birth Control League, are enemies of the struggle of the workers of this country to establish for themselves a sane system of society. This reformist, association, whose charitable sowing of information might seem to assist the workers, betrays its true character in the September issue of its official organ, The Birth Control Revue.

Composed not of workers, but of idle, middle class and wealthy dabblers, the Birth Control League is not content with functioning as an ordinary charitable organization. A false system of pseudo-economy is advocated. The absurd theory that unemployment, poverty, war and the ills of present day society are caused solely because there are too many people in the world is strenuously propagated.

THIS theory was advocated by Thomas Robert Malthus, in his book published in 1803 entitled, "Principles of Population." It is on Malthus' theories, exploded long ago by Karl Marx, that the Birth Control League bases its propaganda. Malthus declared that it was the "tendency of population to increase faster than food." He put forth the proposition that the "population increases in geometic ratio, while food increases in arithmetical ratio."

Even the capitalist minded, so-called economists have had to admit that this formula is false. But the birth control zealots have accepted the essence of Malthus' false doctrines, and have dubbed their philosophy, "Neo-Malthusian," the name under which the Birth Control League of England functions. In this "Neo-Malthusian" philosophy the Birth Control League retains the theory of Malthus that poverty arises from overpopulation.

INSTEAD of recognizing that these running sores of capitalism are inherent in the system of production now prevailing, this league declares that by "agitation, education, organization and legislation," all the evils of capitalism can be laid low and everybody will be happy.

In an article entitled, "The Fascisti on Birth Control—An Italian Problem; a Reply to Count Cippico," Professor Erward M. East of Harvard, takes issue with the fascist who at the Institute of Politics recently held in Williamstown, Mass., demanded that Italy's "surplus population" be allowed to enter America. East replies with a statement equally assinine.

Says East, "Population tends to press with irresistable force upon the means of subsistence within any given circumscribed unit. This thesis of Malthus has been proved beyond a reasonable doubt. Under natural conditions population increase is finally repressed and stabilized by the intensity of the struggle for existence."

The growing army of unemployed in Italy is becoming too much of a good thing for the Italian capitalists. While an industrial reserve army is an essential requirement for the perpetuation of the capitalist system, the increase of unemployed in Italy has become so sharp that the desperation of the workers is menacing the fascist-capitalist rule. The count fears a revolt of the workers against fascism, and would relieve the pressure by transfrring a portion of the surplus population to the United States, which, however, has an unemployment problem of its own.

BUT East does not want Italian immigration. "We don't need these people, that is all," he says. "We produce enough of that quality ("the dregs of the vat") ourselves." East's conclusion is that Italy should practice birth control, as well as all other countries, and all will be well.

But those who have studied the present system of production and its history know that with the accumulation and centralization of capital, accompanied as it is by an intensification of the exploitation of the wage-earners, goes the swelling of the ranks of the unemployed. Capitalism is ever conquering new branches of industry, and concentrating and centralizing its hold on those already conquered. In its struggle to maintain its rate of profit and increase its actual profit gained solely from the labor of the workers employed, capital is ever increasing the productiveness of labor. Women and children are rushed into the factory to replace the men at a cheaper wage. Hours are lengthened, wages are lowered, machines are made to run faster, and fingers to move more quickly.

"In all these cases," we learn from the analysis of Karl Marx, "The number of laborers falls in proportion to the mass of the means of production worked up by them. It is a grave error to interpret the phenomena of accumulation by saying that there are now too few, now too many, wage-laborers."

With the accumulation of capital, along with technical development of the means of production, fewer and fewer laborers are used in proportion to the accumulated capital.

Thus is explained the cause of the permanent army of unemployed, not to mention those laid off during crises because the worker is unable to buy back the product of his toil, and overproduction ensues.

WITH the development of ever bigger machinery, the increasing division and specialization of labor, and the constant speeding up of the worker, more raw material is turned out in finished products by each worker, less workers are needed and unemployment increases.

Marx explains that capitalist production follows the course of cycles, marked by periods of average production, production at high pressure, then crises, followed by stagnation. This necessitates for the capitalist a constant reserve army of unemployed, which is absorbed into industry to a greater or less degree according to the course of the cycle.

"The whole form of the movement of modern industry depends upon the constant transformation of a part of the laboring population into unemployed or half-employed hands. Capitalist industry can by no means content itself with the quantity of disposable labor power which the natural increase of population yields. It requires for its free play an industrial reserve army independent of these natural limits," says Marx.

The army of the unemployed will be with us until the workers take over the industries and the governmental power which protects capitalism and run them for their own use.

Yet Margaret Sanger, chief mogul of the Birth Control League, writes a special article to extol the nonsense of the Harvard professor whom she welcomes into the ranks of the advocates of her pet cure-all. "He has demonstrated," she says, "how closely bound up with the great questions of international policy are the profoundly personal problems of contraception and birth control."

IN the same vein, another article in this issue, whose very title, "Birth Control a Protection to the State," is significant, states, "In a considerable number of cases, families, which, if small, would be self-supporting, become burdens upon society because too many children are produced." One of the cardinal points of the birth control advocates is that birth control would raise wages by decreasing the supply of wage earners. The Neo-Malthusians would protect the capitalist state by directing attention toward useless reform.

We learn from Marx that the general movements of wages are determined by the expansion and contraction of the industrial reserve army. This reserve of unemployed is inevitable because it is necessary for capitalist production. The wages are not determined by the absolute number of the workers, but by the proportion between the industrial reserve army and the working population. The unemployed army decreases or increases according to the needs of capitalist production, some of the reserve population being now absorbed into the industry and now set free, according to the period in the cycle of production.

Reduce the population by birth control and the capitalist mode of production immediately would set to work to build up a new reserve army by further intensifying production and improving the machinery and other means of production.

Those who favor birth control as a cure for unemployment and small wages try to say that capitalist production is dependent on the absolute variation of the population. Whereas the truth is that the demand and supply of labor is regulated by the alternate expansion and contraction of capital, as Marx points out.

THE reserve army of unemployed also tends to keep down the wages of those working. It places the workers at the convenience of the capitalists.

"The folly is patent of the economic wisdom that preaches to the laborers the accomodation of their numbers to the requirements of capital," says Marx. "The mechanism of capitalist production and accumulation constantly effects this adjustment. The first word of this adaptation is the creation of a relative surplus population, or industrial reserve army. Its last word is the misery of constantly extending strata of the active army of labor, and the dead weight of pauperism."

But Margaret Sanger in her euolgy of East, declares birth control to be a panacea not only for unemployment and low wages, but for war. "Italy should encourage families to restrict their numbers in accordance with opportunity," says Mrs. Sanger. "This as we all know, is the only safe avenue to national peace, prosperity and the progress of civilizaton." The fascist count, she says, has hinted that Italy will provoke a war in order to unload her surplus population.

It is not at all impossible that Italy will become entangled in a world war, but not for the benefit of her industrial reserve army. Italy is in dire need of colonies, in order to increase the rate of exploitation, to open up new markets, to extend the sphere of influence of her capitalists, to secure a reservoir of cheap labor, and in other ways benefit the Italian imperialists.

WHERE this birth control "economics" leads is demonstrated in the book review columns of this issue of the Birth Control Review. The review of J. Swinburne's book, "Population and the Social Problem," states, "J. Swinburne rightly regards the stress of population as the fundamental fact in sociology. . . . If civilization is overthrown, the writer believes, it will be swept away 'by ignorant, hungry people acting under the keen stress of population pressure, as has happened over and over again in the past; the difference being that the hungry masses will not be outside peoples, but our own proletariat and poorer classes inflamed by socialists and other demagogues.'"

Birth control may be advocated as a measure of public health and as a personal convenience. But when a group builds on birth control a false economy which aims to perpetuate the capitalist system, to confuse the workers as to the true cause of their misery, to combat the demand of the working class for power, then that group takes its place as an aid to the exploiters who are keeping the workers in a state of poverty, and as an enemy of the working class.

Material Wanted on History and Development of Communist Movement in America.

Research Department, Workers Party of America.

TO All Members and Units of the Workers Party:

The Research Department has been set the task of gathering historical data and material on the development of the Communist movement in America, with especial attention to the period beginning 1919. This work requires the active assistance of every comrade and sympathizer who has possession of, or knowledge of, the material needed.

What is needed will include files of the various official organs published by the different groups, convention minutes, executive committee records, leaflets, lists of committee members, photographs, correspondence, newspaper and magazine articles dealing with the development of the movement and its organizational problems, books and pamphlets (published by Communists, or dealing with our movement by outsiders), court records of trials, etc.

Every one who has such material is requested to send it in to the Research Department, Workers Party of America, 1113 W. Washington Blvd., Chicago, with each package clearly marked with the sender's name and address and accompanied with a letter stating whether the material is donated or merely loaned. Those who have not such material, but know of its existence and location, are requested to write full information in the matter.

The co-operation of every Communist and sympathizer will prove of great value to the movement.

Fraternally yours,

Teamsters and Chauffeurs to Meet

SEATTLE—(FP)—Two hundred and fifty delegates are expected at the convention in Seattle of the Intl. Bro. of Teamsters, Chauffeurs and Helpers, which opens Sept. 14. No opposition is expected in the reelection of Pres. Daniel Tobin, who is also treasurer of the American Federation of Labor and Secy. Thomas L. Hughes. The union is one of the most influential in the A. F. of L. and jealously guards its jurisdiction. At the El Paso convention in 1924 the teamsters were awarded the express drivers whom the Railway Clerks had organized and now the union is disputing with the streetcar men the jurisdiction over motorbus drivers.

A SONG OF THE FACTORY.

The trees were white with blossoms, the meadows were broad and fair;
And the care free birds made music for the children that gathered there.
But a man had need of the meadows; his walls and chimneys sprang
From among the swaying branches where the thrush and robin sang.
And set them to work to earn his wealth, for children are many and cheap.
They crouch all day by the spindles, wizened and wan and old.
They have given their youth to a master who has minted it into gold.

No longer they joyously listen to a warblers' futile song.
No longer their happy laughter rings out the whole day long.
No longer they roam the meadows like wandering gypsy bands,
For the man is growing richer by the work of their puny hands.
And he who found them playing among the feathery blooms
And brot them to waste their lives away beside his clattering looms,
He talks of the goodly riches his enterprise has won—
With the toil of sad-faced children and boasts of the things he has done.

Industrial Development of Soviet Russia

By MORRIS BACKALL.

(Countinued from last Saturday)

How Labor Conditions Are Settled.

Comrade Deich told me this story which throws light on the settlement of labor conditions in Soviet Russia factories. "In 1924 the Komvolni trust made 7,000,000 rubles profit The workers knew about it so they came to the chairman of the trust and complained why are they not compensated for, one girl worker said: "Here, see the pile of work we did and and what are we getting for it," so I took out a pencil and said, "All right, let's figure for a minute that I will satisfy your demand and raise you all a ruble a day and build new houses for you and improve your entire conditions, so what will be the result? Instead of making 7,000,000 rubles' profit a year, we will lose and we will have to close the factories, or make material higher so the peasants will have to pay more for their clothing, but this way we will buy for the 7,000,000 rubles new machinery and be in a position to manufacture cloth still cheaper and make life of Soviet Russia more comfortable and thru that improve our own life and our own conditions."

"You know," I said to them, "that I am working as hard as you and I have no personal interest in the profits, but I am a good Communist, am a devoted worker for the Soviet government, I have to my heart the interests of the entire country, to me Soviet Russia, the entire population of the country, comes first."

They were quiet, Deich told me, and "You know," he said to me, "they went away satisfied. They held a meeting of their wage union and a day later they came to my office with a red necktie and told me that they had decided to make me an honorary member of their weaver's union and when they put the necktie on my neck, I felt as if we would gain the entire world for the cause of Communism, because this act proved to me that the workers of Russia are able to build a new world in spirit and in real accomplishment," and then he added, "This year we build new homes for the workers, we are trying to improve the conditions in the factories and we are raising the efficiency of the industry at the cost of the machine of the method of production, not as much on the energy and life of the worker. We do not want Robots of our people, we want to create an industrial life in which the worker should control its own destiny."

The Clothing Industry.

THE most interesting industrial development took place in the clothing industry. The industry represents all phases of clothing as, for instance, men's and ladies' garments, waists and shirts, hats and caps of both men and women and children. The Mokshevi Moscow Clothing Organization, has 12 factories with 9,000 workers, with 15 divisions in the different states of Soviet Russia. Every division has from 10 to 12 stores. They are doing 24,000,000 rubles business a year. This trust started with the nationalization of all the old factories in 1921. As a matter of fact, it is hard to determine what constituted these old factories because first, these old factories were in very bad shape on account of the war and civil war and they represented such a picture; in one factory was found pieces of very valuable silk that was used for making dresses for the wives of old Russian generals; goods for simple dresses was not to be found. In another factory, was found a great deal of very cheap cloth for suits and overcoats and ladies' garments but no lining; when the Soviet government began to organize the factories, they used very expensive silk for lining for very cheap cloth but there was no black thread so they had to use white thread to make a garment of cheap black cloth with very expensive silk for lining. With this material inside, Soviet Russia opened its first clothing factories. This was the capital with which Russia nationalized its clothing industry.

The idea of the clothing syndicate was that as all the trusts are busy making clothes, the syndicate should take over the distribution or the selling of the clothes and it was so until 1925. The syndicate had 85 divisions all over Soviet Russia. The expenses of the syndicate were covered by the trusts and were taxed by the production. The syndicate as well as the trust developed to a very great extent. The production of the clothing industry can well be illustrated in the following manner: In 1922 a suit of clothes was made in 27 hours; in 1925, a suit of clothes was made in 12 hours and is still developing in this direction thru the establishment of division of labor, but in its process to cut expenses, the trusts decided to give up the syndicate wheih cost them 20 per cent and make the product of the industry cheaper and better. Since January 1st, 1925, clothing went down 20 per cent; as a matter of truth, clothing today is nearly one-fourth what it was in 1922. A suit of clothes that cost in 1922, 100 rubles in Soviet Russia can be bought today for 25 rubles. The trusts themselves have stores which are selling their clothing direct from the factory to the buyer.

But the clothing industry of Soviet Russia is handicapped because it cannot secure enuf material for its factories. The textile industry is supposed to give the clothing industry material on credit, but the textile industry finds it more convenient to sell its material retail for cash rather than to extend credit to the clothing industry. The remedy lies in the very development of the textile industry itself. When the textile industry will develop to such an extent that it will be in a position to satisfy the retail market for cash on the one hand and to have enuf cloth to be able to set aside the demand of the clothing industry for credit, then the clothing industry of Soviet Russia will be able to progress and grow to its natural capacity.

How Clothing is Bought Thru Factory Committees.

The workers of Russia buy their clothing not individually but collectively and obtain a per cent cheaper and also the extension of credit for four months.

The workers thru their trade union in their factories buy their clothing together. They get together in their factory and each one tells his needs, how much clothing he needs for himself, for his wife and children. When the commitee gets the entire material together, it places an order in the clothing trust for so much clothing for this year. Then issues an order to every worker that entitles him for so much clothing that he can obtain in a store of the trust and pays it up weekly out of his wages.

The clothing industry which extends credit to the workers of the entire country is therefore also in need of credit from the textile industry and is unable now to make the natural progress until the textile industry will fully develop.

The Position of the Workers in Factories and Shops in Soviet Russia.

WHEN we witness the power that the workers of Soviet Russia have in their shops and factories, we can understand what lies in the future for them, when the industrial life of Russia will enable them to enjoy the fruits of their accomplishment, because now they are at the stage of building up, of sacrificing and of course, of a great deal of suffering. We cannot measure the conditions of the workers of Soviet Russia with the same yard stick of workers in a capitalist state.

The industry of Soviet Russia and its commerce and policies are regulated by the Norokonvnutorg, peoples commissary of inner commerce whose function is to control the different industries that its commercial apparatus should not spend more than necessary and that its production should not cost too much to the peasant and worker, but this does not mean that the Norokonvnutorg can regulate prices on the costs of the workers' wages. The workers in the factories are organized on the following basis: Every worker and clerk in the office, as well as the directors of the factory are belonging to one union.

The factory itself is organized first in a Zafkom (factory committee). The Zafkom is elected by the workers in the form of a shop committee; second, in a R. K. K. (price and conflict commission); third, a committee of protection of labor; fourth, Kult commission (a commission for education and culture); fifth, production committee.

These are all shop commissions, the Zafkom is the same as a shop committee. In the well organized shops of America, we have such committees. They have a chairman and a secretary who are paid officers. They collect all the grievances of the workers and they try to settle it with the chairman of the admnistration in as peaceful a manner as possible, but if they cannot settle it peacefully, then they present the grievances to the committee R. K. K. This committee consists of representatives of both of the Zafkom and the administration. Their grievances that could not be settled by the officers of the Zafkom are discussed and settled, but if one side could not agree in this commission and it happens that the worker is fired from the job, he gets the right to appeal against the decision of the R. K. K., and if he wins, he gets paid for all the time that he was out of a job. If the administration appeals the worker gets paid for the time his appeal went on if the administration wins.

The Zafkom is constituted of chairmen of all the factory committees, the committee of protection of work is constituted of workers of the factory which has to watch over the sanitary conditions of the factory and on the health conditions of the workers. In Soviet Russia, it means the following: When a worker gets sick, he goes to the committee of protection of work which sends him to the insurance fund which has a commission of physicians which are to be found in every factory of Soviet Russia, because every factory of Soviet Russia has its health commission and if the worker is found really sick, the first thing they do is he stops from work and gets full wages but if his health condition is such that he cannot live in the city, they send him to a sanatorium as long as the doctor finds it necessary on the cost of the insurance fund.

Every summer every worker that is occupied in a factory in Soviet Russia gets a month's vacation. Some factories are closed for a whole month in the summer and the workers are getting paid in full. In some factories the workers change their vacation months.

The first principle of the trade unions in Russia and the protection that he gets thru his various committees in the factory is first, the right to his job, and second work for a whole year and paid so, even when there is a shortage of work thru the fault of different conditions of industry.

If the administration of a factory or a whole trust finds out that they haven't enough work for everybody and they must close some of its departments or the whole factory, they must inform the same in writing to the trade union of its district, the local union informs of its decision to the state union but both the local and the state union cannot decide the fate of the factory. They can only recommend to the V. S. M. C. H. (higher Soviet of public industries) then this commissariat together with the trade unions agree on a certain decision, then it becomes law. Every worker gets paid for two weeks to seek another job.

The administration of the factories is compelled to furnish so much excuses why they want to shut the shop that in 99 cases out of a 100, it is nearly impossible to close a factory, but more profitable and convenient to improve it to make it go than to close it entirely.

As a matter of fact, these factories that are closed are only closed temporarily until the industry readjusts itself and establishes its methods of work and production, therefore, the unemployment of Russia is mostly a temporary unemployment until Russia will reach a higher development of its prdouctive capacity.

Russia is developing its industrial life independent of the assistance of the great capitalistic countries of the world. Russia finds in the whole of Europe and America enemies among capitalists, but it is going on speedily developing its life thru great suffering, but also wonderful heroism of its workers that are building daily a new life for themselves and for the entire country.

LORE DRIVEN INTO THE OPEN

STATEMENT BY THE CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE WORKERS PARTY.

THE Workers Party is a Communist Party, the American section of the Communist International. It endeavors to be a worthy and effective part of the international army of the revolutionary proletariat. It can do that only by developing its theory and revolutionizing its activity, by Bolshevizing itself. Only as a Bolshevik Party will it be able to approach the manifold and difficult problems of the class struggle in America with revolutionary understanding and energy.

In the process of Bolshevization of the party conflicts with the non- or even anti-Bolshevist elements within the party are unavoidable, and, in the interests of the purification of the party, even welcome. Such conflicts must be developed by the party to the logical conclusion of either Bolshevizing and assimilating the not yet Bolshevist element or finally eliminating all anti-Bolshevist elements.

THE non- or anti-Bolshevist elements within our party have up to now found their most consistent spokesman in the person of Ludwig Lore. Since the very inception of the Communist movement in the United States, Lore has been in conflict with, altho professing allegiance to it, with the growing activization (Bolshevization) of our party, these conflicts became more acute and could not longer be slighted or disregarded. The needs of Bolshevization forces our party to take issue with Lore and the tendency of which he is the most conscious and most consistent representative.

Altho at first we did not succeed in mobilizing the whole party for the struggle against Loreism we did succeed in winning the unqualified support of the Communist International. The Communist International finally accomplished the task of unifying the whole party for the struggle against Loreism and for Bolshevization.

Lore was entrenched in the position of chief editor of the New York Volkszeitung and as secretary of the Bureau of the German Section of our party. A party organ such as the New York Volkszeitung and a bureau of a language section of our party, are both equally important as instruments in the hands of the party for Bolshevizatiton. It therefore, became necessary to attempt to get Lore to submit to the political direction and policies of the party, the C. E. C. and the Communist International.

ALL attempts in that direction were frustrated by the active opposition of Lore and his close friends. The C. E. C. was finally forced to demand ultimately of the German bureau to submit to the party and its policy. This the bureau refused to do by a vote of 6 including Lore, against 3.

There was only one way open for the Central Executive Committee; to suspend the non-Communist members from the bureau and to appoint in their place loyal Communists and adherents to the Communist International.

The action of Lore and his followers on the German Bureau demonstrated beyond doubt and contrary to all protestations of loyalty by Lore that Lore was unwilling to submit to the discipline of our international party, the Comintern. While Lore protested his loyalty he held meetings and conferences with his followers preparing for resistance to, and an eventual split from the Workers Party and the Comintern.

Under these conditions the expulsion of Lore from the party became an imperative necessity. The convention of our party recognized this and decided upon the expulsion unanimously.

LORE, who continually claimed to have been maligned with the Comintern, refused consistently to appear before the Comintern in his own behalf.

In March, 1924, efforts were made to get Lore instructed to go to Moscow. The efforts failed because of the resistance of Lore. In January, 1925, Lore was practically requested by the Comintern to come to Moscow. Under some pretext Lore again refused. In April, 1925, a new effort was made to have Lore appear before the Comintern. Again without results.

Before the Parity Commission, Lore announced his intention of going to Moscow. But instead of submitting to the C. I. and preparing his appeal he prepared a revolt against the C. I.

Lore is perfectly aware that even against the unanimous decision of the party convention for his expulsion he still has an appeal open to the Comintern. Any revolutionist who values his membership in the only revolutionary party existing would avail himself of this last chance and appeal.

But Lore knows that he is not telling the truth when he says that he is better than his reputation. He knows his fundamental disagreement with the Comintern. He knows that he has only two ways open—submission or fight. In proof of our contention that he is not a Communist he chose to fight the Comintern.

LORE has since published several declarations. A signed one published in the New York Volkszeitung of September 1, 1925, and an unsigned editorial published in the Volkszeitung of September 6. Every sentence of either one of these declaration has Loreism written all over it. On September 1, Lore still promises to support the C. I. policies. But on September 6, he takes issue with the major policy of the Comintern, that of acting as the leader of its world party. On September 3, Lore gives space in the Volkszeitung to a declaration of the five former members of the German bureau suspended from that body with him in which they declare above. their signatures, first, that there is no Loreism; second, that they believe in Loreism, and third, that they feel in duty bound to demonstrate their loyalty to Loreism by deserting the party. On September 4, Lore opens the columns of the Volkszeitung for an public discussion of the Workers Party. This discussion is indicative of the direction in which Loreism is developing. On September 5, we find as part of the discussion a contribution giving a "history" of our party made out of whole cloth. On the 6th, the 8th, and 9th, we find articles signed by a pseudonym containing open and violent attacks against the Comintern, its theories and policies. Lore, who on September 1, still protested his loyalty to Comintern polies, finds it perfectly in order to open the columns of his paper to these attacks.

But that is the logic of his course. This course leads further and further away from the Comintern into the camp of the enemies of the working class, the social democrats. Levi traveled that road; so did Hoglund and Friesland.

SOME few of the members of our party have in the past not clearly understood Lore's policies and aims. But now it must be clearly apparent that one cannot be an adherent of Lore and at the same time a revolutionary Communist. One cannot follow Lore who fights the Comintern and at the same time be a loyal member of the Comintern. Lore and his close friends have dropped their masks. Every member of our party with whom the services in the world army of the revolutionary proletariat is a matter of proletarian revolutionary honor will repudiate Lore and his followers as enemies of the revolutionary proletariat, as enemies of the Workers Party, as enemies of the Communist International.

Lore is now engaged in attempting to split our party. Thru nuclei Loreist nuclei which he maintained in the German branches all thruout the existence of the Workers Party he now endeavors to cause a mass withdrawal from the party to build up his own private-workers' educational organization.

It becomes the Communist duty of every party member to fight this creation of Lore. These workers' educational organizations are sailing under a false flag. They are not Communist, they are not revolutionary. They are anti-Communist adjuncts of the anti-proletarian social-democrats in America.

OUR party members and especially those in the German Federation will close their ranks for a decisive struggle against the anti-Bolshevik influences and anti-Bolshevik activities of Lore and his organization outside and the remnants of Loreism within our party. Every member must be mobilized in the next few weeks to defeat the efforts of Lore to destroy our German branches and all energy must be devoted to the tremendous task of Bolshevist reorganization. With the progress of the Bolshevization of our party it will become invulnerable against all attacks by renegades from within and without.

Clean the party of Loreism!
Long live the Workers Party!
Long live the Comintern!

the Workers Party,

Stop and Listen—But Don't Look

By WM. F. KRUSE.

TWENTY-TWO of the largest motion picture producers in America, representing 85 per cent of the industry, are banded together under the leadership of Will Hays, one-time member of the odiferous and oily Harding cabinet. for the purpose of keeping out of the films some of the best books and plays of our present day. It is now openly boasted, as, for instance, in the current World's Work in an article by Edward G. Lowry, that "The immediate problem of the motion picture makers is to prevent the prevalent type of play and book from becoming the prevalent type of motion picture."

And the Film Daily gloats editorially over the news that among more than a hundred conspicuous successes of the stage and best sellers of the bookstores, "The Green Hat," "They Knew What They Wanted," and "The Firebrand," have been banned from the movies. All were eminently successful, and one of them was the winner of the Pulitzer prize as the best play of last year.

Blacklisting Ideas.

This is how the scheme works, according to the Chicago Daily News: "When any member company of the Hays' organization is offered the screen rights to a book or play of a questionable nature, its representatives immediately inform the offices of the motion producers and distributors, representing about 85 per cent of the producing element. If the judgment of the member company is confirmed that the picturization of the book or play is inadvisable a notice is sent to all other member companies giving the name of the book or play. That ends that book or play as a possible subject."

It should be noted that this blacklist is one of the most vicious attacks ever directed against the creative spirit in drama and literature, and at the same time supplies a club with which to bring authors to the financial terms of the filmwrights. This economic weapon is typical of 20th century capitalist development, the production end of the industry is controlled almost to an air-tight extent, the censorship is economic in basis. Every writer today looks to potential movie receipts to outweigh all possible income from publication or stage rights, and this threat of blacklist is a heavy club against struggling writers and playwrights who may try to tell a little of the truth about the conditions as they see them. Thus we have a more effective ban against independent thought among the literati than ever existed in czarist Russia, and the probable result will be on one side the more general prostitution of literary talent, and on the other a piled up collection of books and plays worthy and possible of film production only after the establishment of the American workers' and farmers' Soviet republic.

A Chinese Wall Against Labor Thought.

The movie world is starving for new stories. The junk produced today is hackneyed beyond expression. The producers even go so far afield for ideas as the desks of country newspaper editors—only a desperate plight can explain a search for new ideas in such unlikely places. Yet the Chicago Daily News states plainly that: "During the year just passed this plan (the Hays' economic blacklist) has resulted in more than 100 plays and books—including some of the best sellers and most conspicuous stage successes—being kept from the screen. These rejections included not only dramas and books that had been much talked about and discussed as possible menaces to public morals and decency, but also a number of others against which no protest had ever been directed." This means that the Hays' organization must encourage the professional smeller of anti-bourgeois sedition to launch private information against anything he may see in print or on the stage in order to put the purse-string censors on guard against it.

It is now openly admitted that one of the chief functions of "Czar" Will Hays' directorate over the movie world is to establish a screen blacklist against all books or plays objectionable to bourgeois morality. In the movies, henceforth, any criticism of "American institutions," of the bourgeois church, state, property, home, marriage, is taboo.

The only effective answer that labor can make is to develop and support its own motion pictures, producing whenever it can, supporting any friendly features turned out by the fast thinning ranks of the "independents," welcoming every film that tends to the workers' side and boycotting the masters and showers of any picture that fights for the masters. This would bar a large percentage of trust films, but this shortage would further increase the demand for labor films and therefore help insure their support. Educational and entertainment films both must be made available for the workers. The committee for International Workers' Aid has done this, and its films should be more widely distributed among labor circles so that its import and production efforts could more rapidly be broadened. Class lines in the movies are becoming more and more clear. The masters' taboo is the best recommendation for a picture.

R MINERS DEMAND SUB- CT CONVENTION, TELL OF HT ON KLAN, IN STATEMENT

A committee of Zeigler miners, headed by Henry Corbishley, president of the Zeigler Local No. 992, of the United Mine Workers of America, deposed by the Farrington machine, have issued a statement giving the history of their fight against the ku klux klan, the mine union officials and the Bell and Zoller Coal company. The miners demand a special sub-district convention to settle the matter.

The statement, which represents the voice of the overwhelming majority of the miners of the local, shows how the reactionary officials of the Illinois district of the union arbitrarily gave the offices of the union to the klansmen, and how they ruled for the coal company in the controversy over illegal weighing.

The officials ordered the miners back to work, and at a meeting of the local declared that Corbishley, who had been re-elected president, would have to vacate his office. The men refused, and the kluxers, backed by the officials, started a fight, a klansman killing one of the militant miners.

Later, D. B. Cobb and Lon Fox swore out warrants against eighteen of the miners, charging them with "conspiracy to murder."

The statement follows:

The undersigned committee, representing a general census of opinion of the miners of Zeigler concerning the recent events, presents the facts of the case exactly as they have happened. There has been much misunderstanding thruout the community concerning the trouble in Zeigler. The arrest of eighteen members of Local No. 992 and the avowed intention of those who swore the warrants to prosecute the case to the limit, presents a situation that constitutes a grave danger to both the community and the miners' union. We therefore, present for the inspection of all interested parties the actual record of the happenings that have led up to the present crisis.

Klan Attempts Disruption.

The story must begin with the annual election held June 18, 1924, in Local Union 992, U. M. W. of A., in Zeigler. This election resulted in Henry Corbishley and his associates being elected by an overwhelming vote to fill the offices of the union. After the election had been completed the opposition, that found its chief support among members of the ku klux klan discovered it had elected no one and broke up the meeting by starting a fight. Many people in the county know that Corbishley had the sheriff and deputies over several times in the past year to keep down trouble provoked by the klan element.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

THE various socialist delegates to the recent congress of the Socialist and Labor International, held in Marseilles, France, were chiefly concerned with the interests of their respective governments and not with the interests of the working class. One of the amusing incidents of the congress was the squelching of Victor Berger, who attempted to introduce a resolution condemning the Treaty of Versailes. This resolution smacked of revolution to the capitalist ministers and ex-ministers who led the congress and Berger was declared out of order. Whereupon Victor walked out, shouting, "Go to Hell."

IT must not be assumed that Berger introduced the resolution because of left wing tendencies. Nothing of the kind. It was his undiluted German patriotism that prompted him to to do this, and also his consideration for the feelings of the German-American voters in Milwaukee, who like the Irish living in America, love to strike heavy blows for the Fatherland at a safe distance.

SEVERAL delegates claimed credit for the Dawes' plan, declaring that the American bankers would never have been able to put it into operation without the help of the European socialists. Morris Hillquit regretted that the United States had not entered the league of nations. He thought the league should be democratized and should include Germany and Russia. Otherwise it was alright.

ON the question of the Security Pact, the German and French delegates put up a united front. They were opposed by the British who had to consider the interests of their empire. French, German and British delegates labored long, behind closed doors, trying to reach a compromise. One or two delegates pointed out that the Security Pact was aimed against Soviet Russia. How those delegates got into such a counter-revolutionary conference still remains a mystery.

THE Russian menshevikі threw catfits when the resolution on Soviet Russia was introduced. It is significant that the commission appointed to frame resolutions on the Soviet and Eastern question met in a room in the Town Hall and conducted their deliberations underneath a large oil painting of a visit of the former czar's fleet to Marseilles in 1892. The visit was coincident with the granting of the first French loan to the czar. The painting was the personal gift of the czar to the city of Marseilles.

M. TCHERNOFF, a Russian social-revolutionist, was infuriated by the comparatively moderate speeches on Soviet Russia made by Bauer of Austria and Dan, the Russian menshevik. Bauer talked a lot of nonsense about the gradual increase of liberty in Russia, the only country in the world where the workers and peasants have any liberty. Tchernoff raved about the Communist propaganda in Asia and denounced the Soviet government for encouraging national liberation movement. Jean Lonquet, grandson of Karl Marx, took the same line on this question. He charged the Bolsheviks with being in favor of granting freedom to "African savages."

BRITISH TRADE UNION CONGRESS SCORES EMPIRE

Left Wing Wins Over Yellow Socialists

LONDON, Sept. 13—The British Trades Union Congress at its closing session yesterday delivered the pirate empire a blow in the solar plexus when it passed a resolution almost unanimously pledging opposition to British imperialism and favoring the right of self determination for all peoples within the empire even to the extent of choosing complete separation from the empire.

The resolution was passed after a bitter struggle during which the right socialist wing of the congress went to bat for "king and country." The measure was sponsored by A. A. Purcell, fraternal delegate to the Atlantic City convention of the American Federation of Labor and chairman of the British trade union delegation to Soviet Russia. Purcell recently was elected to parliament from the Forest of Dean, on the left wing platform.

The vote on the resolution was by card and stood; for 3,082,000 against 79,000.

Congress In Uproar.

The congress was thrown into an uproar when Herry Pollitt, one of the Communist Party leaders, declared that: "The British empire stands for tyranny and the slavery of the workers. We are speaking of an empire and of territory stained with blood of soldiers and slaves."

This statement was cheered by horny handed delegates fresh from the shops, but it was bitterly resented by James Ramsay MacDonald, yellow socialist, who had just left the king at Balmoral Castle in Scotland, where the former premier was enjoying a brief holiday.

MacDonald was not a delegate to

CUBAN GOVERNMENT DEPORTS 80 COMMUNISTS, JAILS OTHERS, BIG PROTESTS ARE BEING ORGANIZED

By JULIO ANTONIO MELLA.

HAVANA, Cuba, Sept. 13.—Jose Miguel Perez, secretary of the Communist Party of Cuba, organized some weeks ago, has been deported to Spain, and surely will be sent to Marruecos.

At first the government charged the Communists were planning to blow up the center of the commercial district of Cuba and many workers were arrested, most of them being deported. Now they say we are planning the immediate establishment of the Soviet government of Cuba.

The government is trying not only to smash the new party, but to break up all the trade unions of Cuba, especially the Sindicato de la Industria Fabril.

An order has been issued to arrest all party members, but we are outside Havana, organizing a big protest in the whole republic. Three of the workers arrested are anarchists. The government supposes that anarchists and Communists are the same thing. As soon as we finish with the protest demonstrations, we will fight for the freedom of our comrades.

Eighty workers have so far been deported to Europe, four are in jail in Cuba, and warrants have been issued for the arrest of 50 more students and workers.

We need your help. We ask the American workers to protest to the Cuban minister.

LEFT WING OF I. L. G. W. ASKS AID FROM YOU!

Help Wanted in Fight Against Terrorism

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 13.—The Joint Comittee of Action formed by the left wing suspended locals of the International Ladies' Garment Workers, Locals 2, 9 and 22 have issued the following statement:

To All Labor and Labor Sympathizing Organizations,

Fellow Workers and Friends:

On the 11th of June, 1925, the reactionary forces of the American Jewish labor movement decided to institute a campaign of persecution against all those who dare to question their policies and leadership.

It was on the 11th of June that the joint board of the Cloak and Dressmakers' Union planned and executed the suspension of the executive boards and managers of three of the largest locals in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, representing over 30,000 workers.

Issues of Struggle

We were suspended because we had dared to oppose the leaders' present policy of dilly-dallying with the employers, and because we had severely criticized the wasteful methods of administering the union funds. Being unable to face the issues raised by the three locals concerning the present chaotic situation in our industry, and not being able to account for the thousands of dollars paid in by the

RAIL MILITANTS HEAR REPORT ON UNION CONDITION

Amalgamation Conference Holds Second Meet

When the second international conference of the railroad amalgamation movement opened Saturday at the Workers' Lyceum, the report of Otto H. Wangerin, secretary-treasurer, gave the delegates one of the most graphic analysis of railroad unionism and its prospects that has ever been the fortune for a body of seasoned unionists to listen to.

"The present-day characteristics of a great number of the unions that make up the American trade union movement are apathy, indifference, acquiescence in the 'open shop' or 'American' plan, absence of a working class outlook, and no sign of militancy or courage to grapple with the great problems confronting them," said Wangerin in his opening words.

Make Unions Into Aids to Capital.

This has become an attitude and a policy, he stated, citing the whole system of class collaboration, the "labor" banks, insurance, business institutions, "industrial peace" schemes and "B. and O. co-operation" plans. The function of trade unionism to fight for the interestes of the workers is lost sight of completely. The unions are being made over into auxilliary machines to aid the capitalist profittaking system. This must be stopped or organized labor is headed for disaster.

The causes are three: Lack of fighting leadership with real working class vision; second, lack of militant program and policy to guide the various unions; third, the split-up craft form of organization, jurisdictional quarrels and no co-ordination of effort, lack of mutual asssitance lending weakness to the unions and strength to the enemy.

The "Golden Age" Past.

These causes had operated in the railroad unions as in others and altho some trades were organized 100 per cent, when the test came they had to retreat before the united power of the companies. Almost all have suffered greatly in membership and loss of wages and conditions.

The "golden age" of rail unions from 1917 to 1922 was gone. During this period of the national agreement when the government, as a war meas-

COMPLETE PROGRAM TO MOBILIZE WORKERS PARTY MEMBERSHIP IN BIG REORGANIZATION CAMPAIGN

The organization department of the Workers (Communist) Party will within a day or two, make public its complete program for mobilizing the party for its thoro-going reorganization on the basis of shop nuclei and international branches.

The plan involves the holding of general membership meetings in the industrial centers thruout the country and the drawing into the reorganization campaign of the most active party workers on an intense scale.

A part of the preliminary ideological campaign and mobilization is supplied herewith. It is the plan of the Central Executive Committee to complete the party reorganization in the New York and Chicago districts first. The reorganization campaign will therefore, center itself at the outset in these two districts. Some of the details of the plan follow:

Announce Details of Campaign.

1. There is to be printed a series of articles in all party papers on shop nuclei and party reconstruction. These articles are to be written by Central Executive Committee members, District Organizers, and language section leaders.

a. The Central Executive Committee members are to write primarily from a general party point of view and from the point of view of their special departments. For example, the heads of the Agitprop and other departments will stress the importance of party reorganization along the lines of shop nuclei and international branches as a means of facilitating the development of the party membership in their particular fields.

b. The District Organizers are to write from the angle of the specific conditions in their districts and the party reorganization campaign.

c. The leaders of the various language sections are to write articles for the party reconstruction campaign from the point of view of facilitating the role to be played by their comrades in the unification and centralization of the party's activities among the working masses of their respective languages.

Plan Special Pamphlet.

2. The party shall issue a special pamphlet on organization. This pamphlet is to be printed in the languages of the principle sections of our party. The pamphlet will contain the following:

a. The new party constitution.

b. The Comintern letter to our party on organization and special charts on party organization.

c. A special foreword on party reconstruction by the organization department of the party.

3. The Organization Department will publish a series of articles explaining the party constitution and analyzing concretely its various sections. These articles are to be syndicated and featured prominently in every language organ of the party.

4. The Organization Department shall have a special press service for the entire press and a special section of the DAILY WORKER. This press service will deal mainly:

a. The progress of party organization.

b. The organizational and political experiences of specific shop nuclei.

c. Letters and reports from nuclei members themselves as to their activities.

5. In every district there shall be called general membership meetings addressed by the special representatives of the C. E. C. on the following subjects:

a. Bolshevization.

b. Party organization.

In an early forthcoming issue of the DAILY WORKER, the organizational phase of the party reconstruction campaign will be printed in detail.

TEN BUSINESS AGENTS OF AMALGAMATED ARE JAILED ON "SUSPICION"

The ten business agents of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, who were arrested in a raid on the union's headuarters, 409 South Halsted street, have been released on writs of habeaus corpus, union officials state.

The union members were attending their regular weekly meeting at the headquarters Saturday when four detectives entered the hall and quizzed all present. Only business agents were arrested. No reason was given for the raid, which is the second one conducted during the eleven weeks course of the strike against the International Tailoring company.

The union men were taken to the detective bureau and were subjected to a severe grilling. They were arrested "on suspicion" it was announced.

Included among those arrested were business agents Skala, Dunn, Rocco, Smith, Hubacek and Janicek.

PRESSMEN EXPEL HARRY SCHECK FROM NO. 3

Other Stoolpigeons and Scabs Are Bounced

Herry Scheck, Clown Cigarette peddler and reading clerk of the Chicago Federation of Labor was expelled from Chicago Printing Pressmen's Union No. 3, and fined $500.00, together with eleven others, for conduct unbecoming a trade unionist.

Those expelled in addition to Scheck are: "Stuss" Singer, ex-New York gangster and now superintendent in the scab Cuneo Printing plant, Tom Polston, international Berry organizer, Ben Salviti, Rudy Lindquist, Tom Coghlan, Art Rollins, the Davis brothers Sam Fox and Hickson, two international stoolpigeons for Berry, Al Kearns and Hughes.

Of those who stayed in the struck plant all are foremen excepting three or four. Out of 200 pressmen only ten or eleven betrayed the principles of trade unionism and scabbed. Sheck, went around making propaganda for Berry and deserted No. 3, to which he owes whatever prestige he has in the labor movement and most of his worldly goods But for No. 3, Harry would not today be the big gun in the promotional league or chief salesman for Clown cigarettes. He is a delegate to the Chicago Federation of Labor from No. 3, but if he continues to be a delegate any longer it will not be from that union.

East Side Gangster

The readers of the DAILY WORKER are already well acquainted with the records of "Stuss" Singer and Sam Fox. Singer has been a man of many schemes and was mixed up with the 90 Delegates Launch Local Unit of I. L. D.

Ninety delegates, representing 18,000 organized workers, met in the Ashland Auditorium yesterday and formed the Chicago local unit of the International Labor Defense, the champion of the working class victims of the bosses' persecution in this country.

Samuel T. Hammersmark was unanimously elected chairman of the local body, Felix Hanzel, of the Wood Carvers' Union, vice-chairman, and George Maurer, secretary. A resolution committee of five members was unanimously elected, consisting of Max Hankin, representing Local Union 199, International Association of Machinists; George Maurer, assistant secretary of the national organization; M. Turner, of Local 337, Machinists' Union; Rose Karsner, on the national committee of the I. L. D., and R. Youkelson, representing the Northwest Side branch of the I. L. D.

Resolutions were presented to the convention and passed, following speeches and discussion, protesting against the white terror of the capitalist governments of Poland, Roumania and Esthonia against the workers these governments. These resolutions were ordered sent to the embassies of the countries at Washington.

ure entered into relations with the 16 unions, the universal eight-hour day, increased wages and better conditions won. But this did not come from the activities of the union officials, but from a temporary "peace" maneuver of the companies, who actually drove tens of thousands of workers into the unions.

How Unionism Has Lost.

Prior to 1916, the railway clerks had about 5,000 members, but this increased to over 200,000 in 1920. The carmen, who had 29,000 in 1915, had over 200,000 in 1921. The sixteen standard unions rose from about 500,000 in 1916 to 1,260,000 in 1921.

Under the national agreement wages had increased. In 1916 the average wage was $892. Then came the war and in 1917 the average was $1,004; 1918, $1,419; 1919, $1,486; in 1920, $1,820. The total wages had more than doubled from 1916 to 1920. But all these conditions were abnormal, not due to any fighting policy of the union officials, but were a maneuver to pacify labor carried out consciously by labor's enemy—the companies and the capitalist government, in order to avoid interference with the war program. Anyone could have foreseen that when the war was over capitalism would take away what it had given.

No Officials Who Would Fight.

With fighting leadership which had a program such a favorable situation would have been seized upon and the unions made invincible. Instead, the leaders were going into coal mining, banking, real estate and other businesses, now not even caring if the membership does dwindle to naught as dividends from banks, etc., pays their salaries.

The post war offensive of the companies was explained in detail, the passage of the Esch-Cummins bill and the setting up of the railroad labor board beginning the drive of capital against rail unions. The open shop drive began. Capitalism began to attack the unions one at a time. Wages were cut here, and when the cut was put over, then wages were cut there. A war strategy of the companies against the workers was put in effect. Layoffs, outside contracting, wage cuts, withdrawal of conditions were the order of the day. The railroad labor board compelled the unions strictly to obey its orders but the companies openly and successfully flouted its rulings. The net result in the defeat of the shopmen symbolized the success of the companies.

Betrayal of the Shopmen.

In that strike the betrayal of the union leadership became most apparent. All workers were anxious to aid the shopmen. Some struck in spite of the officials' opposition. The Maintenance of Way men had a vite strike, but that union's officials sold out the strike for a mere two cent raise for this one union. The government threw all its power against the strikers.

The Willard-Jewell agreement of Sept. 13, that year, was the first big surrender of the union officials and it demoralized and shattered the ranks of the strikers. Their cause was lost. The work of 25 years was undone. The shop unions melted away like snow before summer sun. From 400,000 they fell to 100,000 or less. It was a terrible monument to the stupidity of craft unionism and the folly or worse of the leaders with no vision.

The Present Situation.

The Carmen, which went into the strike with about 200,000 have now only 40,000 left. The machinists, which had a railroad membership of about 125,000 today have only 10,000 on the railroads. The total membership of all 16 trades fell from 1,260,000 in 1922 to about 750,000 at present. The whole machinery of protection by the union in the shops was destroyed. Wages have been lost in ten occupations ranging from 7 to 39.2 per cent between 1921 and 1925. They are still going down. In February, 1925 rail workers got $7,000,000 less than in February, 1924; 11,334 fewer men were employed. Two dollars a month was lost in one year off the average pay of all railroad workers.

For the entire month of February, 1925, a quarter of a million railroad workers received less than $75 each. An immediate drive for wage increases is the call of necessity to all rail workers. A total of 297,466 railroad workers have been thrown out of work during the past four years, those left being compelled to do extra work.

Officials Oppose Movement.

The Amalgamation Movement, which met the severest obstacles in the depression and demoralization of the unions and the campaign of slander and opposition of union officials, has, however, continued to grow in volume and strength.

Following the December, 1922 conference the question of a general amalgamation convention, or a referendum for such convention had been submitted to the officials of all the 16 standard organizations. Only three replied. The others ignored it entirely. Fljozdal of the Maintenance of Way had stated readiness to participate. Ryan of the Carmen stated there was "no desire" for amalgamation in that union. Kline of the Blacksmiths merely evaded the issues. Further effort to get officials to lead the movement or even approvee of it had met with bitter opposition

Recommendations.

The growth and spread of the Amalgamation Movement was traced by Brother Wangerin, as detailed in the DAILY WORKER of Saturday, with considerable particulars given of work in the various unions. A number of recommendations, based upon the ideas enveloped in the course of work by active workers for the movement were made, including the broadening of the program, a better method of financing the work and the question of moving the headquarters of the movement from St. Paul to Chicago, the greatest railroad center of the country.

Strong demands had been made to include in the program a position of opposition to all sorts of class collaboration schemes and to make of supposed "co-operative" institutions, real co-operatives and not mere private business institutions for officials. The union membership must actually control such institutions.

International Trade Union Unity.

The isolation of American rail unions from their brothers in other lands had been criticized by many active workers. The British unions had taken the lead for international trade union unity and it is demanded that international relations be set up with the rail unionists of other countries.

The workers must be given a new deal all around. The 1,000,000 unorganized railroad workers must be brot into the unions. The conference must formulate to a progressive and militant policy and build up the movement within every union to inspire the fank and file to action.

Sixty Delegates Present

Roy H. Woods, chairman of the International Committee for Amalgamation in the Railroad Industry, opened the conference with approximately sixty delegates present. The credentials committee reported many delegates not yet arrived, and that many present represented district, system federations and so on. Five or six brothers present without credentials, but expressing an interest in the conference were seated as fraternal delegates.

The report of the rules committee was adopted providing for the following agenda: Report of credentials committee, report of officers, address by chairman, report of secretary-treasurer, report of committees, in order—resolutions, finances, press and organization; new business, election of International Committee and adjorunment.

Committees Appointed

Chairman Woods opened the conference with a brief but interesting address, and committees were announced as follows: Resolutions; John Foley, B. of R. T., Cleveland; W. H. Wangerin, Rock Island amalgamation committee, Inver Grove, Minn; Donald Menzies, Railway Carmen, Local 488, London, Ontario; J. A. McGovern, I. A. M. No. 111, Montreal, Quebec; J. B. Carmichael, Maintenance of Way, Spokane, Wash.

On press and finance, the following were chosen on committee: Pete Jensen System Federation No. 130, Chicago; M. O. Slipher, I. A. M. No. 181, LaFayette, Ind.; Frank Reinameier, Blacksmiths No. 589, New Butler, Wis. The organization committee was constituted as follows: Scott L. Gipple, Railway Carmen, Dist. 1, St. Paul, Minn.; A. L. Harbin, C. and O. Federation, Covington, Kentucky; W. E. Long, machinists No. 111, Montreal, Quebec; C. H. Clarke, machinists No. 103, Stratford, Ontario; W. J. Pierce, Amalgamation Committee, London, Ontario.

Secretary Otto H. Wangerin then reported on the situation in railroad unionism and the progress of the amalgamtion movement since the last conference in December 1922. A summary of Wangerin's report is printed elsewhere in the DAILY WORKER. Discussion followed by Brothers, Corbett, Foster, Wangerin, Jensen, Long and Forbes, after which the report was accepted. Adjournment was taken to allow committees to complete their work.

NEW YORK MAYORALTY CAMPAIGN EXPOSES LOW PAY OF LIBRARY HELP

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Sept. 13—Low wages of New York library workers are an issue in the mayoralty fight. Frank D. Waterman, millionaire republican candidate, charges that 46 per cent of the trained library workers of the metropolis get from $19 to $23.50 per week, manifestly less than a living wage in this city of high costs.

Waterman promises that he will have the wages raised if he gets the mayor's job. He does not explain how he will do it in view of the peculiar contract entered into jointly by the city, the Carnegie corporation and the trustees of the Lenox, Tilden, Astor Foundations under which the city pays the bills of upkeep but has nothing to say about wage scales or other questions of management. Nor is there comfort to be drawn from Waterman's own record as an "open shop" fountain pen manufacturer.

the congress tho present as a guest. The lead in the fight against the resolution was taken by J. H. Thomas, former colonial minister in MacDonald's cabinet.

Bitter Pill for Mac.

Another resolution which was opposed by the MacDonald, Snowden, Clynes, Thomas combination was the one opposing the Dawes Plan. Congress declared it to be a capitalist scheme for the exploitation of the German workers. This was the pet scheme of MacDonald and was one of his principal achievements for the international financiers during his term in office. The motion condemning it was gall and wormwood to him.

The congress went on record authorizing the general council to do everything in its power to secure world-wide unity of trade unions thru an all-inclusive federation.

Thruout the congress the left wing was in the ascendancy and the Thomas, Clynes, MacDonald supporters suffered ignominious defeat.

Imperialists Worrying.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—Sir George Hunter, prominent in the ship building industry, today addressed a letter to Premier Baldwin, demanding that a commission be appointed forthwith to investigate and report upon the economic position of all of the industries in the country.

"We are on the road to ruin" said Sir George "it is evident that something is wrong with the industries. Is it capitalism? Is is trade unionism? The future of the whole country and of the empire is at stake."

Without any doubt the British ruling class is worrying as it had not worried even during the darkest days of the world war.

POSTAL WORKERS VOTE TO STICK BY LABOR UNION

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Sept. 13.—World-wide organization of postal workers to correspond to the world-wide Universal Postal Union of employers (the national post office departments of the various governments) was proposed to the convention in Detroit of the National Association of Letter Carriers by J. W. Bowen, general secretary, British Postal Workers' Union.

The convention reiterated its faith in combined organized labor activity by overwhelming a motion to sever affiliations with the American Federation of Labor. The motion was introduced by Branch 66, Wheeling, W. Va., and supported only by the two votes allotted the Wheeling delegation.

Evidence was presented that the speed-up system is responsible for the greater sickness rate that exists among the postal workers compared with employes in industry.

The following are a few of the resolutions passed: To discontinue the practice of asking carriers to do double duty during the vacation season, the making of all service reductions in strict accordance withi seniority rights, no mail deliveries by regular carriers on Christmas, more adequate protection for letter carriers on duty against assault, fixing of the maximum weight to be taken out by a carrier at 35 pounds, advance payment of salaries before vacations, payment of double wages for overtime, the utmost curtailment of night work and the institution of a 15 minute time differential for hours between 6 p. m. and 6 a. m. and the payment of salaries weekly.

M. Clyde Kelly, of Pittsburgh, father of the postal pay increase bill, was applauded when he addressed the convention and the name of Albert B. Burleson, Woodrow Wilson's postmaster general, was booed in a vigorous demonstration.

The Letter Carriers reported 32,500 members to the A. F. of L. in 1924, a constant figure since 1920.

Wisconsin and New York City Elections Offering Experiences to Workers

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, two political campaigns, in Wisconsin and New York City, should keenly interest the workers. In neither campaign does labor offer a united front to its oppressors, with the result that the political agents of the great capitalists can afford the great luxury of fighting among themselves.

Yet the workers and farmers will come out of both these political struggles with added experiences fortifying them for future battles.

• • • •

The bankruptcy of the "socialists," who went into the LaFollette third party last year, meekly and quiescent, is evident in both the eastern municipal election and in the western state poll to select a successor for the late Wisconsin senator.

In New York City the "socialists" refuse all proffers of a united political front repeatedly made by the Workers (Communist) Party. Instead the "socialists" are active, with the Sigman regime in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, in breaking the resistance of the workers to the needle trades employers, thru destroying the unity of the workers.

The republican congressman, F. H. LaGuardia, who was last year re-elected on the "socialist" ticket, is now off the Hillquit bandwagon, and is being definitely mentioned as candidate for president of the board of aldermen on the proposed Hearst-Hylan third party ticket, that will be put in the field in case Mayor Hylan is defeated in the democratic primaries. LaGuardia, the "socialist"-republican of yesterday, is desired today by the Hearst-Hylan democrats, not because of any principles he may espouse, but purely as bait to "catch the Italian vote," showing the kind of material with which the "socialists" played.

LaGuardia is a bridge between the eastern and western campaigns. He is not out speaking for the "socialists" in Wisconsin, not at all, altho he was often included with Victor L. Berger as "the two socialist congressmen" in the last congress. In Wisconsin LaGuardia is for LaFollette, Jr., on the republican ticket, finding a seat in this camp with Hendrick Shipstead, the Minnesota farmer-labor senator, who is also stumping the state for "the crown prince" of Wisconsin politics.

• • • •

Thus we find this situation:

FIRST:—The farmer-laborite leaders, who fought the Communists last year because they urged a labor party severing all ties with the capitalist parties, are still in open alliance, like Shipstead in Wisconsin, with the pet political harlot of Wall Street, the republican party.

SECOND:—The "socialists" who have professed themselves in favor of a labor party, and claimed that the La Follette movement was "the labor party," have now crawled back into their shells. From their isolation they fight the Communists with what remaining strength they possess. This is especially true in New York City and Wisconsin, the two remaining "socialist" strongholds, and incidentally the scene of the present political campaigns.

• • • •

With the discrediting of these two anti-Communist influences, that have raised the scare of the Moscow dictatorship as an argument against the building of the Labor Party, the workers and poor farmers must rally more energetically than ever for independent political action. They will realize this great need as they witness the exploiters carefully maneuvering to tighten their grip on congress, thru securing the election of their chosen stool pigeons at next year's national congressional elections.

To effectively fight the capitalist masters, the workers must first effectively break with all capitalist influences. One of the first steps in this direction should be the complete break with the capitalist political parties thru independent political action.

AS WE SEE IT -:- By T. J. O'Flaherty

the actions of the national socialist parties, were nobody's darned business but those concerned.

THE resolution on Soviet Russia, finally adopted opposed any war of aggression on the Soviet Republic, but encouraged the social revolutionaries to carry on a campaign for the overthrow of the proletarian dictatorship under the camouflage of "democratizing" the Soviet regime. Part of the resolution also favored Russia's entrance into the league of nations. This, it was hoped would enable the counter-revolutionists to use the capitalist powers to better advantage in their treacherous work.

AMONG the leaders at the congress were men who had distinguished themselves during and since the war as loyal servants of capitalism. It can be stated authoritively that Victor Berger was among the most radical delegates to the congress. Those who know Berger can form a fair estimation of what the others stood for. M. Vandervelde of Belgium, issued an order deporting several Communists from Belgium a few days after the congress adjourned. Noske of Germany, who murdered Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg, was there and so was Scheidemann. Every leading socialist traitor in Europe was present including Karl Kautsky.

THOSE shysters and renegades met and departed without having accomplished anything except proving to the capitalist class that they are the main bulwarks of capitalism against revolution. In another month a different kind of meeting will be held. It will be a meeting of the executive of the Communist International. Unlike the Marseilles pow wow the C. I. session will consider the situation in the world labor movement with a view to improving its machinery for the performance of its task, viz. to organize the proletariat for the overthrow of capitalism all over the world. Its decisions, unlike those of the fake socialist international, will be binding on all its section.

ALARMED because British seamen called a partially effective unauthorized strike against a wage reduction of five shillings a week, leaders of the decrepid American Seamen's Union are forming an alliance with Havelock Wilson, the chief strikebreaker of the British seamen, lest this "pernicious" practice should spread. Victor Olander, secretary of the Illinois Federation of Labor, a dry land sailor of many year's experience in a swivel chair, is taking the lead in the United States. The fakers are drawing up a plan which provides for immediate expulsion of any seamen who carry on propaganda for an increase in wages unless such a demand is sanctioned by the officials. That's democracy for you. And yet those gentlemen rant against the workers' dictatorship over the capitalists in Russia!

John L. Lewis Plays with Gov. Pinchot

MILFORD, Pa., Sept. 13.—The operators side of the anthracite coal controversy was presented to Gov. Pinchot yesterday by Major Wm. W. Inglis, of Scranton, chairman of the anthracite operators wage scale negotiating committee.

John L. Lewis, international president of the United Mine Workers of America, is to come here tomorrow to present the miners side. Governor Pinchot has made it clear that his move in inviting the leader of the operators and miners to meet him in separate conferences is without thought of intervention at this time, but merely to "seek first hand information" on the situation.

The price of anthracite coal will be boosted from 25 to 59 cents a ton before Monday, according to M. E. Keig, coal sales manager of the Consumers company. "The price will not rest there, either," said Mr. Keig. "But will rise steadily."

Many Negroes in Seamen's Strike.

Many Negro seamen are participating in the seamen's strike that is taking place in the British Empire, Denmark and the Orient. Many foreign vessels use Negro sailors, and it is a sign of the coming solidarity of the workers of the world to see seamen of all races and climes stick together for better working conditions and recognition of their union.

International Unity of Workers Needed

By ART SHIELDS
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—(FP)—A speech by Jesse H. Metcalf, United States senator from Rhode Island and leading woolen manufacturer of that state before the Pawtucket Textile Exhibit is being interpreted by textile unionists as an early warning of the possibility of a great international federation of textile employers that will put up a united front against the workers.

Metcalf urged a series of conferences between the textile employers of America and Great Britain for the purpose of "stabilizing the industry," as he put it. Textile employers have been using the term stabilization freely in recent months and mean by that the standardization of wages and hours and employment.

International Strikebreaking

The woolen senator's propaganda for further international unity in his industry is all the more significant, coming as it does on the heels of the joint action that employers took this summer on both sides of the water in their wage-cut notices. The woolen mills of New England posted notices for wage cuts taking effect July 27th and August 3rd, or approximately at the same time as the wage cuts advertised to go into effect in the Bradford woolen and worsted district of old England, July 25th. At that time this common action was denounced by union men and women as evidence of an international understanding between their employers.

This summer's effort to "stabilise" wages on lower levels was successful in nearly all the American mills but defeated in England by a strike of the workers. Should a genuine alliance be formed between the woolen lords of the two nations such strike movements in the future might be faced with the massed opposition of both sets of employers.

World Unity of Workers Needed

Metcalf's own bad labor record indicates that any unity of world employers he would be associated with would bear down on the workers' wages and working conditions to the extent he had influence. In Rhode Island he is known as the father of the two-loom system and in a small New York state town the workers in one of his mills are now on strike against a 10 per cent cut.

The Metcalf interests are in both wool and cotton and the senator was able to see the advantages of collusion between the cotton employers of the world as well as the woolen and worsted men. Last fall the cotton workers of New England lost 10 per cent of their meager income in a wage reduction and late this summer the cotton workers in the great Bombay textile district of India went on strike against an 11½ per cent cut.

The world movement of lowering of the textile workers standards is already in effect. World alliance of textile owners, at least as far as those of Great Britain and America is concerned may not be far ahead. World solidarity of the textile workers is something that Metcalf and his ilk may or may not be reckoning with but which economic conditions are bringing to the fore as a subject to be considered.

Independence For Filipinos.

WASHINGTON. — Congressman Kincheloe of Kentucky, democrat, returned from a visit to the Philippines with eight fellow workers who traveled 18,000 miles on a govrenment transport at bargain rates, believes that the United States cannot hold the Philippines against naval attack. Hence the Filipinos should get their independence. And Hawaii should be heavily fortified. He says Gen. Wood is an imperialist.

SCHEDEL, WORKER DEPORTED FOR BEING COMMUNIST, FIGHTS AGAINST SECOND RAILROADING BY COOLIDGE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Thruout the country workers are awaiting with interest disposition of the case of John C. Schedel, whose plea for stay of deportation proceedings is now before Assistant Secretary of Labor W. W. Husband. Schedel's case is a re-echo of the famous Palmer "red raids" of the war days which were later exposed in their illegalities by Louis F. Post, assistant secretary of labor at that time.

Schedel was arrested in Fort Wayne, Indiana, as a member of the Workers (Communist) Party. Immediately thereafter he was deported. In the five years that intervened he made a continuous effort to return to this country. After several attempts he succeeded in slipping over the Mexican border. A week after he had rejoined his family at Fort Wayne he was arrested on a charge of illegal entry.

Upon being taken into custody again, the department of justice moved to have him re-deported. This time, however, having in the meantime slowed up on its "red raids" the justice department did not press the charge of radicalism against Schedel. Illegal entry only was charged.

Fort Wayne citizens, including Schedel's present employer, hold, however, that inasmuch as he was unjustly deported in the first place re-deportation now would be gratuitous cruelty. That Schedel's deportation might have been unjust is, now admitted by Assistant Secretary of Labor Husband.

Schedel's wife's mind was deranged for awhile as the result of his persecution and two of their daughters had to be placed in an orphanage, another child dying. Since then his wife has recovered.

SOVIET UNION SENDS DELEGATION TO U. S. PORTS CONVENTION

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Sept. 13.—A delegation to the convention of the American Port Official's Association, to take place in New York this month, will leave here within a few days.

The delegation, which is headed by Leonide Serebriakov, chief of the department of ports in the Soviet commissariat of transportation, was invited to attend by the association.

The Soviet Union is also greatly interested in the coming wireless convention in the United States. The radio is used extensively in the Soviet Union for business and official messages. The Moscow station is one of the largest in the world.

AMTORG EXPORTS $10,000,000 IN MACHINERY TO THE SOVIET UNION

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—During the first year of its activities, the Amtorg, a Soviet-American joint stock company, importing to the U. S. S. R. all kinds of factory equipment, farming machinery, tractors, automobiles, various implements and so forth, while exporting from the U. S. S. R. furs, hides, bristles, gut casings, medicinal herbs, flax, hand made wares, and others, has exported machinery and implements for a sum of 10.5 million dollars, which constitutes 25 per cent of the total American import to Russia in 1913.

One and a half million dollars' worth of automobiles and tractors were bought from Ford and three million dollars' worth of farming machinery from the International Harvester Co.

Furs hold the first place in the import trade from Soviet Russia. Two and a half million dollars of furs having been imported to America in nine months. Then follow hides, medicinal herbs beet-root seeds and other raw materials.

A branch of the Amtorg is being opened in Vladivostok and agencies have been established in Argentina, Canada and Brazil.

Steck-Brookhart Neck and Neck.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Slight gains for Daniel F. Steck as the returns in the Iowa senatorial contest are checked and re-checked, were announced by the official tabulators. Steck and Senator Smith W. Brookhart are running so close that Col. E. B. Thayer, in charge of the tabulation, could not even say which candidate was in the lead.

Match Factories In Soviet Union Export to World

MOSCOW.—The demand for Soviet Russan matches grows abroad. An order was lately placed by England for 50,000 cases. Another order was received from America for 10,000 cases. Many orders are being received from the near Eastern countries, Syria, Egypt, Palestine, Turkey and Greece. 1,400,000 rubles' worth of maches were exported abroad in 1924-1925; in 1913 the match exportation reached only 1,200,000 rubles.

Three and a half million cases of matches were yearly produced in Russia before the war. From 1918 up to 1923 the production dropped to one million cases. The output has shown a rapid growth in 1924-1925, when it reached 3,100,000 cases. It is being planned to augment the output to 4,000,000 cases in 1925-1926. The U. S. S. R. possesses 40 match factories.

OLYMPIC SAILS WITH SCABS AID; MELBOURNE SEAMEN SCORN JAILS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SOUTHAMPTON, Sept. 13.—The Olympic, the second White Star liner to sail short handed with a pickup crew of scabs smuggled aboard at Cowes Road sailed at noon Wednesday for New York City with 1,595 passengers. Ports in the United Kingdom are still crippled by the strike while South African corn shipments are paralyzed by the seamen out at Cape Town. But the Union Castle line there has refused the government's request to defer the wage cut and arbitration of the Maritime Board.

At Melbourne, after 62 seamen were sentenced to jail for "disobeying orders," the crews of three other ships for which summons were issued but not served, marched together to the city police headquarters demanding that they be immediately jailed with their comrades.

NO SHAVES IN UPPER N. Y. AS BARBERS STRIKE

Demand 12-Hour Day and Higher Wages

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 13.—(FP)—No shaves and haircuts are being given in the barber shops of upper Manhattan between 59th and 125th streets, nor any shines either, unless the boss barbers find time to do them themselves. The wage earners are on strike at the call of the Journeymen Barbers' Union and the bootblacks are out in sympathy.

The 12-hour day is one of the demands of the strikers. They want a maximum workday of from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m. with one day off in seven and a half holiday on Sunday, and closing at 1 p. m. holidays, unless the holidays fall on Saturday when work would stop at 3 p. m. A flat $10 a week raise is demanded and 50 per cent of all customers' spendings over $42 a week instead of the 33 per cent over all $40 takings now given.

Rail Bosses Seek Freight Boost.

C. E. Spens, vice-president of the Burlington railroad, continued to argue before the Interstate Commerce Commission here for a five per cent increase in railroad freight rates. The farmers of the northwest are opposing the move.

ALLIES TRYING TO WIN GERMANY AGAINST RUSSIA

Intrigues of Powers Mark Anti-Soviet Plot

(Special to The Daily Worker)

GENEVA, Sept. 13.—In Many quarters the speech of Austen Chamberlain, British foreign minister, before the league of nations' assembly wherein he said, "Great Britain's sole object is to assure the moral disarmament of the world by a new spirit of fraternity between men," is interpreted as an attempt to smother the suggestion of Premier Painleve of France that the league should summon a disarmament conference soon.

Painleve's call for a disarmament conference to be sponsored by the league of nations, is looked on as a means whereby the French government hopes to dodge the Washington disarmament conference proposed by Coolidge.

Afraid of Wall Street.

France is strenuously opposed to entering a second Washington conference because of her difficulties with her colonies and her shaky financial situation. France would be the weakest power in such a parley, and prefers to act in the league of nations rather than be forced by Wall Street pressure to acknowledge herself a second rate power.

Great Britain, by rejecting the Geneva protocol, killed an earlier attempt at a league of nations disarmament conference and Chamberlain hinted he preferred to enter a Washington conference.

After the league assembly the "security" pact conference of allied and German foreign ministers will be called in an attempt to form a united front against the Soviet Union. At the same time the German government will attempt to gain as favorable terms as possible for her capitalists by trying to play French and English imperialism against each other. The allies are attempting to come to an agreement before the conference in order to forestall this.

Socialist in Anti-Soviet Move.

The "socialist" premier, Vandervelde, who is representing Belgium in the anti-Soviet negotiations, declared at a banquet here that the allies and Germany should unite as they "need each other," of course, in a concerted attack on the workers' and peasants' government of the Soviet Union.

The league of nations assembly means nothing, as the league is the servant of the allied imperialists, especially Britain, and will do nothing except obey the orders of these powers, who are making every effort to enlist Germany in the anti-Soviet league of nations.

American ambassador to London, Houghton, has left London for Baden-Baden, from where he is slated to go to Lausanne where the allied and German ministers are to meet, and act as "unofficial obeserver" for the Morgan-Coolidge government. Houghton, who was one of the instigators of the idea of enlisting Germany in the allied move against the Soviet, is now aiding the allies to come to an agreement.

Picketing a Crime in Palestine.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—A dispatch from a London Herald correspondent to that paper tells of drastic persecution methods employed against strikers in Paletsine. The dispatch tells of a strike in Haifa where ten mason strikers, were arrested while on picket duty.

They were given five-day terms in the "harshest prison in Palestine where they were put to work on road repairs just as ordinary criminals."

GERMAN KLAN FORMED BY FASCISTS WHO KILLED MANY WORKERS

BERLIN, Germany, Sept. 13.—The Germans connected with the "Knights of the Fiery Cross," the German edition of the ku klux klan led by the American pastor, Strohschein, were formerly associated with the "black" reichswehr, and distinguished themselves by murdering workers, especially radicals.

Klapperoth, chief of the organization in Germany, was a friend of the notorious Lieut. Schulz and was implicated in the murder of Lieut. Sand in September, 1923.

Many other leaders of the klan here were leaders of monarchist revolts and leaders in the German fascist organizations.

MASLOW, GERMAN COMMUNIST DEPUTY, SENTENCED TO 4 YEARS PRISON FOR "TREASON"; ONLY OFFENSE WRITING

BERLIN, Germany, Sept. 13.—The national court at Leipzig has condemned the Communist Deputy Maslow to four years imprisonment for "incitement to high treason" in connection with the Communist demonstrations of 1923.

The court could show no connection with the uprising, but merely took the position that Maslow's articles in pamphlets and newspapers were "treasonable."

CHINESE WORKERS MUST DRIVE THE FOREIGN IMPERIALISTS OUT OF COUNTRY TO PROGRESS, SAYS RADEK

MOSCOW, (Tass.)—It was by far not a usual after-dinner speech that was made by Soviet Ambassador Karakhan at the banquet given by Mr. Mochizuki, the eminent Kenseikai leader, to a company of Chinese and Japanese statesmen and public men, diplomats, and prominent journalists at Pekin, writes Karl Radek in a special article, headed "Hitting the Mark," in the Isvestia, commenting on Karakhan's speech at Mochizuki's luncheon party in the Hotel de Pekin.

It was far, says the writer, from usual post-prandial orations, which so often remind one of the closing sentence in peasants' letters of the good old times: "I am keeping quite well and wish the same to you," or the like. The speech of the ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics cannot fail to meet with deep response from the popular masses both in the Soviet Union and China.

Source of Soviet Influence.

Nor will Messieurs, the imperialists, find it easy to pass over in silence or conceal this speech, which is such a fitting retort to the cry raised in the imperialistic press about Soviet propaganda as being at the root of revolutionary trouble in China.

Indeed, said the ambassador of the U. S. S. R., the Soviet Republic has influence in China. This influence, however, consists in that our policy towards the Chinese people is such as our deeds correspond to our words. "And if our fault is our good policy, I take pride in confessing to our being guilty," Karakhan had declared. Our enemies, Radek goes on to say, will naturally say that our influence is but the result of instigation, propaganda, promises.

"But, of course, they themselves are the last to believe it. Have they not written scores and scores of books to show how diffidently the oriental people look upon the westerners? And in that they were right; all nations suffering from exploitation, oppression and humiliation, acquires a psychology of distrust against aliens, for no good comes to them from such aliens. The modern history of China has been written with blood, bayonet and cudgel, and if the Chinese people did not feel that our good words are followed by our good deeds and equal treatment they, naturally, would not believe us. However, they do believe us, for they see that we are whole-heartedly and sincerely helping the Chinese people in its aspirations for national freedom.

Chinese Must Drive Out Imperialism.

"And, again, if only our policy towards China were a selfish and imperialistic one, it would be easy for representatives of the imperialists to find a common language with us and propose a repartition of booty. But what exactly makes it so difficult for the imperialists is the fact that we are not after anything for ourselves in China and, therefore, cannot be bribed.

"In this lies the reason of all the infuriated attacks and all the threats against us. Threats which we are not in the least afraid of, trusting as we do to the inevitable drift of the great river of history.

"Passing from defense to attack," writes the author of the Isvestia article, "Karakhan fittingly rated the hypocritcal statements and advices of representatives of capitalistic powers to long-suffering China fighting for her rights, 'first set your house in order, and then we will talk over our relations with you.' How, indeed, can the Chinese set their house in order when they are not masters in their own house, where foreigners do what they will? Just as any organism gets rid of an alien body which impedes its growth, so will the great Chinese people free itself of what hampers its life.

Capitalism Seeks Cheap Chinese Labor.

"Tho the telegraph gives us no indication as to how Karakhan's speech was received by the esteemed representatives of the diplomatic corps, it is not difficult to imagine the hue and cry that will be raised anew by the imperialistic press about our 'propaganda.' But, may we say with the French author, 'tu l'as voulu, Georges Dandin!' The imperialists should not have forced the Soviet representative to speak, for a Soviet representative speaks not to conceal, but to speak out what he thinks."

Now, believes the writer, the representatives of foreign powers should, for their own sake, carefully think over what Karakhan laid down before them. Only thirteen years ago, the Chinese scholar Ku Hun-ming, a conservative writer, wrote in his work on the history of the Oxford movement in China, published in Shanghai, that in a period of expansion and revolution which Europe and China are now going thru, when two cultures are clashing; at a time when the social structure of a people is in danger of being smashed like earthenware pots in an earthquake—at such a time men are suddenly faced by new facts; these facts, wrote the Chinese scholar, one must be able to correctly explain; otherwise, not unlike the Egyptian sphinx, they will wreck those who fail to understand, ruining their social order and culture.

European and American capitalism is streaming to China where it seeks cheap labor and abundant resources of raw materials, Radek further sets forth. It destroys the old Chinese culture, which grew out of the endless toil of the petty owner, a culture to which were alien deep social conflicts; for China since long knew no big landowners, knew not the capitalistic inequality of our days, and so the Chinese masses lived a quiet and peaceful life.

Changes Wrought by Imperialism.

It is this peace and quiet that imperialism has now ruined. Imperialism created big capitalistic centers, where the Chinese workmen, whose standard of life is worse than that of any other human being in the world, sees with his own eyes a tremendous accumulation of riches. Capitalistic goods are ruining the product of the artisan's labor and capitalistic bondage has penetrated into the very depths of the Chinese countryside. The Chinese villages are today throwing out millions of unemployed in search of daily earnings. And the Chinese youth seeking learning in Europe and America got it and, strong with western science, they ask themselves: "Why cannot China stand on her own feet, why can she not free herself from foreign capitalists?"

It was under the rush of these new things that the Manchu dynasty fell after three hundred years of rule—that same dynasty which European capital saved in the Taiping rebellion and supported to the last, anxious as that capital was to have this screen so necessary for its domination in China.

Even then we should have known the answer to the questions put to Europe by the Chinese revolution of 1911. Instead, the imperialists stubbornly believed they could cope with the Chinese revolution. And, in fact, they did cope with it as long as it embraced the intellectual "tops" alone. Thus, by granting a loan to Yuan Shih-kai, they succeeded in attaching a millstone to the neck of this revolution.

However, ten years elapsed; the revolution was growing in scope—in breadth and depth, and still the foreign capitalists refused to believe it. Scores of books, written by sympathizing authors, warned about the awakening of the Chinese people, and yet the lords of the international exchange still hoped that, by playing off one military governor against another, they could quench the world conflagration of the Chinese revolution.

PRESSMEN EXPEL HARRY SCHECK FROM NO. 3

Other Stoolpigeons and Scabs Are Bounced

New York east side gang that murdered the gambler Rosenthal, for which Police Lieutenant Baker, Gyp the Blood, Lefty Louis and others went to the chair in Sing Sing.

Sam Fox has a nice record up in Minneapolis, the kind that can be seen in a rogue's gallery. He was stoolpigeon for the police chief of that city during the war, also an agent provocateur.

Tom Polston, once said that he would rather cut off his right arm than join Berry's international. What has happened to convince Tom since then? The "long green" say the printing pressmen.

Chicago Printing Pressmen's Union No. 3, elected three delegates to the Illinois Federation of Labor which opens today.

Certain of Victory

Not one of the men who left the Cuneo plant when the open shop system was inaugurated there, returned. The men are certain of victory now, if the men continue to show the same solidarity in the future they have shown in the past and if they receive support from the pressmen in other shops.

Berry is trying to break up No. 3 and is busy organizing a dual union. He is trying to split No. 3, so that he can deliver them piece meal to the employers. Berry and his tools are sending out misleading letters to all the pressmen in the city, about the situation in the union and in the Cuneo plant. In order to counter the effect of those lies, the following letter was sent out by the executive board of No. 3.

To Loyal Trade Unionists

Chicago, Sept. 12, 1925.

To all loyal members of Chicago Printing Pressmen's Union No. 3.

Greeting:

The International officers are sending out misleading letters to the members of No. 3 for the purpose of having them transfer their membership to the socalled Pressmen's Union they are trying to organize, and their object is to try and put No. 3 out of business.

Pay no attention to these letters, pay your dues and assessments at the office, 543 So. Dearborn St., and all your interests will be taken care of the same as in the past.

It is a strange case when the International Union tells you to pay your dues to them, and protect your interests, when they are cheapening your trade by handing out working cards to anyone who can handle an oil can or a wrench.

What kind of protection is their method of filling your jobs, given you?

Don't fall for their BUNK, stand by and stick with old No. 3 and the assistants of No. 4 who are loyally upholding the principles of true trade unionism.

The Chicago Printing Pressmen's Union No. 3 has been in existence for the past sixty years, has had many ups and downs but has never been put out of business, and is going to continue in business indefinitely, regardless of the strike breaking methods used against us.

By the Executive Board
Chicago Printing Pressmen's Union
No. 3.

Turned Down Yellow Letter

At the last meeting of Franklin Union No. 4, the anti-Communist letter sent out by Fitzpatrick and Nockels was turned down by the membership. The letter did not even get to first bases in No. 3.

The membership of the two unions, No. 3 and No. 4 are determined to fight to the end against the crooked tactics of Berry and against the open shop printers.

Chinese Diplomat at Nijni Fair.

MOSCOW.—In a telegram addressed to Frumkin, acting People's Commissary of Foreign Trade, Li Chia-ao, Chinese representative in the U. S. S. R., who left for the opening of the Nijni-Novgorod Fair together with other members of the Moscow diplomatic corps, states that he has been most favorably impressed by the fair and thanks for the warm reception the guests were accorded at Nijni-Novgorod.

MASS SUPPORT PILING UP TO RESCUE DAILY WORKER

WITH militant labor thoroly aroused to the great danger facing it thru possible loss of its DAILY WORKER, the drive to Save the DAILY WORKER is taking on a mass character. This is exactly what is necessary if the DAILY WORKER is to survive. For without the united support of every worker who is willing to fight the battles of the working class, the DAILY WORKER could hardly pass thru this crisis.

We are publishing with joy and pride the results of the Save the DAILY WORKER campaign which now increase from day to day. We know that those who have not yet responded do not read these growing lists with a feeling of escape from their responsibilities in the task, but on the contrary will be spurred on to do their utmost in holding up their share.

THE DAILY WORKER has been and still is in the most serious situation since its establishment. During this period of peril it must be demonstrated that the most advanced section of the working class is capable of exhibiting its mass characteristics.

We are as yet only a small section of the working class. Yet we can show that we are the beginning of a mass movement by showing our ability to act as a mass, all of us moving resolutely towards one objective. That objective is now to save the DAILY WORKER and to put it into a stable financial condition which will enable it to fulfill its mission as the collective organizer of the party and of the working class in the most effective manner.

We must make this demonstration, we must mobilize all of the resources of the Workers Party and all the readers in this Save the DAILY WORKER drive. Thus we will not only save the DAILY WORKER from destruction, we will not only have placed the DAILY WORKER on the high road to further progress, but we will in addition offer another proof, a more conclusive and more glorious proof than ever before that we are a real Bolshevik section of the Communist International, capable of leading the American working class to the victory of the proletarian revolution.

Miners Demand Convention

The meeting was adjourned by the chairman. About two hours later the klan followers in the union called another meeting to order and elect a totally different set of officers. The sub-district officials ruled that the first election was legal. An appeal was taken to the district board member and he too sustained the first election. The klan followers then appealed to the district board. On December 2, the District Executive Board of District 12, ruled that the second set of officers elected by the rump meeting were the legal officers of the union.

Board Backs Kluxers.

On Dec. 8, one day before the general election the klan followers were put into office by the District Board. The result of putting these irresponsible members into the offices of the union during the general election was that the elections were destroyed. This was done by having the Secretary, Alec Hargis, to refuse to sign the return sheet to the sub-district, thus making the votes of Local 992 void. There is no doubt but that this was deliberately planned.

Corbishley and the other officers that the District Board had decided against appealed to the International Union. A special investigation was held by four international board members. The district's ruling was reversed and a new election ordered. The International Commission supervised the election. Corbishley and his associates were elected by a five to one vote.

Farrington Men Use Bogus Ballots.

Following their re-instatement, the officers of Local 992 appealed to the sub-district and district on the question of the sub-district election that had been destroyed by these discredited members. It is significant that the opponent of Lon Fox, who was elected to the sub-district presidency in the contested election was none other than Henry Corbishley, president of Local 992. Other locals in the sub-district are also appealing the sub-district elections charging fraud. At Buckner, for example, it is charged that the door of the miners hall was taken from its hinges and bogus ballots substituted for bona fide ones to the number of more than four hundred. It is also significant that several decisions have been rendered favorable to Local 992 by the District, Sub-District and Arbitration Commission that have not been enforced. The miners of Local 992, because of these occurrences feel much resentment toward their district and sub-district officials.

It is well to keep in mind these preceeding events. There is a distinct connection between them and the incidents that followed.

Coal Company Weighs Illegally.

For two years, Local 992 has been having much trouble with the Bell & Zoller Coal Co. over the weighing of coal. At least seven checkweighmen have been on the job and either quit or had to quit because of the refusal of the company to weigh coal correctly and legally. The output of Bell & Zoller mine No. 1 is so large and the system of weighing so complicated it is impossible for one man to do the work of the checkweighman correctly as prescribed by law. Local Union 992 decided to put an assistant checkweighman on to assist the checkweighman. For six weeks or more this assistant worked to the entire satisfaction of the men. The company then refused to allow him to continue in his duties. The case was taken up with the sub-district for adjustment. The morning that the sub-district vice-president, D. B. Cobb came to Zeigler to handle this case, the company ran the cars over the scales so rapidly it was impossible for the checkweighman to record the weights. 612 cars passed over the scales in a space of two hours. An average two hours run would be no more than 475 cars. The checkweighman called Corbishley, the president of Local 992 to the scale room and told him that it was impossible to weigh coal correctly. Corbishley told the checkweighman, "You are under affidavit to weigh coal correctly and if you cannot weigh it correctly, it is up to you to know what to do."

Men Quit Mines.

A minute later the checkweighman walked out of the scale room and notified Corbishley to inform the men inside that he refused to weigh coal and had gone home. The men were notified by Corbishley in these words: "The checkweighman has refused to weigh coal and has gone home." The men began coming out immediately.

At a mass meeting that evening Corbishley advised the men to return to work and let the sub-district officials handle the case under the contract. This they did.

The company notified Lon Fox, sub-district president that evening, August 4, that they demanded the removal of the local president, pit committee, vice-president and the checkweighman of Local 992. The next morning, August 5, D. B. Cobb came back to Zeigler to handle the disposal case. Some four days were consumed writing evidence in the case. Probably 100 men testified at the hearing. Only four members of the union gave evidence favoring the company. Many witnesses proved by their testimony that these four were guilty of making false statements.

Miners' Officials Sustain Company.

After the evidence had been completed, sub-district Vice-President Cobb and E. L. Berger gave a decision within twenty minutes' time sustaining the company's demand for removal from the office of the officials of Local 992.

On August 10, the men refused to work because of their complete dissatisfaction with the decision. On August 11, a special meeting of Local 992 was ordered by sub-district President Lon Fox. Several car loads of klan followers drove to West Frankfort and returned with Cobb, Fox and Darby Babbington, district board member. Sub-district board member Hindman came with them.

Frank Skibinski was elected chairman of the meeting and called it to order at 8:30 p. m. Lon Fox arose and informed the men they would have to elect new officers and go to work. Then Cobb and Babbington told the men they had to return to work. Certain statements made by Fox and Cobb concerning the case were known to be false by every member present. D. B. Cobb was asked by one of the members if he would re-open the disposal case if the company would. He replied, "Hell, No!" The men refused to hold new elections and declared their intention of not returning to work.

Kluxer Kills Miner.

After the meeting adjourned, a klan supporter named Asa Wilson struck old man Bert Farthing, sixty-nine years old, supposedly over some remark made by Farthing. This started a general fight in which D. B. Cobb took part by pulling out a blackjack and attempting to use it. It was jerked from his hand and is now in the custody of the law in Zeigler. Several were injured in the fight. Near the end of the fight Alec Hargis, a klan supporter, appeared at the door with a .38 automatic in his hand. Mike Sarovich was about to leave the hall when Hargis fired at him. The bullet passed thru Sarovich and lodged in Board Member Hindman. Sarovich died of his wounds a few days later.

That night Alec Hargis was arrested and held for the murder of Mike Sarovich. About the same time, Bert Farthing and son were arrested on a rioting charge. Bond was secured for the Farthings.

Eighteen Militants Arrested.

On Tuesday evening, August 18, warrants were served on 18 members of Local 922. These warrants charged that 26 members of Local 992 conspired together for the murder of D. B. Cobb. The warrants were sworn to by Cobb and Fox. Bond was fixed at $2,000.00 apiece and was immediately filled.

The mine was idle for several days. The men continue to refuse to work until old officers are recognized and until the controversy over the checkweighman is properly settled. It is interesting to note that Lon Fox appointed O. Barry president pro tem of Local 992, the man who, along with Alec Hargis made it possible for Mike Rosho, at that time treasurer of the local, to get away with something like $11,000.00 of the local's money. At that time, Barry was president and Hargis was secretary. This was in the early part of 1923. Less than two months ago, Alec Hargis was convicted of defrauding the benevolent society of the Local Union of $67.00.

Ask Sub-District Convention.

We wish to make it plain that no strike has ever been called by the officers but has been advised against by the officers. Nevertheless, the men have constantly refused to return to work,

It would appear that the officials of Sub-district 9 are determined to push the prosecution of the arrested Zeigler miners to the limit. Everyone who was at the meeting in question knows that the charge of conspiracy to murder Cobb is absolutely groundless. Nevertheless, these prosecutions represent a serious danger. Conspiracy is a felony. It carries a heavy penitentiary sentence. There have been in the history of the labor movement similar cases in which falsely sworn evidence and frame-up have made it possible to railroad innocent men to prison. It is believed by many rank and file miners thruout the sub-district that Cobb and other officials of the sub-district are desperate enuf to go thru with such proceedings.

We the miners of Ziegler lay these facts before the people of Franklin county and particularly ask the miners of Sub-district 9 to take note of the facts in this case.

We submit these facts in this manner for the reason that the little yellow press refuses to print the facts and only to try stir up class hatred and race prejudice by sending out red scares about Bolsheviks trying to disrupt the U. M. of A. Do not be deceived by those who yell "Stop Thief" to divert attention from themselves.

Signed
HENRY CORBISHLEY,
M. CRNOEVICH,
F. SKIBINSKI,
W. BIELSKY,
OSCAR FARTHING.

NOTE:—We the mniers of Zeigler, ask all miners of this Sub-District No. 9, to help us to get a special sub-district convention for the purpose of putting this whole trouble before the membership and are entirely willing to be governed by their decision.

Developments show to any fair-minded person that there is no other way to get a fair hearing or justice. We only ask for what every mine worker is entitled to.—Committee.

Waiters Sign Two Hotels.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 13.—The Fairmont and Whitecomb hotels have signed with the waiters' union giving a flat raise of 25c a day, instead of the 25c to 50c sliding scale asked. The men of the Palace and the St. Francis are still out and the hotels are advertising for strikebreakers without much success.

Pullman Porters Must Organize in Secrecy

(From a Worker Correspondent.)

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 13.—Complete secrecy surrounds the Pullman Porters' Union being organized in this city, as a result of alleged attempts of the Pullman company to prod into the affairs of the men and the union. This was revealed this morning by A. Philip Randolph, organizer of the union. The executive committee is taking the necessary precautions to prevent spies of the company from getting any information about the activities of the members.

The presence in this city of President E. F. Carey of the Pullman company, is said to have forced the union leaders to adopt this method of approaching organization of the Negro porters.

More than half the district in New York is enrolled, and Randolf is spreading his activities to Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago and other cities where the need of organizing the exploited Negro is needed most.

In the past two weeks it is reported that about 7,000 have joined the new union.

100,000 BOMBAY COTTON MILL WORKERS STRIKE AGAINST WAGE CUT ORDER OF NATIVE BOSSES

By ART SHIELDS,
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—More than a hundred thousand cotton goods workers in the Bombay District went on strike Sept. 1 against an 11½% reduction in their wages, says information reaching the office of the Friends of Freedom for India, an organization of political exiles that keeps in close touch with labor affairs at home.

This is the biggest walkout since the great 1922 strike when hours were first forced down from 12 to 10. It is made necessary by the refusal of the Bombay Mill Owners' Association—a group of Indian capitalists in the main—to back down from the wage cut decision that would leave the workers with barely enough for a rice existence.

International in Effect

The strike was called by the Bombay Textile Workers' Union, affiliated with the All India Trade Union Congress, and it will have such support as that body can give. It is expected that appeals will be sent to organized workers in America and Europe. Such appeals will undoubtedly emphasize the fact that low wages in India means low wages for the western textile workers whose products compete with Asiatic cotton goods in the world market.

There are no child labor regulations in the Indian mills and mothers with tiny children are among the strikers. The present walkout is largely a defensive measure to maintain gains of the 1922 struggle but success will mean more union influence and lead to further gains in the future.

Such improvements are literally a matter of life and death say Indians. The death rate of the children in the Bombay cotton goods workers families is several times that in the families of the small minority of well fed Indians.

Have Strike Experience

Bombay textile workers have had more experience in the labor movement that the railroad workers of Northwestern India whose several months' strike has come down to defeat. The railroad workers' movement was not only a new one but it received virtually no help from the outside world. The Bombay workers have the advantage of experience and the question of outside support is an issue how facing the workers in other countries.

Borah Refuses to Oppose Reduction of High Income Tax

An investigation by congress of Col. William Mitchell's charges that the present conduct of American aviation is not only incompetent, but criminally so, is inevitable, Senator Borah of Idaho said when interviewed while stopping here en route to Washington.

Borah, when interviewed, did not take a stand against the reduction of taxes on high incomes. He said he was in favor of "justice for all."

WEALTHY FARMER SLAIN BY SON WHO REFUSED TO WORK WHEN SICK

HARRISBBURG, Ill., Sept. 13.—Disgruntled because his father insisted that he return to the fields to work after he had protested he was ill, Kenneth Baldwin, 17, today shot and killed his father, Walter Baldwin, well-known Pope county farmer and then ended his own life, according to reports received by police here.

Mrs. Baldwin, bereaved of her husband and only son by the tragedy, told authorities that the boy and his father had come in from the fields for dinner and Kenneth declined to return for the afternoon work.

The elder Baldwin was reputed to have been exceedingly wealthy.

WITH NINE-AND-A-HALF HOUR DAY BOSS DEMANDS TEN MINUTES EXTRA WORK DAILY FOR "GOOD MEASURE"

(By WORKER CORRESPONDENT)

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., Sept. 13.—In a previous article I gave an account of working conditions and wages in the Embed Art corporation. Since then I have been laid off.

One day all the workers were informed that the factory would close for two weeks to permit taking an inventory. Two weeks later another lay-off took place. This time three of us were laid off, reason given being that the factory was overstocked.

I was one of the three sent home. It is now over a month but I have not been sent for yet. This is the bosses' choice method of getting rid of agitators.

I got myself another job in Max Hyman & Sons' Shirt Company, wages, $12 for a 5-day week. This factory employs mostly young girls, some only 14 and 15 years of age paying them $7, $8 and $9 a week. Piece workers make up to $15 a week. The hours of labor are 9½ hours per day, 5 days each week.

During the first week I was not asked to work overtime, but the second week I fell in line with the others getting 24 cents an hour and working 1 and a half hours overtime.

On regular days no one quits on time. Everyone works ten minutes after quitting time for a good measure. One day being in a rebellious mood, I began talking to the worker next to me about the injustice of the practice. He agreed with me and I suggested that we register our kick with the boss at once. This he would not do because he was afraid of losink his job.

I went to the boss myself. As soon as I began talking to him he handed me my pay envelope (it was pay day) and told me I was not wanted there.

So I am a member of the unemployed army again.

A CORRECTION.

We make the following correction in the article by Charles Schwartz, "International Jewelry Union Disintegrates" in the T. U. E. L. page of our August 25th issue. The part which reads "The explosion occurred in July, 1925" should read "in July, 1923."

SHADOW OF OIL SCANDAL OVER AIRSHIP'S WRECK

Denby, Fired for Graft, Sponsored Craft

DETROIT, Sept. 13.—The ghost of Teapot Dome was in the wake of the Shenandoah on its fatal night ride over southeastern Ohio, Sept. 3. The Shenandoah was built while Edwin Denby was secretray of the navy. It was Denby who appointed Lieut.-Com. Zachary Lansdowne commander. Mrs. Denby christened the ship in its hangar at Lakehurst, N. J. It was then the ZR-1.

Denby was at the Ford airport at Dearborn, Mich., awaiting its arrival when the news of the crash was received. Denby was fired as secretary of the navy in the Teapot Dome investigation. As secretary he signed away the naval oil reserves to Albert B. Fall's friends among the oil traders. But his words on the Shenandoah disaster were solemnly published here.

"Those brave men were martyrs of progress," he said of the victims. "They would be the first to say that the conquest of the air must go on."

The old swivel chair, stars and stripes forever spirit rose high in the Teapot Dome.

Labor Day Staged by New Orleans Fakers Is Failure

NEW ORLEANS (By Mail)—Despite the fact that the open shop press declared the Labor Day celebration of craft unionism one of the greatest ever, scarcely one thousand men out of a total membership of 3,000 were in line yesterday in one of the most inappropriate misadventures of labor ever attempted in New Orleans. No attempt had been made to provide a showing of the different crafts by natty uniforms or similarity in dress and the formation in the line of march was painful.

The longshoremen who have been out on strike for the past two years, to the number of three thousand, white and colored, were not represented. A mere handful of the Typographical Union, one of the most powerful in the city until the lockout of ten years ago, marched in close proximity to the stereotypers and newspaper carriers forgetting that had it not been for the action of these unions in assisting the imported strikebreakers—the former in fixing the forms instead of casting, and the latter in delivering the papers, there would have been a different story to tell.

Many of the unions engaged automobiles for the members who sat with cigars in their teeth and a paper in their hands while the less fortunate walked, which spoiled the effect of the parade. The butchers and bakers and confectioners' unions made a fine showing. The affair concluded with a picnic at Spanish Fort.

It was suggested in many quarters and the matter will be taken up at a meeting of the Central Trades and Labor Assembly, that hereafter the parades be held at night so as to not interfere with the manufacturing plants and mercantile establishments by closing their doors on the day dedicated to labor.

TARIFF CONFERENCE OF FOREIGN POWERS IN PEKIN WILL NOT AID CHINESE, SAYS SOVIET AMBASSADOR

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Sept. 13.—The long deferred Chinese tariff conference of world powers will not end Chinese unrest, as it is discredited before its starts, Soviet ambassador to China, Karakhan, here for conferences, said.

"The customs conference will not console China for the sorry events that have occurred," Karakhan stated. "It is easy to understand that it will give nothing to China."

Chinese Close to Soviet

"If the tariff duties are raised the greatest share of the revenue will go not to the Chinese but foreign bankers, to whom China is indebted. The foreign governments will not give China tariff autonomy. It is not surprising, therefore, that Chinese men of affairs are against the conference."

"The Chinese people during their present struggle appreciate the cordial sympathy of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. Encouraging telegrams are sent to China daily by groups of workers within the Union.

"The Pekin diplomatic corps as a unit headed by myself has been reduced to a normal role. During my early residence in China my relations with the diplomatic corps were strained, possibly because of my fight to get possession of the Russian embassy building and possibly because of my desire to enter the corps. Those questions instead of being solved in strict accordance with international custom, were entangled by open and secret controversies between various nations.

Broke Solid Front of Hostility

"The members of the corps were perturbed by my entrance because, I automatically became dean of the being the only ambassador to China, corps.

"This corps has played a peculiar role in Peking. It is described by Chinese newspapers as a supergovernment. In the majority of questions be- the corps has acted as a unit to bring tween China and foreign countries pressure upon the Chinese government. The Soviet policy differs radically from that of all other countries and my entrance into the corps broke the uniform front of the supergovernment."

Respect for Bosses in Museum.

NEW YORK.—Stuffed birds, beasts and curios of all kinds are not the only things in a museum. There is also a labor code for the museum staff, promulgated by the American Association of Museums this September. The code features politeness to the public and respect for the museum director—in return for which the director is expected to show sympathy and fairness to the staff.

WHO CAN ASSIST ACTIVE COMRADE NOW IN DISTRESS?

Read His Letter and Do What You Can at Once

The DAILY WORKER is in receipt of a letter from Tony Stanfi of Mystic, Iowa, which it presents to its readers with the hope that some of them can aid this comrade who is in dire need. Tony Stanfi has been a member of the Workers Party since its organization. He has been one of the comrades sometimes called Jimmie Higgins, who have always actively participated in the party work. When Comrade Stanfi was in good physical health, no appeal sent to him for collection of funds to help some phase of the party work or appeal to secure subscriptions to the party press or to sell literature went unanswered. There was always a response from Mystic, Iowa, to such appeals.

Stricken with Malady.

Now Comrade Stanfi has been laid low and he appeals to his comrades for a little aid. His letter is as follows: "I need financial aid for to rid myself of my dreaded disease, from year 1923 from beginning of April month, I got my leg swollen from hip to toes, have tried everything to rid myself of this misery but in vain, and now, the other leg has started to swell. It is already swollen to the knee but for all this I did drag around on my legs to the mine to earn for my living a dollar or two with much pain in order not to be to somebody a burden. But last year on the 29th of September I contracted heart disease. I was being carried out the mine a half-dead man, half-dead from the struggle with the horrible pain, with bloody foam at my mouth, but the doctor brought me back to life. For seven months I have been fighting against death spending many nights in a chair close to the stove for fear of going over. I now need some money to buy medicine so I would rid myself of this dreaded disease from which I suffer already 30 months. Long ago I appealed to my federation but my voice was like a voice in the desert. My doctor has given me some credit but now he asks me if I got a job so you see that I am in a very bad condition without work already six months. The little help I got from those that are employed has stopped and now I don't know what to do. Believe me, that I have often times had the sad thought to finish with myself. I have read in the papers often times of sick comrades or not comrades, asking for financial help and they did get it and I did give myself all I could often times. A mass of people can help very easily one person in bad health and in bad need of this help same as I helped many others in the past. The $10 I received for which I thank you much. I bought some medicine from the doctor, bought some food, bread and coffee, that's all I can afford to eat and I know that a lot of people do not get even this for to eat but I must be satisfied until I get some work."

Some comrades, sympathizers, readers of the DAILY WORKER can possibly spare a little help for Tony Stanfi. The DAILY WORKER is ready to receive same and forward remittances promptly to him.

International Solidarity

The action of the Marine Transport Workers' Union No. 510 of the I. W. W. in calling a strike of seamen, deck hands, firemen and stewards on all seagoing ships will give aid and comfort to the striking seamen of Britain who have been betrayed by the arch-faker Havelock Wilson, head of the British seamen's union, and gives a demonstration of international solidarity which cannot fail but give hope to the advanced section of the revolutionary working class in all countries.

There is no other category of workers whose interests demand international solidarity more than the toilers of the sea. The seafaring business knows no national boundaries. Seamen visit every part of the globe and are in constant touch with workers of all races, colors and creeds or no creeds. With all seamen in one union it would be impossible for the shipping bosses to compel their slaves to work under the intolerable conditions now forced on them.

The I. W. W. seamen have a difficult task ahead of them. Not only have they the employers to fight but the worst enemies of the seamen are the labor fakers who control whatever is left of the American seamens' union affiliated with the A. F. of L. Andrew Furuseth, the president of that organization is a servile tool of the American shipowners and has placed the machinery of the union at the disposal of the department of justice in persecuting radical workers who got into his organization. He has even gone to the extent of helping the government deport alien radicals.

The seamen of the world must join up into one union. The seamens' section of the Red International of Labor Unions has carried on propaganda for such a union for several years. Until the seamen do this, they will be helpless. In the meantime the efforts of the Marine Transport Workers' Union should be loyally supported not only by seamen but by all workers. The interests of one set of workers are the concern of all, nationally and internationally.

Fitzpatrick Crawls Back

John Fitzpatrick is prepared to swallow his previous denunciation of the scabbery of the United Garment Workers' Union in the International Tailoring company strike, provided William Green asks him to do so. In a letter to Green, Fitzpatrick says: "We will declare that the Garment Workers were entirely justified, if you will tell us that we were mistaken and instruct us to do so."

This is as fine an example of belly crawling as we have heard of in a long time. The United Garment Workers' Union under the leadership of Tom Rickert agreed to supply scabs to the International Tailoring company, whose employes were members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America. They struck when the tailoring bosses refused to sign a new agreement with the union unless the union accepted a reduction in wages.

Under Communist pressure, the officials of the Chicago Federation of Labor were forced to come out openly in condemnation of the strikebreaking tactics of the United Garment Workers. This action was hailed with joy by progressives thruout the country. Then the official bureaucracy of the American Federation of Labor got busy and before long Fitzpatrick the renegade progressive, was on his hands and knees before William Green's throne. Fitzpatrick has kissed Green's toe in token of obedience and is willing to debase himself publicly so that his sinecure as president of the Chicago Federtation of Labor will not be taken away from him.

As the DAILY WORKER already pointed out the striking members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers can expect nothing but treachery from Fitzpatrick and his associates. Only the radicals fight for the workers. The members of the unions affiliated with the Chicago Federation of Labor may expect the same treatment when they go on strike. Trade union scabbery is part of the accepted gospel of class collaboration, now legalized by the officialdom of the American Federation of Labor.

The unions must be revolutionized and the reactionary leadership must be routed by a militant and well informed rank and file before treachery of this kind can be defeated.

Financial Crisis in Poland

According to an Associated Press dispatch from Moscow, there is a serious financial crisis in Poland. Violence has broken out in Warsaw in connection with a run on the banks, the result of panic among the depositors.

Several banks have closed. The directors of the Trade and Industrial Bank have stopped payments to depositors and were obliged to flee for safety as the depositors showed intentions to inflict physical punishment on them.

Despite the shaky condition of Poland's financial edifice, the government recently spent millions of dollars on military maneuvers aimed at Soviet Russia. These war games were attended by official observers from Britain and France and by an "unofficial" observer from the United States. Perhaps Poland may soon realize that a policy of hostility to Soviet Russia will bring her nothing but disaster.

Socialism from American universities is the principal trouble with China, declares an American congressman. Bolshevism from Moscow is the trouble, say European socialists. Imperialism is the trouble, say the Chinese. Who's right? This is better brain exercise than a cross word puzzle. Get to work on it.

B. C. Forbes, one of Hearst's pet scribblers, tells us that the American workers are blessed with autos, telephones and radios. The American workers don't think this strange. They made them. But what they are asking is: Who has got the rest of the stuff we produce?

How Ramsay MacDonald's heart must have bled for his king after that awful vote on the resolution denouncing British imperialism at the Trade Union Congress! And how Phil Snowden's wife Ethel will weep for her queen when the sad news reaches her!

THE BOOTLICKERS' INTERNATIONAL MEETS

By EARL R. BROWDER.

AT Marseilles, France, beginning August 24, there gathered the second congress of the "Labor and Socialist International," (reconstituted at Hamburg, 1923), otherwise known as the Second International, or the "Union of Kings' Ministers."

The Marseilles congress did not allow the record of valiant service to the bourgeoisie, established in the past, to be dimmed appreciably. Nor was the precedent of ambiguous and double-meaning compromise resolutions, for which the Second International is notorious, in any way seriously abandoned. It was a "regular" congress, in spite of the timid efforts of some British delegates, who had an eye cocked for the growing Minority Movement back home.

Boasts of Treachery.

M. LEON BLUM, leader of the French parliamentary socialist group, struck one of the keynotes of the conference, when he "claimed for the Second International a large share of the credit for the Dawes plan." (Report of London Daily Herald, August 25.)

Boastful mention was made of the number of ministers and ex-ministers of bourgeois governments who took part in the congress. Among the ministers were: M. Vendervelde, minister of foreign affairs for the king of Belgium, in a Catholic cabinet; signer of the infamous Versailles treaty, who declared to the congress that he believed "the peace policy of his government to be identical with the policy of the socialists." M. Rickard Sandler, premier for the king of Sweden; M. Gustav Moeller, minister of social administration for the same royal highness; M. Albin Hausen, minister of defense, who bosses the armed forces of his most royal higness of Sweden.

Mr. Arthur Henderson, ex-minister in the war cabinet of Lloyd George and participant in the MacDonald fiasco, paid tribute to some of the dead betrayers of the working class, such as Herr Ebert, deceased president of the German fascist "republic," and Branting, deceased premier for the Swedish crown. "He tendered greetings," says the account in the Daily Herald, "in the name of the delegates to those comrades present who bore or had borne ministerial responsibility in their own countries."

Training More "Kings' Ministers."

MR. Henderson understood that he was addressing a gathering of servants of royalty, each highly ambitious to assume livery as soon as possible. He was entirely in sympathy and agreement with such ambitions.

"In the transtitional stage," he said, "from capitalist to socialist government, the problem appeared to be one of minority government or coalition." He assured the delegates that it was highly probable that many of them would soon become ministers in coalitions with bourgeois parties.

But a word of warning, says Mr. Henderson, with a reflective glance back at the rising left wing that followed the debacle of the MacDonald government in Britain. "Don't promise the rank and file any more than necessary to get their votes," was the substance of his warning, "because performance is impossible, and the bigger your promises the greater the kick-back from the working class." The exact wording of the correspondent's report on this point was:

"Mniority and coalition governments which are the products of circumstances not wholly amenable to their control, and impose upon them compromises and collaborations which they would not willingly accept, were viewed with very great suspicion and distrust by a considerable section of their movement. Many stalwarts among them seemed to wish to raise this question to the plane of principle. In his judgment this question settled itself as a question of expediency. Their task would be all the more difficult if agitation and propaganda created the expectation of impossible performance."

With the basis of complete agreement that their function was to grab as many portfolios as possible in the royal cabinets, the delegates proceeded to come to complete disagreement on all fundamental questions before the working class, each delegation standing squarely on the interests of "its own" bourgeoisie.

Security Pact and Indemnities.

THE French and German delegates were hot for a complete and unqualified endorsement of the security pact. The British, on the other hand, said they wanted the Geneva protocol endorsed, and expressed hostility to the pact. The matter came to a deadlock.

"Long conversations have been held behind the scenes," writes the Daily Herald reporter, "between Messrs. Blum and Renaudel, for France; Hilferding and Breitscheid, for Germany; and Shaw, Allen and Buxton, for England. I learn, however, that there is small chance of the British delegation abandoning its position of hostility to the pact. The situation is that the French and German comrades, naturally obsessed by the mutual advantages of the pact to their countries, are blind to the more general significance and danger of such a treaty."

And how do the delegates of the Second International reconcile or solve such a difference, which represents the conflicting interests of two troups of the bourgeoisie? They cannot solve it at all, because they are the servants of their respective ruling classes. Therefore they only find a formula by which, under the appearance of unity, each can serve his own master. That is what the Marseilles congress did on the question of protocol and pact. A resolution was unanimously adopted, which declared that when the scope and meaning of the pact should become known it should be carefully examined by the parties. It was thus unanimously decided that each socialist party continues to follow the policy of "its own" bourgeoisie and no other.

Not without some complaints, however, for the French delegates spoke regretfully of the "discipline" they would like to use to make the English delegates support the policy of the French bourgeoisie. M. Blum remarked:

"However much they detested the methods of the Communist International, that had at least the merit of a single policy in all countries, and the socialist international must have some internal discipline."

But the Second International cannot have discipline, because Blum also, and all the others, only invoke discipline for the sake of their masters' interests, and reject it when discipline clashes with the interests of their national bourgeoisie.

So, also, when the British workers wanted to denounce the system of "reparations" as responsible for a large part of their unemployment, they ran into a solid block of opposition from French and Belgian "socialist" delegates and ministers. The zeal of M. de Brouchere, of Belgium, chairman of the commission on unemployment, in defending the reparations payments for his capitalist overlords, became so great that he insulted the British delegates, causing them to walk out of the commision meeting. When later, however, the British introduced their amendment in the plenum, they were quickly persuaded to withdraw it "in the name of unity." Thus was made another "great decision."

The Question of Russia.

A COMMISSION on eastern questions dealt with the attitude toward Russia. Its work is described by the correspondent of the Daily Herald, as follows:

"A drafting committee of five was appointed, and, comprising with the exception of Otto Bauer the most fervent opponents of the Bolshevik regime, it produced a draft resolution of the type that might be expected. It was long, involved, and bitter—a strange hotch-potch, incorporating the moderation of Bauer, the anxieties of the Poles and other border nations, and the fanatical anti-Bolshevism of the social-revolutionaries, the last-named influence preponderating."

To this resolution the British introduced a series of amendments, designed to "introduce some degree of practical wisdom and restraint." But the commission, in an atmosphere that was "panicky, skeptical, almost hostile," referred the amendments back to the drafting committee. After a long and bitter debate, the original resolution plus the modifying British amendments were adopted—again unanimously.

British Leaders Bend Slightly to Left Current.

THE oustanding political development in this congress has been, that the British delegates, representing nearly half the membership of the Second International and contributing 40 per cent of its finances, are bending slightly, ever so slightly, before the strong leftward current now running in the British labor movement. This has been expressed, not in a manner of fundamental disagreement, with the counter-revolutionary crew of bourgeois lackeys, but in proposals of "some degree of practical wisdom and restraint." It may well be that these same British leaders will prove more dangerous enemies of the international proletariat than are the crude and fantastic clowns, the Dans and Tchernoffs, and the Georgian, Polish, and Roumanian mensheviks who write resolutions against Soviet Russia.

Oh, yes! We almost forgot! "Our own" mensheviks were represented in the persons of Messrs. Hillquit, lawyer and capitalist; Panken, judge of a court of law of New York City; and Victor Berger, miniature Hearst of Milwaukee. They also spoke.

After the German Fascists' Trial in Moscow

By Y. YAROSLAVSKY (Moscow)

Comrade Yaroslavsky was chairman of the tribunal before which the German fascists were brought. —Ed.

THE trial of the German fascists, which lasted eight days is over. Eight days of conflict with the mendacious prevarications of Karl Kindermann and his insolent fantastic inventions, his high-class swindling which called forth disgust and contemptuous response even from those who sat on the benches reserved for the representatives of the diplomatic corps! Eight days of incredibly shameless statements by Dr. Karl Kindermann which were calculated to deceive the public opinion of the whole world! Eight days of fencing with the cautious, carefully considered chess moves of the other accused, Wolscht, who weighed everyone of his words, and was laconic, the more so as, during his imprisonment he had become convinced that speech is silver, silence is golden! He knows that if he gets off with his life, he will be paid in silver for every word, and he knows still better that if he maintains silence with regard to this matter before the court, he will be paid in gold.

For eight days the court and the public prosecutor tore to pieces the spider's web which had been spun from the beginning in Berlin, by Kindermann, Wolscht and Ditmar with the assistance of Erhardt, Fink, Rose and a number of other fascists or persons closely connected with the fascists. In the end everything became clear. Step by step the judicial examination found out the facts, and the court did not hesitate for a moment, just because everything became clear down to the depths and no doubt remained that it was a group of fascists who were before the court as accused.

WE know the version which has been published broadcast and further adorned with beautiful colors by the whole bourgeois and social-democrat press, that the accused are innocent, erring students and that the whole affair from beginning to end has been the work of the G. P. U. The social-democratic Vorwarts and other papers are now supporting in an increased degree the legend that Maxim von Ditmar was the evil spirit of these three and that he acted under instructions from the cheka in order to provide subjects who might be exchanged for Skoblevski.

DITMAR was sentenced to death. He concealed nothing from the court but he only gave his evidence after he had seen and read Kindermann's evidence; and anyone who heard Ditmar cannot doubt that what he said was true. It is worth while to follow Ditmar's whole behavior before the court and the remarks which were made about him in order at once to understand the whole mendacity and senselessness of such explanations of the affair. Even the accused described Ditmar as a disinterested person who with great sensitiveness refused to accept any present. He suffered great distress in Germany, but, as Wolscht reports, shrunk more than the others from appealing to anyone for any kind of material help. Ditmar refused the help of the Esthonian embassy, he openly declared at a meeting with the representative of the embassy that it was his wish than no one should interfere on his behalf, even if he were condemned to death.

Ditmar remained the same to the end, he remained the same even in his final word in which he gave expression to his whole hatred for the bourgeois society which was playing with his young life; he remained the same after the verdict, in that he refused to appeal to the Central Executive Committee for a reprieve. What Ditmar told the court coincides in almost every detail with the evidence of another fascist, Baumann, member of the organization "Consul." No, no one will succeed in foiling and disproving those facts which the court revealed with regard to the fascists.

WHY then is the whole bourgeois press furious with Ditmar? Ditmar betrayed his class. The bourgeois cannot forgive such a betrayal. This alone explains the calumnies against Ditmar.

When it became evident to Kindermann that he would not escape with unsinged wings, that the legend of the hypnosis would be of no service, he began distinctly to turn in the direction of the German nationalists. What a servile tremor resounded in Kindermann's voice whenever he referred to "His Excellency Herr Michaelis." The "democratic" organ of Germany, Borsen-Courier represents Kindermann as an unfortunate wandering sheep who had tried everything "from the organization 'Consul' to the Communists, from the detective bureau to occultism." This sets very narrow limits to the sphere of Dr. Kindermann's activities. It was not without foundation that Ditmar said of Kindermann that a corpus delicti of the crimes of the social-democratic party of Germany was hidden behind his horn spectacles. No one but a complete fool would believe this liar who played in turn the parts of the bully of an old bigoted woman, a polar explorer, an informer and an upholder of culture. Even Kindermann and those to whom it would be useful, are trying to avoid giving an answer.

HOW can Kindermann be a fascist, if Kindermann is a Jew? Yes, indeed, Kindermann is a Jew, but this Jew was given substantial recommendations to the bishop of Bergen; he himself shamelessly reports how he fooled the Moslem professor Khairi by the respect he professed for Islam. He called himself a Lutheran and German to the fascist Heinicke; he concealed his Jewish descent from the fascists. When asked how it was that the bigoted religious old woman had intimately invited him to meals or even to her house at all, and whether she knew that he was a Jew, Kindermann brazenly replied that she had every reason to know it well. . .

It was sufficient to hear his pitiful drivel which he called his "defense" and which even filled Wolscht who was sitting next to him with disgust, to feel what despicable elements fascism recruits to its work. The fascists must have known what kind of a man they had before them, one who would consent to any lie and would be ready to change the color of his coat as often as was desired. And the accuser was right who spoke of gold hypnosis. If the G. P. U. had wanted to buy Kindermann, he would have betrayed his German fatherland twenty times over! And only in the last minute, when he realized that he could only place his hopes on the German government did he begin to remember the words which would glorify his whole behavior until the trial and during the trial. He said than an avenger would arise from Kindermann's bones. An avenger for Kindermann! We are convinced that within the pale of the fascist organizations there are hundreds of such Kindermanns who even now are taking their revenge on the working class, acting as provocative agents and spies, and who, in order to facilitate their work, will provide themselves with Communist membership books from the Communists of Durlach.
